"There are certain sources that are battling the Rabbinate to try to make it look like an extremist institution," he said. "They take certain incidents and make them appear to be questioning the status quo, which they are not."

An estimated 350,000 to 400,000 Israeli citizens are not Jewish according to Jewish law – immigrants or children of Russian-speaking immigrants who were granted citizenship under the Law of Return, which allows those with a Jewish grandparent to become Israeli even if they are not Jewish according to Jewish law.

Most of those who have converted through the army fit that category.

Among them is a young woman who preferred to be identified as Shira (not her real name). She immigrated to Israel alone 10 years ago as a teenager from a small town outside of Moscow. Her father is Jewish, her mother is not.

Shira always felt herself to be Jewish and knew one day she would formally convert, an opportunity she welcomed while serving in the air force.

Rabbi Seth Farber

"They do it so well in army. They focus on all the beautiful things in Judaism like human relations and values," she said. "They know dealing with new immigrants. There's no brainwashing but a focus on the important things, the right things."

Shira is distraught at the idea that army conversions might be in peril.

"We are talking about young Zionists who have come to serve in the army," she said. "It's not easy, but they want to serve the country and feel connected to who they are."

Rabbi Chaim Iram, who serves as director of conversion preparation for the Institute for Jewish Studies, the organization that co-ordinates IDF conversion courses, dismissed suspicions that army conversions are anything but legitimate.

"I invite anyone to come see our course, the materials we use, and the seriousness and devotion of our students, and then we can talk about criticism," he said. "According to any and all parameters – both knowledge and practice – we are doing top-level work.

"We need to tell all of our converts that they are Jews, period, that this is a procedural problem that cannot be made into a problem of principle. But yes, welcome to Israel. There is politics, yes. That is a problem."

Rabbi Amar's panel, which is in disarray with three of the five appointed rabbis quitting, has been given four months to make a recommendation on the conversions. Rabbi Farber notes that is exactly when a freeze on discussion of a controversial conversion bill proposed by Knesset member David Rotem is set to expire.

Rabbi Farber suggested that the Chief Rabbinate is preparing to use the panel as leverage to win approval for Rotem's bill. The measure has many opponents, among them non-Orthodox Diaspora Jewish organizations that fear it would give too much power to the Orthodox-dominated Chief Rabbinate on conversion issues, formally shutting out the Conservative and Reform movements.

Gilad Kariv of the Israel Religious Action Center, the Reform movement's lobbying arm, said it had been naive to think army conversions could be isolated from the overall atmosphere regarding conversions in Israel.

"We claimed for years that the wall between the army and civil society was a fake wall," he said. "In the end, unless something is done to address the irrational, immoral and un-Jewish approach of the ultra-Orthodox establishment, it will have a serious and severe effect on the conversions in the army."

Italian Jewry head raps Vatican in its own newspaper

JTA

ROME — Writing in the Vatican's official newspaper, the head of Italy's Jewish community criticized Vatican policy, but called for strengthened Catholic-Jewish ties.

Renzo Gattegna, president of the umbrella Union of Italian Jewish Communities wrote in an opinion piece published Nov. 10 that as a step toward "continuing with the initiatives dedicated to reciprocal understanding and friendship," it would be "useful, necessary and certainly appreciated" for the Vatican to openly and forcefully renounce "any manifestation of intent aimed at the conversion of the Jews."

This, he said, should be accompanied by the elimination of a recently reinstated Good Friday prayer that seems to call for such conversion attempts.

The removal of the prayer, he wrote, "would be a strong and significant signal of the acceptance of a relationship based on equal dignity and reciprocal respect."

Gattegna's article, a rarity from a Jewish leader in the official Vatican daily L'Osservatore Romano, was highlighted on the front page. It was framed as the latest response to a recent miniseries on state-run Italian television that portrayed controversial World War II Pope Pius XII as working hard to save Jewish lives.

The series has rekindled lively debate in the media over Pius' role during the Holocaust. Critics accuse Pius of having ignored Jewish suffering, while the Vatican and his supporters, who have put Pius on the path to sainthood, maintain that he worked behind the scenes.

Gattegna said the sainthood process was purely an internal Vatican process in which Jews don't want to intervene, but he criticized the television series as "hagiographic" and "full of inaccuracies."

He also renewed calls for scholars to be allowed to complete in-depth research in the Vatican archives on Pius' reign in order to clarify the facts.

KING SOLOMON'S TABLE C.O.R.
Book your office parties now!
Lunch or dinner at King Solomon's transcends office politics ... it's the one thing EVERYONE can agree on!
3705 CHESSWOOD AT SHEPPARD 416.630.1666

Iranian refugee lives dream as bespoke tailor

By HAILEY EISEN
Special to The CJN

"When you've hit the bottom and have nothing left, you begin to look at life from a different perspective," said Isaac Ely, an Iranian-born father of three young children. "You can either blame everyone else and retreat into depression, or you can start to climb back up, without fear holding you back."

This self-made businessman and talented bespoke (custom-made) tailor chose to take the second option when he arrived in Toronto in 1986 with nothing.

Two years earlier, he and his cousin, Mike Haie, now a successful restaurateur, had escaped from post-revolution Iran with a few hundred dollars sewn into their undergarments and a dream of reaching America, where they could live freely as young, Jewish men.

Today, Ely creates stunning bespoke suits, pants and shirts for some of Canada's most accomplished men, including Toronto Maple Leaf Tomas Kaberle and Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney. He designs signature, hand-sewn suits ranging in price from $3,000 to $32,000 for CEOs, bankers, professional athletes and entrepreneurs.

But this success didn't happen overnight. Though he was born into the shmatte business and worked every summer in his father's bazaar in Iran, Ely had to take any job he could when he arrived in Toronto, just to make ends meet. He got his start in the late 1980s, working as a street vendor, selling women's belts and sunglasses.

Perhaps it is his tumultuous past that helped make Ely the success he is today. "You have to take risks in life or you will never know what's on the other side," he likes to advise his wife and children.

With an attitude like this, it's hard to believe that this genuinely happy man has seen such darkness.

At 14, Ely wasn't able to truly comprehend the danger he faced as he met the smugglers his older brother, living in New York, had paid to help facilitate his escape. With life becoming unsafe for the Jewish people in Iran, and young men being picked up off the streets and forced to enlist in the war against Iraq, escape was Ely's only option.

"My parents dropped us off with these two Iranian smugglers, and when they told us to start running, we ran," recalled Ely, now 41. It took hours on foot and on horseback to cross the border into Turkey. There, instead of the freedom they had been promised, they came face to face with Turkish soldiers who threw them into prison. "Once inside, they started beating us," Ely recalled. "We didn't speak the same language and had no idea what was going on."

Isaac Ely

After two horrible days in jail, the two young men were driven to the Iranian border and released. "We were dropped off in the middle of nowhere and told that if we came back into Turkey we'd be killed," said Ely. "We had no choice but to go back into Iran in search of another means of escape."

They walked through the night in the pitch black, teeth chattering and bodies shaking from hunger and cold. "I knew we were facing death, but my mind wouldn't let me give up," Ely said. "I had a purpose and I couldn't stop thinking about what my mother would do if I were dead."

Finally, the boys reunited with the smugglers and were taken to the Turkish border town of Van, where police advised them to go to the United Nations in Istanbul. After weeks of waiting, surviving on little food and water, Ely and his cousin were finally granted asylum in Amsterdam, where a Jewish organization helped them find housing and schooling.

"During this time, I had no contact with my parents because they had been thrown into jail in Iran as punishment for my escape," he said. Though he was eager to make it to the United States to find his brother, Ely's application for entry was rejected. Then someone suggested Canada. After two years in Holland, the boys boarded a plane for Toronto. With the help of immigration lawyer Mendel Green and Jewish Immigrant Aid Services, the two Iranian-Jewish teenagers landed on Canadian soil on July 22, 1986.

Ely smiled as he looked back on those first years of life in Toronto. Though he was living in a tiny basement apartment in an unfamiliar city, he was happy to be alive and free, and appreciative of the opportunities he had been granted.

"That's Isaac for you," said his wife, Mina, sitting inside Amore Trattoria in Toronto's Yonge and Eglinton neighbourhood. "He's always smiling – that's the first thing I noticed about him when we met more than 10 years ago."

This cozy, busy Italian eatery was one of Ely and his cousin's first business ventures. Though the restaurant thrived, Ely's heart remained in the clothing business, so after he was married he sold his shares.

In the early years of their marriage, Ely and his wife were extremely busy. Mina, who was born in Russia, was running a high-end women's shoe store in Forest Hill Village, while Ely was transitioning from his discount clothing store, Best Deals, to a highly fashionable men's concept store, Form.

Asked how he copes with stress when faced with an important order from a high-profile client, he smiled his charming, signature smile, and replied: "Stress is something we create; so, if you don't create stress, then there is no stress."

Inside the stylish showroom and atelier on Champagne Drive in the Dufferin and Finch area, where Isaac Ely Bespoke is housed today, Ely showed off the luxurious fabrics he imports from Italy, France and Switzerland and the dozens of shirt collar and cuff samples that he uses, to demonstrate the endless choices available to his clientele.

When he transitioned from selling men's clothing off the rack to designing and creating made-to-measure garments, he fulfilled a lifelong dream. "I was tired of selling clothing that didn't fit properly," he said. "I wanted to make suits that felt comfortable, looked great and made people feel confident and proud."

Today, he's doing just that.

"I go to Isaac about once every 18 months with an order," says one of Ely's oldest bespoke customers, Errol Wolff. A partner in the accounting firm Segal LLP, Wolff loves the way Ely's suits fit.

"For me the value comes in never having to take it back to be altered," he said. "When you walk out of Isaac's shop after a final fitting, you know it's perfect."

Wolff also likes having a talented and obliging tailor on hand. "Recently, I saw a Pal Zileri suit in Hazelton Lanes that I loved, but it was outrageous in price and wouldn't have fit properly," he recalled. "So, I went to Isaac with the idea and now he's making me something similar."

Ely has a flare for reading his clientele and designing clothing that suits their style and build. "It's really about understanding the human body," he said.

Unlike those of many tailors, Ely's suits and shirts are all designed and hand-sewn under one roof. He has a team of highly skilled people who work with him to create these works of art. "He makes beautiful, classic garments and is driven by vision and passion," Mina said of her husband. "He never lets a customer leave until they are completely thrilled."

Janet Shiner BEd MBA
In-Home Financial Services
Trusted Financial Organization For Seniors
Bill Paying, Tax Organization, Checkbook Balances
Serving Clients In North Toronto
Call 647-822-0048
www.inhomefinancialservices.com

450 tel
Call home for the holidays.
JUST DIAL 10•18•450
Canada, USA & Israel
20 min. for 50¢ per call
Start using 450Tel today. Dial 10•18•450 before your long distance call.
Calls to certain phones in some international destinations or special events, mobile terminations are billed at a higher rate. Rates effective January 1, 09 and subject to change without notice. 450Tel™ rates are the same 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. A call under the 20 minute program will be billed at $20. Thereafter, calls are billed in one minute increments, rates vary by country. Please dial toll-free 10-18-450-0 or 647-435-2477 to confirm that 450Tel™ long distance is available from your area.

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

ANDREA MARTIN HOSTS 'SONGS AND CELEBRATION' FUNDRAISER FOR JEWISH THEATRE COMPANY

Andrea Martin is hosting Songs and Celebration – An Evening of Songs from Jewish Composers, presented next Monday as a fundraiser by the Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company. The evening showcases more than a dozen entertainers, including Bruce Dow, Adam Brazier, Lisa Horner, Paula Wolfson, Gabi Epstein, Stephanie Roth and 12-year-old singing sensation Lily Librach.

Tickets $118 and $154. St. Lawrence Centre, Jane Mallett Theatre, 27 Front St. E. Monday, Nov. 22, 7:30 p.m. 416-366-7723, www.stlc.com

• • •

Lantos in Conversation: The Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company presents award-winning film producer Robert Lantos in its Conversations On The Green series. Lantos will show clips from his latest film, Barney's Version, which is due for theatrical release in late December. St. Lawrence Centre, Jane Mallett Theatre, 27 Front St. E. Monday, Nov. 29, 7:30 p.m. $37. 416-366-7723, www.stlc.ca. Future dates in the series feature lawyer-author Edward Greenspan (Dec. 6), theatre producer David Mirvish (April 11) and fashion journalist Jeanne Beker (May 16).

Robert Lantos

• • •

Literary Events

• Harold (Hesh) Troper discusses his new book The Defining Decade at a 1960s-themed Book Salon and Coffee House, with musical performances by Marcia Beck and Annie Gilbert. Co-presented by the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre and the Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School. Miles Nadal JCC, Thursday, Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m. 416-924-6211, ext. 154, www.mnjcc.org

• New Star Books and the Miles Nadal JCC host the launch of Adam Seelig's new book Every Day in the Morning (slow). Miles Nadal JCC, Jacobs Lounge, Monday, Nov. 29, 7 p.m.

• • •

Theatre Events

• Kosher Lutherans, the comedy by William Missouri Downs, focuses on a Jewish couple who pose as Lutherans in order to adopt a young woman's out-of-wedlock baby. But how far are they willing to go to have a family? Produced by Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre, the play runs Nov. 10 to 21. Toronto Centre for the Arts, 5040 Yonge St. www.teatrontheatre.com

• Lenin's Embalmers, the dark comedy by Vern Thiessen presented by the Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company, continues to Nov. 21 at the Al Green Theatre, Miles Nadal JCC. $49 to $76. www.hgjewishtheatre.com, 416-366-7723.

• The Civic Light-Opera Company presents The Wonderful Wizard of Oz, the musical version of the classic story by L. Frank Baum. The company first staged the musical in 2000 in celebration of the centennial of the novel's original publication. It closely follows the original Baum story with a musical score by James P. Doyle and book by Toronto writer-director Joe Cascone. $25. Fairview Library Theatre, 35 Fairview Mall Dr. Dec 1 to 19. 416-755-1717, www.civiclightoperacompany.com

• • •

Arts in Brief

• Eye Weekly's film critic Adam Nayman examines the style and substance of recent art-house exports from Romania, Taiwan, Iran, Spain, Argentina and other countries. His "Media Monday" lecture with film clips is titled "Surfing the New Waves: Contemporary Foreign-Language Cinema." Miles Nadal JCC, Nov. 22, 7 to 9 p.m. $12 drop in per lecture. 416-924-6211, ext. 606.

• Miles Nadal JCC Active Seniors presents the latest instalment of its series, Great Jewish Canadian Personalities. Adam Fuerstenberg talks about the life and times of J. B. Salsberg. Thursday, Nov. 18, 1:30 p.m. Refreshments.

Andrea Martin

• The Sarah Sommer Chai Folk Ensemble, the Winnipeg-based group that is North America's largest and oldest Israeli folk troupe, has released a new CD called Wanderings. The ensemble consists of 40 dancers, singers and musicians and was founded in 1964. The CD may be purchased from its website, www.chai.mb.ca.

• Planet Music – Lecture on World Music for the armchair traveller. Miles Nadal JCC, Thursday, Nov. 18, 7 to 8:30 p.m. Drop in for $18. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

• Chai Tea and a Movie screens the 2009 Slovakian film Broken Promise by director Jiri Chlumsky, about a Jewish boy who has to make some risky decisions in order to survive World War II. $15. SilverCity Richmond Hill, 8725 Yonge St. at Hwy. 7. Sunday, Nov. 21, tea 4 p.m., film 5 p.m. www.tjff.com.

Artist interprets 'the glorious sites' of two worlds

By CYNTHIA GASNER
Special at The CJN

Contrasting Worlds, an exhibition by award-winning painter Lena Shugar, was inspired by her recent travels to Alaska and Israel.

"Capturing the immortal spirit of Israel's landscape was challenging," Shugar said. "The interpretation of this subject was a journey of exploration of thoughts and realization of the reassurance of its permanence."

Alaska, Igloo* by Lena Shugar

Alaska, she said, has enriched the world with its dramatic diversity. "The icebergs appear to possess the prehistoric mystery of splendour while standing guard over this beautiful, pristine world."

Using texture, form and subject, some of Shugar's artworks are expressed abstractly with vibrant and intense colours.

Her mystical paintings, in watercolour, acrylic, oil and mixed media, can be found in numerous private and corporate collections as well as on donation cards and magazine covers.

"My artistic exploration takes me on a journey of both the cerebral and the intuitive sides of my nature," she said.

"It has been my privilege to witness the glorious sights in Alaska and Israel and to paint [them] in my own humble way."

Shugar was born in Poland and moved to Canada with her family in 1951, after fleeing to Russia during World War II.

Her first major exhibition was in Ramat Gan, Israel, in 1990.

Closer to home, she has been critically acclaimed, and in 2001, she received the Award of Excellence at the Lindsay Art Gallery in Lindsay, Ont.

Masada, Cloaked in Light and Shadow as if in Prayer* by Lena Shugar.

Contrasting Worlds runs at the Leonardo Galleries, 133 Avenue Rd., from Nov. 25 to Dec. 10. Call 416-924-7296 or visit www.lenashugar.com

Book has proved to be therapeutic to author

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

It was a day that would change her life forever.

Ten years ago, in a ceremony in New York City, Kati Marton, an American journalist and author, accepted Hungary's highest civilian award on her father's behalf. Later that evening, the Hungarian foreign minister gave her a large manila envelope for her father containing material on him compiled by Hungary's Communist-era secret police, AVO.

Kati Marton

Endre Marton, Kati's urbane and cosmopolitan dad, was one of the last independent journalists reporting from Hungary when it was under the sway of Stalinist-style communism.

Working for the Associated Press, he filed stories about political suppression that irked the authorities. His wife, Ilona, was a pest, too, being a reporter for United Press International. Their body of work would earn them the George Polk Award, one of journalism's highest honours.

In 1955, he and Ilona were separately imprisoned on trumped-up charges of espionage. Being pro-western democrats whose friends included British and American journalists and diplomats, they had been under surveillance for years. The hard-line communist regime considered them "sworn enemies."

Kati Marton, who was six years old when she witnessed their respective arrests, was placed in the care of strangers, traumatized by these events. In 1957, after the Soviet army crushed the grassroots Hungarian revolution, she and her family immigrated to the United States.

In their new homeland, Endre Marton was AP's chief correspondent in the U.S. State Department. His wife worked as a French teacher.

Her parents, having survived the Holocaust with fake identity papers, rarely spoke about their experiences. Nor did they ever tell their two daughters, who had been baptized as Catholics, that they were in fact Jewish.

Endre Marton, stigmatized as a Jew in prewar Hungary despite his ardent assimilationist beliefs, regarded his past as a heavy burden. As a result, he left that envelope untouched on his desk.

After his death in 2005, his younger daughter, Kati Marton, opened the envelope, hoping to alleviate her trauma.

The emotionally wrenching contents documented her parents' ordeal and the betrayals inside their family circle, whetting Marton's curiosity. It led her to AVO's archives in Budapest and prompted her to write Enemies of the People: My Family's Journey to America, which was published by Simon and Schuster in a hardback edition in 2009 and republished in paperback earlier this year.

Marton, who was in Toronto last month on a brief publicity tour, said there was a disconnect between her parents' studied silence about their ordeal under Nazism and communism and her need to know about their pain and humiliation.

"My parents were burdened by too much history," explained Marton, whose second husband, Peter Jennings, was a prominent TV broadcaster and whose current spouse, Richard Holbrooke, is U.S. special envoy to Pakistan and Afghanistan. "I had the opposite reaction. I did not have enough history.These forces collided."

Marton, a former ABC television foreign correspondent who has written seven books, found out she was of Jewish descent in 1980 while writing a biography of Raoul Wallenberg, the Swedish diplomat who saved thousands of Hungarian Jews during the Holocaust. Someone told her that her maternal grandparents, Adolf and Anna Neumann, had been murdered in Auschwitz.

The disclosure came as a relief to Marton. "A void was filled," she writes. "I was happy to be in possession of the truth." By now a lapsed Catholic, Marton was proud of her Jewish heritage.

But when she called her father from Budapest with the news, he was cold, his secret having been revealed and his control of his "narrative" having been usurped. "We were not Jewish," he declared. "We were Hungarian. Absolutely and totally assimilated."

The revelation, she noted, strained their relationship for the next 25 years.

Jennings, the father of her two grown children, reacted quite differently. While on assignment in Israel, he bought her a ring with a Jewish motif.

Endre Marton had "complicated feelings" about being Jewish, his life choices having been shaped by anti-Semitism.

"Like so many middle-class Jews in Hungary, he was utterly secular and believed that religion was a thing of the 19th century," explained Marton, a non-practising Jew today. "He and my mother were caught flat-footed by anti-Semitism. It was a shock to their system. As patriotic Hungarians, they thought they would be exempt from anti-Semitism."

They were, of course, incredibly naive. Hungary, after all, was the first western nation in the 20th century to impose an official numerus clausus on its Jewish citizens.

Marton, whose book has been translated into three languages and has been bought by film producers, is of two minds about her late parents.

During her childhood, she adored and looked up to them. But after the rift drew them apart, she no longer considered them demigods.

"They would have hated my book," she said. "All their secrets were revealed. They were not paragons of perfection, and neither am I. But they were remarkable people."

In retrospect, she said, Enemies of the People has had a therapeutic effect on her. For years after her parents were arrested, she carried the weight of emotional scars. "I can hardly imagine a more traumatic event," she said. "But this book has gone a long way to ease the trauma and has helped me assimilate the pain."

THE SWEETEST SOUNDS
A CENTURY OF MUSICAL THEATRE FROM RICHARD RODGERS TO ADAM GUETTEL

Featuring Adrian Marchuk (Frankie Valli in Jersey Boys), with special guests Sara Farb, Toni MacRae and Jeigh Madjus.

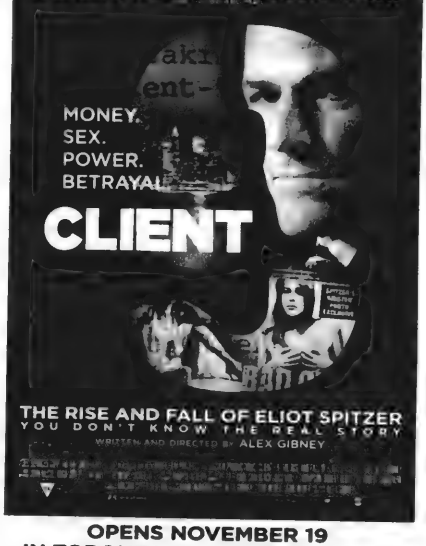
SUNDAY NOVEMBER 28, 2010 ~ 7PM

TICKETS: $25 - $45
Available at the T.O. Centre Box Office, TorontoSings.com or by calling 416-872-1111

THE GEORGE WESTON RECITAL HALL
Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge Street | www.tocentre.com

TORONTO CENTRE FOR THE ARTS
ACTING

"UTTERLY FASCINATING."
A HOST OF CHARACTERS THAT WOULD MAKE DICKENS WEEP FOR JOY."
"PLAYS LIKE A POLITICAL THRILLER."
"A POWERHOUSE OF A DOCUMENTARY."
"MASTERFUL AND PLENTY JUICY."
"EASILY ONE OF THE BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR."
"A SMART, WELL-BUILT DOCUMENTARY"



THE RISE AND FALL OF ELIOT SPITZER
YOU DON'T KNOW THE REAL STORY
WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY ALEX GIBNEY

OPENS NOVEMBER 19
IN TORONTO AND MONTREAL AT
CINEPLEX ENTERTAINMENT — THE GRANDE SHEPPARD CENTRE
AMC THEATRES — FORUM 22
AMC THEATRES — INTERCHANGE 30
CHECK LOCAL LISTINGS FOR SHOWTIMES
CLIENT9THEMOVIE.COM

Cantor Deborah Staiman releases her debut CD

BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

Mosaic, Cantor Deborah Staiman's first CD, is an eclectic collection of classical and Jewish sacred music that reflects significant milestones in her life. She pursued a career in opera before she became a cantor.

"I wanted to pull together the many pieces of my musical life journey," she says. "This is music from my soul."

Staiman will be performing sacred selections from the CD, along with musical theatre gems from Irving Berlin, Kurt Weill, Stephen Sondheim and others, at the launch on Nov. 28.

The Toronto-born cantor says she was hooked on opera from the age of 12, when she began singing in the children's chorus of the Canadian Opera Company. After graduating with a music degree from the University of Toronto, she studied opera at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London.

The investiture of the world's first female cantor, Barbara Ostfeld-Horowitz, took place in 1975, she recalls. "I was shocked. I had sung in many synagogue choirs, but who ever heard of a woman cantor?

"There were no women cantors to serve as role models even when I was in university. [At the time] the thought of becoming a cantor never crossed my mind."

After continuing her opera studies in Rome, Staiman moved to New York, where she taught voice. There she became very involved with her synagogue, she recounts. "I found myself drawn to cantorial music."

She eventually went back to school to become a cantor. In 1991, she received her master's of sacred music from Hebrew Union College/ Jewish Institute of Religion in New York and became a member of the American Conference of Cantors. She has since served in congregations in New Jersey and Florida.

Cantor Deborah Staiman's CD Mosaic

She returned to Toronto in 2002 to live closer to her family. Here she officiates at weddings, baby-namings and other Jewish life-cycle events, and she has established her own private practice as a vocal coach and singing teacher.

Staiman says she thought of various names for her CD, a compilation of diverse musical works. "When I came up with Mosaic, I felt good about it, because Mosaic means putting pieces together."

She says the word "mosaic" also has a second meaning, which connotes institutions and writings with a connection to Moses.

"I thought that was fortuitous… 'Mosaic' relates to Jewishness, and 11 out of the 16 songs on the CD are Jewish."

The CD also features arias and art songs that reflect Staiman's operatic career, she says.

The selection of Jewish music includes a couple of pieces with texts from the Song of Songs; Harvest, a musical setting to a poem by Hungarian Jewish partisan Hannah Senesh; a Yiddish classic, Oy Mame Bin Ich Farlibt (Oh Mama Am I in Love); such Shabbat liturgical pieces as a Sephardi Kiddush, Yism'Chu, Sholom Aleichem and Avinu Malkeinu, the prayer sung only on the High Holidays.

Staiman chants a traditional piece of a cappella chazzanut set to the Shema of the Shabbat Musaf service, while she chooses more contemporary renditions of Yism'Chu and Sholom Aleichem.

Cantors are always recording liturgical music, she says. "We have an incredibly vast and rich musical tradition. Much of it is fine music that deserves to be heard outside the synagogue."

Mosaic will be launched on Nov. 28 at the Annex Live, 296 Brunswick Ave., in Toronto, from 2:30 to 5 p.m. Call 416-483-9532 or visit jewishlifecycles.ca.

SUBSCRIBE TO The Canadian Jewish News

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

A film about hubris, power and sex

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The abrupt resignation of Eliot Spitzer as governor of New York state in March 2008 came as a surprise and shock to many observers.

Touted as a candidate to become the first Jewish president of the United States, he was smart, savvy and superbly connected.

To his everlasting regret, he could not control his emotions, and – as he puts it in Alex Gibney's riveting two-hour documentary, Client 9: The Rise and Fall of Eliot Spitzer – he "caved in to temptations."

Spitzer, who as New York's attorney general challenged powerful interests on Wall Street and busted prostitution rings in Manhattan, resigned in the wake of a sex scandal that destroyed his career as an up-and-coming politician.

A supposedly happily married man with a beautiful and accomplished wife, he was forced to step down after it was discovered he had frequented high-price call girls.

Not once, but many times.

Gibney's documentary, which was premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival and is due to open here on Friday, Nov. 19, leaves the impression that Spitzer's downfall was a function of dirty politics.

Spitzer, a dogged and determined figure who seemed to be guided by steadfast progressive principles and a combative style, made enemies easily.

He angered and alienated a string of Wall Street stalwarts, including the former president of the New York Stock Exchange and the chief executive officer of American International Group, a conglomerate bailed out by the Obama administration during the recession.

Spitzer's zeal for reform, his habit of forcing bankers and CEOs to do the right thing, prompted his adversaries to bring him down, Gibney suggests.

Eliot Spitzer and his wife on the day he resigned as governor of New York state.

A member of the so-called "lucky sperm club," he was born into fortuitous circumstances. Spitzer's father, Bernard, was a rich real estate developer. He, Spitzer, was blessed with brains.

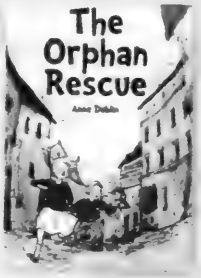
Destined to go far as a politician, Spitzer ruined it all by cavorting with escorts at $1,000 a pop and carving out a double life for himself.

One of his "dates,"Ashley Dupre, appears on screen, refusing to acknowledge herself as a hooker.

Despite his fall from grace, Spitzer has since bounced back as a CNN commentator, but it's doubtful whether he will be able to resurrect his political career.

Client 9: The Rise and Fall of Eliot Spitzer is a well-told tale of hubris, power and sex.

Books can provide a break for the kids, too



JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

"Books are the quietest and most constant of friends," Charles W. Eliot, a former president of Harvard University, once said. Those of us in a household full of children, yearning for some peace and quiet, might take this sage advice and give out books for Chanukah gifts. While educational and entertaining for the children, they also provide some welcome relief from the television and video game chatter.

The Orphan Rescue* by Anne Dublin, Second Story Press

Geared towards children between seven and 10, this is the exciting story of a young girl in pre-World War II Poland whose courage saves her little brother from a dangerous factory where he has been sent to work. It is inspired by a story from the author's own family history.

Miriam, 12, and her younger brother, David, live with their grandparents, having lost their parents to illness and poverty. They live together in one room behind their grandfather's shop, and often there isn't enough food for all of them.

Miriam is shocked when her grandparents decide to send David to an orphanage. When she discovers that David is being forced to work in a factory, she decides to rescue him.

Illustrated throughout, The Orphan Rescue is an accessible, entertaining story for young readers that manages to touch on some serious topics including poverty, child labour and the history of Jews in pre-Holocaust Europe.

Anne Frank, the Anne Frank House Authorized Graphic Biography* by Sid Jacobson and Ernie Colon, Hill and Wang Novel Graphic

I'm surprised no one did this before that I'm aware of. This is the story of Anne Frank told in graphic-novel form.

Drawing on the expertise and authority of the Anne Frank House in Amsterdam, the authors have created the first authorized and exhaustive graphic biography of Anne Frank.

It is a complete account, a chronological retelling of Anne Frank's life, from Anne's parents' wedding, to their going into hiding and subsequent capture and Anne's tragic death in Bergen-Belsen. It also mentions the publication of the diary and the production of the Broadway play in 1955. The story is tastefully illustrated and dramatized, and contains a helpful list of further reading for anyone wanting to learn more. For teenagers.

Annexed, A Novel* by Sharon Dogar, Houghton Mifflin

Speaking of Anne Frank, English author Sharon Dogar has an interesting take on the well-known story.

In Annexed, Dogar imagines life in hiding with Anne from Peter van Pels' point of view. Peter was the teenager whose family shared the attic hideout with Anne Franks' and was frequently mentioned in her diary.

Through Peter's eyes, readers see another version of those two years spent in the attic. Readers will see another view of Anne, her sister Margot, her family and the others who hid with them.

The book continues on after the discovery of the hideout – to the death camps, the march to Mauthausen and the terrible fates of all the annex's occupants.

Annexed also contains a list of books for further reading. For ages 12 and up.

Hanukkah*, Accord Publishing

Nothing says Chanukah more than – well – Hanukkah. This is for parents who wish to teach their children about the important traditions associated with the holiday – however you choose to spell it.

Young children will love the animated windows, which feature flickering menorahs, spinning dreidels and flipping latkes. Vividly depicted illustrations paired with the full-colour AniMotion technology windows bring the holiday to life. For young children.

A Chanukah Noel*, written by Sharon Jennings, illustrations by Gillian Newland, Second Story Press

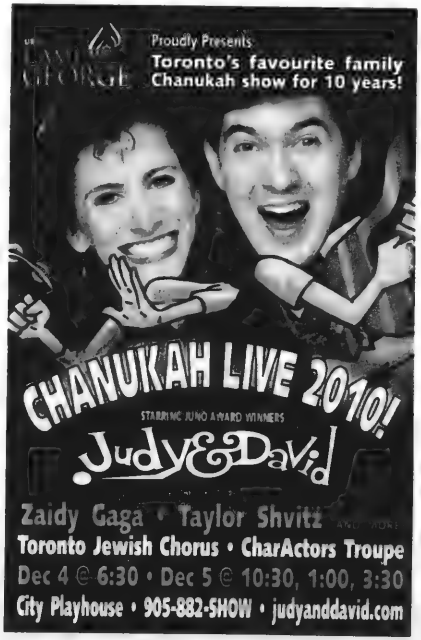
Christmas at Chanukah? This unique tale, based on a true story, is about Charlotte, a young Jewish girl who moves to a small town in France. As Christmas draws near, Charlotte is amazed to see the town transform itself. Charlotte longs to have a Christmas too, and in a magical moment learns how to bring the spirit of both holidays together. Wonderfully illustrated throughout. For ages 5 to 9.

THE CIVIC LIGHT OPERA COMPANY
TORONTO'S PREMIERE MUSICAL THEATRE
proudly presents
The Wonderful
WIZARD of OZ
AN EXCITING NEW MUSICAL!
FAIRVIEW LIBRARY THEATRE
35 Fairview Mall Dr., North York TICKETS - $25 - $27.50
Dec. 1 to 19 Wed. – 7pm/Thurs. To Sat. – 8pm /Sun. – 2pm
BOX OFFICE: (416) 755-1717



Proudly Presents
Toronto's favourite family Chanukah show for 10 years!
CHANUKAH LIVE 2010!
STARRING JUNO AWARD WINNERS
Judy & David
Zaidy Gaga • Taylor Shvitz
Toronto Jewish Chorus • CharActors Troupe
Dec 4 @ 6:30 • Dec 5 @ 10:30, 1:00, 3:30
City Playhouse • 905-882-SHOW • judyanddavid.com

Vasily Grossman collection contains powerful Holocaust essay

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

Vasily Grossman was a Russian/Jewish writer most known for his novel Life and Fate. It was banned by the Communists, smuggled out of the Soviet Union and published in the West in 1980.

But before that, Grossman was a correspondent for the Red Army during World War II, writing first-hand accounts of some of the greatest battles of the Eastern Front, including the battle of Stalingrad. Attached to the unit that liberated Treblinka, Grossman was one of the first journalists to write about the Holocaust.

Vasily Grossman

The Road (NYRB Classics) is a new collection of Grossman's short fiction and essays, most of which have never been published in English before. The pieces run from his early 1930s stories to his last story, In Kislovodsk, a moving story about a Soviet doctor asked by the occupying Nazis to facilitate the murder of Soviet PoWs. It was published just after he died in 1964.

Included in this collection are two important works: the short story The Old Teacher, which is among the first works of fiction about the Holocaust, and the powerful essay The Hell of Treblinka, one of the first published accounts of a Nazi death camp.

The Old Teacher, published in 1943, is a short story about the massacre of a small Ukrainian town's Jews.

While at times Grossman's prose can veer toward exaggeration and Soviet propaganda, his strength lies in his characters and descriptive detail.

The Old Teacher begins with an idyllic setting in a countryside peasant village as Boris Isaakovitch, the 82-year-old title character, sits outside in the sun with a book by Chekhov on his lap. "He was breathing in the smell of onions and sunflower-seed oil and enjoying the warmth of the sun-warmed stone."

But beneath this idyllic setting lies a sinister foreboding. It is June 1942, and the advancing German army is steps away from their town. Stories of the disappearance of Jews in the other occupied towns prey heavily on the minds of the town's Jewish population.

"They're going to need people like us – surely you can see that they're going to need doctors and teachers," the town doctor, Weintraub, optimistically tells Boris when he asks to be given a suicide dosage.

Grossman describes the oncoming Nazi menace with a horror-novel-like atmosphere. "The Nazis drew everything dark up to the surface, just as a black spell in an old tale calls up the spirits of evil. That night the little town lay stifling, gripped by something foul and dark. Something vile had awoken; stirred by the Nazis' arrival, it was now reaching towards them."

The fate of the town's Jews is inevitable. Yet Grossman is able to inject a spark of human decency into this horror with the scene of a young girl shielding the teacher's eyes from the carnage of the mass grave site.

Little human decency exists in The Hell of Treblinka, published in November 1944, just a few months after the camp's liberation. This essay is a vivid and imaginative description of the Nazi death camp.

He begins with a detached, matter-of-fact geographic description. "Here on the branch line to Siedlce, stands the remote station of Treblinka," and then slowly pulls you into the stark horror of the camp.

"Nothing in this camp was adapted for life," he writes. "Everything was adapted for death."

He describes the assembly line "conveyer belt executioner's block" setup of the camp, comparing it to a slaughter house; from the train station where an orchestra played to greet the new arrivals to the square where they left their suitcases and were processed, to "the road of no return," the path where they walked to the gas chambers disguised as showers.

He imagines what it would have been like in the square, where men were separated from their wives, mothers and children: "Love– maternal, conjugal or filial love – told people that they were seeing one another for the last time. Handshakes, kisses, blessings, tears, brief hurried words into which people put all their love, all their pain, all their tenderness, all their despair."

At times though, when he tries to describe the thoughts of those in the gas chamber, his imagination fails him:

"What are the pictures now passing before people's glassy, dying eyes? Pictures of childhood? Of the happy days of peace? Of the last terrible journey?... No, what happed in that chamber cannot be imagined."

The Hell of Treblinka is an extraordinary essay, and it's well worth buying the book. With little in the way of sources, Grossman relied on his observations and interviews with inmates. It was used at the Nuremberg trials as evidence. This is the first time the essay has been published in English in full.

Grossman died in September 1964, on the eve of the 23rd anniversary of the massacre of the Jews of Berdichev in which his mother died. At the time he was working on the novel Everything Flows, a scathing criticism of totalitarianism that wasn't published in Russia until 1989.

The Road, which also contains essays and journalism, is translated by Robert and Elizabeth Chandler with Olfa Mukovnikova. It is a fitting testament to a writer whom Martin Amis calls the "Tolstoy of the USSR."

On the Park
Events & Conference Centre
• Weddings • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs • Brunches
• Corporate Meetings & Socials
• 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
• Seven Beautifully Themed Rooms • Kosher Catering Available

Mayor Elect Rob Ford with (from L to R) General Manager, John Neretlis, Vice President of PR Creative Caterers, Joe Elmaleh and President of PR Creative Caterers, Israel Fisch.

416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723
1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP/EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT/SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH /SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
398 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
516 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!

Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

GLEN PARK CONDO - NEW LISTING

Dream model penthouse unit, wrap around terrace, gourmet kitchen, 2 bdrm., den, exquisite finishes $845,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

STRATHALLAN WOOD

Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes throughout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE — CLASSIC 3 BDRM

Attn builders & renovators! 2 storey home on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

SOLD FOR 98% OF ASKING PRICE

CRICKET CLUB

Detached bungalow on 35 x 125 lot. Renovate, top up or build your dream home. Steps to Avenue Rd., TTC, library. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDO

Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / LAWRENCE

3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash.

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

Support the advertisers who support the
The Canadian Jewish news

ALAN NEWTON

REAL ESTATE LTD., BROKERAGE

CONDOS FOR SALE

CLARK – HILDA "CONSERVATORY PENTHOUSE"
Fab. Split 2 Br Layout, X-Large Solarium, Eat In Kit, 24Hr Security, Sabbath Elevator, Great Room Sizes, Must See! *Mark Waxman

BATHURST/ANTIBES
Large Corner 2 Br Unit, Huge Wrap-Around Balcony, Flr to Ceiling Windows-Wood Flr, Thru'out, Great Rm Sizes with Locker, North View $269,900 *Ted Waxman

BATHURST/CENTRE "EXQUISITE!!
Fab. 2 Br with Locker & U/g Parking, Balcony, 2 Washrooms, Fab, Finishing Thru'out – One of A Kind!! $369,900 *Ted Waxman

* Sales Representative

905-764-7200

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

2 NEPTUNE DRIVE
~Life Lease~CONDO
Residence for Active Independent Seniors
Great Programs and Activities to Enjoy
Very Spacious 1 Bedroom Suite Facing Courtyard @ $179,000
Large Kitchen, Ensuite Laundry, Parking, Locker
www.rpt.ca/neputne815
For More Information contact
Amelia Ipp, Carol Shapiro & Shami Zimmerman
Sales Representatives
Royal LePage Partners Realty, Brokerage
416-229-4454

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Bathurst/Steeles PRIMROSE II
2 bedroom, 2 baths. Jan 1 occupancy. Laundry. Outdoor pool, bright, very clean, security, A/C. Indoor parking
416-410-3311 Michael Marmur

Yonge/Shepp., lux. 2 bdr., 2 bth., lndry., pkg., locker, subway, 24 hr. sec., $1600 incl. 647-299-0371.

40 CONDO FOR SALE/RENT

Bath./Glencairn, lease/own-1 bdr. + den,1.5 bth., wshr/dryer, 1,010 sq. ft., hrdwd. flrs., undrgnd. pkg., mo. - mo., transit at door. View on: www.mls.ca at C1959642. $1699. + hydro. Call Keith 416-995-8209

45 CONDO WANTED

Looking to rent/buy condo in Jewish area, not facing traffic, approx. 1200 sf, 2 bdrm., reno'd if in older bldg. Or I would consider sharing your home. Needed asap! 416-224-8406 leave message.

Looking for 2 bed. condo to rent at 90 Fisherville (corner unit pref.) or in the Savoy. 416-224-8406.

62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED

Refined, classy, empty-nester, female, 50'ish, seeks great place to live. E: coffee2go@hotmail.ca

75 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar.
Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting.
8 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-8377 / 416-631-0368

87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

SUMMA PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
Professional Property Management & Consulting
With over 25 years experience our superior service includes managing multi-unit Residential/Commercial and Industrial properties. We also offer specialized services to manage individual condominium investments. Summa is first rate in Management Consulting and Renting!
At Summa, we get "TOP MARKS" for Management, Consulting and Renting!
647-341-7990
www.summapm.com
propman@summapm.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

DELRAY/BOCA
Addison Reserve
An Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBuytheGross.com

W. Palm Bch., C.V. condo, 2nd flr. in a commun., nr. clubhouse & pools, walking dist. to synagogues, compl. renov., new water htr., new bth., + 1 bdr., 1.5 bth., porch, $35,000K US. 561-687-4643. See pics @: http://beidaoooo.tripod.com

Century Village Deerfield. Most gorgeous renovated unit in the village. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. 514-287-1256.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!
Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
Specializing in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura and Ft. Lauderdale (800)851-2150
or (954)818-0760

SO. FLORIDA CONDOS – PRICES REDUCED 30-50%
Aqualina-Beach Club-Coronado-Hamptons-Hemispheres- Hidden Bay-Jade-LaMer LaPerla-Mystic Pt-Oceana-Ocean-Oceanview-Ocean Palms-Olympus-Parker-Pinnacle Quadoman-Renaisannce-Residences-Turnberry-Summit-Trump-Wave....and others.
Personalized service. Canadian references provided.
Jerry Savlov, Licensed Realtor Optimar Int'l Realty (Sunny Isles, FL) Direct (954)540-5232
e-mail: jas2468@gmail.com www.jerrysavlov.com

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 www.hallandale.webs.com

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

Boca Raton. Spacious sunny 3 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms, 4 to 6 months. Available Jan. 3, 2011. Ocean clubhouse/new gym. $4,500 negotiable. Mary Ann 1-561-866-8544.

100 Arlen House East, 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Beach condo in Miami area, ocean view, 2 bed., 2 bath., 1730 sq. ft. available Nov - Mar. Address: Sands Point, 16711 Collins Ave. 20th floor in Sunny Isles Beach, 33160. $3300/mo. 847-707-2353. ashvedc@yahoo.com

Beautiful Palm Beach Ocean Front. Two bedrooms, two bathrooms. 2 to 4 months. $3,000 monthly. 514-341-6732; 514-944-8160.

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

North Miami Beach - Arlen House. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. December - March $2300 monthly. 514-488-7724.

Delray - KP, 2/2, 55+, bright, golf view, breezy, all new, 4 mo. min,. $1450/mo. Call 561-272-1859.

Miami Beach. Oceanfront view. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. 3 months $1575 monthly 4 months $1475 monthly. 1-918-361-3222.

Hallandale condo. 3 1/2 sleeps 4, fully furnished, 2 bathrooms, KOSHER KITCHEN, overlooking Intercoastal, min. 3 months: Barbara, 514-683-7683.

Boca Raton, Intercoastal. Renovated. Beautifully furnished. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Great views, large terrace, security, pool, tennis, $2,700 monthly inclusive. 514-287-1256.

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. Call 301-907-0842.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Olympus, large 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equipped & furnished. Please call 416-447-1303.

Hallandale Olympus - luxurious. Furnished. 1 bed., 1 1/2 bath., pool, tennis, gym. Security. Near beach. Min. 3 months $1800.00 monthly. 514-489-6332.

Del Ray Beach Gorgeous new 55+ comm. beau. furn. 1 br. apt. All amenities avail., central loc. near beach 215-576-0559.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Del Ray Beach Gorgeous new 55+ comm. beau. furn. 1 br. apt. All amenities avail., central loc. near beach 215-576-0559.

Pompano Bch., Palm-Aire, C.C., 2 bdr., 2 bth., grdn. apt., main flr., fully furn., wshr./dryer. Avail. seas./annual. 416-518-5620.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

SOUTH FLORIDA REAL ESTATE
Fort Lauderdale/Pompano to Boca Raton Starting at $50,000
3 Mo Rentals from $1600
Call Wieder Realty, inc.
954-978-8300
or 1-888-979-9788
www.Palm-Aire.com

190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE

Need Plans for Winter Break? MARRIOTT'S FRENCHMAN'S COVE U.S. Virgin Islands – ST. THOMAS - 2 BEDROOM VILLA Sleeps 8 - Sunday DEC 19 - DEC 26, 2010 ASKING $436/night! email: VacationStThomas@gmail.com

230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Cosmetic face bus. Proven model. $4K to start. Profit in 1st month. 416-876-3670 www.liplabz.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced with Quick Books, I.O.A, Excel & Word Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE

FOR SALE 3 TWO STORY NEWLY RENOVATED COMMERCIAL TORONTO PROPERTIES, ALL WITH PARKING

344 WILSON AVE PART OF BUSY STRIP PLAZA FULLY LEASED 8.5 CAP ASKING $788K for 2500 sf

846 SHEPPARD AVE W AT WILMINGTON VACANT PERFECT FOR OWNER/USER ASKING $788K for 1700 sf

1048 EGLINTON AVE W FOREST HILL NEAR ALLEN ASKING $1.39M for 2400 sf NET LEASES $100k

VISIT THESE AND OTHER LISTINGS AT ROBERTESCOE.COM
416 968 3434 X 114 SALES REPRESENTATIVE
CITY COMMERCIAL REALTY GROUP LTD. #207, 1240 BAY ST TORONTO M5R 2A7

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4508
O: 305.408.8401

LONDONO REALTY GROUP INC. | ECR

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Welcome to Gleneagles Country Club!
Experience the "Legendary Living" that South Florida has to offer...

36-Holes of Championship Golf, 21-Competitive Har-Tru Tennis Courts & the Florida Sunshine You'll Love...
...An elegant atmosphere boasting an unparalleled lifestyle!

- Prime Delray Beach, Florida Location
- State-Of-The-Art Fitness Center
- Magnificent Clubhouse & Fine Dining
- 8-Sparkling Swimming Pools
- 24-Hour Gated & Manned Security
- Annual/Seasonal Rentals & Sales

Gleneagles is centrally located less than 30-minutes from the West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale International Airports. All ages are welcome. Homes and condominiums offered from the low $100,000's to over $500,000 USD.

www.GleneaglesFlorida.com • Tel: 561.819.5397

Ben G. Schachter,
Licensed Real Estate Broker

GLENEAGLES COUNTRY CLUB REAL ESTATE, LLC

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer. Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in, live out. 416-932-3042.

Exper. Israeli lady looking for job to take care of elderly or disabled Refs. 416-509-1333.

Reliable w/refs. cleaning lady 5 yrs. experience. For apts., homes offices 647-567-0591.

Cleaning lady avail. Fridays & Tuesdays. Exp. & refs. Hyacinth at 416-222-5807/647-234-7768 Serious callers only.

259 SENIORS

I will help you to look after sick seniors. PT or FT, live out, exper & refs. avail. 647-346-7889.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

2 brothers, handsome & estab 50'ish, looking to date 2 sisters or friends, 35-45 for fun & friendship. CJN Box # 5308.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?
Address your mail to:
The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4
Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.
CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

Health & Lifestyles

High school students aid Zareinu

Students from Thornhill Secondary School, Forest Hill Secondary School, Havergal College, the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto and Ulpanot Orot came together Nov. 7 to distribute 1,000 tzedekah boxes across the GTA. Funds raised will go to help children at Zareinu Educational Centre.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Soft spoken Cdn. Jewish lady, in her early 70's, nice looking, speks fine gentleman to share friendship & companionship & some nice moments. Living in north end of city. Able to drive day & night. CJN Box #5301.

Marriage-Minded Mench 55-70 Wanted! Let's spoil each other. Pretty, witty TO lady, 60, retired, kind, bright & sensitive, loves cooking, fishing, theatre. Seeks kind, non-smkng., Toronto man, financially secure (retiree/ widower preferred). Must have own home/car. Please call 416-224-8406.

300 ARTICLES FOR SALE

Living room: sofa $275, loveseat $175. Taupe floral pattern. Coffee table $75-$100, shelving unit $100. Excellent condition. Jonathan, 416-576-6057.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

Got a fixer-upper?

Check out the Service Directory! Call 416-391-1836

The Canadian Jewish news

SERVICE DIRECTORY section

370 CATERING

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

GLATT
Take-out & Catering
Shiva Meals
Simchas
Shabbat Dinners
905 - 597 - 7571

385 COMPUTERS

WEBSITES/COMPUTER HELP from $60/hr, Andrew: 416-633-5709. www.abrooke.net/tm

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

410 HEALTH AND BEAUTY

FREE HAIRCUTS
Also a 2 bdr. co-op apt. for sale. Please call: 416-782-8451.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

Katz Painting Services. Free Estimates 416-520-6890.

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

Memories fade. Slides, home movies, and videos collect dust. We're "Specialists" in DVD transfers and Preserving Memories. Fred; 416-229-6000; fredneison@madisonvideo.tv

472 RETIREMENT HOME

Ahavath Achim Retirement Home. The home with a Neshama. Planned activities, 24 hr. supervision. For information contact Joseph Sahar, office 416-398-5486 or 905-660-4831.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1505 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bathurst Upholstery. Reupholstering sofas, chairs. Low prices 416-781-1995, 905-886-3148.

Bernie the upholsterer has all fabrics 1/2 price. Dining room seats $25/ea. 416-931-2660.

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $686 + tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this

ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

Genes practically determined fencer's sporting career

By URI TALSHIR
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Sometimes, when the babysitter blows you off and the day care teacher is sick, you have no choice but to take your child to work. So it was, often, for young Maor Hatuel, who from the age of two got a peek at his father Haim's profession. There were no documents, printers or chairs in this office, but instead, fighters in strange outfits passionately trying to stab each other.

Recalling his time in the crib watching his father in the Acre fencing club, Hatuel said with a laugh, "He was my babysitter."

The 24-year old told Ha'aretz prior to the recently concluded World Championships in Paris, that from that point on he knew that some day he would be a fencer, too. Although his father said he could only start in third grade, he pushed to begin a year earlier.

The Hatuel fencing genes did not bypass Maor. Like his successful aunt Lydia and his talented sister Delilah, he quickly took to his foil. He won a silver medal in the European Youth Championships at age 19 and was on track for the Olympics but sidelined his fencing career when he was accepted into the elite Israel Air Force pilots' training course. Six months later he was bounced from the course and landed back in fencing.

"The long hiatus knocked me off balance but helped me mentally," said Hatuel. "I withstood a lot of pressure." After dealing with air force officers, he says it was easier to take in his father as a coach, though sometimes this new relationship generates ambivalent feelings. "When I do well it motivates me, but failures discourage me," he said. "Understand that I go everyday to train in the same place as my aunt, uncle and two sisters did, and I'm still trying to distinguish myself, to rise above the family successes and present something different."

Maor is particularly close to Delilah, 30. When she tore her ACL, a ligament in her knee, and her place at the 2008 Beijing Olympics was in jeopardy, Maor took leave of his work as a fencing coach and a salesman at Yes, dropped his aptitude test studies and relocated to the Wingate Institute for three weeks to help her with intensive rehab.

"I supported her for the Olympics and almost collapsed," he recalled. "I didn't get excited at all about my competitions, and it was hard for her to watch me participate in them. I lean on her for support and she understands me better than anyone else."

After years of struggling, Hatuel finally seems to be fulfilling his potential. He defeated the world champion at a meet in Paris, reached the top 16 in the latest European Championship and joined the Olympic squad. In order to continue receiving his monthly stipend he will have to do equally well at the World Championships.

As always, his father will be accompanying him. "Even if my opponent is better, taller or faster, and even if I'm trailing with a few seconds left, when I turn my head and see my father, it's everything," he said. "He's a Superman figure for me who can do it all. Thanks to him, I manage to stay concentrated even in the toughest situations."

Hatuel finished eighth at the world championships after being eliminated by Gerek Meinhardt of the United States.

It seems Hatuel is honing another less well-known talent – singing in the shower. "Every morning after practicing with my father, I give a performance in the country club shower. The others know who I am and love my singing," he said. "Sometimes the audience makes special requests."

Between practice and competitions, Hatuel is studying computer science and biology at the University of Haifa, but beyond a career in engineering or research he said he aspires toward politics. "I want to make an impact so that the next generation will grow up in a place where sports is a way of life."

Iranian athlete disciplined for appearing with Israeli

Compiled by CJN Staff

An Iranian weightlifter and the head of Iran's weightlifting team have been banned from all weightlifting activities for life after appearing on a platform with Israeli champion Sergio Britva while Hatikvah was being played.

The government of Iran made the announcement after Hossein Khodadadi appeared on the medal platform beside Britva, who won a gold medal at the World Masters Weightlifting Championship in Poland.

Khodadadi refused to shake hands with the Israeli after he mounted the podium. Britva and the bronze medalist from Germany did shake hands. Khodadadi then stood with his head bowed while the Israeli national anthem was played Jalal Yahya-Zadeh, head of Iran's physical education for youth committee announced the bans and added: "The fact that an Iranian weightlifting veteran has competed against an Israeli during the worldwide competitions and has stood beside him during the distribution of medal is unjustifiable.

"Unfortunately, those who supposedly had the primary responsibility in this regard did not see any problem in this matter, however did not see it fit to be distributed within the public, which itself is an obvious mistake on their end."

Video of the incident can be seen at: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lDecG6BWncA&feature=player_embedded.

FOREST HILL 50

Forest Hill Hockey Association (FHHA) marked its 50th anniversary with the 50 for 50 program – hockey scholarships were donated to 50 disadvantaged children in the GTA. Sports broadcaster and former NHL defenceman Jim McKenny, left, hosted the recent 50th anniversary celebration, which featured guest speaker, Paul Rosen, far right, goalie of the 2006 Olympic gold medal-winning National Sledge Hockey Team. Seen centre left is FHHA president, Hersh Forman, and to his right is David Krieger, chair of the 50 for 50 campaign.

CJN SNOWBIRDS
Get your CJN when you go away!
To find out more, visit:
www.cjnews.com

Chanukah party to feature concert by Jaffa Road

Jaffa Road

By HOLLY GINSLER
Special to The CJN

HAMILTON — Temple Anshe Sholom, Hamilton's Reform synagogue, and its religious school are presenting the Juno-award-nominated band Jaffa Road as part of its annual Chanukah fundraiser this year.

Jaffa Road is a Toronto-based world music group that plays an eclectic combination of music, including Jewish, classical Arabic and Indian, modern jazz, electronic, rock, pop, and dub.

According to Anshe Shalom's cantor and educator, Rebecca Moses, "it's impossible not to want to dance while you're listening. I think adults will appreciate the eclectic sound and the beauty of this unusual music, and kids will find the rhythms infectious."

Before the concert, there will also be a "Nuts and Bolts of Chanukah" party and a chance to put together gift bags for Hamilton's Out of the Cold program.

Sunplace, Jaffa Road's debut CD, was nominated for a 2010 Juno award for world music album of the year. Tracks have been played on many regional and national programs on CBC Radio, and it has earned the No. 1 spot on the CIUT world music chart.

Their song L.Y.G. recently won grand prize as well as a Lennon Award in the John Lennon Songwriting Contest. At the 2010 Toronto Independent Music Awards, they were named best world music artist.

Their multilingual lead singer is Aviva Chernick. She is accompanied by Aaron Lightstone, who plays the oud, as well as bassist Chris Gartner, saxophonist and flutist Sundar Viswanathan and percussionist Jeff Wilson.

Refreshments at the Chanukah party will include homemade latkes and sufganiyot. Children will be able to create their own chanukiyot out of nuts and dreidels out of bolts. There will also be the opportunity for children to make kippot out of their choice of several materials.

"It's a simple pattern," says Moses, "but this way they can make something truly unique."

Hamilton's Out of the Cold program provides hot meals six nights a week from nine locations and three breakfast meals at the Wesley Centre, a drop-in centre for homeless and at-risk people. The service is for families and individuals in need and runs from November to March. The gift bags made at the Chanukah party will contain shampoo, conditioner, lotion, soap, deodorant, toothpaste and toothbrushes, as well as warm new socks and a hat.

The Nuts and Bolts of Chanukah party will be held Nov. 28 at 1 p.m. at the temple, and the one-hour concert will begin at 2:30.

ASIAN LATKES

4 lg. potatoes
1/4 c coarsely chopped cashews
1/4 c flour
2 tbls wasabi powder (green powder found in Asian section of supermarket tastes similar to horseradish)
2 eggs, beaten vegetable oil

Gingered Sour Cream: Stir together 1/2 c sour cream & 2 tbsp. fresh chopped ginger or 1 tbsp powdered ginger

Peel and grate potatoes. Place in colander & set over large bowl, squeeze out as much liquid as possible. Stir together with nuts, flour, wasabi & eggs

Heat 1 tbsp oil in lg skillet over medium-high heat. Drop batter into silver dollar size patties & fry until golden brown on both sides, adding more oil & adjusting heat as needed. Serve with gingered sour cream.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-787-1655 • caplans.ca

A Family Business for over 60 Years

REMEMBERING OUR YESTERDAYS

By BILL GLADSTONE

UNION KOSHER DELICATESSEN

Bella Bernholtz stands in the doorway of the Union Kosher Delicatessen, at 797 Dundas St. W. in Toronto, about 1923. She and her husband, David Bernholtz, acquired the deli as the result of a bad debt and operated it for about a year. The Bernholtzes' main business, Union Kosher Sausage, became better known as Chicago 58 and had a factory on Lippincott Street from roughly 1923 to 2005, when it moved to Woodbridge, Ont.

Geldof lost his mom at 7

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

When Sir Bob Geldof was seven years old, his mother died. I know this because he was the keynote speaker at Ve'ahavta's Starry Nights 2010 event on Nov. 7, and he said so.

His father was a salesman and travelled all week, and his two sisters filled their time with studying and were rarely home. Bob was mostly home by himself until he didn't come home much at all. He said it was just too hard entering a place where the lights were off.

URBAN WRITER

He read a lot, classics such as Dickens, and sharpened his mind. Sometimes he would go out and help street people and prostitutes, and others who didn't have a place to go to.

One woman he remembers well was Mary, who slept on the doorstep of a man who lived nearby. The man would come home at the end of the day, step over Mary and say goodnight. Geldof was pissed off, thinking how rude he was being, so cavalier about Mary and treating her as if she was a waste of space.

Later on in life, he thought to himself that most of us – "including me," he said – would never let Mary sleep on their doorsteps. "We would be too worried about the value of our houses."

And Geldof realized that the man really was a good person.

Geldof said it's irrational to hate someone, to think of them as being "less than" us, because of the colour of their skin, the texture of their hair, or how they talk or look.

"It is intellectually wrong," he stated.

He said it made him very angry that blacks in South Africa were treated the way they were under apartheid, so he started a movement with a fellow bloke to fight racism – "and hopefully get shagged," he joked.

That's where it all started for Geldof.

I meet a lot of people who work at the local level doing tikun olam, many who are very impressive. But once in a while I meet a Sir Bob Geldof, who operates on the world stage and fights to eradicate such things as national debts and achieves his goals.

I feel humanitarian envy. I am in awe as a trader might be at hearing Warren Buffet.

Listen to this: shortly after Geldof was able to convince western nations to forgive the foreign debt of a handful of African countries, 42 million children who previously had received no education whatsoever were able to go to school. Today, he says, some of the world's highest marks in science and math come from places such as Ghana.

Africa may be the Dark Continent, but it doesn't have to be, as Geldof convinced all of us at Starry Nights: He said numbers equal dollars and dollars equal political sway.

He also told us about the Live Aid benefits he put on in dozens of different countries that ultimately raised $150 million. The money has been used to hire doctors and nurses and make life better for a lot of people.

I wish there were more leaders of his calibre. Truthfully, a guy like Geldof sets the bar for humanitarianism, and while we understand that few people can ever equal his achievements, by using him as a role model, we can achieve our own particular brand of greatness.

Work hard to achieve your goal and help the world while you can. Geldof lost his mom when he was seven.

To comment, go to http://avrum.net.

Enjoy 3 months' payments waived*.

Because we know you'll give it a good home.

BRING HOME A
MERCEDES-BENZ
EVENT

In addition, receive 25% off installed Genuine Accessories.

Lockable utility bar | Navigation media system | Rear roof spoiler

The Bring Home a Mercedes-Benz Event is the best time for you to save. You'll receive your first three months' payment waived* and 25% off installed Genuine Mercedes-Benz accessories. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group

Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

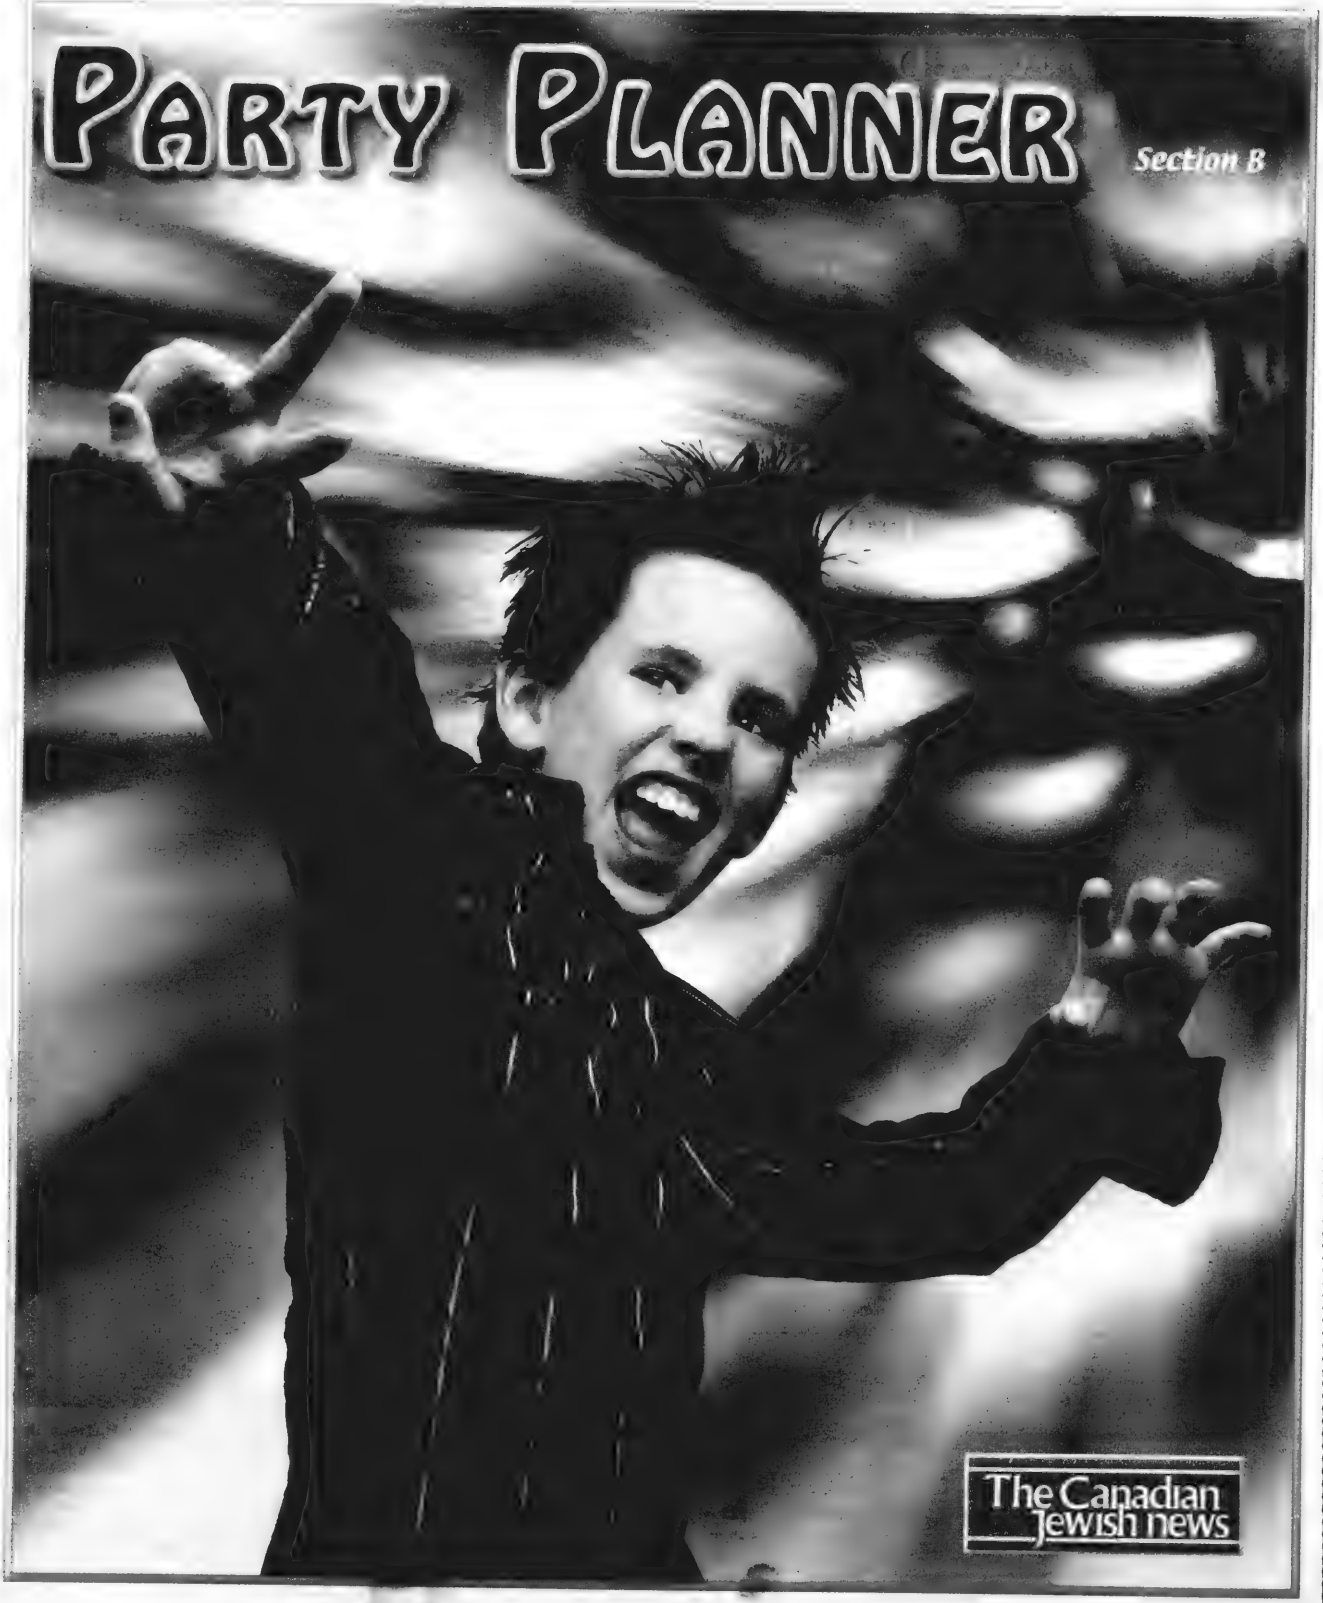
Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

© 2010 Mercedes-Benz Canada Inc. *Lease and finance offers based on a new 2011 C 250/2011 E 350 BlueTEC available only through Mercedes-Benz Financial on approved credit for a limited time. Lease example based on $358/$738 (excluding taxes) per month for 48/36 months. Down payment or equivalent trade of $4,700/$4,600 plus first monthly payment and security deposit of $400/$800 and applicable taxes due at lease inception. First, second and third month payment waivers are capped up to a total of $1,150/$2,550 including tax, for lease and finance programs. Payment waivers are only applicable on new 2011 B/C/E (wagon/sedan only) ML/GLK models. Not applicable to AMG models. MSRP starting at $35,900/$62,500. A.P.R. of 3.9%/5.9% applies. Total obligation is $27,934/$53,418. Finance example based on 60 month term at an A.P.R. of 1.9%/3.9% and an MSRP of $35,900/$62,500. Monthly Payment is $565/$1,033 (excluding taxes, with down payment $6,515/$8,715. Cost of borrowing is $1,565/$5,749 for a total obligation of $38,560/$68,124. 18,000 km/year allowance; $0.20/$0.25 km for excess kilometres applies. Lease APR/APR based on 0% financing available on new 2011 C 250 4MATIC Sedan/2011 E 350 4MATIC Sedan. Lease example is $2,934/$3

PARTY PLANNER

Section B



The Canadian Jewish news

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CARICATURIST
Mark Ciale, Caricature Artist

CONSULTANTS
2 Steps Ahead Events
Heidi Gruenspan
Judy Stein Consulting & Associates
Mindless Sophistication
Risa Gold
Up & Coming Events

CATERERS
Caterers York
Lesley's Party Sandwiches & Catering
Mona Pasternak Food & Event Maven
Shopsy's

DECOR
David's Fine Linens

ENTERTAINMENT
Bounce Entertainment
Magen Boys Entertainment
Mint Events
Swaye Entertainment

FASHION
Beatties
Crawford Boys
Deja Vu
St. Honoré

FLORISTS
Royal Orchid Florist

GIFTS
Gold Step Jewellers Ltd.
Israeli Source, The
Israel's Judaica

HENNA
Little Miss Henna

INVITATIONS
Invitation Divas
Stationery Plus/Glida Lefton

KETUBOT
Ketubah.com

KIDS PARTY PLACES
Whimz Live Animal Programs

MUSIC
Fern Lindzon Musical Entertainment
Hu-Tsa-Tsa
Joe Star Band
Kenny Simon Hourglass Band, The
Mike Freedman Band, The
Nasty Habits - Rolling Stones Tribute
OneMoreTime

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP
Dynamite Parties and Novelties
Incredible Novelties Inc.

PARTY FAVOURS
Charm It

PARTY PLANNERS
Jodi Molson
Michael Rosen Event Consulting Inc.
Wilder Party, A

PHOTOGRAPHERS
Horvath Photography
Sylman Photography

RELIGIOUS SERVICES
Rabbi Eva Goldfinger
Cantor Deborah Staiman

RENTALS
Around the Table
Giant Screen Systems
Jewish Entertainment & Party Rentals

SERVICES
Gold Parties 4U

SPECIALTY FOODS
Chocolate Charm
Chocolate Moose, The
Jinja Ninja Custom Cookies
ManChef.ca
Regina's Fine Foods
Summer Fresh Salads Inc.

VIDEOS
Lisa Productions
Restone Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Affairs
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Adath Israel Congregation
Asian Legend
Avenue Banquet, The
Baycrest Hospitality Services
Bayview Golf & Country Club
Bellvue Manor
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
Cooper Creek Golf Club
Cravings Asian Cuisine
Ely's Fine Foods
Estates of Sunnybrook, The
Fune
Glow Fresh Grill & Wine Bar
Granite Club
Hard Rock Cafe, The
Hazelton Manor
Hotel Du Fort
Loots Lounge/Factory
Lucky Strike Lanes
Park Hyatt Toronto
Pickle Barrel Banquet Halls
Playtime Bowl
Rain Spa & Salon
Riz
Toni Bulloni
Yamato
Warehouse Event Venue, The

Want more information about our Party Advertisers?
Go to... WWW.CJNEWS.COM. click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY and find Live Links to our Advertisers' Websites.

NEXT PARTY PLANNER WILL BE PUBLISHED JUNE 2, 2011.

THE PARTY PLANNER IS PUBLISHED TWICE YEARLY BY THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS
1500 DON MILLS ROAD, SUITE 205, NORTH YORK, ONT. M3B 3K4 • PHONE: 416-391-1836 • FAX: 416-391-0949

Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products, food providers or establishments in advertisements.

Magen Boys create unique experience

By MARNI BRINDER BYK
Special to The CJN

Identical twin brothers Page and Jian Magen have been planning parties since high school and now have one of the most respected and admired entertainment companies in the Greater Toronto Area.

"We are a one-of-a-kind creative production company, and we provide one-of-a-kind experiences," says Page. Magen Boys High Energy Entertainment plans and executes a wide range of events, including weddings, bar and bat mitzvahs, film festival soirees, charity fundraisers, corporate events and more.

Jian and Page are dedicated to working in the Jewish community and most recently worked on the sold-out UJA Federation of Greater Toronto event featuring comedic actor Jeff Garlin, and they organized a flash mob for UJA in downtown Toronto.

They've also worked with the Jewish National Fund, where Jian is the co-chair of JNFuture, and Mount Sinai Hospital with Leadership Sinai, where Page helped organize its Live From South Beach event, in which guests were entertained by James Brown Band members and the event raised $350,000 for the hospital.

Page says it's important that while the Magen Boys keep providing the best in entertainment that they continue to make an impact in the Jewish community.

Although Magen Boys serve clients from all over the country, they stress that every event they're involved with, big or small, requires the greatest attention to detail, with the promise that an evening will be completely unique and unforgettable.

Page Magen, left, Justin Bieber and Lionel Ritchie.

Page likes to think that the company is "reinventing the wheel every single week" and prides himself on "never doing the same event twice."

Creative and innovative themes are an integral part of a Magen Boys event. Page believes they can follow through on any theme, so the possibilities are as vast as their clients' imaginations.

Recently, they planned a "Boo Mitzvah" for a Halloween themed bat mitzvah.

Parents Corey and Shari Koffman had this to say about their daughter Ellie's Boo Mitzvah: "Shari and I can never thank you and the Magen Boys dancers enough. You made our 'Boo Mitzvah' such a personalized family event and put Ellie on a pedestal all night. The reason you are where you are in life is because you and Jian 'get it,' and your so-called competition chases their tail."

Page believes the details are what make an event special.

For a hockey-themed event, they had Andy Frost, voice of the Toronto Maple Leafs, announce the bar mitzvah boy. They also had the dance floor covered to look like an ice rink, while all the staff wore jerseys, and they produced a video montage that had NHL players Alexander Ovechkin and Sidney Crosby wishing the bar mitzvah boy mazel tov.

For a "Bieber Fever" event, they had Justin Bieber himself do the same for a very lucky bat mitzvah girl.

Page stresses that not every event needs to be about a specific or complicated theme. If the guest of honour loves the colour pink, the Magen Boys can have all their performers dressed in pink, and can create special lighting to produce the proper ambiance for an intimate party.

For weddings, Page says the Magen Boys' South Beach Orchestra is now the No. 1 band in the city. With the best musicians and a diverse group of vocalists, including Alana Bridgewater, who played the Killer Queen in We Will Rock You, the band is current and fresh and is the ultimate party band.

Page Magen believes it is "our job to create something so special for [clients] so people leave saying 'Those guys never cease to amaze me.'"

For more information, visit www.magenboys.com, call 905-513-6464, e-mail info@magenboys.com.

Celebrate your upcoming Wedding, Bar or Bat Mitzvah at the avenue
BANQUETS

Zeese Kosher Catering now available.
1600 Steeles Ave. W., Concord www.theavenuebanquethall.com
905-669-0777

Looking manly this season

By LAUREN KRAMER
Special to The CJN

Looking good is about way more than esthetics – it's about performance, says Jon Strauss, CEO of Star's Men's Shop (416-650-1404, www.starsmenshops.com). "When you look great, you feel great and you do great," he says. "There are great new looks for men, which means this is a fantastic time to come shopping for new clothes."

If you've been smirking your way through episodes of Mad Men, you'll be interested to know the show has had appeal to the fashion industry as well. "The new look is slim, taken off from Mad Men," says Saul Korman, owner of Korrys Clothiers on Danforth Avenue (416-463-1115, www.korrys.com). That means flat-front, pleat-less trousers, tapered pants and a line of slim shirts, many worn untucked.

"The new, modern fit is tighter and shorter in everything," agrees Strauss. "Suits and dress shirts are more tapered and shorter cut, and ties are narrower, creating a great, new, fresh look to dressing."

The good news is that black never goes out of fashion, and together with its variants – charcoal and grey – these colours are always appropriate choices for parties. That doesn't mean you can't add colourful accents, in shirts, ties or scarves, though. "Choose purple, shades of blue, browns or reds for accent colours," suggests Strauss.

"Checked and striped patterns, as well as paisleys, were strong patterns in the summer and continue to be strong in the winter," adds Michael Korman, Saul's son.

> You can always wear a black blazer

Earth tones are also popular, he says. "Choose tones like olive, grey, brown and charcoal for casual wear – but brown for shoes. Brown is the new black when it comes to shoes because it can go with everything. You can wear it with earth tones, with navy, with black or grey, or with a pants suit. It's the new colour in shoes."

If you're going to update your wardrobe, there are a few essentials you'll need this season. First on the list is a good, black blazer. "It's a staple," says Michael Korman. "Choose cotton or wool, but rest assured you can use it all year round, dressing it casually with corduroy pants or with cottons and linens in summer. It's really for every occasion – except maybe a wedding."

Another staple is the sports jacket, perfect for wearing with jeans or with the new, popular, five-pocket-style pants. "Sports jackets are more tapered now, narrower with shorter cuts," says Strauss. "Look for check patterns in charcoal, black or blue as they are really big right now."

Beneath the sports jacket, you'll want a good sports shirt, preferably something with a collar, and possibly buttons down the front. "A shirt with a collar will sit properly under a jacket or a sweater," says Michael Korman.

"There are lots of great items in sports shirts available right now," adds Strauss. "Look around for shirts with embroidery in the cuffs and around the collar, so that when you pull up the cuffs, you can see the embroidery underneath. They look good with a sports jacket and a casual, dressy pant."

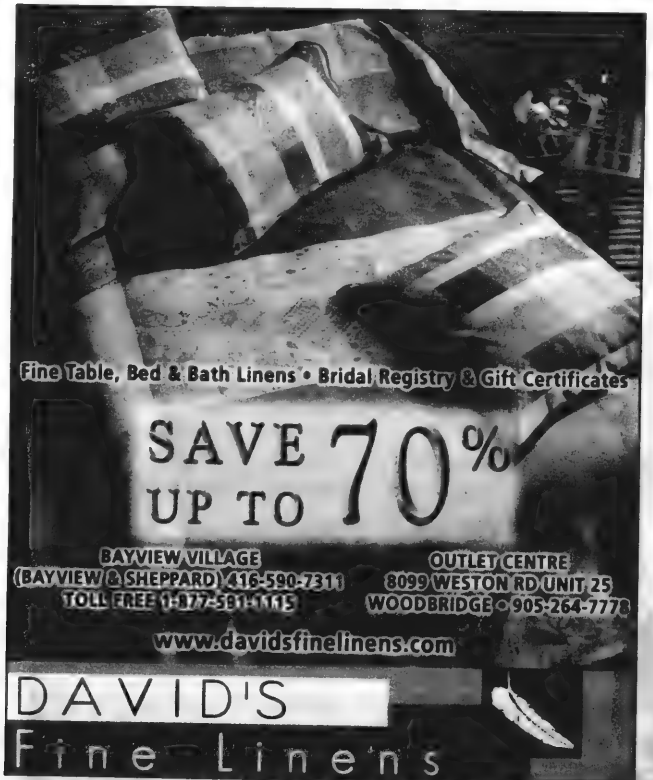
Pants should be flat front, both Korman and Strauss agree. Korries carries a style called the five-pocket dress pant in wool and cotton. "It's dressy-casual and looks great," Michael Korman says.

If you're in the market for a new coat, versatility should be your key word. Choose one in nylon or microfibre, and rather than restricting it to work-wear, remember that the three-quarter-length coat looks good over casual clothes, too.

Finally, if you're feeling uncertain about your look, head to an established clothier with a couple of hours to spare and keep trying on items until you find the right combination. A good salesperson who really knows fashion is an invaluable resource at a time like this.

"We have really well-educated sales representatives who want to make a connection with customers and get them some great clothes," says Strauss. "We'll take the time to ask you questions about your needs, and make sure we have the right fit for you."

Other men's fashion retailers advertising in this supplement aer: Beatties, 416-481-4459; Crawford Boys, 416-782-8137.



You want fries with that?
Go ahead.
supersize
your party!
Whatever the occasion - we have you covered!
Choice of Halls
Beautiful Photo Ops
Clergy Services
Ceremonial Accompanist
Green Room
Concierge &
Security Services
Centrally located venue
Wheel Chair accessible
Wi-Fi
Ample free parking and of course...
Fabulous food and impeccable service
...what more could you want?
Drop by and tour our facilities!
Prime dates still available for 2011
call now - before it's too late!
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue & Uptown Gourmet Catering – an unbeatable combo!
Catering or Booking Inquiries - Contact Edmund Duarte
416 633 3838 x 290 or Valerie Duarte at ext
Uptown Gourmet is the Exclusive caterer
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
900 Elder Street, Toronto ON M3H 5G7 - www.beby.org celebrate your happiness with us

The Harold Soupcoff Room

The Rose Room

T: 416.493.4333
F: 905.479.5059

www.picklebarrel.ca

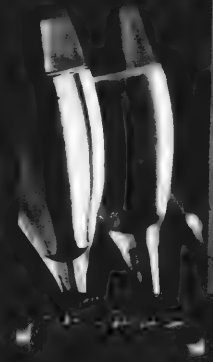
banquets

From engagement parties, to bridal showers to the actual wedding day, we'll ensure your event is unforgettable.

All inclusive wedding packages available.

Talk to our Banquet Manager about the selection of elegant rooms available to hold your event.

The PICKLE BARREL



info@bounced.com | 416.671.2677 | www.bounced.com

Mazel Tov!

Celebrate Achievements.

Honour Special Occasions.

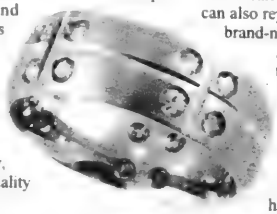
Commemorate Milestones.

PARK HYATT TORONTO

Finding the perfect gift is fun again

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to The CJN

Whoever said, "it's better to give than to receive" must have known that if you know the right places to shop, it really is almost more fun to buy a gift than receive one. Whether it's pre-owned high-end watches and jewelry at Van Rijk Jewellers or head-turning Judaica at Israel's, finding the perfect gift is fun again.



Van Rijk Jewellers (416-440-0123, http://vanrijk.com), on Eglinton East, near Yonge Street, is the uptown spot to buy, sell or trade – in total confidentiality – almost anything that glitters.

If you're buying jewelry, says co-owner Barbara Chatz, nothing beats preowned. "It's huge!" she says – a fabulous alternative to the "what everybody else is wearing" blahs. "A lot of them are one-of-a-kind pieces, antique, filigree, old cuts of diamonds."

Pre-owned doesn't necessarily mean old or even used. Van Rijk carries a wonderful selection of loose diamonds that can be mounted in a brand-new setting. "We have a designer on the premises that will design it for them," says Chatz. "We do manufacturing also. We could make anything."

For a special anniversary, Van Rijk's designer can take an old piece of jewelry, like an engagement ring, and make it new again, either by adding stones or changing the setting entirely.

Inherited jewelry or loose stones can be used creatively to pass on a meaningful legacy: separating a three-stone ring to create three new rings, or re-mounting an old earring as a necklace pendant. Van Rijk can also repair broken or damaged pieces to brand-new condition.

Any event is an opportunity to add beauty with jewelry. "Diamond studs are great for a bat mitzvah gift."

Or consider a watch. Van Rijk Jewellers offers name-brand quality at preowned prices. "We have the largest selection of high-grade watches in Toronto," Chatz says. Van Rijk is well-known for its range of Rolex, Cartier, Patek Philippe and others. "It would take a whole page if I were to list them all."

Indeed, while Van Rijk's website offers a sneak preview, it would be impossible to showcase every single item; besides, it's more fun to come in person. Free customer parking is available behind the store, and walking through the door is "a totally different experience," says Chatz, who's run the business with her husband, Alec Van Rijk, and their daughter, in the same location for 25 years.

"There's nothing like this anywhere in Toronto. It's a treasure chest of such unique pieces. We have everything here that anybody would be looking for in jewelry."

Just down the street at Israel's The Judaica Centre's Eglinton location, or farther uptown in Thornhill (Eglinton, 416-256-1010; Thornhill, 905-881-1010; http://www.israelsjudaica.com), you're sure to find something new and interesting this season.

With Chanukah around the corner, there's always fun stuff for the kids. Forget chocolate coins – this year, they're going to love munching chocolate "bills" – Israeli 20, 50, 100 and 200 shekel notes. They're made in Israel, says Susie Kaplan, and they're delicious, too. "They're very good milk chocolate."

A menorah makes a great gift for almost any occasion, she says, and there are so many to choose from. "Funky menorahs in the shape of high heels; mah-jong menorahs." From a menorah in the form of a sculpted metal Chassid playing a rainbow xylophone to a traditional silver menorah, a menorah will grace any Jewish home year-round, and there's truly one for every price range.

Continued on page B8

A Yad is a treasured keepsake

Continued from page B7

And don't forget high-quality Israeli candles. "We could get cheaper candles from China," says Kaplan, but the store has long supported the Israeli economy and Israeli artisans at the same time.

Bat mitzvah coming up? Look for new items from Israeli artist Michal Golan. Her necklaces, keychains and mezuzahs combine colourful, modern designs with Swarowski crystals and gemstones for genuine glitter.

For a special bar mitzvah, a yad, a unique and artistic Torah pointer that a boy will carry with him to the bimah on his special day, becomes a treasured keepsake after the big day.

The Gary Rosenthal collection offers truly special wedding gifts, bringing the modern look of copper and fused glass to Judaica such as mezuzahs (a new-baby mezuzah includes a special parents' prayer), "tree of life" candleholders, a challah knife and more. A wedding keepsake glass, in one of several colours, can also be preserved for the couple after the wedding in a display-quality lucite block.

Consider making any gift better by adding the recipient's name. "If it's sterling silver, we can engrave it," says Sarah Zeldman-Novak. What else is engraveable? "Almost everything!" she says. Siddurim and machzorim can usually be gold-stamped with the name and bar or bat mitzvah date. Tzedakah boxes, and many other items can have a brass plate added with a name and date.

Many people also don't realize that, along with personalized kippot and benschers, Israel's can help a couple choose and create their own ketubah, Zeldman-Novak says. In-store, they choose from the many wonderful designs and themes, and then "either the artist customizes it or we have a local calligrapher who customizes it."

At Israel's, there are so many choices, it's hard to know what to pick – and that's when gift cards come in handy. Israel's also offers a point system: purchases in either store add up and can be redeemed against your own future purchases – a little gift to yourself, just for stopping by. "We also give away free gift cards with certain purchases," says Kaplan – yet another reason why shopping at Israel's is fun for everyone.

Other gift retailers advertising in this supplement are: Gold Step Jewellers Ltd., 905-882-1606.

GLOW Fresh Grill & Wine Bar
Our private dining room echoes the decor, aesthetics and ambience of the main dining room. It is scaled for the intimacy of smaller parties whether the occasion is a dinner party or a business meeting.
For more information, please call 416.384.1133 or visit glowfreshgrill.com 401
York Mills Rd
DVP
GLOW
GLOW

Spa treatment, new hairstyle among joys of life

By LAUREN KRAMER
Special to The CJN

As winter begins to set in, it's hard to resist the comfort of some personal pampering. A good spa treatment, a new hairstyle – these are among the joys of life that can chase the rain and snow from our consciousness and leave us feeling rejuvenated and beautiful.

The Stillwater Spa at the Park Hyatt Hotel in Toronto (416-926-2389, www.parktoronto.hyatt.com) offers a number of tantalizing treatments. In the Uptown Downtown Massage, two therapists tackle your body simultaneously, while the 90-minute Essential Milk and Honey Wrap will take you straight to the land of milk and honey – without the jetlag!

"This is the ultimate indulgence," says Orsolya Soos, the spa's public relations and marketing manager. "It's comprised of a total body, golden sea-salt exfoliation, a warm rose mud wrap and a 45-minute Swedish massage, and guests are provided with a head and neck treatment while the mud wrap absorbs. This treatment not only relaxes one's mind and body, but provides total body nourishment and hydration."

Muted, seasonal colours are always popular this time of year, says Soos. "Go for plum, cranberry and taupe tones in your makeup and nail polish," she suggests. Those colours find their way into the ingredient list of some treatments as well.

The Bora Bora Body Restore features an anti-oxidant beet-sugar scrub, a Polynesian red algae compress massage and hydrating pearl moisture. The Moroccan Rhassoul Wrap features a head-to-toe rhassoul-clay wrap, blending detoxifying black-soap exfoliation and tangerine blossom essence. "Both treatments provide an overall body treatment designed to nourish, rejuvenate and refresh your body and mind, perfect for heading into the winter," she explains.

The cold months can take a harsh toll on exposed skin, particularly on the face. The right facial can make all the difference, Soos says. "Our City Restoration Facial infuses skin with super-concentrated antioxidant vitamins and dramatically improves skin negatively impacted by the stressors of city living. Our Hungarian Mineral Facial nourishes and purifies skin with the mineral-rich waters, and unique deep cleansing and exfoliating techniques of Hungary. Both facials are ideal during this time of year to prepare for the harsh, drying winter ahead."

Need any more motivation? During the month of November, Stillwater Spa is offering complimentary manicures with the purchase of a body treatment.

If your hair is driving you wild, it may be time for a change. The good news is that easy-styling and low-maintenance hairstyles are taking front stage right now. "It's all about texture, volume and waves," says Jean-Paul Colombo, artistic director at Hair After on Finch Ave. East (416-221-6658, www.hairafter.ca). "Retro-inspired hairstyles are popular, and we're bringing back the '60s, '70s and '80s with fuller, airier looks."

Colombo says clients don't want to spend huge swaths of time on their hair any more. "They want loose waves and hair that moves – styles that look effortlessly done. Ponytails are coming back, and lots of loose braiding," he continues. "The result is very natural looking."

[Photo courtesy of Stillwater Spa]

Rentals can enhance a party

By EVA COHEN
Special to The CJN

For those planning an upcoming event or simchah, whether it be a wedding, a bar or bat mitzvah, or a small get-together with friends and family, there are companies that can help to make the occasion extra special.

Toronto is home to Canada's oldest and largest party rental firm, Chair-man Mills. The company opened in 1911, led by William J. Mills (416-391-0400). He became known as "Mills... the Chair-man" for providing chairs and tables to private homes, clubs and organizations.

Since then, the company has grown to having a full-service showroom that includes, among other things, kosher options for dishes.

"Kosher is very big for us, and we have done many Jewish events," said Mary Crothers, president and owner of Chair-man Mills. "We began with just one basic white option for dishes, and now we can offer four patterns for kosher. It's a very important part of our business and one we enjoy doing."

Chair-man Mills is a full service company, and it's partnered with Regal Tent Toronto. This allows a customer to go into the showroom and choose anything from a full outdoor event with tents and tables, to picking a set of glasses to rent of a particular colour in order to add a little flair to what you already own.

For those looking to host a party featuring what's currently in style, Crothers says that right now, "what's old is new."

"A lot of old elegance is back: cut glassware and crystal with bold flatware, but often used with contemporary furniture such as our Mirage chair, which is clear," said Crothers.

On top of tablecloth colours and patterns, many people also like to have Jewish designs, and for this, the company Jewish Entertainment & Party Rentals (JEP) began party rentals this past year (416-661-4108)

"There was a need in the city for a company that could offer Jewish content," said JEP's owner, Rabbi Yonah Vilenkin. "There are a lot of other themes out there for parties, like Disney, and we wanted to offer Jewish options."

The company is based in Toronto, but will do kosher catering and concessions for parties and events outside the GTA.

A popular rental from JEP are its inflatable rides, which come in a variety of options, including the Star of David and Mount Sinai, as well as a dreidel and a menorah for the upcoming holiday of Chanukah.

JEP also offers crafts such as Jewish ceramics and shofar making, and fun carnival games for children.

For more information on these companies, visit www.chairmanmills.com and www.jeprentals.com.

Other rental companies advertising in this supplement are: Around the Table, 416-630-6704; Giant Screen Systems, 416-784-4454.

TRATTORIA AMERICANA
Toni Bulloni
DINE-IN | TAKE-OUT
PARTY UPTOWN OR DOWNTOWN!
CASUAL, COZY AND COMFORTABLE
Uptown
7117 Bathurst St., Thornhill
905.889.4141
Bloor/Yorkville
156 Cumberland St., Toronto
416.967.7676
Let us Host/Cater your Company Party
www.tonibulloni.com or www.dine.to/tonibulloni

A-M-A-Z-I-N-G
Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
at
LOOTS LOUNGE
On Bayview
All Inclusive
Packages from $5900
416-787-5668
lootslounge.com

THE WAREHOUSE
EVENT VENUE AT DOWNSVIEW PARK
NOW OPEN
Book your event
TORONTO'S NEWEST SPECIAL EVENT LOCATION !
FOR BOOKINGS AND INFORMATION:
info@thewarehousevenue.com
416.496.2112
WWW.THEWAREHOUSEVENUE.COM

ESTATES OF SUNNYBROOK

Exclusive Event Venues

EXCLUSIVE • PERSONAL • EXCEPTIONAL

BAR/BAT MITZVAHS • SOCIAL • CORPORATE • CULTURAL

416.487.3841 • www.estatesofsunnybrook.com • 2075 Bayview Avenue, Toronto M4N 3M5

Experience the very best

AN EXCLUSIVE VENUE FOR YOUR WEDDING • GALA • BAR OR BAT MITZVAH

GRANITE CLUB

FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE CONTACT THE GRANITE CLUB CATERING DEPARTMENT AT 416-510-6676 OR VISIT OUR WEBSITE AT WWW.GRANITECLUB.COM.

2350 Bayview Avenue • Toronto, Ontario, Canada • M2L 1E4

Hard Rock Cafe offers more than a rock 'n' roll party

By MARNI BRINDER BYK
Special to The CJN

Located in the heart of downtown Toronto at 279 Yonge St. at Yonge-Dundas Square, The Hard Rock Cafe Toronto is the perfect venue for your next event. This location offers both the Hard Rock Cafe and the Hard Rock Lounge, which are on two separate levels and can be used for any type of celebration. The Lounge, located on the second floor, can be used for private functions and offers a full audio-visual system and the ability to host DJs, 3-5 piece bands, interactive karaoke bands, dancers, etc. The entire venue is versatile enough to fit a small intimate gathering of 50 people or a 350-person standing reception.

When booking an event at the Hard Rock Cafe the rooms come with their own distinctive décor: music. Guitars and music memorabilia fill the Hard Rock Cafe, and the venue also provides a red carpet entrance to make every guest feel like a rock star.

Sales and marketing manager, Marcelo DeOliveira, says that it is "a venue with a theme already built into it."

For the last 32 years the Hard Rock Cafe has been displaying rock 'n' roll memorabilia for its patrons to admire, and in the last four years or so has been catering to boys and girls looking for a rock 'n' roll-themed bar or bat mitzvah. Kids who love music can appreciate the history and priceless items displayed throughout the Hard Rock Cafe. Prominently displayed are Bob Dylan's guitar and Madonna's corset, and the memorabilia ranges from classic rock to today's pop and top 40 megastars.

Standing or seated, buffet or plated, the Hard Rock Cafe offers a wide range of items for their clients to choose from and assists clients in building their very own and unique menu. Some popular menu items for the kids include soft pretzels, mini pizzas, and twisted mac and cheese, while the adults enjoy beef teriyaki, seaweed salad, seared vegetarian dim sum, and grilled beef tenderloin. A candy station and/or a create- your-own sundae station keeps party kids energized and dancing all night long. Depending on the number of children and adult guests, the Hard Rock Cafe offers clients the option of having one buffet for the children and the option of having a separate buffet or plated service for the adults.

In regard to planning an event at the Hard Rock Café, DeOliveira stresses that they are a full-service venue and can assist anyone in planning their event. "We are in contact with our clients from the very first phone call e-mail until after the event to ensure they have all the support they need from us. We always ask our clients to be a guest at their own event and let us look after all the details." The Hard Rock Cafe staff starts the planning process from the day you book, and DeOliveira is there until the last guest leaves.

On Sunday, May 30, 2010, parents' Laurie and Mark celebrated their son Arthur's bar mitzvah at the Hard Rock Cafe and shared their thoughts with DeOliveira: "Your experience and professionalism throughout the party preparation was apparent, right from our initial contact with you to the settling of our final invoice. You were able to allay any fears or concerns quickly, actually making the entire process fun. After meeting you, I made the decision not to hire a 'party planner' as it was immediately apparent that you could easily handle all the details that often hamper this type of event. The room fit our needs exactly and looked wonderful."

Hard Rock Cafe Toronto
- [X] Non-Kosher
- [X] Over 300 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair accessible

For more information or to book your event visit www.hardrock.com/toronto or contact sales and marketing manager Marcelo DeOliveira at 416-362-3636 or marcelo_deoliveira@hardrock.com.

incredible novelties
Your Bar & Bat Mitzvah Prize Headquarters
INTRODUCING
The NEW Way To Shop
THE BULK BUY PROGRAM
This program is designed for 2 or more clients to combine their orders to buy product in bulk and save on the price'. Find a friend or two who want to save and follow these 3 simple steps:
1. Book an appointment at Incredible Novelties Inc - 416.663.9900
2. Bring yourself and your friends for a consultation at our showroom to create your prize package.
3. SAVE! SAVE! SAVE!
DUBBLE BUBBLE
DOTS
Incredible Novelties Inc

Everyone remembers a good party

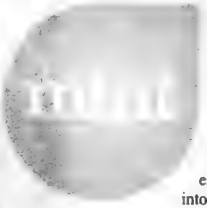
By LAUREN KRAMER
Special to The CJN

A good party lives long in the memory of those who attended it – often far longer than the recollection of party food or fashion. Once the religious and spiritual component of an event has occurred, the celebration itself takes the stage. How that celebration transpires makes the difference between a fantastic party and one that's easily forgettable.

There are tons of options when it comes to entertainment. Just ask Jordan Fogle, owner of Mint Events in Toronto (416-923-6468, http://mint-events.ca/). The 15-year veteran of event management, entertainment and production has done some over-the-top events in his career, including bringing professional skateboarder Tony Hawk, along with his 60-foot half-pipe skateboarding ramp, from Los Angeles for a bar-mitzvah party.

"We look at ourselves as event architects, because we bring creativity to the table," Fogle says. "We work with clients to create a vision but we'll help add to it or create it from scratch, if necessary. We're fun, innovative, creative and we love a good challenge." Mint Events provides interactive MCs and DJs, specialty bands, dancers, entertainers and top-of-the-line lighting, video, audio and staging equipment. Cost-wise, Fogle says he tends to work backward with clients' budgets.

Good parties touch everyone in the room



"We've done events from 20 people up to 2,000 guests, brought in celebrity performers and helped structure themes like South Beach or Willy Wonka candy land," he says. A popular theme right now is the nightclub, and Fogle's catering company, Brassaii, has been used as the event venue several times. "Brassaii is like a supper club, so we'll bring out the nightclub atmosphere there through video applications, lighting and furniture," he explains.

It can be challenging for parents organizing a bar or bat mitzvah celebration to make everyone happy at the party – kids and adults. That's where Fogle steps in. "We can capture the essence of what the kids want, as well as the classiness that the parents are looking for. You have to recognize that you have two parties in the same room at the same time," he cautions. "We deal with the bar – not the mitzvah," he adds jokingly. "We'll bring your party to the forefront."

One of the newest entertainment companies in town is Bounce Entertainment (416-671-2677, www.bouncedj.com), which opened in January under the leadership of Aaron Schacter and Daniel Rosenberg.

"Our goal is to touch every person in the room at least once in the evening, to make relationships at the party," says Schacter. "We pride ourselves on being the only company with female MCs, and providing high-energy dancers, MCs and DJs who get out there on the dance floor, interact and make sure everyone is having fun."

Schacter has worked in the industry for 15 years, and the marketing graduate from York University says he's willing to work with clients large and small, whatever their budget. "If you want the most crazy, outrageous, epic party, you should be calling us," he says. "We literally transform empty spaces into magical evenings."

Bounce Entertainment supports the Canadian Cancer Society; Movember initiatives, which raises funds and awareness for men's health issues; the miracle treat day for Make-a-Wish foundation with Dairy Queen; Brain Injury Association of Canada; Na'amat, and many other charities. They offer a free school event when schools use their services for the first time.

BOUNCE
ENTERTAINMENT

Aaron Schacter, Tiffany Stern & Daniel Rosenberg Invite You To Experience Epic Events With Bounce Entertainment !!!

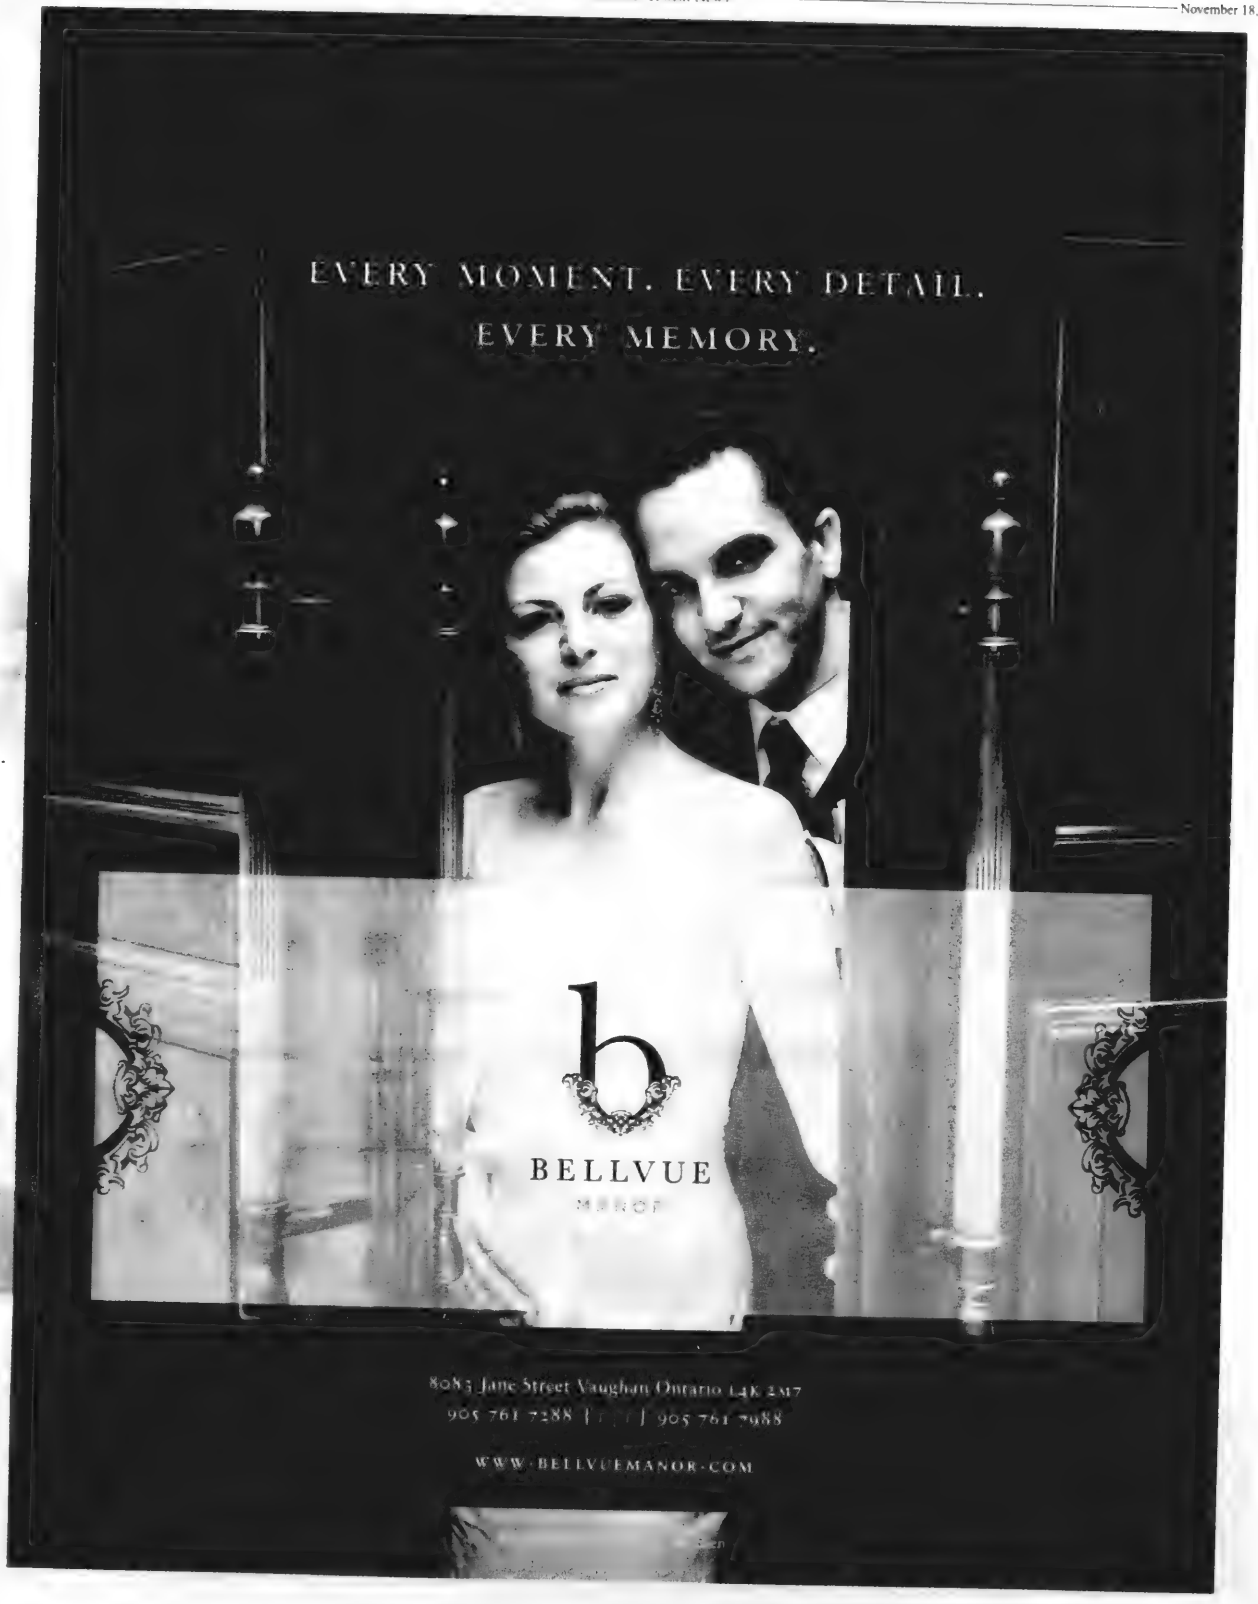
Phone: 416-671-2677 | www.bouncedj.com
info@bouncedj.com | facebook.com/bounceentertainment



EVERY MOMENT. EVERY DETAIL.
EVERY MEMORY.
b
BELLVUE
MANOR
8083 Jane Street Vaughan Ontario L4K 2M7
905 761 7288 | | 905 761 7088
WWW.BELLVUEMANOR.COM

Getting into the groove of a good band

By STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

Good tunes can make a simchah a night to remember. Mike Freedman and One More Time are in the business of doing that, no matter what the size of the event.

For Freedman, who works with both the Mike Freedman Band (416-371-6278) and Stir Crazy, doing a gig is a real adrenaline boost.

"Live performance is exciting," Freedman said. "You get to see immediate feedback from your audience, and feel the rush of people's energy when you play something they really like."

Freedman, a guitarist, runs a music recording studio where he composes and records music for film and TV, as well as his own CDs.

"It's very exciting to be able to put people in a certain frame of mind or affect their emotions through music," Freedman said.

His work is quite varied, doing everything from Latin and jazz guitar instrumentals – he is soon releasing a CD entitled Latin Textures – to top 40 hits.

"I really enjoy Latin and guitar players, like Santana, but I love all sounds of music," Freedman said.

Whether working at a wedding, a corporate event, or any other function, Freedman believes the tunes lead the way.

"I think music is the cornerstone of any event," Freedman said. "It's always the underlying tone.

"If people like the music, they usually don't say anything, because they're having a good time."

Freedman loves the special touch that playing live music can bring.

'The tunes lead the way'

"It's a way more personal and unique experience," Freedman said. "People really appreciate when they can hear musicians performing songs as good as or better than the recorded song."

And while Freedman enjoys the different sound, One More Time (416-484-1044) prides itself on making the song sound just like you remember it.

"When we play the song, it will sound like the original artist, because that's what we're trying to do," said One More Time's Shelley Miller.

They're equipped to do so, since like their typical audience, they're baby boomers.

"It's our focus and our specialty, because we really relate to the music personally," said Miller, whose band gets a lot of work doing 50th and 60th birthday parties.

"We cater to the older crowd with our volume, our presentation, and having lots of lyrics that they can sing along to."

Though the band does play younger events and covers current artists, the bulk of their set list comes from the 1970s and 1980s, with some rock from the 1950s and 1960s thrown in as well.

"Most of what we play is danceable," Miller said. "There's a lot of great music from back then, but we play stuff that people can get up and dance to."

Having lived through those eras themselves, the members of One More Time understands the importance of the music they play.

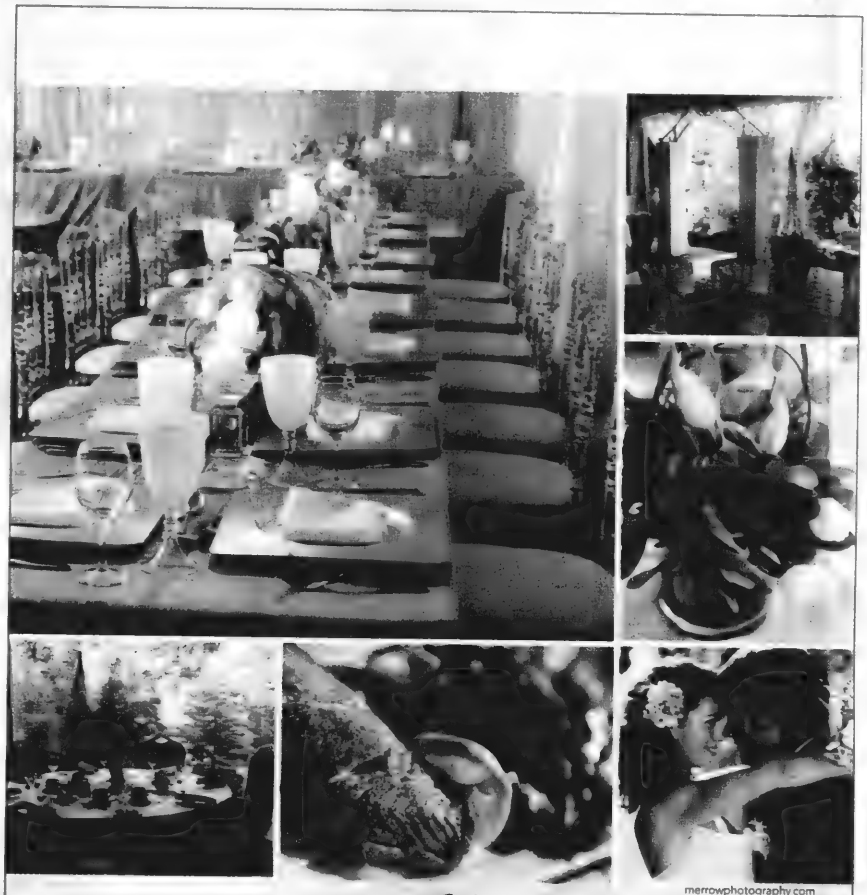
"We're probably the first generation in North America to grow up with popular music, even if our parents weren't from here," Miller said.

"It began with the Beatles in the 1960s, and just grew from there."

One More Time can range anywhere from five to 10 members, depending on what people are looking for. To find them online, visit www.onemoretime.ca.

Mike Freedman and his bands can be found and booked through his website at www.mikefreedman.com.

Other bands advertising in this supplement are: Fern Lindzon Musical Entertainment, 416-225-6977; Hu-Tsa-Tsa, 416-651-7521; The Kenny Simon Hourglass Band, 416-638-2549; Nasty Habits, 416-451-5177; Joe Star band 905-881-1378.



BAYVIEW
GOLF & COUNTRY CLUB

25 Fairway Heights Drive, Thornhill, ON L3T 3X1 905.889.4833 Ext. 320 catering@bayviewclub.com www.bayviewclub.com

To commemorate our 50th anniversary, mention this Canadian Jewish News ad to take advantage of our golden anniversary advantages.

Party favours can be enjoyed long after the party

By JENNIFER LIBMAN
Special to The CJN

After the location is booked, the DJ is confirmed and the menu is arranged, bar and bat mitzvah planners need to purchase party favours. Incredible Novelties (905-881-9900), founded nine years ago by Saul Sacks and Dan Jankelow, both former DJs, can help.

"We are a one stop shop for all prizes and giveaways" says Sacks. "People come to us with their ideas and we can bring them to life while staying within their budget."

"Because we are former DJs we know the party scene," says Sacks. "We are able to tell clients what they need, and the amount, so we can prevent them from purchasing too much. We also gauge kids' reactions to our products, so we can recommend the most popular items."

Clients can come to Incredible Novelties with a party theme in mind, and are then shown the types of favours available. A customized package is created and the novelties are delivered to the venue on the day of the party. "This creates a truly stress-free experience because they don't need to think about it again."

A new program being offered by Incredible Novelties is the bulk buy program, in which two or more people planning events can purchase their novelties together to ensure they are getting the best deals. "There's three easy steps" says Sacks. "Book an appointment; come with your partner and tour our warehouse; save, save, save."

Incredible Novelties is a trendsetter in the party favour industry, and offers prizes and giveaways that represent the latest trends, he says.

"We like to keep things fresh, so kids are getting something new at every party," says Sacks.

Incredible Novelties is the Canadian distributor of the World's Largest Gummy Bear, which weighs five pounds and is the equivalent of 1,800 standard size gummy bears, and the world's longest Gummy Worm, which is three feet long. "Kids are absolutely loving these!"

For a unique addition to traditional party favours, party planners may be interested in Charm It, a customized costume jewelry company founded by Paula Shrott (416-258-9985).

Shrott began making costume jewelry as a hobby about six years ago, and from that passion Charm It was born. "My kids were going to bar and bat mitzvahs and I could tell that people were looking for a different activity during cocktail hours," says Shrott. "Charm It captivates kids and gives them a keepsake they can enjoy for a long time."

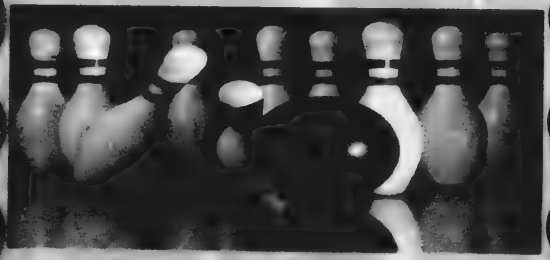
Shrott designs and creates most of the jewelry before the party. At the event guests can select whatever charm they choose to finish off the piece of jewelry. "There are tons of choices," says Shrott.

"Girls can choose Tiffany style bracelet charms, and for the boys we offer sports necklaces with charms like sports logos or music notes."

Since the intricate work, such as beading, is done ahead of time, Shrott is able to accommodate any size group. Party planners can contact her ahead of time to pre-order as many bracelets and necklaces as you want.

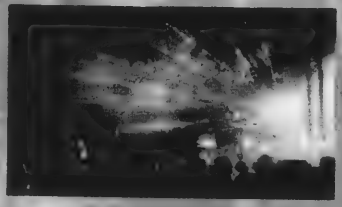
Shrott can also design custom Charm It jewelry that can be given as bar or bat mitzvah, or bridal party gifts. "I create unique products, so anything you give away will be one-of- a-kind" says Shrott. "I often will be working at one party and see people wearing Charm It products that they got at the last event they attended."

Here at Playtime Bowl we appreciate the importance of a bar or bat mitzvah in a family's life. That is why we can offer you your very own upscale 16 lane bowling suite with party room, bar and dance floor; perfect for friends and families to come and celebrate!



Along with our oversized, cutting edge video screens and cosmic lights, your party can be as unique as the child being honoured. Our extensive catering menu allows you to have the creative control over what you would like to serve your guests. Kosher food is available as well as other custom attributes such as decorations and party favours.

Playtime Bowl



Our Professional party planners will work closely with you to make sure that your child's bar or bat mitzvah will be a rocking and rolling affair to remember.
For more information, please contact us at 416-787-4533 OR email at party@backalleys.ca

WHIMZ
Holiday, Birthday, Special Events... Real live fun!
LIVE ANIMAL PROGRAMS!!!
Small Mammals, Reptiles, Amphibians & Bugs!
PARTIES, PROGRAMS, CLASSES & CAMPS
We Come To YOU!!!
416.656.7894 or www.whimzonline.com

GIANT SCREEN SYSTEMS
COMPLETE AUDIO VISUAL RENTALS & SALES
Since 1983
416-784-4454
www.giantscreensystems.com
4181 Sladeview Cresc., Unit #39, Mississauga, ON, L5L 5R2

- Latest High Definition Technology including video/data projection for audiences of from 3 to 3000 people
- Lowest competitive Prices up to 62% lower than our major competitors
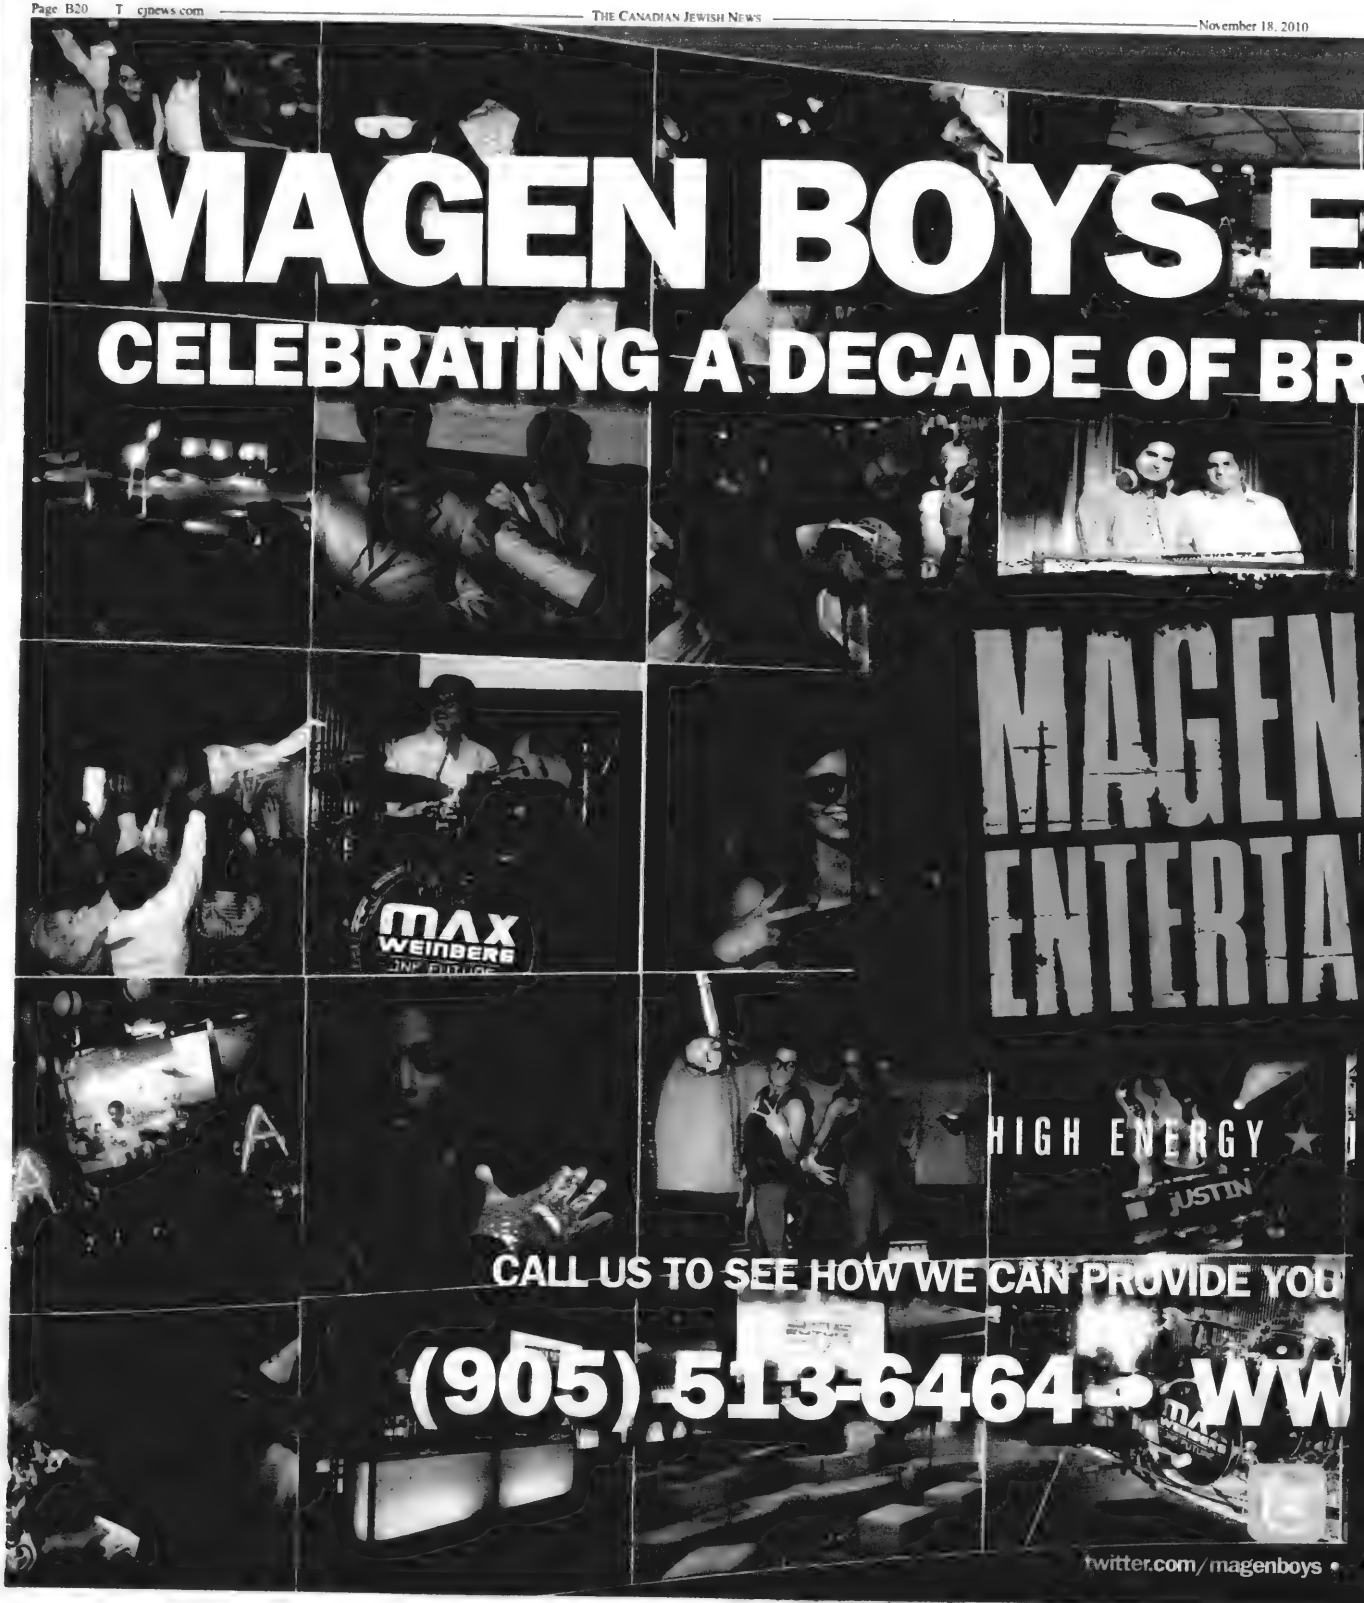
- Reliable On-Time Service delivery available 7 days a week, 24 hours a day - from $50 complete

RENTALS
Make your next meeting, party or event a SUCCESS!

SALES
Latest technology for Home Theatre, Boardrooms or Bars

MEETINGS • PARTIES • EVENTS

MAZEL TOV
ROCK!
Hard Rock
CAFE
TORONTO



MAGEN BOYS E
CELEBRATING A DECADE OF BR
MAGEN
ENTERTA
MAX
WEINBERG
HIGH ENERGY
JUSTIN
CALL US TO SEE HOW WE CAN PROVIDE YOU
(905) 513-6464 WW
twitter.com/magenboys

NTERTAINMENT
INGING YOU THE BEST EVENTS
BOYS
INMENT
NTERTAINMENT
WITH THE MOST UNIQUE EVENT ANYWHERE!
W.MAGENBOYS.COM
cebook.com/magenboys

Stunning parkland in midtown Toronto

By MARNI BRINDER BYK
Special to The CJN

The logo for On the Park Events & Conference Centre boasts that it is "A Legend Restored. A Tradition Reborn." Located on the site of the former Inn on the Park, On the Park is located in midtown Toronto at 1095 Leslie St. at Eglinton Avenue E. On the Park overlooks 600 acres of stunning parkland and has been completely renovated and re-opened in September 2008.

ON THE PARK EVENTS & CONFERENCE CENTRE

- [X] Non-Kosher
- [X] Over 300 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair accessible

"We've hosted many important business and political events and memorable social occasions," says general manager John Neretlis. "We attract people not only from our immediate communities, but from throughout the GTA."

As a complete event venue, On the Park provides multi-functional rooms, excellent, well trained and professional service staff, customizable menus by an excellent culinary team, and event specialists to plan your perfect event.

On the Park can accommodate parties ranging from 10 to 1,000 guests in seven distinctive and versatile rooms ready for most any event or celebration. The elegant Centennial Ballroom has welcomed many celebrated, large-scale events, while the Centennial Foyer, adjacent to the Ballroom, is the perfect venue for cocktail receptions and family gatherings.

On the Park's Harvest Room provides a panoramic view of the city with its floor-to-ceiling windows, and the Seasons Room is a versatile space that can be used as a boardroom, VIP cocktail reception or even a celebratory family dinner. The Trillium Room can host an intimate dinner, cocktail reception or a ceremony, and the Oak Room is a mid-sized, multi-functional meeting space, ideally suited for presentations, seminars and training. The Niagara Room is a great space for board meetings or for use as a "break-out" room, and coming soon is the Terrace Lounge, an outdoor ceremonial area that will open next year.

On The Park's executive chef can customize a menu for every occasion to meet the needs of any party planner, and can provide an elegant and delicious plated dinner for up to 800 people. When planning an event, On the Park provides you with the advice and guidance of an on-site event specialist who can assist with every aspect of planning. This includes security, specialty linens, decorators, DJs, bands, musicians, limo service, valet service, and florists. Wedding specialists at On the Park help you cover every event detail and On The Park wedding packages include dinner and wine tastings, complimentary parking and coat check, cocktail reception with open bar and passed hors d'oeuvres, 3, 4, or 5 course customized dinner menus, "Midnight" Sweet Table and more.

Whether you are planning a corporate event or a personal celebration, On The Park offers a wide range of services customized to meet the needs of your unique event. "Our staff members have the expertise and ability to turn dreams into reality, creating unforgettable events," says John Neretlis. "We are able to customize our wide range of services to meet any unique needs of each guest." To book your event, contact Kim at 416-380-3451, kim@eventsonthepark.ca or Erin at 416-380-3452, erin@eventsonthepark.ca.

FUNÉ
100 Simcoe Street
Toronto, Ont. M5H 3L2
416.599.3868
"Where" Magazine reader's choice
Where to Dine
2010
WTD Best
Japanese Restaurant
Toronto's largest floating Sushi Bar in the heart of the Theatre District. The distinctive bar has a moat with bamboo boats carrying cargoes of sushi.
Menu offers finest teriyaki steak & seafood, charcoal-broiled chicken, salmon, tempura, noodles, sushi sashimi and much more.

Enjoy the exotic Japanese Steak Ritual performed by the masters of the culinary art.
Teppanyaki Dining Room & Sushi Bar, Lunch & Dinner Open 7 days a week
YAMATO
やまと
24 Bellair Street (in the heart of Yorkville), Toronto, Ont. t: 416.927.0077

PARTY PLANNER

Take a bite out of these three eateries

By STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

Riz's lemon chicken

When it's time to head out to eat, there's no shortage of options.

Whether it's just the family or a group of people, decisions have to be made about where to go.

The restaurateurs of Riz, Asian Legend and Toni Bulloni are trying to make it a no-brainer.

"We started in the Yorkville area in 1995," said Toni Bulloni's Martin Wygodny. "A year ago, we decided to try our hand at bringing that menu to Thornhill."

Located on Bathurst Street near Steeles Avenue, Toni Bulloni (905-889-4141) does fresh pasta and meat dishes made to order. It's an Italian eatery with a twist.

"It's not a traditional Italian restaurant. You won't find the typical things you would find in a restaurant in Woodbridge or on St. Clair West, but we certainly embody the critical elements of an Italian restaurant," Wygodny said.

One of those important factors, as a customer put it, is the love in the food.

"Our chefs love and take pride in what they do," said Wygodny, who believes that you won't find a lasagna anywhere as good as the one his staff makes on weekends.

"If you don't have a chef who's passionate about what he's putting on his plate, you may as well go to a drive-thru."

And while they're packing the food with flavour, they'll make some changes to ensure that everyone can have a bite.

"Everything is seasoned accordingly when you order, so we can accommodate special requests based on dietary restrictions," Wygodny said.

If you've got a big crowd, you can fit them in at Toni Bulloni.

"We can accommodate up to 85 people in a private function in the restaurant," Wygodny said. "We can also do groups of a dozen or more at a time, depending on the seating arrangement."

A restaurant that prides itself on being all-encompassing and accommodating is Riz (416-487-8388), located on Bayview Avenue near Eglinton Avenue.

"We have a very extensive selection for people who are celiac," said Terry Wei. "We still give the taste and flavour of the item, but we also give the option of it being gluten-free."

And avoiding gluten doesn't mean cutting out most of the options, either.

"Ninety five per cent of the regular menu has a gluten-free version," Wei said.

Riz, which covers most of East Asia on its menu, does so while maintaining a personal touch.

"We think it is important to cater to every individual's needs, so they can feel confident that we can do anything for them," Wei said.

"Our restaurant sort of has its niche, because we can cater on short notice to people with all sorts of allergies."

"We're able to take in groups without advance notice," Wei said. "We have a room that can fit 18 people, which can seat anything from business meetings to birthday parties for those with allergies."

If a strictly Chinese restaurant is what you're looking for, then Asian Legend (416-221-9797), which has six locations (including North York, Thornhill, and Toronto), might just fit the bill.

"We opened the first one in 1988 as a family business, but since then, it's just gotten bigger and bigger," said Asian Legend's Ruby Fu.

The restaurant covers both northern and southern Chinese food on its menu.

"Northern Chinese cooking is heavy in flavour, and more flour-based," Fu said. "Southern Chinese food is often lighter."

Asian Legend, which has become popular for its Peking duck and dim sum, does not look like your standard Chinese restaurant.

"Our restaurant's décor is different than that of other Chinese restaurants," Fu said. "Ours is a fusion of modern and traditional style."

They have a good setup for parties and corporate lunches, too. "We have separate party rooms that can seat anywhere from 10 to 20 patrons at most of our locations," Fu said.

TONI BULLONI
- [X] Non-Kosher
- [X] Up to 100 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair accessible

RIZ
- [X] Non-Kosher
- [X] Under 100 person capacity
- [X] Not wheelchair accessible

ASIAN LEGEND
- [X] Non-Kosher
- [X] Up to 150 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair accessible

Turn Your PARTY into an AMAZING EVENT
THE Kenny Simon HOURGLASS BAND
416-638-2549
www.kennysimonband.com

We can cater to all your simcha needs, truffle boxes, hostess gifts,
guest welcome packages, sweet table arrangements, smash cakes, chocolate fountains place card enhancements and much more
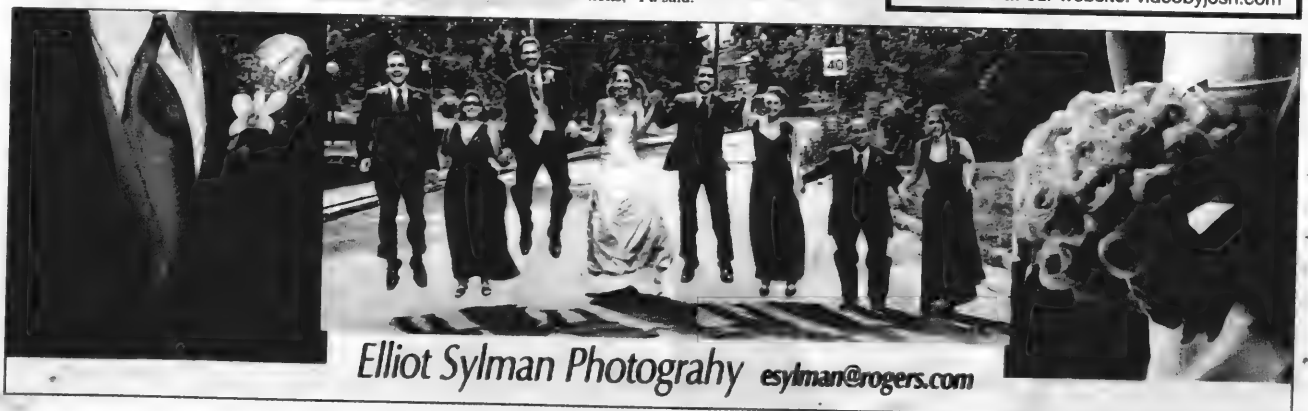
The Chocolate Moose
2839 Bathurst Street
416-784-9092

Your Simcha deserves a great video!
Professional camerawork, careful editing
Latest technology including Hi-Def Blu-ray
Josh Israel 905-709-9277
Full details at our website: videobyjosh.com



Elliot Sylman Photograhy esylman@rogers.com

Consultants take the worry out of party planning

By JENNIFER LIBMAN
Special to The CJN

Planning the perfect simchah is not easy, and after all that work, most people want to sit back and enjoy their special night without worrying about the last minute details. Fortunately, hiring an event co-ordinator can take the stress off the host.

2 Steps Ahead Events (416-949-9433) founded by Vivian Ringwald-Levine, is one service that can help with your party planning. The company offers customized packages to suit the needs of any host. Whether it be parents interested in a mitzvah package for their child's bar or bat mitzvah, or individualized wedding packages, 2 Steps Ahead Events ensures that every simchah goes flawlessly and is a night to remember for everyone.

According to Ringwald-Levine, one the most important parts of planning a party is making sure that the host's personality shines through. "This is what turns an average event into an elegant and memorable one," she says. "If it's a wedding I like to showcase how the couple met, or tell the guests something unique about them as a couple. It helps create an intimate feel and makes all the guests feel included."

Ringwald-Levine believes that her success as an event planner is due to her ability to foresee an issue before it occurs. "A lot of my work is preventative," she explains. "I'm always thinking ahead. I make sure the small details like place settings and special dietary meals are taken care of so all you need to do is show up and look fabulous."

[Jen Arron photo for 2 Steps Ahead]

2 Steps Ahead Events donates 10 per cent of its rate for the event to a charity of the host's choice. "Although they are throwing a lavish party many people still want to give back to the community" says Ringwald-Levine.

Sarah Cherry and Marsha Baker (905-771-1121) are two other party consultants who specialize in wedding and bar and bat mitzvah planning. Cherry and Baker have been working together to plan simchahs for over 19 years and they are experts in their field. "We've seen it all, and we've solved every problem," says Baker.

The pair remembers one wedding when the couple forgot to bring their ketubah. "We just switched around the schedule so that the cocktail hour took place before the ceremony and no one even noticed anything was wrong" says Cherry. "That's what makes us stand out. We don't dwell on problems – we find a solution. The most important thing is making sure the host is happy."

Cherry and Baker explain that one of the benefits of working with them to plan your simchah is that between them both, your event is always on their mind. "One of us is always here," says Baker. "We know how frustrating it is to not be able to reach someone when you have a question. That never happens to us."

Cherry and Baker can help with every step of the event planning, such as accompanying the host to the florist and helping choose a dinner menu. "We provide more than a service to our clients. We become their friends. Actually, their family" says Cherry.

Other consultants advertising in this supplement are: Risa Gold & Associates, 905-886-1233; Judy Stein Consulting & Associates, 905-764-2728.

LESLEY'S
PARTY SANDWICHES & CATERING
We cater all your special occasions
Bris • Baby Naming • Showers • Engagements
Dairy Trays • Shivas • Corporate events
We make fabulous chopped Herring & Kichel
Try our famous French Toast
Fresh Fruit & Vegetable Baskets
Salads and lots more
55 GLEN CAMERON RD., UNIT 19
THORNHILL, ONTARIO L3T 1P2
(905) 660.0551
www.lesleyspartysandwiches.com

Food makes the Jewish world go 'round

By STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

No matter what the Jewish gathering is, it's always about the food

And in order to get the good food, you need the right caterer

Regina's and Mona Pasternak, Food and Event Maven, are ready to cater your event, whatever it may be.

"We're a new dairy and vegetarian catering company in Toronto," said Pasternak, who began her solo work in September. "We carry a lot of gluten-free and dairy-free products."

Along with the event planning portion, which can be done in conjunction with the catering, the food is a big thing for Pasternak.

"Food always makes people feel good," Pasternak said. "When I entertain, the food is always the biggest part of it. I like to make sure everyone is satisfied and feels good.

"Essentially, I'm showing them what I am like through the food that I've made."

The same care is taken with all of her catered items, giving off a very warm, inviting feeling.

"Our menu was developed with a little bit of me in everything," Pasternak said. "Everything we use is fresh and natural."

Preparing food to be its best is important in leaving a lasting positive memory, Pasternak believes.

"People eat with their eyes," she said. "When they walk into a room and it's beautiful, they remember that. If the food is good, they'll remember that, too."

Mona Pasternak and chef John Segreto

Pasternak, who is putting her creations out for sale in the retail marketplace under the label Monalicious, understands the need for perfection on a limited budget. "Functions are very expensive, and with more of a pinch these days, you want to get the bang for your buck," Pasternak said.

Mona Pasternak Food and Event Maven
[X] Non- Kosher

"When people are spending a lot of money, I want to make sure that I give them my heart and soul into the work, and that they get exactly what they ordered."

Regina's has been in the catering business for nearly 50 years, and they've found the status quo has been the best way to go.

"We really haven't changed anything lately, because things have worked for us," said Regina's owner Debbie Green, niece of the original creator.

After buying the company 10 years ago to keep it in the family, Green hasn't made many changes, choosing to keep the popular items on the menu.

They do, however, offer some alterations that you don't see.

Regina's
[X] Non- Kosher

"We can do things that aren't on the menu," Green said. "We can alter things for special diets, like salt-reduced products and avoiding allergies."

Orders can be worked out either at the location on Sheppard Avenue West, by phoning, or through e-mail, although the latter is usually done later in the process.

"It's convenient in the sense that after people phone, they can check the menu items on our website and not have to be on the phone for an hour," Green said.

Whether it's a small order (the minimum is six) or a large one, the same careful process is taken every time.

"Everything in our store is handmade and overseen by several people before it's good to go," Green said. "In the case of larger orders, we break them down so that this can happen.

"It has to be good, because our name is on it."

Not only does Green want there to be quality, but she wants to stuff her customers, too.

"We try to send more than they can eat," Green said. "We'd rather they have too much, rather than not enough."

Regina's is located at 844 Sheppard Ave. West, at the corner of Sheppard and Wilmington avenues. They can be reached by phone by calling 416-636-1044 or online at www.reginasfinefoods.com.

Mona Pasternak, Food and Event Maven, is at 363 Canarctic Drive in Toronto, near York University. You can either call her at 416-665-MONA(6662) or go to www.monapasternak.com.

Other non-kosher caterers advertising in this supplement are: Lesley's Party Sandwiches & Catering, 905-660-0551; Shopsy's, 905-474-9333.

An Event Not to be Missed - Toronto's #1
WEDDING
BAR / BAT MITZVAH
PARTY PLANNING SHOW
WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19th 2011
BETH TIKVAH Synagogue
3080 BAYVIEW AVE., BETWEEN FINCH & SHEPPARD - 6:00 - 10:00 PM
KOSHER CATERING • FLORISTS • CONSULTANTS • MAKE UP • PHOTOGRAPHY
PARTY FAVOURS • VIDEOGRAPHY • BANDS • D.J.'S • DECOR • BRIDALWEAR • DESSERTS INVITATIONS • FORMALWEAR • JUDAICA • KETUBAH • GIFTWARE & MUCH MORE...
PLAN THE PERFECT SIMCHA
PLANNING A SIMCHA DOES NOT HAVE TO BE STRESSFUL OR EXPENSIVE...
LET US SHOW YOU HOW! MEET ALL THE EVENT PLANNING PROFESSIONALS
WHO CAN HELP MAKE YOUR PARTY A SUCCESS!
FREE ADMISSION • FREE PARKING • FREE ADVICE
FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION CALL SHOW COORDINATORS
LYNN COHEN 905-889-1007 • RICK LEVINE 905-881-6400
RECEIVE YOUR FREE SIMCHA PLANNING DIRECTORY AT SHOW
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com
VENDOR ENQUIRIES WELCOME
• SHOW PRODUCER: CUSTOM GRAPHICS INC. www.CustomGraphics.ca • www.TorontaPartyGuide.com • website hosted by: www.Infinityws.com

Venues offer unique, beautiful settings

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

If historical, upgraded buildings with 40 acres of trees and landscaped gardens in the city sounds like the perfect setting for your simchah, look no further than the Estates of Sunnybrook (416-487-3841, www.estatesofsunnybrook.com).

Located on the grounds of Sunnybrook Hospital, Estates of Sunnybrook is made up of Vaughan Estate, McLean House and Coach House, built in 1928. Groups from six to 200 can be accommodated. There are 17 meeting and ballroom spaces, with free parking for 220 cars.

Revenues generated from the Estates are donated to research efforts at the hospital.

With working fireplaces, large windows with beautiful views and private outdoor spaces included with some of the rooms, the Estates has great photo backdrops inside and out.

"When you drive in here it's a very fairytale type setting. You escape when you come in here," said Darren Bryant, director of sales and marketing for the Estates.

The Estates underwent a renovation over the summer, with the furniture, washrooms and floors getting replaced. The buildings have carved wooden ceilings and other unique architectural details.

The food is all prepared onsite, with kosher options available. "We have buffet style and we also do plated meals. We have carving stations, we can have different themed stations, chef attended stations. For our plated meals we have fish and seafood, meat and poultry [and] vegetarian options." The separate buildings and extensive property means that multiple events can be held at once without compromising privacy, Bryant said.

"We are extremely unique," he stressed. "The grounds alone, the landscaping, the gardens, you can't compete with this anywhere in the city." Maple Downs Golf and Country Club (905-832-0880; www.mapledowns.com) is located in the Oak Ridges Moraine in Maple, north of Toronto.

Established in 1954, the club underwent a renovation in 2002 that included a 35,000 square foot clubhouse expansion. It boasts an 18-hole golf course, which is on SCOREGolf's list of the top 100 golf courses in Canada; tennis courts and a swimming pool.

"It is a true family club," said Paul Doucet, the club's general manager.

The majority of the club's events are hosted by members, but the club does hold weddings, bar and bat mitzvahs, and other events for non-members as well.

"We have a full-time dedicated catering coordinator that handles... general inquiries," Doucet said. According to Doucet, Maple Downs, which offers free parking and can accommodate 10 to 250 guests, is an ideal place to host an event because of the high level of service from the club's staff. "[There is] great service from our staff on a daily basis," he said.

"[They have the] etiquette that is demanded at a high level catered function."

The Bayview Golf and Country Club (905-889-4833; www.bayviewclub.com) is located in a quiet Thornhill neighbourhood, and is also on SCOREGolf's list of Canada's best golf courses. "Bayview is... a premiere family sports facility featuring golf, swimming, tennis, curling and fitness, as well as a social aspect," said Rocco Mior, food and beverage manager for the club.

"It's very community oriented."

The club offers complimentary parking and can comfortably accommodate up to 250 people. It often hosts weddings, corporate team building sessions, and everything in between.

A major draw of the club, Mior said, is that it has something for everyone.

"The fact that we appeal to a variety of ethnic groups within the community is a promising feature for the club. I think it was sort of founded on that notion, the idea of ethnicities that came together under one umbrella to enjoy the game of golf, and then expanded its facilities accordingly and to incorporate that family values feel."

Other non-kosher venues are: Granite Club, 416-449-8713; Hotel DuFort, 1-800-565-6333; Loot Lounge/Factory, 416-787-5668; Park Hyatt, 416-925-1234; Pickle Barrel, 416-493-4333; Toni Bulloni, 416-968-3434; Funé, 416-599-3868; Yamato, 416-927-0077; The Warehouse Event Venue, 416-496-2112.

Bayview Country Club

Come try gluten free stirfry combo at riz restaurant

1677 bayview ave., toronto • 416 487 8388 • rizrestaurantandcatering.com

Crawford CB Boys clothing
Toronto's Source for Boys Clothes

- DKNY
- Joseph Abboud
- Ike Behar
- Buffalo Jeans
- Michael Kors

REGULAR SIZES 4-22
HUSKY 10-22

Free Standard Alterations of Regular Price Clothing

Your son will look terrrific....
HE is our best advertising!

508A LAWRENCE W. AT BATHURST TORONTO ON www.crawfordboys.com • 416-782-8137 • Now on facebook!

Trade shows promote party products and services

By JENNIFER LIBMAN
Special to The CJN

Rick Levine takes the fear out of planning a wedding, bar mitzvah or corporate event. For the past 17 years, he and party consultant Lynn Cohen have co-produced two interactive trade shows a year to showcase a wide array of party and event services in the GTA (905-881-6400).

"We started these shows as a way to promote the marvellous products and services available in our community," says Levine. "We let people know where to find the highest quality entertainment so they can throw the best event. It helps people make the right decisions for their next simchah."

The trade shows take place each year in the fall and winter in local banquet halls and synagogues. The shows are staged as mock events, where the public is invited to hear the music, taste the food and meet the people in the industry who want to be part of their next simchah.

"There are no obligations," says Levine. "We invite people out to have a good time, and walk away with new ideas and lots of samples. People literally feel like they are attending a wedding or bar mitzvah."

Vendors at the trade show include DJs and bands, among them the Rick Levine Band and Metro Big Band. Also present are photographers, videographers, florists, and people selling invitations, party favours and other novelty items.

Vendors can contact Levine if they want to be part of the trade show. "Vendors want to be part of our show because we promote everyone equally" says Levine. "All you need is to be is innovative, interesting and attractively priced. We don't limit any type of service. Additionally, we do amazing outreach and always draw huge crowds to our events. It is really a winning situation for everyone. The public is exposed to entertainment options, and vendors have the chance to show off their services."

The next show will be on Jan. 19, 2011, at Beth Tikvah synagogue at Bayview and Finch avenues. Nearly 50 vendors have already confirmed their attendance. At this show, attendees can expect to see some new vendors, including Marble Slab ice cream. "We capitalize on what's popular today" says Levine. "Everybody loves ice cream, so why not have this be part of your party?"

Another vendor that will be present at the next trade show is a company called Sparkulz, which specializes in sparkle temporary tattoos for both children and adults. "Fun stuff like this helps put people in the right mindset for a party" says Levine.

After attending the trade show, people can refer to Levine's website, www.torontopartyguide.com, for a complete directory of all the services available. "When you combine the convenience of our website with the live show that we produce twice a year, people can really count on planning a fabulous simchah," he say.

[Photo courtesy of www.torontopartyguide.com]

gold parties 4U
www.goldparties4u.ca
Throw a Gold Party!!!
-Have a great time
-Make great money
-Turn your old jewellery into Ca$h 1-877-465-3910
goldparties4u@rogers.com

Magnificent. Classic. Reputable. Kosher.
Choice dates available for 2010/2011
Your Simcha Here
Your Simcha Here
Your Simcha Here
Please contact Louise at 416.635.5340
or Bill at Caterers York at 416.783.4293.
www.adathisrael.com www.caterersyork.com
Adath Israel Congregation Caterers York Celebrate in Style
Centrally located at Bathurst and Wilson
37 Southbourne Avenue, Toronto, ON M3H 1A4

100% Handmade Dim Sum
asian legend
northern chinese cuisine
www.asianlegend.ca
Downtown 418 Dundas St. W. Toronto 4169723909
North York 5188 Yonge St. Toronto 4162219797
Markham 3636 Steeles Ave. E. No. 152-3 9059470370
Finch/Leslie 125 Ravel Rd. Toronto 4167569288
Scarborough 4452 Sheppard Ave. East 4162988081
Thornhill 505 Hwy 7 E. unit 77-79 9057638211

Deja Vu
Women's Resale Boutique
We are always accepting - designer quality clothes no more than two years old
New! & Consignment such as
Olsen, 7 Jeans, Votre Nom, Marc Cain, Holt Renfrew
Please call
905-472-9566
www.dejavuboutique.ca

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

The Israeli Source offers Judaica at a discount

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

If you're planning a simchah or you need some Judaica gift items, you may want to visit The Israeli Source (905-482-2025), a 3,000-square-foot store at 60 Doncaster Ave. in Thornhill (www.isrealisource.com).

"We are a hybrid wholesale/retail outlet," explains owner Chuck Elnekave.

"We give the consumer the opportunity to shop for all their Jewish needs, other than food, at highly discounted prices. They can save from 20 up to 80 per cent on their purchases."

Shoppers can choose from a large selection of Jewish books in Hebrew and English, cookbooks, Judaica giftware, Jewish novelty items, Shabbat candlesticks and holiday items such as chanukiyot and Chanukah candles.

You'll also find religious articles such as tallits, kippot and mezuzot.

The Israeli Source offers a choice of housewares, including kitchen gadgets that are colour-coded to facilitate kashrut.

Elnekave says The Israeli Source is the place to go to for simchahs. "We help people doing bar and bat mitzvahs and weddings get what they need for their celebrations, like ketubahs, benchers, kippahs, and other simchah favours. We take care of the personalization of these items at a substantial discount."

Many of the items sold are hand-made in Israel.

"I'm interested in finding unique things that you don't see everywhere," he says. "We try to get as much as we can from Israel directly. We meet up with artists making unique things."

However, he stresses that The Israeli Source tries to cater to every budget, so some of the Judaica items available are mass-produced outside of Israel.

The store is also a place to find unusual Jewish items, says Elnekave. "We're the only store in Canada that carries the tartan of the Scottish Jewish Clan."

He explains that a Scottish-born rabbi had a tartan registered with Scottish authorities to commemorate the Jewish community's long presence in Scotland.

"It's a novelty item. People buy it for the fun of it, but for many expatriot Scottish Jews, the tartan is something they're very proud of."

He carries a tartan tallit, kippot, kilts, golf balls and mouse pads. "The kilt is not a best-seller. It takes a certain kind of man to wear one. It's not in the North American tradition.

"The tartan kippah is a big seller. The tartan tallit is more popular than the kilt, but less popular than the kippah."

Elnekave says he and his wife, Barbara, founded The Israeli Source five years ago.

"We took two things from our backgrounds and marketed them together."

He explains that his Israeli-born parents run an importing company that primarily brings in food from Israel, while he and his wife had both worked in the Judaica business, so they formed a new company that imports Judaica mainly from Israel.

"I basically know Judaica. My family has the expertise in importing, wholesaling and how to reach the Jewish market. Thus The Israeli Source was born."

Elnekave says that clients appreciate the ambiance of the store and the experience of his staff. "We have a great working atmosphere, and that creates a welcoming environment for our customers."

Royal Orchid Florist
Elegant Floral Arrangements for your special day
Visit us in our new location
8190 Bayview Avenue (s. of Hwy #7)
905 -731- 6030
www.royalorchidflorist.com
• Linen Décor • Chuppahs
• Chair Covers • Backdrops

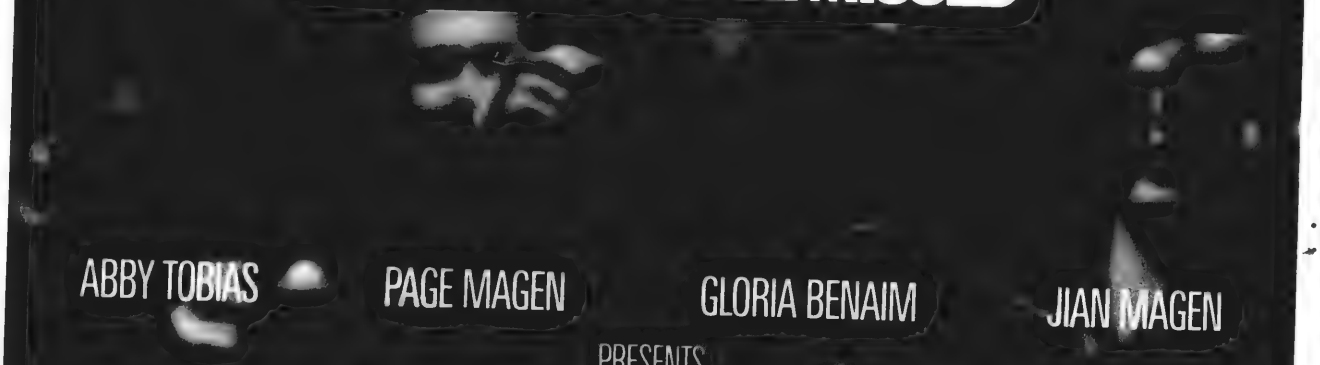
HÔTEL DU FORT
MONTREAL
Let us pamper your "simcha" guests at Hotel du Fort, in spacious, tastefully appointed guest rooms and suites, that offer the luxury of kitchenette convenience, with panoramic views of the river and mountain.
RESERVE TODAY !
reserve@hoteldufort.com
1390 rue du Fort, Montreal, Qc H3H 2R7
Phone: (514) 938-8333
1-800-565-6333
www.hoteldufort.com
4 star property
For your Simchas

Baycrest
"Let's make your next occasion the most successful one ever."
Strictly kosher cuisine
Facilities for 10 to 500 guests
Landscaped grounds
For our personal attention and expert advice call 416.785.2500, ext. 2477

THE MIKE FREEDMAN BAND
Mike Freedman is a highly versatile guitarist, who has been providing beautiful music for special occasions, for the last 15 years.
Mike performs as a soloist and in medium and large band settings, playing most popular music styles. Book Mike's band today, for the perfect musical backdrop to your special event.
phone: 416-371-6278
email: mikefreedman@sympatico.ca
www.mikefreedman.com

COME AND MEET THE TOP VENDORS IN THE EVENT INDUSTRY

A SHOW NOT TO BE MISSED



ABBY TOBIAS PAGE MAGEN GLORIA BENAIM JIAN MAGEN

PRESENTS

SHOWTIME

SPECIAL EVENTS PARTY EXPO

FEBRUARY 9TH, 2011

MAGEN BOYS ENTERTAINMENT

SOLEPOWER

g!

THE WAREHOUSE

EVENT VEN[illegible]

[illegible]

6:00pm to 9:30pm

FOR MORE INFORMATION PLEASE CONTACT : 416.663.7653
FOR VENDOR INFORMATION, PLEASE CONTACT INFO@SHOWTIMEEXPO.CA

WWW.SHOWTIMEEXPO.CA

VIDEOS
for your special occasions
Satisfying clients at very competitive prices for over 20 years
Lisa Productions
905-764-1033
lisaproductions@hotmail.com

Fern Lindzon

Pianist • Vocalist • Bandleader
Solo or Band
Intimate or Grand
Also a cappella
Great music for all occasions
416-225-6977
www.fernlindzon.com

CUSTOM DESIGNER COOKIES for any OCCASION!
Spicy Gingerbread or Buttery Sugar Cookie
Made with Organic Spelt Flour jinja ninja custom cookies
416-533-5771
416-473-1614
www.jinjaninja.ca

Kosher Venues: Great Food & Atmosphere

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to the CJN

Where do we eat? It's tough enough planning for a small family meal, but how do you decide when you're planning a simchah for 100 – or 400 – of your closest friends and relatives? But as with a family meal, it comes down to just two simple questions: "how's the atmosphere?" and "how's the food?" Two kosher venues are answering both of those questions with a simple "outstanding."

The Avenue
- [X] Kosher Kitchen Available
- [X] Up to 300 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair Accessible

Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda, one of the city's most respected Conservative synagogues, has recently undergone a facelift to modernize and make it an even more desirable location. And at The Avenue Banquets, a new face on the site of the former Meron Banquet Hall, clients get not only a dazzling location but one of the city's most experienced wedding and event planners as well.

Marla Kay has been in the simchah business for over 30 years. Now, as co-owner of The Avenue Banquet Hall (905-669-0777), she says, "I don't do anything outside anymore." Working exclusively for her own clients at The Avenue, she's thrilled to be able to offer "new spins and new opportunities," and one of those "new spins" just happens to be kosher.

She's thrilled about the kosher side of the business – and it seems to have taken her by surprise. "The feedback we've been getting about our kosher food. People ask all the time, 'Is this kosher? This doesn't taste kosher!'"

Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda
- [X] Kosher
- [X] Up to 300 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair Accessible

Kosher at The Avenue means no compromises – religiously or in terms of the food. Under the strict supervision of Badatz Toronto, Zeece Kosher Catering (The Avenue's in-house kosher caterer) maintains a totally separate kosher kitchen. Kay says unlike many, "we cook all our food onsite; everything is very, very fresh. We don't order anything premade."

Even staples like hummus, babaganoush, or apple strudel are all homemade by The Avenue's kosher chef. No wonder, given that he used to be head chef at Sabra Salads in New York. "Imagine what he's doing with us," Kay says.

"He does a braised beef that's unbelievable – it melts in your mouth." Having a dedicated kosher chef allows The Avenue to create exceptional meals, like a recent bar mitzvah in a family that had come from India. "They asked us if we could do East Indian food kosher."

With spices in hand, a mouth-wateringly exotic menu materialized: seasoned chicken and rice, aloo gobi (potato cauliflower), and even custom-made kosher naan (Indian flatbreads).

From charcoal-grilled shish-ka-bob to chicken satay, from lamb and duck to fun touches like "street dogs" and chili stations, Kay says, "we don't just do regular food."

Premium touches are everywhere. From au courant square dinnerware and updated silverware to crystal chandeliers and an indoor waterfall, The Avenue is ready for your simchah.

Meeting with clients for the first time, Kay will walk through the venue, planning how each area should look, down to the most minute level: "If they want it crystally; if they want a lot of draping." She can even help clients plan their ceremony. "I'm a very detail-oriented person."

Whether you're planning an intimate affair in the small ballroom, which seats 80-90 with a dance floor, or the larger ballroom, which can hold 400 or more, Kay will make sure everything looks and tastes exactly the way you've dreamed. "When you come into The Avenue, you can feel that you're fully taken care of… I help with everything, from start to finish."

If you're looking for a traditional setting in a central mid-town location, look no further than Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda (416-633-3838). "Beth Emeth is not necessarily [just] a synagogue," says Edmund Duarte of Uptown Gourmet Catering. "We are a venue that comes with a built-in rabbi. We are a beautiful venue, with a beautiful room, with beautiful facilities."

Naturally, a big part of any celebration or gathering at Beth Emeth – which offers not only family simchahs but also corporate events and parties – is its commitment to kashruth. But that doesn't stop Uptown from creating show-stopping food. "We can replicate any menu or create anything your culinary imagination can envision."

Like a seared sea bass medallion with a light Cajun apple chutney, or mini beef Wellingtons with a merlot-and-shiitake reduction. "We try to be … ahead of the curve," says Duarte.

Premium food is just one of the special touches at Beth Emeth. "Whether it's a bris for 30 or [a wedding for] 300, everybody gets the same amount of respect."

"With a lot of the big venues, you're often not the only event," explains Andrea Levine. "At hotels and big banquet halls, they have three or four halls – three or four events going on at the same time. Here, the focus is on you."

Ultimately, what clients expect from a shul is what Beth Emeth delivers, says Duarte: "a very old-fashioned kind of business…as up-front as possible, with a focus on service and quality."

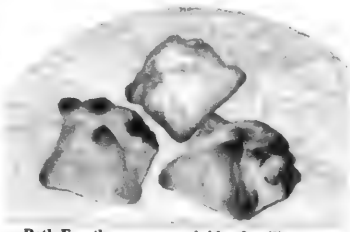
Centrally located, conveniently off Highway 401, Beth Emeth is ideal for guests from both north and south. There's a large parking lot and the wheelchair-accessible facility has recently undergone two upgrades – most recently within the foyer and chapel, which is the perfect size, Levine says, for an afternoon wedding.

"The chapel is beautiful now," she says, with bright, colourful new windows. It seats 85 to 90 people, making the occasion that much more intimate and meaningful. For larger weddings, most couples choose the sanctuary and main ballroom, which seats up to about 400.

And make no mistake, Duarte says, the ballroom is comparable to any venue around. "Weddings are about elegance. This ballroom is one of the most elegant rooms in Toronto.

"We don't like to attract as much attention," says Duarte. "We don't make a lot of noise… just quietly do what people want us to do."

Other kosher venues are: Adath Israel Congregation, 416-635-5340; Baycrest Hospitality Services, 416-785-2500, ext. 2477; Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am, 416-633-5500; Copper Creek Golf Club, 905-893-3370, ext. 202.



Beth Emeth serves up mini beef wellingtons

Shop over 700 designs when and where you want to.
Trust the Ketubah specialists.
ketubah.com
No wedding too soon
A text for every couple
200 exclusive designs
Why Ketubah.com?
Since 1996, we have been the leading provider of reasonably priced, limited edition, fine art Ketubahs. With our incredible selection, variety of texts, unparalleled service, and prices starting at $100, we are proud to offer a Ketubah for every taste and budget.

Specialty foods brighten parties

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

When you're entertaining, you want to begin your meal with some tasty starters

Hot hors d'oeuvres – savoury appetizers served before a meal – have become somewhat passé for everyday entertainment. It's the kind of food one enjoys at large simchahs and special events.

However, with today's emphasis on healthy eating, serving dips with raw vegetables or flatbreads before a meal has become de rigeur for parties large and small. Dips of all kinds – hummus, baba ghanoush, spinach, artichoke – seem to be standard fare at the most elegant and casual affairs.

One food company that has been at the vanguard of this nutritional revolution is Summer Fresh Salads, which is known for its wide variety of dips and other starter foods such as grain and pasta salads.

The good news for people planning a party is that 14 of the dips are kosher, says Lesley Gordon, director of marketing at Summer Fresh. These 14 varieties include baba ghanoush, roasted red pepper and a variety of hummus flavours that include roasted garlic and lemon dill.

"We have had at least 10 flavours, and we're always adding new flavours."

Summer Fresh Salads
[X] Kosher available

She says the dips are found at all major retailers in the deli section, and Loblaws shoppers can check out Summer Fresh's new square packaging.

Gordon also suggests that people visit the Summer Fresh website (www.summerfresh.com) for recipe ideas.

She advises people to keep the dips – they have a relatively long shelf life – on hand in the fridge for drop-in company or for a quick meal starter.

Summer Fresh also has ice cream and cheese toppings to finish a meal, Gordon says.

These topping come in two flavours: cranberry pomegranate and maple walnut. "The sauces have a thick consistency. You can pair them with cheese to dress up the cheese and it looks like you've worked for hours."

Another way to end a meal with pizzaz is with a Mookie, a cookie with a message (www.mookietown.com) made by Jinja Ninja, an innovative cookie company that's taking the dessert world by storm.

"There's nothing like a sweet message to brighten one's day," says Beverly Horii, the founder of Jinja Ninja Custom Cookies (416-473-1814 or 416-533-5771). Horii set out to make ginger and sugar cookies for every occasion – birthdays, bar and bat mitzvah, showers, engagements, graduations, anniversaries and thank-you and corporate gifts and promotions.

Jinja Ninja Custom Cookies
[X] Non- Kosher

The possibilities are endless, because Horii has extensive training in drawing and drafting. The former architect decided to go into the cookie business, because she wanted a career outside the corporate world, she says. With her drafting skills, she can draw almost any design and reproduce it as a cookie, she explains.

She also does metal work, so she can create cookie cutters for any design for a large quantity of Jinja Ninja customized cookies. "I'm a jack of all trades." Horii is also an interior designer with an expertise in colour, which she says allows her to create custom-coloured cookies for any theme.

She recently did cookies with a hockey theme as bar mitzvah favours that were distributed with seating cards. The mother was thrilled with cookies, Horii says.

One of her larger projects was a three-tiered wedding cake made of iced gingerbread cookies.

"No one had seen a cookie wedding cake before. I took the bride's graphic – she used peonies for the wedding invitation – and her colour theme and made a three-tier cake out of the peony-shaped cookies.

"I made the banding [around the cake] out of letters in cream colour with messages like happiness and love."

When a corporate client introduced a new chair design, Horii created a cookie cutter in the shape of the chair and used the custom cookies to create a large cookie for the official launch, she says, noting that the smaller chair cookie was also used as a promotional novelty.

She uses natural ingredients such as butter and organic spelt in the batter. "I try to use as many natural ingredients as possible. I even experimented with natural food colouring, but you can't get the brightness of the colours."

Jinja Ninja's generic- themed Mookies – they are for birthdays, graduations, Jewish holidays – are sold at Pusateri's and a name can be added by ordering in advance at the bakery.

Other specialty companies advertising in this supplement are: Chocolate Charm, 416-787-4256; The Chocolate Moose, 416-784-9092

UP & COMING EVENTS INC.
ABSOLUT-LY
PERFECT
PARTIES
#1 LEADER
100% FUN
(100 PROOF)
SPECIAL EDITION
L'CHAIM... Here's to many
UP&COMING EVENTS
This award winning team delivers cutting-edge creativity combined with dependable quality control. Our full-service company provides a broad range of resources for all types of events and budgets.
WEDDINGS ~ BAR/BAT MITZVAHS
CORPORATE PARTIES ~ GALA FUNDRAISERS
KAREN GARSCADDEN 905-731-1648
KAREN JACOBS 905-597-4147
JUDY STEINER 905-764-8538
MURIELLE BLOOMBERG 905-709-4040
www.upandcomingevents.ca

Salads
Summer Fresh
SALADS • DIPS • HUMMUS
Make your entertaining EASY this holiday season
Dairy
COR
Dips & Hummus
Available in the refrigerated deli section everywhere!
For more information about our kosher items, visit www.summerfresh.com/kosher

Bellvue Manor can host any simchah, large or small

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

[Photo courtesy of www.bellvuemanor.com]

When you're hosting a simchah, you want to wow your guests, so choosing a venue is critical.

A venue that gets lots of positive reviews from guests and hosts alike is Bellvue Manor (905-761-7288), a banquet hall located in Vaughan at 8083 Jane St., two lights north of Highway 7.

Bellvue Manor (www.bellvuemanor.com) has four event spaces, says sales and marketing manager Guido Ramirez. "We have nine different options. We can do parties from 10 to over 1,000 people."

He says Bellvue Manor is a popular venue for weddings and bar and bat mitzvahs. "There's a COR-certified kosher kitchen on site."

The venue has been open since 2008, so it's equipped with pre-installed state-of-the art technical amenities, notes Ramirez. "The entertainment operates flawlessly, because it's newer technology and very user friendly.

"The screens are hidden in the architectural structure and they come down from the ceiling when you need them. They're used a lot at many affairs."

A big attraction for many people is Bellvue Manor's huge lobby, which is ideal for cocktail receptions, says Ramirez, noting that the owner had Jewish weddings in mind when the building was designed.

Jewish people like the ambiance of the lobby for the cocktail reception, he explains. "We have even done functions completely in the lobby. We recently had a wedding that was cocktails only.

"It was an artistic couple who wanted something different. Everything was bite-size weddings. The cocktails, bedecken, ceremony and reception all take place in different rooms from the reception to the dessert. We were able to accommodate them."

He says the availability of multiple rooms is well-suited to Jewish weddings, making transitions between different parts of them very smooth.

The food is a big draw for Bellvue Manor clients, according to Ramirez. He notes that the company, which has owned other banquet venues, has had the same chef for the last 15 years "Our chef has to be versatile, because our clients come from so many different ethnic backgrounds. He tries to accommodate as many special requests as he can."

The most popular dishes are continental cuisine, food with a European flavour, says Ramirez. "It's anything from sea bass to fine cuts of beef. Vegetarian options are common as well. Tofu stir fry is very popular.

"People generally choose three- to five-course dinner packages that often include late-night sweets and savouries."

Sometimes people have late-night hot dog stands and pizza stations, he says. "The sweet table can be anything from a chocolate fountain to waffles, but fruit's a must."

Ramirez says 80 per cent of the business at Bellvue Manor is repeat customers or word of mouth. "We've had many compliments from past guests that have included judges, TV and sports personalities."

He says the following note from one happy father of the bride typifies client comments about Bellvue Manor. "The staff are exceptional… The food was delicious. Everyone left full and happy."

Ramirez says they are never surprised by these kinds of compliments. "We're used to exceeding the level of expectation."

JODI MOLSON WEDDINGS EVENTS AND CONSULTING
JMOLSON@ROGERS.COM
416.845.0944
CALL FOR A CONSULTATION "FOR A FABULOUS EVENT"

The Invitation Divas
Quality Invitations at Affordable Prices
Weddings, Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Call Dana at 416.725.9193
Email: info@invitationdivas.com
Creative • Custom • Unique

Caricatures!
Liven up your party, simcha or gathering of any kind by having me come by and do fun caricatures of your guests — they will love it!
MARK CIALE
Illustrator • Caricaturist • Artist
416-929-6678
markciale@rogers.com • www.markciale.com

World Famous Deli
Shopsy's
DELI • RESTAURANT • TAKE OUT • CATERING
Shopsy's Markham
7240 Woodbine Avenue, Markham
(Northwest corner of Woodbine & Steeles)
905-474-9333
Have you been to Shopsy's lately?
• Breakfast, lunch, and dinner menus
• Breakfast - all day every day
• Buffet luncheons and dinners
• Take out
Celebrate your holiday with us for Passover, Chanukah, Rosh Hashanah & Break the fast for Yom Kippur
Ideal for all occasions
Get together with family and friends, Corporate & office events, Bar/Bat Mitzvahs, Birthday parties.
Restaurant available for Private hire
Shopsy's Catering
Let us cater your next event!!!
Shopsy's offers customized catering & BBQ menus to suit any special event or private function; from sit down or cocktail or wedding reception. Shopsy's can accommodate your event from Breakfast, Lunch or Dinner. Shopsy's can provide all the food, staffing & equipment rental requirements to ensure your event runs seamlessly & successfully!
Please call our Catering Coordinators at our Hotline 416-365-3333 or visit our website at www.shopsys.ca and order on line.
Look for our Special Offers
1/2 OFF!
Enjoy 1 lunch or dinner entrée at 50% off, when a 2nd entrée of equal or greater value is purchased
Valid any time. One offer per party per visit. Offer expires March 31, 2011
10% OFF CATERING
Great for Business & Social Events.
Enjoy 10% off any catering purchased valued at $100.00+ 1 coupon per order, per visit. Cannot be combined with any other offers. Call our catering hotline 416-365-3333
Offer expires Nov. 30, 2010
Restaurant visit - Catering order Coupon - Not to be used in conjunction with any other offer One per party per visit

LOOKING FOR LIVE ENTERTAINMENT FOR YOUR EVENT?
CORPORATE & PRIVATE EVENTS • STORE OPENINGS
COMPANY PICNICS • GALA FUNDRAISERS • HOUSE PARTIES CONVENTIONS • CASINO NIGHTS AND SO MUCH MORE!
Swaye ENTERTAINMENT
FEATURING:
MAGICIANS • COMEDIANS • CARICATURISTS • HYPNOTISTS • HENNA ARTISTS • PSYCHICS • BODY PAINTERS • CELEBRITY IMPERSONATORS • PARTY HOSTS • CIRCUS PERFORMERS • FIRE EATERS • JUGGLERS • PUBLIC SPEAKERS • STILT WALKERS • CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINERS • CLOWNS • PALM READERS • MUSICAL ENTERTAINERS • VENTRILOQUISTS • BELLY DANCERS • DISC JOCKEYS • CASINO RENTALS AND MORE...
FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO BOOK YOUR EVENT CALL:
(416) 545-0741
OR TOLL FREE AT: 1-888-545-0741
www.swayeentertainment.com

Mindless Sophistication Events
Creating Memories At Home & Abroad
Large or small, wedding or first date every moment is one to be cherished. Call us today, we'll help you create your moments.
416 251 3278 www.mindlesssophistication.com

JONNO LIGHTSTONE
Clarinet, flute, saxophone
Klezmer music & much more
Set the right mood for your party
Klezmer, swing, classical Dial to quote
tel: 416-651-7521
lightstone@sympatico.ca

PARTY PLANNER

Places to make your birthday a bash

By STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

No matter how old you get, you still want your birthday party to be the coolest.

And with so many different places out there, a couple of party spots want to make the choice simple.

Although Playtime Bowl and WHIMZ are very different in what they do, both are ready to take your booking.

Playtime Bowl
- [X] Kosher food available
- [X] Up to 200 person capacity
- [X] Wheelchair accessible

"WHIMZ is a live animal program," said manager Tracy Guerin. "It's a fun, educational and interactive program involving animals."

They have 22 different types of creatures to choose from for a party, but nothing that won't fit into your house.

"We deal with only small animals," Guerin said. "The largest animal we have is a rabbit.

"There are mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, and many more animals available to bring out."

And when the pets leave your house, so does the mess.

"We bring everything to cover the carpet, and take care to avoid any messes," Guerin said. "We leave you with great memories, not stains."

A big drawing factor is the educational component involved with the party, led by the attending WHIMZ staff member.

"We present the animals in a fun, educational way," Guerin said. "Having fun while you're learning is our main focus.

"Depending on how much the kids want to talk, we'll say as little or as much as they want to hear."

The varying level of comfort also goes for holding the animals, too.

"We present the animals in a fun and safe way, which gives every participant a chance to interact with the animal as much as both are comfortable with," Guerin said.

"For example, if we bring a snake, some people might want to put it around their neck, and some might just want to see it."

Precaution is also taken for those with allergies.

"If people with allergies want to book with us, then they should book animals that don't have fur," Guerin said.

"We have reptiles, amphibians, insects, and some hairless rats and guinea pigs that are furless and considered hypo-allergenic."

If knocking over pins is more your thing, then Playtime Bowl may be the answer for you.

"We have a very large facility that allows groups to come in and pretty much customize any birthday party they could want at a bowling facility," said marketing and event co-ordinator Natalie Di Michele.

Part of the customization can involve playing in the back lounge, which offers 16 lanes of cosmic glow-in-the-dark bowling.

"We can book anywhere from six to 96 people in the back lounge," Di Michele said. "If you want to book the entire place, we can fit in around 200 people."

For children's birthday parties, there are six different packages.

"The kosher sparemaker package, which includes kosher pizza, is quite popular," Di Michele said. "So are any of the ones that include ice cream or balloons."

On the non-Kosher side of things, they have a full kitchen that can make anything from pizza to steak, or for children's birthday parties, chicken strips and onion rings.

"We also offer loot bags for kids," said Di Michele, who also mentioned that parents can bring in their own birthday cake for the event. "It's a really fun environment."

To help take the load off the parents, there are hostesses and servers around to do the work.

"They help the kids get their shoes and set them up to bowl," Di Michele said. "Afterwards, they'll graciously bring out the cake and organize the food."

The bowling lounge is not your run-of-the-mill pin joint.

"We're the only bowling lounge in Toronto that allows for adult and children's parties to have an upscale feel to them," Di Michele said.

"There are leather couches, high-top tables, and a full bar for the adults, with bottle service or specialty drinks available for grown-up parties."

Both Playtime Bowl and WHIMZ request that you book two to three weeks in advance, but can sometimes get you in on shorter notice.

You can reach Playtime Bowl at 416-787-4533 or online at www.playtimebowl.com. WHIMZ can be found at www.whimzonline.com or call at 416-656-7894.

DRAGON EGG

An exotic fruit developed in Israel from a cross between fruit from Ecuador and Panama. This new fruit can grow in a very hot climate requiring 20 per cent less water then normal vegetables. The fruit is a hit in posh London restaurant.

[Israel Sun photo]

Baycrest's dance gala raises more than $2 million

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

The cheering was loud and the excitement palatable at Dancing with Our Stars: Season 2, the recent gala held at the Sheraton Centre Toronto in support of Baycrest.

Five community leaders braved the spotlight to dance for an audience of about 900 people. Their performances were rated by Bruno Tonioli, a judge on the TV show Dancing with the Stars, comedian Mike Bullard and radio personality Maureen Holloway.

The evening's MC was Toronto-born celebrity entertainer Howie Mandel, host of the television game show Deal or No Deal and a regular on the TV show America's Got Talent.

He said he had a lot of affection for Baycrest because both of his grandmothers had been cared for by the centre.

The participants, Elliot (Saturday Night) Muzzo; Linda (Tiny Dancer) Waks; Zane (Golden Hands) Cohen; Anton (Boy Toy) Rabie and Honey (Hip Hop) Sherman were all paired with professional dancers and had worked on their routines during the summer.

Although all the performances were received with great enthusiasm, the winner was the sentimental favourite – Sherman, who has in the past suffered from debilitating arthritis.

She recounted how a year and half ago she underwent hip-replacement surgery and spent three weeks in rehab at Baycrest as the youngest patient in the unit at the time.

Indeed, her personal story made her performance that much more remarkable, Mandel told the audience. "A year and a half ago, she was in a wheelchair."

Even Tonioli, who has a reputation as a tough taskmaster, had kind words for Sherman, giving her a score of 9 out of 10. "Great footwork. It was very precise."

He described her performance as powerful, but Sherman did not quite see it that way. "It was one of the longest minutes in my life."

Later, she joked that she had taught dance partner Mikhail Zaslavskiy, "everything he knows."

The team that scored the highest on the dance floor – a perfect 10 by all three judges – was Rabie and his partner, Tanya Iaremchuk, who performed a Spanish routine.

From left Mikhail Zaslavskiy, Honey Sherman, Ed Sonshine of RioCan, evening sponsor.

The scoring was three-pronged: 50 per cent was based on the dancers' fundraising goals, 25 per cent was based on the judges' scores and 25 per cent was on voting by the audience.

Sherman came to the race as the fundraising leader by raising more than $700,000.

However, the ultimate winner of the evening was Baycrest, with more than $2 million raised for its Centres for Innovations in Aging.

Event co-chairs David and Stacey Cynamon thanked all the sponsors, but highlighted the "generous support of RioCan Real Estate Investment Trust, Royal de Versailles Jewellers Inc. and Rolex Canada Ltd., who have steadfastly supported Baycrest galas for the past decade."

Mark Gryfe, president of the Baycrest Foundation, said he was thrilled with the evening. "Last year, Dancing with Our Stars changed the face of galas in the city and was talked about as the most fun event of the year.

"This year, Season 2 raised the bar even higher. We raised almost twice as much money. Plans are already underway for Season 3, which promises to be even bigger and better."

Honey Sherman and Mikhail Zaslavskiy

Video Affairs
www.video-affairs.com
$995.00
905-889-0909

CHARM IT
a CREATIVE ACTIVITY for BAR/BAT MITZVAHS
NEW! COOL! WOW!
Guests choose a charm and individualize a jewellery party favour for boys & girls
BOOK NOW!!
Paula Shrott
416-258-9985
pshrott@rogers.com

The Gold Step Jewellers Ltd.
Designers & Manufacturers - Diamond/Gemstone Merchants CREATIONS by Rachel
Personalized name necklace with Star of David Initial Rings Available Also with diamonds in 14k & 18k
REPAIRS DONE ON PREMISES
420 Hwy. #7 East, Ste. 203, Richmond Hill
(Between Leslie & Bayview in the McDonald's Plaza)
905-881-1606 www.goldstep79.com

Heidi Gruenspan
& Associates
Wedding & Party Planner
Specializing in Weddings, Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Full Service & Day of Event packages available
For a Free consultation please call:
905-738-5030 www.heidig.ca

Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am
A Great Place to be Jewish...
• Conservative services in a modern congregation
• Elegant, newly renovated Sanctuary and Social Hall
• Enriching experience for your Bar and Bat Mitzvah www.bethdavid.com

Party Planner

Caterer offers cooking classes for men

By JENNIFER LIBMAN
Special to The CJN

Peter Graben is better than a marriage counsellor. At least that's what one student at his new culinary school ManChef.ca believes.

"Peter taught me to cook, and now my wife and I are spending time together in the kitchen. We're having so much fun!" the student says.

Graben, who has been one of Toronto's leading caterers for years, expanded his business when he created ManChef.ca, a culinary school for men, in May of 2010. "I looked around, and there were no cooking schools geared toward men. And not only that, our school is 100 per cent kosher. Editor's note: But not under any supervisory body. Everything is made in my own kitchen."

Graben's classes accommodate up to six people, and the sessions are entirely hands-on. Individuals can sign up for one class at a time or for a series. Graben also offers private group classes for events such as birthdays, anniversaries, engagements or graduations. And he has led corporate team-building classes.

Graben helps the participants prepare the meal, and then they all eat together. "We make very simple foods. It's all about raising their confidence and showing them that they can learn to cook. We take every recipe step by step, so even if they've never boiled water before, they come out with a delicious product," he says. "Our classes focus on cooking from scratch, using fresh ingredients and time-tested culinary techniques."

The reason Manchef.ca is successful is that Graben recognizes the differences in the way men and women cook. "Women already know how to cook. They grew up watching their mothers and grandmothers and they feel comfortable in the kitchen" he says. "When they take a cooking class, they're looking for a new skill or a new recipe, but rarely do they need to learn to cook from scratch."

Graben explains that women often take control in the kitchen, which is the reason many men are so apprehensive about cooking. "When it's just the guys, they don't have anyone to take over. They have no choice but to learn!"

The first lesson Graben teaches is how to cook the perfect pasta. "One of the greatest things about pasta is that you can have a complete meal in about 15 minutes" he says. "The key is to always work quickly, as pasta won't hang around – if it cools it goes sticky and gluey, so drain it quickly, serve it quickly and eat it quickly."

Graben teaches participants knife skills and basic cooking techniques such as how to blanch vegetables. "We start from scratch, but we move quickly," he says. By the end of a session, participants will have prepared dishes such as miso salmon, lemon chicken, roasted vegetables and a variety of desserts.

"If you have a boyfriend or husband that can't cook, send them to me," Graben says. "I promise you won't be disappointed!"

For more information, or to sign up for a class, call 416-967-1818 or visit www.manchef.ca

THE FAMOUS LIFESTYLE VEGETARIAN BURGER

1 cup sticky rice plus two cups water
1 oz. finely diced onions.
2 cloves chopped garlic.
1 oz. diced red peppers.
5 oz. sweet potatoes diced small
1 oz. grated shredded mushrooms.
3 oz. coarsely chopped chick peas.
1 oz. natural bran wheat.
1 tsp. coriander.
1 tsp. oregano flakes.
1/2 tsp. celery seed.
1/2 tsp. chili powder.
1/4 cup chopped parsley.
salt and pepper to taste.
1 cup corn flake crumbs or bread crumbs.
oil

Cook rice in a pot with water. Bring to the boil for 10 minutes, simmer for an additional 10 minutes. When rice is cooked, remove from heat and cool.

Boil diced potatoes in water. When cooked, strain water and cool.

Place oil in pan, heat the oil and sauté the chopped onions and garlic on a low heat but don't brown them. Add mushrooms, red peppers and chick peas.

Mix rice and potatoes into the above and mix. Remove from heat, cool and add one beaten egg. Mash coarsely, either manually or with potato masher.

Use four-ounce scoop to portion burgers. Moisten hands and mould into shape of a burger.

Roll in corn flake crumbs or bread crumbs. Sauté on both sides. Place in preheated oven at 350 for about 5 to 8 minutes. Yield: 6 portions.

Your burgers can be served with a favourite curry and yogurt sauce or tomato sauce.

ManChef.ca
Peter Graben's Cooking Program for Men
Mature Gentlemen - Caregivers - Baby Boomers - Stags - Bachelors - GenXers - Poker Nights 416-967-1818 peter@manchef.ca - www.manchef.ca

michael rosen
EVENT CONSULTING
With over 30 years of industry experience, Michael is back!
weddings / bar/bat mitzvahs / corporate events conferences / meetings michaelrosen@rogers.com 416•901•6008

JEP RENTALS
NEW IN TORONTO
JEWISH ENTERTAINMENT AND PARTY RENTALS
JUDAIC INFLATABLE RIDES
JEWISH CARNIVAL GAMES AND CRAFTS
KOSHER FOOD CONCESSIONS
& MORE
WWW.JEPRENTALS.COM | 416.661.4108

ROLLING STONES TRIBUTE BAND
"NASTY HABITS"
If you love the Rolling Stones you will LOVE US
WE DO ALL THE STONES CLASSICS
CALL RANDY KAHN
416 451-5177
recordings available on request

BEATTIES
SIZES
453 Eglinton Ave. We
Toronto
Monday - Friday 9:30-6:00
Thursday 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-5:30
Sunday-Closed
416-481-4459
1-800-510-9138
www.beattiesonline.com
Free Parking available at the side of the building

Eva Goldfinger
Rabbi and Psychotherapist
Meaningful Personal Ceremonies and Counselling
Jewish, Interfaith, Secular Humanistic, and Same-Sex Couples & Families 416-494-7450
evagoldfinger@rogers.com
www.mysimcha.com
WEDDINGS BAR/BAT MITZVAHS NAMINGS FUNERALS

ARE YOU PLANNING A PARTY???
Temporary Tattoos • Sparkle Tattoos • Airbrushing
Apparel • Airbrush Tattoos • Face Painting
Caricatures • Hot Pressing • Engraved Leather Items
Hairwraps • Personalized Belts • Keychains
Check Out Our New Party Services
NO SET UP FEES!!!
LITTLE MISS HENNA
905-731-0067

Chocolate Charm COR
Let us customize a
SMASHABLE Chocolate Cake for your Simcha!
(HAMMER PROVIDED NO CHARGE)
We also feature Chocolate Lollipops and Truffle Box Favours
416.787.4256 • www.chocolatecharm.ca
3541 Bathurst Street (at Brooke)

REDSTONE PICTURES
Filmed in High-Definition authored in Blu-ray
Weddings
Bar Bat Mitzvahs
Tribute Videos
Richard & Raisyl Saunders
416-256-4666
email: redstonepictures@rogers.com www.redstonepictures.ca

PARTY PLANNER

Naot are built for comfort and style

By RANDI BERGMAN
Special to The CJN

Considering all of the wonderful products that the country has to offer, buying Israeli usually ensures you are, in fact, buying the best.

With Naot shoes, that "Made in Israel" quality stamp of approval comes with comfort and style to boot. For more than 20 years, Naot Canada has been the outpost of the brand. As well as distributing the Israeli-made shoes across Canada, the company also boasts four Naot-only GTA locations, including an outlet store and one that's opened recently at 1102 Centre St. in Thornhill. The company has expanded in other cities as well, having added a second Montreal location at 3941 Rue St-Denis to the roster, which also includes Calgary.

While distributing Naots across the country might seem like a daunting task to others, the Lissoos family runs their business with ease.

"Our relationship with the factory in Israel, Kibbutz Naot Mordechai, remains extremely close, and we are very proud of their dynamic design team, their aspirations to be innovative on every realm and their constant push for improvement," says Corinne Lissoos, founder and president of Naot Canada.

Chutzpah, creativity, innovation and entrepreneurship are the pillars of the brand's success, along with unparalleled comfort, that is!

Simply put, Naot shoes are all about the way they feel. "Own a pair and you will understand," says Lissoos. "When a person's feet are nurtured and supported, as they are in a pair of Naots, they do not have to worry about their feet, they can get on with anything else they need to accomplish in their day probably more effectively, as they do not have foot discomfort."

Naots may be comfortable, but the Lissooses ensure that this comfort never comes at the price of style. They are expanding into the fashion realm with their new Prima Bella line of orthotic-friendly pumps for spring 2011, which feature removable footbeds. The men's selection will expand as well, with the executive line, featuring shoes that can be worn with business suits or casual wear.

Meanwhile, the fall Naot collection, currently in stores, features boots of many styles with stunning fabrications and accents, including the warm and ultra-chic origami boot.

Naot is a rarity in the box-store environment of today.

"Customer care is intrinsic to the Naot brand," says Lissoos. "We follow closely the development of each and every pair produced. We know the hands who are stitching."

Employees work as a team and are dedicated to fitting every person in the world with a pair of Naots.

Teens and 20-somethings cookbook is something special

By NORENE GILLETZ
Special to The CJN

I recently met up with best-selling cookbook author Susie Fishbein at Kosherfest 2010, which took place at Meadowlands in New Jersey on Oct 26 and 27. Susie was at the show to launch her new cookbook, Kosher by Design: Teens and 20-Somethings (Artscroll).

As we strolled around Kosherfest, we checked out new kosher products and discussed how the kosher market has exploded and gone mainstream. Kosher items that were once impossible or difficult to find are now much more readily available, opening new doors for kosher cooks who want to offer their families new twists instead of always serving the same old thing.

We also talked about her newest cookbook, Teens and 20-Somethings. Its subtitle, Cooking for the Next Generation is a deliberate double entendre because Susie's recipes not only appeal to a new generation of young cooks, they will be welcomed by the parents who cook for today's young, digital-savvy, fast food generation. This is Susie's seventh cookbook and it's a winner!

Teens and 20-Somethings offers up 100 easy-to-prepare new recipes and each recipe includes a large, full colour photo (by award-winning food photographer John Uher) so you'll know what the finished dish is supposed to look like. There are icons to indicate vegetarian, dairy-free, nut-free and gluten-free recipes. Susie's recipes are simple and don't require complicated equipment or gadgets. Students, newlyweds and young people starting out will find that the recipes in Teens and 20-Somethings are easy, fun, delicious and user-friendly. Many recipes offer lighter ingredients and there are healthy eating tips.

Susie Fishbein includes a list of basic equipment used for the recipes in her book, including mixing bowls, skillet, jelly-roll pans, can opener, food processor, immersion blender, spatulas, tongs, potato masher, garlic press, strainer, measuring cups and spoons (liquid and dry), oven mitts… and a fire extinguisher.

Fishbein explained that her family life has definitely influenced her career as a cookbook author. She said, "When my kids were younger, I published Kosher by Design Kids in the Kitchen. They learned to cook simple recipes with me. I have teens in the kitchen now. Their tastes have changed and their friends are more sophisticated.

Continued on page 38

Risa Gold
Risa Gold & Associates
Wedding, Bar/Bat Mitzvah Consultants
Specializing in Partial and Day of Services Starting $500
Associates: Mery Bendayan and Miriam Rotman
905-886-1233

Planners turn vision into reality

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Food, drink, decor and entertainment can make or break an event. The best way to ensure your event is a success is to hire someone to pull everything together – an experienced event planner.

Michael Rosen of Michael Rosen Event Consulting and Karen Garscadden from Up and Coming Events can help turn your event dreams into reality.

Garscadden, Karen Jacobs, Murielle Bloomberg and Judy Steiner are associates of Up and Coming Events, which was founded more than 20 years ago by Garscadden and Jacobs.

"[We do] weddings, bar mitzvahs, social events... holiday parties, grand openings, themed events, and now we do a lot of major gala events," Garscadden said.

The company's many years of experience planning and co-ordinating events is a major asset to potential clients, she added.

"Our team is innovative and can offer interesting ideas and concepts for all kinds of events, big or small and on any budget.

"We know the ins and outs, and we know ways to be creative and cut budgets if necessary. We also know the newest and hottest trends, so for people who have a more generous budget, we can find the things that are unique and exclusive that can be showcased at their special event."

The Up and Coming associates make it their mission to ensure the personality of the host is evident in each event they plan.

"This is a major thing we like to focus on, that the event is a reflection of the hosts. We try to get to know our clients and what their taste is and what their style is. So we're not just making a party that's kind of a cookie-cutter party. We're trying to make something that's going to reflect the people who we're honouring.

"Sometimes people have been doing the same event, especially corporate, over and over and over again. We're going to try to take them out of the box and give them a new twist or a new idea to make it a little more creative and innovative."

The award-winning event team (they have been recognized three times by the Canadian Event Industry Awards for 'Best Wedding'), does much more than just food and flowers, Garscadden said.

"A lot of what we do is behind the scenes... it's dealing with families and emotions and family politics. Especially these days, there's so many unconventional family structures. [We need to be sensitive] to all the people who are involved in putting the event together and trying to work out compromises that will make everyone feel as comfortable as possible at a milestone occasion."

Rosen, of Michael Rosen Event Consulting, has 35 years experience in the event planning industry. In addition to his years of experience, he says the secret to his success lies in his laid-back attitude.

"I like to have fun with people and I like approaching things with a sense of humour. Rather than getting upset if something goes wrong, I just work on fixing it. I don't tear my hair out; I stay calm all the time and I approach things in a very light manner. It's the only attitude to have.

"There shouldn't be a lot of stress in making a party. You should approach it in a very fun way."

Rosen brings his passion for event planning to every simchah he does.

"I'm really in my element when I'm planning events. One of my favourite things in the world is to actually be at the event and executing. I love that. I love seeing all your hard work and all the planning come off perfectly.

"Even with weddings, I've been doing them for so many years and every time I send a bride down the aisle I get this shiver down my back. It never goes away."

His attention to detail, he added, is a definite advantage for clients.

"I'm very detailed, extremely so, and my years and years of catering and food and beverage experience really help me in doing this.

"Because of my years and years of experience I'm really well organized. I make sure nothing slips through the cracks."

In his role as event planner, Rosen says he symbolizes different things to different people.

"[To] the mother of the bride, I give calmness and order and detail. To the bride I'm the one who takes her vision and does my best to make it come true... For the bride's father I make sure that the investment yields high. I'm a good negotiator and I give good advice."

For more information on Up and Coming Events, visit www.upandcomingeventsinc.com or call 416-665-6100. Michael Rosen Events Consulting can be reached at 416-901-6008 or michaelrosen@rogers.com.

Other consultants/planners advertising in this supplement are: Heidi Gruenspan, 905-738-5030; Mindless Sophistaction, 416-251-2378; Swaye Entertainment, 416-545-0741; Jodi Molson, 416-845-0944.

STATIONERY PLUS
GILDA LEFTON 905-881-5588
• INVITATIONS
• WEDDINGS
• LUNCHEONS
• BAR / BAT MITZVAHS
• ACCESSORIES
All price ranges available. Canadian, U.S. and Unique Custom Designs.
Enjoy our 30th Anniversary Specials!
Extra Discounts & Other Offers

ALL EYES ARE ON YOU

LET OUR EYES BE 2 STEPS AHEAD OF EVERY DETAIL!
Vivian Ringwald-Levine
Event Coordinator
Assisting you with ALL of your Bar/Bat Mitzvah planning needs from theme development to vendor referrals. We specialize in Full and Day-Of Coordination.
New Tzedakah Program: 2 Steps Ahead will donate 10% of our fee to the charity of your child's choice!
2 Steps Ahead Events
EVENT PLANNERS
Phone: 416-949-9433 • www.2stepsahead.ca

• Birthday Parties
• Corporate Events
• House Parties
• Brit Milah/Baby Namings
• Shiva/Unveiling
mona pasternak food & event maven
A NEW ALTERNATIVE IN... dairy and vegetarian catering
416-665-MONA(6662)
mona@monapasternak.com
363 Canarctic Drive,
Toronto, ON M3J 2P5
www.monapasternak.com

Jewish & Interfaith
WEDDINGS
Officiated by Cantor Deborah Staiman, ACC
416-483-9532
www.jewishlifecycles.ca

TWINS PHOTO & VIDEO
905-764-6556 905-707-2385
Weddings
Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Other Family Events
We copy your Video to DVD
Digital Video Coverage from $500 www.twinsphoto.com
twinsphotoandvideo@rogers.com

JOE STAR BAND

CORPORATE EVENTS ★ WEDDINGS
BAR/BAT MITZVAHS ★ PARTIES
WE LOOK FORWARD TO MAKING YOUR PARTY AN UNFORGETTABLE EVENT
e-mail: joestar@rogers.com
Office: 905-881-1378 Direct line: 416-826-6661 www.joestarband.com

Judy Stein Consulting
& Associates

Event Planners
info@judysteinconsulting.com www.judysteinconsulting.com
905-764-2728

The Canadian Jewish news

CONGRATULATIONS

In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.

Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____

CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.

a party

Event Concierge offering a new approach to event planning and consulting

phone: 416-712-9790
email: wilder@awilderparty.com

Event Concierge

Party food easy to prepare

Continued from page 36

This new cookbook equips young adults with the knowledge and skills to create their own amazing foods – from quick and delicious munchies to a whole party."

You'll find tantalizing recipes in Teens and 20-Somethings for delicious dishes such as Pizza Soup, Peanut Butter and Banana French Toast, Layered Mushroom Ziti, Pineapple Maple Glazed Salmon, Red Velvet Cupcakes, and Chocolate Tart in Pretzel Crust. She's even included a recipe for Traditional Chicken Soup and offers a new twist on old-fashioned burgers with her Turkey Sliders. There are international influences as well: Mexican Pizza Empanadas, Thai Chicken Burgers, and Hoisin Vegetables. You'll find dozens of suggestions on how to "eat your way around the world."

Try some of the following recipes at your next birthday party.

PIZZA SOUP

Why order in? This recipe has all the makings of pizza…in a bowl!!! Your friends will flip when they dig into the cheesy baguette and you will love how easy it is to make.

1 French or Italian bread
1/2 cup olive oil, divided
1 large or 2 small onions, peeled, cut into 1/4-in. pieces
5 cloves fresh garlic, thinly sliced
1 tbsp. dried oregano leaves
2 (28-oz.) cans whole peeled tomatoes
1/2 cup water
1 1/2 tsp fine sea salt
1/4 tsp freshly ground black pepper
2 cups fat-free skim milk
4 oz. shredded mozzarella cheese

Preheat oven to 375. Line a jelly roll pan with parchment paper. Set aside.

Cut 6 (1-in.-thick) slices from the bread.

Measure 1/4 cup olive oil into a small dish or bowl. Lightly dip both sides of each bread slice into the oil. Place on prepared pan and toast in the oven for 8 – 10 minutes, until golden. Remove the bread and preheat the broiler.

Heat 1/4 cup olive oil in a large pot over medium heat. Add the onions and cook until it "sweats," or turns translucent. Do not let it brown or burn, just become golden. Turn the heat down if it is cooking too quickly.

Add the garlic and oregano. Cook for 3 minutes, stirring with a wooden spoon or silicone spatula to scrape the bottom of the pot. The garlic should be fragrant.

Add the tomatoes. Put 1/2 cup water into one of the cans and swirl to loosen sauce from the sides, pour the water into the second can and swirl. Pour the water into the pot. Break the tomatoes by poking with the spoon or spatula. Simmer, uncovered, for 30 minutes.

Season with salt and pepper. Add the milk.

Transfer the soup in batches to a blender or use an immersion blender right in the pot; purée the soup until very smooth. Ladle the soup into oven-proof crocks. Top with a toasted bread slice. Top with 1 – 2 tbsp. cheese. Place the crocks onto the jelly roll pan and into the oven. If your crocks have handles, turn them in so they don't touch the sides of the oven. Broil until the cheese is melted and bubbly. Serve immediately, being careful as the crocks will be hot.

LAYERED MUSHROOM ZITI

Often there is a layer of beef in non-kosher baked ziti. In this recipe, mushrooms are chopped and sautéed to simulate that deep meaty flavor in a dish that you and your friends will go crazy for. If you can't find Romano cheese, just use double the amount of Parmesan. The better quality sauces are often sold in 25-ounce jars, so you may need a second jar.

1 (16-oz.) box ziti kosher or coarse salt water as needed
1 medium onion, peeled, cut into chunks
4 cloves fresh garlic, coarsely chopped
2 (10-oz.) boxes button mushrooms, cleaned
2 tbsp. olive oil

Continued on page 39

Glow menu meets Reisman's high standards

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

Rose Reisman's name has become synonymous with healthy living and sound nutrition.

And it's no wonder. In the last 20 years, she has become a one-woman lifestyle industry. She runs a catering company, Rose Reisman Catering, and a meal delivery service, Personal Gourmet, and she writes cookbooks. All of these endeavours embody her healthy lifestyle philosophy.

Her 17th book, Rose Reisman's Family Favorites, was published by Whitecap Books earlier this year. She also has regular radio and television spots and three food columns.

Despite her busy schedule, Reisman donned a new culinary hat in the summer of 2009. She became a restaurateur, teaming up with Peter Higley, owner of the Pickle Barrel, to open GLOW, a sprawling restaurant (7 Marie Labatte Rd., Unit #E1) in Shops at Don Mills, the newly renovated shopping centre at Don Mills Road and Lawrence Avenue East.

GLOW's (416-384-1133) 5,000-square-foot main dining room has a relaxed ambiance with many windows and a patio that has seating for 100. In the summer, the doors to the patio – an entire wall – are opened so that even the people dining inside feel as if they're outside, Reisman says.

"I wanted a restaurant that feels like it's outdoors. The wood and the stone give the place a fresh airy atmosphere. It has a California feel."

The menu is also affordable. "We're very price conscious."

Reisman is enthusiastic about this latest venture, noting that GLOW has become a popular destination for diners all over the Toronto area. Indeed, on this day in October, the place is bustling with a lunch-hour crowd chowing down on colourful salads; grilled salmon, tuna and chicken; pasta; whole grains; bunless burgers and other light healthy fare.

"We don't use cream to mask the natural flavours and you won't find salt shakers on the table," Reisman says, noting that GLOW is one of the few full-service restaurants in North America dedicated to healthy eating.

Glow
[X] Non- Kosher
[X] Wheelchair accessible

The health theme resonates in other aspects of the restaurant. For instance, the servers are all wearing pink T-shirts to mark Breast Cancer Awareness Month, a cause Reisman has supported over the years. She has helped to raise more than $1 million for education, research and treatment of breast cancer.

Reisman has developed the permanent menu for GLOW, and she's there at least twice a week, making sure the recipes meet her high standards. She says the restaurant has lucked out with its talented executive chef, Barry Serrao, who has been able to incorporate the philosophy of light and healthy cuisine into his daily specials.

A complementary trio of dips – feta-beet, carrot humus and artichoke asiago – paired with flat breads arrives at the table before the meal. While the flavour of the dips may vary, diners begin their meals with this healthy starter as an alternative to the traditional bread basket, Reisman says.

She raves about the mozzarella bar, handmade Italian di bufala compana paired with a selection of grilled or roasted vegetables served on toasted focaccia crostini. "We bring the mozzarella fresh from Italy."

The main courses are all served with healthy sides like edamame salad, mango slaw, seasonal vegetables and sweet potato wedges.

And you won't find any deep fried food, even on the children's menu, a healthy selection of child-friendly items that include Grilled Cheese Panini and Caesar Salad.

Desserts, light mousses and cheesecakes in 19 flavours, are served in shooter-size glasses, and while they may be reduced in calories, there's no scrimping on flavour. A shot of dessert will be in the 120 to 160 calorie range, says Reisman, noting that the s'mores mousse is one of the most popular shots. "We can't keep them in stock."

A private dining room, an intimate space with the same outdoorsy ambiance as the main dining room, seats 38 to 40 people. The whole restaurant can also be rented out for larger affairs. The main dining room can accommodate 200 people for a sit-down dinner.

An added bonus to such an affair is the atmosphere created by the two luminous exclusive glass art installations. Mille Fiori was created by world-renowned studio glass artist Dale Chihuly and Sprout Box is by Susan Edgerley, a leading Canadian glass artist.

People looking to have a party or a corporate event can plan a menu, Reisman says. "Our chef is happy to do that. We offer a variety of standard menus, but we will always do menu requests."

Generally, people choose two appetizers, salad or soup and three main course items like chicken, beef or fish, two vegetables, a starch plus dessert, she says.

The typical assortment of appetizers includes flatbreads, satay platters, ahi tuna over mango slaw, vegetarian antipasto platters, a variety of dips served with flatbread crisps, and burger sliders.

For people having simchahs, Reisman recommends the private dining room for brunches or Friday-night dinners for out-of-town guests. The meals can be served plated or served on family-style platters. There's even a Passover menu.

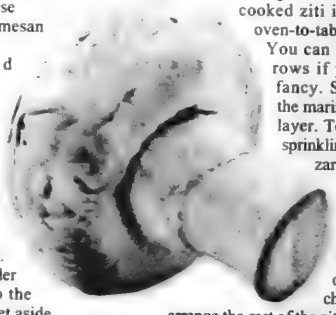
The private dining-room has two 60-inch plasma televisions equipped for visual presentations and private screenings. It's well-suited to corporate meetings, Reisman says. "We're booking private events three to four times a week."

She says the feedback from people holding their events at the restaurant is positive. "They love the intimacy, the ambience, the unusual décor, the service and of course, they love the food!"

They won't believe you made it

Continued from page 38

1/2 tsp fine sea salt
1/2 tsp freshly ground black pepper
4 cups jarred marinara sauce
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
2 cups ricotta cheese
2 tbsp. grated Parmesan cheese
2 tbsp. grated Romano cheese



Preheat oven to 375. Cook the ziti in a large pot of salted, rapidly boiling water according to the package instructions, until al dente. Drain and rinse under cold water to stop the cooking process. Set aside.

Meanwhile, place half the onion and garlic into a food processor fitted with metal "S" blade. Pulse a few times until evenly chopped. Remove the contents to a bowl. Add the second box of mushrooms with the remaining onion and garlic and process until finely chopped. Add them to the bowl.

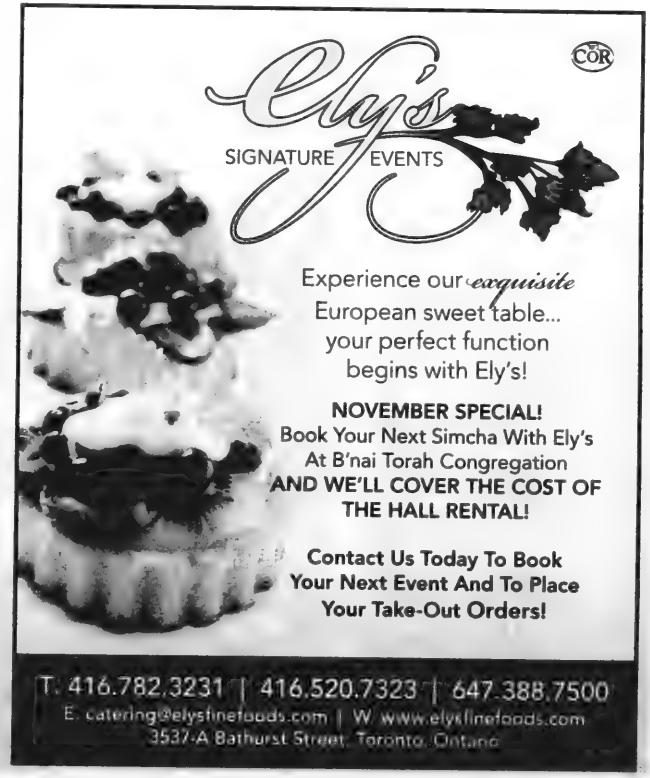
In the empty ziti pot, heat the olive oil over medium heat.

Transfer the chopped mushrooms to the pot and sauté about 15 minutes to remove the moisture from the mushrooms. This will give them a meaty flavour. Add the salt and pepper. Stir.

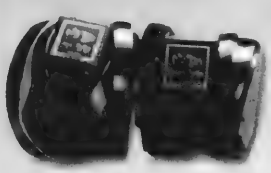
Arrange a single layer of the cooked ziti in a 9-by-13-in. oven-to-table or Pyrex pan. You can line them up in rows if you want to be fancy. Spread 1 cup of the marinara over the ziti layer. Top with an even sprinkling of all the mozzarella. Spread half the mushroom mixture over the cheese. Top with 1 cup of sauce. Sprinkle on all of the cheddar cheese and arrange the rest of the ziti on the cheddar. Top with remaining mushrooms and remaining 2 cups of sauce.

Spread an even layer of the ricotta over the top using a spoon or offset spatula. Sprinkle on the Parmesan and Romano cheeses.

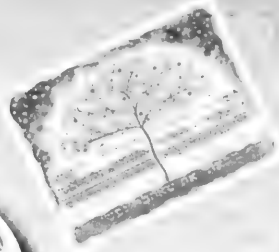
Bake, uncovered, for 40 minutes, until cheese is bubbly and starting to brown. Serve hot. Yields 10 to 12 servings.



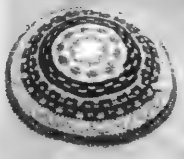
COR
Ely's
SIGNATURE EVENTS
Experience our exquisite European sweet table... your perfect function begins with Ely's!
NOVEMBER SPECIAL!
Book Your Next Simcha With Ely's At B'nai Torah Congregation
AND WE'LL COVER THE COST OF THE HALL RENTAL!
Contact Us Today To Book Your Next Event And To Place Your Take-Out Orders!
T: 416.782.3231 | 416.520.7323 | 647.388.7500
E: catering@elysfinefoods.com | W: www.elysfinefoods.com
3537-A Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario



Simcha Centre



The One Stop Shop for all your simcha needs



Personalized Kippot and Benchers,
Customizable Ketubahs,
Chuppah Rentals,
and a variety of Simcha Favours at the lowest prices - GUARANTEED!

A large selection of gifts such as Tallitot, Tefillin, and Talmud Sets to satisfy every budget

To see a selection of products in person, visit The Israeli Source
60 Doncaster Avenue, Thornhill - (905) 482-2025

www.simchacentre.com

For any enquiries contact orders@simchacentre.com

Featuring an assortment of Israeli-made products to enhance your simcha

SUPPORT ISRAEL
BUY ISRAELI GOODS

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

64 Pages | Thursday, November 25, 2010 | 18 Kislev, 5771 | $1.25

MIRVISH 2010–2011 SEASON
SUBSCRIBE NOW
MIRVISH.COM

This Week

National

Former British MP met by protesters. Page 3

Settlement evacuees still living in trailers. Page 25

On Campus

Queen's rector censured for anti-Israel comments. Page 30

Chanukah Food & Gifts

Jewish toys that flash, spin and challenge. Page 47

On cjnews.com

Israeli wineries can boast of over 120 years of tradition.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 12
According to Reports 22
Yiddish Corner 24
Family Moments 27
What's New 28
Obituaries 30
On Campus 30
According to Reports 32
Chanukah Food & Gift Ideas 33
Israel & the Jewish World 49
Business 53
Heebonics 54

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

A sea change is about to occur in the way Canadian Jewish community advocacy is conducted on both a regional and a national level.

According to Canadian Jewish Congress (CJC), the change is being led by the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy (CIJA), which is seeking to centralize control of the host of Jewish advocacy agencies it administers.

Early last week, Congress posted documents on its website revealing its views on the impending shift in the organizational structure involving it and other community organizations including the Canada-Israel Committee (CIC), Quebec-Israel Committee (QIC), National Jewish Campus Life (NJCL) and the University Outreach Committee (UOC). All of them fall under the CIJA umbrella.

Congress decided to "put a push on" CIJA by posting its documents now, CJC vice-president Barbara Bank said, because "we're not really getting a clear idea of what their plan is."

Congress said earlier this year that the council had advised all its advocacy organizations of plans to eliminate the current divisions of community representation and create a "single Jewish public affairs organization encompassing the national and regional level."

David Schwartz

The new entity would also work "in close co-operation with" and "operate under" the UIA Federations Canada system (UIAFC), Congress documents said.

In response to the CIJA restructuring committee's request for proposals on the best way to reorganize, Congress delivered a 13-page document to the council in June.

In its brief, Congress suggests the new communal entity should retain the title "Canadian Jewish Congress" for name recognition in the community, and proposed that a single, small board of governors be set up without an executive committee "so that lay oversight is most effective… [and] that such a simpler structure is far less likely to attract the scrutiny of the Canada Revenue Agency than the current structure, which is substantially more complex."

CIJA chair Stephen Cummings could not be reached for comment by the CJN deadline.

Congress' Pacific-region chair David Schwartz said the CIJA restructuring committee members include Larry Tannenbaum, chair of Maple Leafs Sports and Entertainment; David Engel, honorary director of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto; David Koschitzky, immediate past chair of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's board of directors; Mark Freiman, national president of CJC; Marc Gold, immediate past chair of CIC; Stanley Plotnick, CIJA founding board member; CIC chair Moshe Ronen, and Cummings.

Continued on page 25

COLOURFUL WELCOME TO MEN IN UNIFORM

The Commander in Chief of the Canadian Armed Forces, Walter Hnatyshyn, second from right, officially greeted his Israeli counterpart, Gabi Ashkenazi, third from right, last week at his office in Ottawa. The two chiefs of staff stand between traditional bear-fur-hatted Grenadier Guards. A Piper of the Canadian Forces Ceremonial Guard also greeted the military men.

[Israel Sun photo courtesy of the Canadian Department of National Defence]

Vayeshev
Candlelighting: 4:27
Havdalah: 5:33

Greater Toronto Area

Don't mi to h deli
Access th

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(U)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 014
PO BOX 972 STATION F 784
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

CBC documentary rocks UN report on Rafik Hariri murder – please see page 27

The News in Brief

Canada

Fraud Case Dropped

TORONTO — Fraud charges against a Toronto man charged last year with bilking mostly Jewish investors in a $27-million Ponzi scheme were quietly dropped, partly because the courts lack the resources to deal with a complex fraud case, it was revealed last week. Tzvi Erez, 43, allegedly ran the scheme through a printing business that went bankrupt in October 2009. A court-appointed receiver said he defrauded 70 investors, mostly in Toronto's Jewish community. When charges were dropped Sept. 22, a Crown e-mail obtained by CBC News cited trial time and expense as a key reason. A lawyer for the complainant in the criminal case said he was also told that his client should have avoided the risky investment, the Toronto Star reported. Ontario Attorney General Chris Bentley told the legislature that his office is investigating and that the province "does not walk away" from criminal cases.

World

Ban To Be Fought

WELLINGTON — The case against New Zealand's ban on kosher animal slaughter will be heard Nov. 29 in the High Court in Wellington. Calling the ban "unintentional antisemitism," the president of the New Zealand Jewish Council said the community has a strong case and urged Jews worldwide to help pay its $123,000 in legal costs. Last May, Agriculture Minister David Carter rejected a proposal that shchitah, which has been performed in New Zealand since 1843, be exempt from the new animal welfare code, which says all commercially slaughtered animals must first be stunned. The community filed legal action in August after talks with Carter broke down.

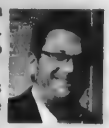
Rabbi To Run

KAMPALA — Native-born Ugandan Rabbi Gershom Sizomu is running for his country's national Parliament. If elected in the February vote, he would be the first Jew elected to national office in Uganda and the first rabbi to be seated in a nationally elected government outside Israel, according to Be'chol Lashon, an American organization committed to strengthening the Jewish People worldwide. Rabbi Sizomu, an ordained Conservative rabbi and the chief rabbi of Uganda, has been endorsed by the Forum for Democratic Change party and is waiting for his candidacy papers to be approved by the National Electoral Commission. The rabbi serves Uganda's native Jewish community, called the Abayudaya, 300 of whom converted to Judaism in 2003 under his initiative. Israel and Orthodox Jews in the Diaspora don't recognize the Abayudaya as Jewish.

Federation Reaffirms Shabbat Policy

MONTREAL — Federation CJA in Montreal says that it will continue to "respect Shabbat" in all its activities.

The statement by president Jack Hasen was made in the wake of the decision Nov. 1 by one of its agencies, the YM-YWHA, to be fully operational on Saturdays.



Jack Hasen

The federation said that it "recognizes that the Y consulted its membership and the majority has spoken in favour of opening on Shabbat. We appreciate that the Y undertook this consultation and acknowledge that the Y is an independent organization with the authority to enact its own policies."

The Y's main Snowdon branch has been open on Saturdays since Oct. 31, 2009. The membership was polled last month on whether the facility should be fully operational – the major difference being the opening of the room housing cardiovascular-training equipment – or the entire facility fully closed on Saturday, as it had been for many years. Some 55 per cent voted for full operation.

"We are very sensitive to those who are troubled by their decision, but hope that everyone will continue to work together to achieve harmony in our community. We reaffirm, however, that Federation CJA will continue to respect Shabbat in all its activities," the statement said.

The federation has traditionally not conducted any activities on Shabbat.

Monument Stolen

BERLIN — Thieves made off with a 750-kilogram Kristallnacht monument from the Jewish cemetery in Cologne, Germany. The theft of the nine-foot-high monument occurred Nov. 14, just days after commemorations of Kristallnacht, the night of Nazi-spurred violence and looting in 1938, Ha'aretz reported. The local Jewish community is offering a 4,000-euro reward for its retrieval.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments

Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS

SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite | DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400

Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!

Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years

We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment.

3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- Current Listing of Funerals
- Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- Kaddish Texts
- Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

Beth David B'Nai Israel Beth Am
and
Canadian Technion Society
Present

"Engineering with Soul: Achievements of Israeli Engineers Without Borders" – by Professor Mark Telesnick

Dr. Mark Telesnick is an Associate Professor and Senior Lecturer at the Technion Faculty of Civil and Environmental Engineering in Israel. He will discuss a remarkable program through which Israeli Engineers use innovative technology to improve the lives of neighbors in the Middle East and beyond.

THURSDAY, December 2, 2010 at 7:30 p.m.

55 Yeomans Road, Toronto ON • (416) 633-5500 • www.bethdavid.com
Free Admission including Refreshments

The Canadian Jewish News

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca

IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol XL No. 46 (1,975)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

B. Gladstone, Rabbi E. Goldstein, A. Gropper, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosensweig, Rabbi C. Steinmetz, G. Troy, N. Shenhav, L. Speisman, R. Turkienicz, F. Zomparelli
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr
George A. Cohon, Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim, Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.

CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

FRIENDS OF
SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER
FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
416-864-9735
www.fswc.ca
DIRECT ACTION NOW

National

Greater Toronto Area

Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how
to reach your financial goals.
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Sonny Goldstein, CFP
President
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Galloway's Canadian tour met by protesters

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Controversial former British MP George Galloway's Canadian speaking tour is causing controversy all over the country.

York U threatens to sue rabbi
see page 32

The Free Palestine, Free Afghanistan, Free Speech tour kicked off at York University on Nov. 16, where Galloway spoke in front of a sold-out crowd. Outside the Price Family Cinema, several hundred protesters expressed their displeasure.

Avram Heisler, a third-year York student who is on Hillel at York's board, estimated 250 to 300 people came out to protest.

"I don't really oppose Galloway speaking in general, he has the right to speak," Heisler said. "It's more that he raises funds for a terrorist organization that I have a problem with."

Hillel of Greater Toronto, meanwhile, is demanding funds spent by the York Federation of Students (YFS) to bring Galloway to campus be refunded to students.

"[Galloway is] not a speaker who speaks for most of the university," Heisler added. "For the YFS to spend [student's] money is wrong."

Krisna Saravanamuttu, YFS president, told Excalibur, the York University newspaper, that they did not make any financial contribution to bring Galloway to York. He did, however, say YFS would cover security-related expenses.

At the York lecture, Galloway insisted he never supported Hamas, considered a terrorist group by the Canadian government.

"I have been asked why I have been dealing with Hamas," Galloway said.

Continued on page 32

York University students protest George Galloway's speaking engagement at the university on Nov. 16.

3 ACRES OF INDOOR FAMILY FUN!
Welcome to Beach House
FALLSVIEW
INDOOR
WATERPARK
HOLIDAY BONUS $250 FREE
Come celebrate Chanukah with a Splash!
Book your Hotel Waterpark Package
and receive $250 FREE in dining and attraction passes
HOTEL WATERPARK PACKAGES FROM $159
Hotel Waterpark Package offers:
• Accommodations at Sheraton on the Falls, Crowne Plaza Fallsview, Skyline Inn or Hampton Inn by Hilton at the Falls.
• 4 two day passes to Fallsview Indoor Waterpark.
FALLS ILLUMINATION
חנוכה שמח
Sheraton on the Falls HOTEL
CROWNE PLAZA NIAGARA FALLS - FALLSVIEW
Skyline Inn
866.596.5234 • fallsviewwaterpark.com/cjnews

Funday Sunday

Compiled by CJN Staff

Sunnybrook Foundation and Canadian Hadassah-WIZO (CHW) have joined together to produce Funday Sunday: Toronto's family fest, presented by Dancap Productions, Nov. 28 at the Metro Convention Centre.

Funday Sunday will raise funds for the women and babies program at Sunnybrook and for CHW activities in Canada and Israel

The event will feature games and activities for kids, a designer goods marketplace with deep discounts, and a health area for tips to keep your family healthy.

The seeds for the Funday came about, when Sunnybrook and CHW asked how they can engage "young families with two working parents, extra-curricular activities, carpools, financial stress," the two organizations said in a statement.

They came up with an "experiential charity, a fun, modern and interactive way to give back that doesn't take a lot of time while bringing the busy family together."

Details are available at www.fundaysunday.ca.

Benjamin Group

Through the generations ...a sacred trust

SAFEGUARDING YOUR TRADITION

"We are committed to practicing and preserving our Jewish tradition of ritual care."

Marc Benjamin

As a fourth generation Benjamin, and the Chapel's Vice President of Operations, I am committed to ensuring we continue to practice the highest standard of observance. Our community is larger and more diverse than ever and has a real need for information on Jewish mourning tradition. I'm proud that we can provide it, through The Benjamin Institute's speaker's bureau and website.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto

416-663-9060

www.thebenjamingroup.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel, Benjamin's Landmark Monuments, The Benjamin Foundation, The Benjamin Institute, Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

A glorious heart of courage

From the editor's desk...

Woe betide the Jewish people if we measure the parameters of our modern existence in terms of the antisemitism directed towards us.

That the "most ancient of hatred" still persists in the year 2010 is undeniable.

That it exists alongside ever higher advancements in science, the arts and the humanities should be, but alas, is not inexplicable.

Over the millennia, antisemitism has shown itself to be probably the hardiest form of Otherly-hatred, the most reliable instrument of social control for demagogues, despots and demi-gods alike.

Neither truth, history, logic, conscience, fair play nor common sense, it seems, can loosen the hold of the hatred on those who are its propagators.

But to define ourselves in terms of that hatred alone, in other words, in terms of the malice propagated by the haters, merely surrenders to them control of the messages we strive to impart to the world about ourselves: our past, our present and our future.

Of greater import however is that it surrenders to the hater far too much influence over the messages we wish to impart to our children and our grandchildren about who we are, our mission to the world and our place in the unfolding history of the word.

In other words, we must not allow our efforts to respond to the antisemite to overshadow our efforts to teach to our children – and thus perpetuate – the beauty and the splendor and the far-reaching purpose of Judaism.

And yet it is precisely because of our millennial obligation to perpetuate our faith, traditions and way of life that we must respond to the antisemite wherever possible.

That was the distillate of the message imparted two weeks ago in Ottawa at the second meeting of the interparliamentary coalition to combat antisemitism.

Resurgent antisemitism is part of the times. Combating it is our battle.

In North America, and especially in Canada, we fight that battle from a relatively comfortable perch, namely, societies in which the sinews of democracy bind tightly the protective structures of our rights and freedoms.

There are places on earth, however, where there are no such protective democratic structures and yet courageous individuals nevertheless rage against the calumnies of discrimination and antisemitism.

Venezuela is one such place.

Sammy Eppel is one such individual. He is a community leader, director of information and analysis commission for the CAIV - Confederación Asociaciones Israelitas de Venezuela. Eppel appeared at the recent Ottawa conference as an expert on the subject of state-sanctioned antisemitism and spoke to us about the situation in Venezuela.

"Jews are being treated as an evil experiment in Venezuela."

About 15 years ago, Eppel said, there were between 25,000-30,000 Jews in Venezuela. Today there are about 9,800. In four years, he predicts, barely 5,000 Jews will remain there.

The government of Hugo Chavez instigates, informs and instructs widespread antisemitism in Venezuela. As spine-shuddering evidence, Eppel showed the gathering two videos that were shown on state-run television and that he said were representative of the message Chavez sends to his people about Israel and Jews.

The videos were in Spanish with English subtitles. One was a recording of a speech by a spokesman for the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (Movimiento Revolucionario Tupac Amaru). It consisted of a masked individual clutching an automatic rifle who rapped, ranted and raved into the camera. Among the key nuggets of his message was "Zionists must be fought wherever they live, even in their homes."

The second video was a commercial message played during the intermissions of the FIFA World Cup soccer matches last summer. It showed a soccer team dressed in an Israel-emblazoned blue and white uniform abusing a group of cowering innocents obviously dressed as Palestinian victims.

Eppel told the panel that the state-controlled university recently allowed one of its professors to publish a 14-point blueprint of how to destroy the Jewish people.

Most of the members of the Jewish community are on government blacklists, he said. But, unlike the antisemitism of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, which is embedded deep within the core of the Iranian, Chavez harbours "an expedient antisemitism that he uses for political purposes." The Venezuelan people were never antisemitic before Chavez. The antisemitic acts "all stem from the government," Eppel said.

Despite, according to Eppel, the abject lack of the rule of law in Venezuela, he still urged us to write about the policies of the Chavez government and to expose the Venezuelan leader for what he is: a narcissistic, anti-democratic, anti-American, demagogue. Chavez's obsession with his image is his Achilles heel.

Eppel's obsession with combating antisemitism and protecting his people, indeed protecting the sanctity of human dignity is his glorious heart.

MBD

SeeJN

BAYT HACHNASAT SEFER TORAH

Rabbi Mordechai Torczyner of the Yeshiva University-Torah MiTzion Beit Midrash holds the new sefer Torah commissioned by Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto in honour of Rabbi Baruch Taub, left. The procession went from Rabbi Taub's home on Bevshire Circle to the synagogue on Clark Avenue on Sunday. To see video, go to cjnews.com

BEING JEWISH DOESN'T HAVE TO BE EXPENSIVE!®

THE ISRAELI SOURCE

PRE-CHANUKAH BLOWOUT

WHY WAIT UNTIL CHANUKAH TO BUY YOUR CHANUKAH NEEDS AT CLEARANCE PRICES?

THE CLEARANCE SALE IS ON ! SHOP EARLY AND !

SAVE 33% FROM 20¢
Dreidels, Plastic or Wood Assorted Sizes

SAVE 40% $5.99
Crayola Chanukah Cookie Kit

SAVE 60% $1.99
Musical Light-Up Dreidels Assorted Colours

SAVE 44% $24.99
Pre-Filled Olive Oil "EZ-Lite" Chanukah Lights, 44 Pcs

SAVE 55% 99¢
Chanukah Candles 44 Pcs, Assorted Colours

SAVE 25% FROM $29.99
Electric Menorah Assorted Colours and Designs

SAVE 36% $31.99
KidKraft Wooden Chanukah Set 31 Pieces

SAVE 40% $2.99
Hanukkah-Themed Silly Bands

SAVE $75 $24.99
Silver Plated Oil Menorah 12"

PLUS Get 1 Package of EZ-Lites For Only $17.99!
LIMIT ONE PER MENORAH

SAVE UP TO 40% FROM $10.99
Chanukah Plush Toy Sets 11 or 14-Pieces

SAVE UP TO 40% HUGE SELECTION!
Chanukah Partyware Disposable Plates, Cups Etc.

SAVE 50% $3.49
Chanukah Cookie Cutters Plastic, Set of 5

SAVE UP TO 60% FROM 89¢
Assorted Chanukah Colouring and/or Activity Books

SAVE 50% $9.99
Eight Nights of Chanukah 8 Assorted Toys

SAVE 50% $4.99
Large Plush Dreidel

SAVE 25% $2.49
BONUS - GET A FREE PACK OF CANDLES!
Menorah, Disposable Tin, Gold or Silver Colour

SAVE 68% $7.99
Shalom Sesame DVD Chanukah

SAVE 50% FROM $2.49
Chanukah Giftwrap Assorted Patterns

40% OFF ALL STERLING MENORAHS

60 Doncaster Ave., Thornhill • (905) 482-2025 • 1-877-613-1818
Sunday 10-5 • Monday-Thursday 10-6 • Friday 10-2

Not all Snowbirds Head South

Discover Amica at Thornhill for your Winter Wellness Getaway

Our resort-inspired retirement community is the ideal vacation destination for mature adults who want to beat the winter blahs and still be close to home. Treat yourself to a vacation-like stay at our luxury independent rental retirement community. This Wellness & Vitality™ Residence will rejuvenate you with amazing programs; pamper you with superior services and delight you with 5-star amenities. Stay for a week or two or more!

Select suites starting at $2850.00 a month.
Respite, guest stay or winter vacation stay starting at $89.00 per night.

Amica at Thornhill
A Wellness & Vitality™ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West
Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400

10-1654

• Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
• All Inclusive • Full Service Fine Dining
• Wellness & Vitality™ Programs
• Amica VITALIS™ Assisted Living Suites & Services
www.amica.ca

AMICA

Canadian yeshiva expected to open in 2012

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

After more than two years of groundwork, the Canadian Yeshiva & Rabbinical School – expected to open in 2012 – held a "celebration of progress" last week at Adath Israel Congregation.

Rabbi Roy Tanenbaum, the school's rosh yeshiva and the driving force behind its creation, said that Judaism is "being pulled apart at the seams," referring to a move to the right in the Orthodox world and a move to the left in Conservative Judaism. His school is designed to bring bring the factions back together.

A former rabbi at Toronto's Beth Tzedec Congregation, which left the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism two years ago, Rabbi Tanenbaum has retired from the synagogue. Faculty members for his new endeavour are from both Conservative and Orthodox backgrounds.

Rabbi Daniel Sperber

In March, Rabbi Daniel Sperber, a professor of Talmud at Bar-Ilan University and president of its Jesselson Institute for Advanced Torah Studies, came on board as chancellor of the Canadian Yeshiva. Rabbi Sperber, a 1992 recipient of Israel's prestigious Israel Prize for his scholarship, will continue to be based in Israel.

At the event last week, former British prime minister Tony Blair, speaking by video, expressed his support for the yeshiva and said he looked forward to working with it in the future. Blair now runs a foundation he established to promote understanding about major religions.

Rabbi Roy Tanenbaum

Retired senator Jerry Grafstein, the yeshiva's honorary chair, commended Rabbi Tanenbaum's spirit and persistence, and said that the yeshiva is important not only to the university, but to the academic community in general, as well as to the Jewish community and Canada.

"There isn't language for us," said Rabbi Tanenbaum in an interview. "We're not calling ourselves Orthodox. We're not calling ourselves Conservative. We're building a halachic institution."

Rabbi Sperber, speaking at the event, said he was persuaded to join the yeshiva largely because he has been disturbed by trends in the Israeli, American and European Orthodox rabbinates to move toward positions of stringency that have led to "the disenchantment of great parts of our Jewish community away from centrist Judaism.

"To create a new profile of rabbi who can present Judaism, Torah and Halachah in a welcoming fashion… who is willing to dialogue with anyone and everyone, to accept differences and to appreciate the legitimacy of views other than their own without compromising their own ideology, this I think is an enormous challenge, one which will require very careful navigation.

However, he added, if the goal is achieved, it "will have enormous benefits [including] much wider implications, because it may form a model that can be replicated elsewhere."

As well, it will justify his participation in it, a stand he noted he has been "very severely criticized for."

Rabbi Sperber told The CJN in an interview two days before the event that he believes an institution that is "truly centrist… and truly halachic" will bring people together.

Although Rabbi Sperber would have preferred the term "Orthodox," he feels the initiative is important in bridging a gap between the streams of Judaism, and should be encouraged, he said in the interview.

It's very important to him that the new yeshiva been seen as a halachic institution, he added. "Certainly the curriculum, the teaching of basic subjects, the final examinations of the students, and their own religious practices would have to be normative halachic, traditional halachic."

He also said that to create Canadian rabbis here, instead of having to "import" them, is an important move.

In addition to a four-year rabbinic smichah program, the school is applying for degree-granting status for programs including pastoral counselling.

Rabbi Tanenbaum said that he was approached by the Toronto School of Theology – a federation of seven Christian theological schools – because of his interfaith work. He was asked to consider having the yeshivah become the eighth institution at the University of Toronto's St. Michael's College.

Being housed among Christian seminaries has many positive potential implications for greater understanding between Christians and Jews, said Rabbi Sperber, who has also been involved in interfaith work for many years.

Other key features of the yeshivah will include a residence hall in a yet-to-be-determined location – to serve as a halachic living environment, a program for spouses, and scholarships and living stipends – ideally – for all students.

"We're working on the funding," said Randall Starr, chair of the yeshiva's board of governors. Operating costs for the first four years are expected to be in the order of $7 million.

TRUCKLOAD EVENT

Don't Miss Out!

Ends Sun. Nov 28th

While Quantities Last.

PaceMaster®

SILVER SELECT TREADMILL

- 7 pre-programmed workouts with adjustable intensities and times
- 4 heart rate programs
- Over five hundred program variations for lots of variety in your workouts

SAVE $400

LIMITED QUANTITIES

OUR PRICE $1498

Reg. Price $1898

Guaranteed Lowest Prices in North America.

11 locations in Ontario.
Visit fitnessdepot.ca for nearest location.

fitness DEPOT
your EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES®

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont M3B 3K4

Abbas negotiations a game of charades

It is all so sadly predictable. The president of the Palestinian Authority (PA), Mahmoud Abbas, waves his hands in anger condemning the Israelis, wrings his hands in victimhood importuning the Americans, and clenches his fists in indignation impressing the Palestinian "street."

"If there is no complete halt to settlements in all of the Palestinian territories, including Jerusalem, we will not accept [a return to the peace talks with Israel]," Abbas said. He was speaking to reporters after a meeting last Sunday in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

The demand for a construction freeze as a precondition for negotiating peace with Israel, we have often pointed out in this space, is an utterly phony, expedient one for Abbas. The presence of Jews in the West Bank and in a sovereign state of Palestine should be part of the negotiations not a necessary condition precedent. But the world does not hold the Palestinian leader to a standard of governmental honesty or diplomatic integrity. And his people have not the power to do so.

Now he has added a new disingenuous wrinkle to his prevaricating protests.

The government of Israel Sunday approved a five-year plan to renovate the area near the Western Wall and the adjacent Jewish quarter in the Old City of Jerusalem. The project is one of maintenance work only. It does not apply to areas that house shrines holy to both Jews and Muslims. "The aim of the plan is to improve access for millions of visitors to the site and also to the archeological sites, and to upgrade the physical infrastructure and the transport infrastructure in the area," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office said in a statement.

The PA immediately condemned the announced renovation plan. Spokesman Ghassan Khatib said it was bad for the peace process. "Any Israeli activities in the occupied part of Jerusalem are illegal," Khatib said. "It's not healthy as far as the peace process is concerned because peace would require the end of the occupation of east Jerusalem."

If Khatib or his superior, Abbas, truly cared about a peace process, let alone a healthy one, they would sit across a table with Israelis and actually try to negotiate peace, in all its difficult, challenging, emotional, history-changing details. But they prefer not to. Rather than extend their hands to the other side, they prefer to wave, wring and clench them in perpetual self-glorifying warriorhood and self-pitying victimhood. They engage in nothing but a sorry charade. And yet, far sadder and more ominous for any prospects of peace, Khatib and Abbas cling to an ignorant if not also bigoted and supremacist notion of history that denies any Jewish entitlement to the Western Wall and the Old City of Jerusalem.

25 years ago in The CJN

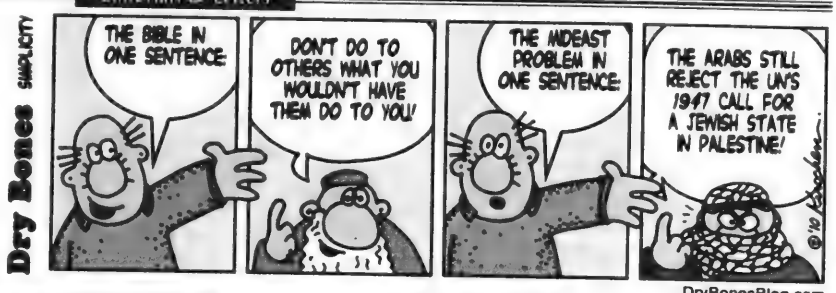
U.S. Justice Department officials said accused Nazi war criminal John Demjanjuk would be extradited to Israel to stand trial on charges of murdering thousands of Jews at the Treblinka death camp in Poland. The retired Cleveland-area autoworker was accused of being the guard "Ivan the Terrible" and serving at Treblinka in 1942-43, but he said he was a German POW. His eventual guilty verdict was overturned on appeal by Israel's Supreme Court.



Dry Bones SIMPLICITY
THE BIBLE IN ONE SENTENCE:
DON'T DO TO OTHERS WHAT YOU WOULDN'T HAVE THEM DO TO YOU!
THE MIDEAST PROBLEM IN ONE SENTENCE:
THE ARABS STILL REJECT THE UN'S 1947 CALL FOR A JEWISH STATE IN PALESTINE!
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Teleni, Nelson Wiseman.

Security Council seat not a loss

I am writing in response to Liberal party leader Michael Ignatieff's Nov. 11 letter to the editor ("Ignatieff on Mideast policy"), in which he suggests that Canada's loss of a seat in the Security Council of the United Nations represents a huge loss for Canada within the international community. I say quite the contrary. This particular body within the UN and, in fact, all bodies within the organization have become increasingly corrupt over the years, and basically drive an agenda that serves their own interests and not those of their citizens. Their main agenda, of course, is to vilify Israel. How proud I am that Canada does not hold a seat on this council because of its upholding of principles, truth and justice. I am so proud of Prime Minister Stephen Harper and grateful that he is at the helm of our country. In all of my years I have never seen such unparallelled levels of antisemitism. And yet our leader will not cave in or bow to the pressures of political correctness. Being a politician true to his game, Ignatieff would rather court public opinion than lead in the fight of good over evil and justice over injustice.

E. Shapero
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Saudi Arabia on UN women's committee

The latest hypocrisy of the United Nations is the creation of a subcommittee called UN Women, which would have as one of its board members Saudi Arabia, and almost included Iran. The stated purpose of UN Women is dedicated to gender equality around the world. It is well-known that in Saudi Arabia, women need a male guardian's permission to travel and to have surgery and must be covered from head to toe in public. The most laughable restriction is that women are not permitted to drive an automobile. Saudi Arabia can continue to discriminate against women on the basis that Islamic (sharia) law prevails if there is a conflict with the ratified International Bill of Rights for Women. So in effect, even though it's a member of the board, Saudi Arabia is not bound where it considers that religious law should supersede the purpose of the committee. It would be interesting for someone to cite the section of the Qur'an that, according to Islamic law, prohibits women from driving a car. And we continue to fund this UN Agency?

Bert Raphael
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Applauds prime minister

Liberal party leader Michael Ignatieff sadly feels that Canada lost out on the Security Council seat because of its Middle East policies ("Ignatieff on Mideast policy," letters, Nov. 11). May I remind him that we Canadians have our strong values and principles. He should appreciate what Prime Minister Stephen Harper said so eloquently recently at the Ottawa conference on combating antisemitism: "It is a responsibility of us all" to stand up to the "three D's" – demonization, double standards and delegitimization." He also said: there are "a lot more votes in being anti-Israel than in taking a stand … Canada will take that stand, whatever the cost" ("PM pledges government's support for Israel," Nov. 11). May our prime minister grow from strength to strength, Amen.

The United Nations, as it stands today, has a major bloc of Arab/Muslim countries and their allies, whose only agenda is Israel-bashing. Does Ignatieff wish that we bend backwards and appease these oppressive regimes to win a seat on the UN Security Council?

Abraham Samson
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

LET THEM GO…

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1615

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

Brain research partners

Kudos to Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty for facilitating a joint Israeli-Ontario institute on brain research ("Ontario partners with Israel for brain research," Nov. 18). Not only will the institute benefit Ontario and Israel, it will stand as a reminder that antisemitism is not acceptable to Canadians. What better way to meet antisemitic hate on campus than to forge ever closer academic ties between Israel and Canada?

James Morton
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Holocaust exhibit in Lithuania

Regarding Rachel Kostanian, the curator of the Green House Holocaust Exhibit, which is part of the Vilna Gaon Jewish State Museum in Vilnius, Lithuania, she is everything your article says and more ("Nazi crimes have been downgraded in Lithuania," Perspectives, Oct. 7). I am well acquainted with Rachel. In fact, I went to the official re-opening of the Green House on Oct. 19. The Green House re-opened after extensive work to renovate the premises and display. This has been a controversial process that has caused Rachel some concern.

S.J. Butt
British Ambassador
Vilnius, Lithuania

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address.
cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Is Netanyahu trying to follow Ben-Gurion's footsteps?

By ALUF BENN

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

On Nov. 14, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu paid his annual visit to Sde Boker to participate in the official memorial ceremony for David Ben-Gurion. Prime ministers take advantage of this occasion to pick and choose from the philosophy of the country's founding father and imagine themselves as his successors and disciples. Here, seven years ago, Ehud Olmert, then the deputy prime minister, announced the plan for the withdrawal from Gaza. Prime minister Ariel Sharon was not at the ceremony.

Netanyahu described Ben-Gurion as a unique leader who declared the founding of the state even though he knew that war awaited, and despite pressure from friends and rivals. "He knew that everything rested on his shoulders, that he stood alone, by himself in the face of the historic moment," the prime minister waxed poetic.

The prime minister devoted the main part of his speech to the tension between the leader's principles and "the world's" demands. Ben-Gurion knew nations cannot exist without alliances, but "in the matter of Jerusalem, Ben-Gurion stood up against the world with impressive courage," he said.

Now Netanyahu is sitting in Ben-Gurion's chair, and he feels himself to be in a similar situation. "The world," led by U.S. President Barack Obama, is demanding he deny his principles, stop the settlements and hand the West Bank over to a Palestinian state. His political partners Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, Deputy Prime Minister Silvan Shalom, Vice-Prime Minister Moshe Ya'alon and Minister without Portfolio Benny Begin are insisting he refuse the American demands.

And Netanyahu is torn. The deeper he delves into the philosophy of the country's founder, the harder it is for him to face the historic moment when he must decide which way to go: to say "yes" to Obama and risk losing his coalition and facing an acute rift inside Israel, or to refuse the Americans, close ranks with Lieberman, Ya'alon and Begin and embark on a diplomatic battle against the Obama administration. As is his wont, Netanyahu is trying to have it both ways, please both sides and pass the buck.

"There is a huge and powerful temptation to wait for a more propitious time, to form a firmer majority, to find partners in responsibility. But Ben-Gurion knew how to identify the elusive historic moment of now or never," said Netanyahu at Sde Boker. Will Netanyahu know too?

After his seven-hour meeting with U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in New York earlier this month, the sides issued a joint statement about the talks "focused on creating the conditions for the resumption of direct negotiations aimed at producing a two-state solution." Ostensibly, Netanyahu and Clinton are walking hand in hand toward a better future and a new Middle East. Inside the room, however, Netanyahu came up against a dictate from the American administration: freeze the settlements for 90 days and use that time to determine the future border between Israel and Palestine.

Yitzhak Rabin once related that James Baker, the elder president George Bush's strong-arm secretary of state, used to attend meetings with Israel's leaders with an open notebook in his lap. It apparently contained his talking points. At some stage, Baker would shut the notebook, look his interlocutor straight in the eye, "and then you knew he was speaking as the U.S. secretary of state." At that moment, the Israeli leader would understand there was no point in debating and thenceforth he had to obey Baker – or find himself in conflict with America the great.

Clinton "shut the notebook" on Netanyahu in order to transmit a message: the Republican victory in the Congressional elections has not taken Obama's peace efforts off the agenda.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu speaking at the annual memorial service for Israel's first prime minister David Ben-Gurion.

Netanyahu was given an offer that can't be refused: freeze the settlements and negotiate on the borders now, in return for fighter planes and diplomatic guarantees in the future.

The offer has to be read in its negative: the guarantees Netanyahu is asking of the Americans reveal his anxieties. Like a husband who asks "You do love me, don't you?" or a landlord who has the tenants sign 1,001 guarantees, Netanyahu isn't certain of Obama's support. He wants authorization to build in east Jerusalem, he wants permission to resume construction in the settlements at the end of the moratorium (in closed conversations he promises not to be excessive), he wants America to veto any initiative in the UN Security Council to recognize a Palestinian state and, under pressure from his partners in the government, he is demanding that the negotiations focus not only on borders but rather cover all the core issues.

And here is the commentary: Netanyahu understands that at the end of the new moratorium, there will be a demand for another moratorium, as happened last time. He fears Obama will let the Palestinians bring up their cause at the UN and will not veto it. And he is scared of discussing borders, which will mean opening a map and committing to a concrete position and not just vague slogans.

If the agenda is expanded, Netanyahu will be able to bring narrative demands like "recognition of Israel as the state of the Jewish People" and at any moment cause the negotiations to blow up. However, if they talk only in numbers and percentages, dunams and boundaries, the coalition will fall apart and Netanyahu will be depicted as someone who made concessions, gave the Land of Israel to the enemy and got nothing in return. Then he will have to look for his voters in Lieberman's column.

Netanyahu is demanding a written commitment from Obama, in an expression of the mistrust between them and perhaps also in order to show achievements at home – like the letter then-prime minister Ariel Sharon got from former U.S. president George W. Bush in return for evacuating Gush Katif in Gaza. But this will be a consolation prize. If the prime minister of Israel does not trust the president of the United States to impose a veto on an essential issue such as a forced solution and recognition of Palestine's independence within the 1967 borders, and wants a written note in advance, then the alliance between the two countries is in deep trouble.

But maybe not. Until now Netanyahu has refused to initiate moves and shown he prefers to act only under American pressure. Perhaps this makes it easier for him to distance himself from his past positions, and maybe it's convenient for him that Obama tells him what to do.

Netanyahu knows that in direct negotiations vis-a-vis Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas, there will never be any agreement on the borders. Perhaps he is expecting an American map that will determine where Palestine will arise and free him from the dilemma of how far to withdraw. After all, that's what his guide and teacher David Ben-Gurion did when American presidents ordered him to leave Sinai in 1949 and 1956.

Abbas eyes UN appeal for independent state as peace talks stall

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM – Palestinian leaders will meet in the coming days to form a back-up plan in case talks with Israel fall through, a West Bank official said Sunday.

Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas will consult with leaders of his Fatah faction over the contingency program, which could involve bypassing the U.S.-sponsored peace process to seek statehood through the United Nations, the Palestinian Liberation Organization official said.

There has been widespread speculation that Abbas is considering an appeal to the UN for recognition of an independent Palestine ever since direct talks collapsed when Israel refused to renew a 10-month settlement building freeze after it expired on Sept. 26.

Sunday's comments could now be a sign that the Palestinian leadership sees the UN track as an increasingly realistic option, as U.S. attempts to break the deadlock falter.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will, in the coming days, continue to cajole his cabinet colleagues toward accepting American incentives, including 20 advanced F-35 fighter planes, in return for a new 90-day freeze.

But even if he overcomes considerable resistance from within his own Likud party, as well as right-wing coalition partners Yisrael Beiteinu and Shas, it could not be enough to persuade Abbas to rejoin negotiations.

Israel has so far balked at the Palestinian and U.S. line that a new freeze, unlike the last one, must include east Jerusalem, which Israel annexed in 1980 but Palestinians claim as their future capital.

Abbas has vowed not to return to the table unless settlement building is halted on all territory beyond the Green Line – Israel's pre-1967 border and the likely basis for a Palestinian appeal to the UN.

"If there is no complete halt to settlements in all of the Palestinian territories including Jerusalem, we will not accept [a return to talks]," Abbas said in Cairo on Sunday.

Opinions

Fighting clergy burnout

In August, the New York Times published a feature on clergy burnout. It cited multiple studies, each more fascinating than the next.

The Presbyterian Church found that since the 1970s, the number of ministers leaving their jobs had quadrupled. The Evangelical Lutheran Church found that 13 per cent of their ministers were taking antidepressants. My favourite was a seven-year study of 1,726 Methodist ministers in North Carolina. Compared with congregants, the ministers reported significantly higher rates of diabetes, high blood pressure and asthma.

Rabbi Chaim Steinmetz in Montreal

This study fascinated me. First of all, who knew there were 1,726 Methodist ministers in North Carolina? And remarkably, it took the learned professors at Duke University a full seven years to learn something that every Jewish mother knows: being a rabbi is "not a job for a Jewish boy!"

Clergy burnout is understandable. Community work, for both volunteers and professionals, is the hardest work in the world. Indeed Rashi famously quips that if you place the burden of communal leadership on someone's shoulders, "they will disintegrate on their own."

And rabbis are idealists who expect a lot of the world. We're frequently disappointed.

We get disappointed by our fellow leaders: today, there are entire blogs devoted to collecting news articles about the failings of rabbis. We get disappointed by our community: teaching Judaism in North America feels like a Sisyphean task, like pushing a boulder up a hill with the rock constantly rolling down again. And we get disappointed by life's injustices.

Some people have remarked to me that it must be "easier" now for me to deal with difficult funerals, considering that I now have 20 years of experience. Actually, the opposite is true. If you go to one tragic funeral, you imagine it's a unique event that happens once in a lifetime. But if you go to 10 tragic funerals, you have a terrible sinking feeling, because you know there will be an 11th one, too.

Burnout is a serious problem. In life, there's much to be disappointed about, including ourselves.

I've found in my own career that the best way to fight burnout is to collect things. I collect authentic thank-you notes. I collect smiles from simchahs. I collect remarkable stories.

These collections remind me that all disappointments in life are outweighed by a hero's generosity and a bride's smile. These collections remind me of why I became a rabbi, and that whatever disappointments may come today, tomorrow may bring true inspiration.

Pushing back for its own sake

In late October, amid much self-promotional hype, leaders of the Canadian BDS movement met in Montreal to celebrate their campaign of boycotts, divestment and sanctions against Israel.

By all reports, the BDS movement once again proved to be more virtual than real, puffing itself up on the Internet while failing to stir much excitement. The movement's broad call to mobilize "civil society" was met with awkward silence. Apparently, barely 100 people attended the conference's final session. It's clear that this fall will be remembered for the glowing depictions of Israel as a profitable, thriving "startup nation," in La Presse and other French media outlets rather than for the glowering denunciations of Israel by angry misanthropes.

Gil Troy in Montreal

With the BDS momentum proving to be more bark than bite, much of the organized Jewish community ignored the conference. Believing that you should never disturb your enemy if he or she is in the process of self-destructing, there were no major counter-demonstrations, few clarion calls to mobilize. The strategy seemed to be that shining a spotlight on the BDS movement's flaws would give the boycotters attention they don't deserve.

While I understand that logic, the strategy ignored the great distress that the simple fact of the conference convening in Montreal caused among many pro-Israel Montrealers. Even if the conference failed to live up to its own hype, we in the pro-Israel community needed to push back for our own sake. In fact, the conference, even if minor, provided an opportunity for a classic ju jitsu move: taking an opponent's energy and redirecting it for your own purpose.

Just before the conference, dismayed by the Jewish communal silence, I met with one student who was willing to stand up for Israel publicly and proudly. Following the successful "buycott" strategy in Toronto, when BDS calls backfired and a call to boycott Israeli wine led to a run on Israeli wine, and calls to boycott a Dead Sea Scroll exhibit and the Toronto film festival's celebration of Tel Aviv's centennial led to waves of sold-out shows, a few students sent out a call to buy Israeli products that weekend. I forwarded the call around, and echoed it in a Montreal Gazette opinion piece that ran during the conference, while blasting the boycott movement for endangering the peace process.

We didn't have the time or resources to trigger a mass movement. That was never our intention. But the feedback we received was extraordinary. As people e-mailed to detail their purchases of Elite chocolate here or 10 Israeli bottles of wine there, they also thanked us. Most moving were the thanks – from Jews and non-Jews – that celebrated the opportunity to do something personal, positive, and constructive for Israel. "What a wonderful idea," one woman wrote. "Finally a logical way to respond to all the madness around us."

Group responsibility and individual empowerment are essential to effective grassroots action. It's the logic of the firing squad put to good use. Firing squads demand full participation from all assigned, while one of the shooters unknowingly fires blanks. This allows everyone to take responsibility as a group while indulging the calming and exculpating hope that their gun was the one firing blanks.

In the Torah, every Jewish citizen took responsibility for the community by paying a half-shekel. Today, the federation campaign tries to enlist as many participants as possible, even if many make token donations and most funds are raised from big givers – often in one big splashy event.

If we understand the importance of spreading communal responsibility and maximizing individual feelings of involvement when it comes to fundraising, shouldn't we apply that same principle to supporting Israel? I'm proud of what we did to push back against the BDSers, yet I feel we missed an opportunity. The weekend could have been a chance for even more Montrealers to embrace the plucky democracy in the Middle East by acting out the Zionist and Jewish imperative to act constructively – not just believe abstractly, or even hide delightedly when your adversaries stumble.

The shul of no shopping

"This is the season to go shopping, fah-la-la-la-la…" And believe me, Chanukah is no better. After a quiet Chanukah in Israel last year with almost no hype and no presents (only little kids in Israel get Chanukah gifts, and then only small tchatchkes), I'm in culture shock over the starts-in-November shopaganza that conflates Chanukah and Christmas into one big mall-athon.

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein in Toronto

A few years ago, I stumbled upon Reverend Billy of The Church of Life After Shopping (it used to be called The Church of Stop Shopping.) Reverend Billy is actually actor Bill Talen, an activist street performer based in New York City. In "mockumentary" style, he and his choir lead revival-type experiences, on sidewalks and in malls and especially in chain stores, encouraging consumers to "stop shopping" and to abandon their near-addiction to the products of large corporations and mass media, putting the notions of economic justice and environmental protection ahead of blind buying.

He takes on the giants: Starbucks, Wal-Mart, Disney. On Dec. 25, 2005, Reverend Billy performed at Disneyland. He led the choir down "Main Street, U.S.A." singing anti-shopping songs. He was promptly arrested for disturbing the peace.

When you watch footage of people going up and down huge escalators in megamalls, we really look like lemmings or scurrying rodents. Up and down, into this store and that, coming out laden with packages, into the next store, out of the next store. You can imagine that the Church of Life After Shopping is most busy in the weeks leading up to Christmas and Chanukah. And most reviled by holiday shoppers who don't want to stop. They yell at him for ruining the "fun" of the season.

I'm discomforted, not over the idea of giving gifts on Chanukah, but over our lack of awareness of the ramifications of those gifts. We throw away tons of boxes and wrapping paper. The broken toys with one piece missing end up in garage sales, and eventually landfills. Cheap plastic trinkets compete with expensive iPads, all made in China, where some kid may be working long hours in oppressive conditions to make our baubles.

We buy logos and brand names, and an idea that somehow this very thing we are purchasing is the one thing we need to make us happy. What about a box of homemade cookies? It's easier to buy a pre-packaged ribboned assortment from the mall, adorned with a picture of an old-fashioned bubbie on the box, as if anyone's bubbie actually made those cookies. (Hint: a factory machine did.)

What about a hand-written note of appreciation? We'd rather go to a chain store that isn't unionized and buy tinsel-flecked cards on non-recycled paper. How about a hand-painted scarf from a local artist? It's cheaper to buy a printed one from some French designer with a factory in India. What about a coupon for a night of babysitting? Better to buy a DVD set of the latest Hollywood flick to show the nieces and nephews.

Where's the spirit of Chanukah? Chanukah contains within it a strong message of conservation, not consumerism. Planned obsolescence would have killed the little jar of oil. It was meant to last for longer than it should have. The rabbis wonder exactly how it lasted: did it get divided into smaller units or did it just burn slower? Either way, the miracle was that what we had was enough. The "true" message of Chanukah is that a little bit of something can last for a long, long time.

I wish we had a Jewish Reverend Billy to lead the shul of no-shopping, before we start believing that shopping is the spirit of our "season" too. Before consumerism becomes the religion of the 21st century.

The Kirshner File

German popular opinion and the Holocaust

British historian Ian Kershaw, a professor of modern history at the University of Sheffield, has spent much of his career studying the Nazi movement in Germany. His two-volume biography of Adolf Hitler, a magisterial work, has burnished his reputation as a penetrating analyst of Nazism and the Third Reich.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Kershaw's latest book, Hitler, the Germans and the Final Solution (Yale University Press), will probably be regarded as the culmination of his three-decade quest to shed light on one of the darkest periods in European history.

In this illuminating volume, consisting of 14 essays, Kershaw focuses on Hitler and the Holocaust and German popular opinion vis-a-vis Jews.

Kershaw argues that Hitler's poisonous world view about the primacy of racial struggle and his warped conceptions about Jews were formed by the mid-1920s, when the first volume of his hateful and turgid manifesto, Mein Kampf, was published.

Hitler was of the view that Judaism and Marxism were inextricably linked. As he put it, "The Jew is and remains the world enemy, and his weapon, Marxism, is a plague afflicting mankind." As Kershaw notes, Hitler believed that Jews constituted a race, not a religion, and that they were "a racial tuberculosis among nations." The aim of a German "government of national strength" would be the "removal of the Jews altogether." But at one transitory point, Hitler suggested that if Germans Jews "behaved well," they might be permitted to stay in Germany.

This idea, of course, was short-lived, and Hitler continued to harp on two major themes as he addressed audiences around the country: The Jews were responsible for the "stab in the back" that forced Germany to surrender in 1918 and the revolutionary fervour that convulsed the nation after its capitulation.

Kershaw says that Hitler was a shrewd enough politician to know when to tone down his violent antisemitism. As he campaigned for office, he focused less on Jews and more on the deteriorating economy and political instability. "When necessary, he could, and did, keep [Nazi] party radicals in check," Kershaw writes. "At other times, it was useful to unleash their pent-up violence on the Jews."

But even when, for tactical reasons, he remained publicly detached from the persecution of Germany's Jewish population, he was the guiding hand behind its implementation.

By January 1939, his antisemitism had gelled into a malignant force. Hitler told the Czech foreign minister that "the Jews will be destroyed" and delivered a prescient speech in the Reichstag in which he warned, "In the course of my life I have often been a prophet, and have usually been ridiculed for it… Today I will once more be a prophet: if the international Jewish financiers in and outside Europe should succeed in plunging the nations once more into a world war, then the result will… be the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe."

Taking issues with historians who claim that Hitler hewed to a grand design in plotting the Holocaust, Kershaw subscribes to the belief that he issued no comprehensive general extermination order.

Rather, Nazi functionaries in German-occupied territory took the initiative in murdering Jews in their respective regions, and their actions met with approval from superiors.

The Wannsee conference, which took place in a posh Berlin suburb in January 1942, formally sanctioned the systematic attempt to exterminate European Jews.

On the ground, the murder of Jews actually began about a month earlier in Chelmno, Poland, when Jews were gassed in mobile vans. Kershaw adds that the actual decision to physically destroy Jews was taken in September or October of 1941.

Just months later, Hans Frank, the governor-general of Poland, spoke openly of the need to "exterminate the Jews wherever we find them." Heinrich Himmler, the SS chieftain who was placed in charge of the extermination process, claimed he was acting on Hitler's authority.

Himmler's comment is telling. Kershaw makes it crystal clear that, absent Hitler, the Holocaust may have been still-born. As he writes, "Without Hitler as head of the German state, and without his fanaticism, it seems hardly conceivable that the Final Solution would have occurred. This thought itself is sufficient to posit a fundamental link between Hitler and genocide."

Turing to a related topic, Kershaw admits he was surprised to learn that the persecution of Jews had an insignificant impact on the daily life of most Germans.

The majority of Germans were simply indifferent, he observes. So while the road to Auschwitz was built by hatred, it was paved with indifference. On a scale of one to 10, the so-called Jewish question was relatively unimportant in the minds of Germans, who were preoccupied with more pressing matters.

Quoting the historian David Bankier, Kershaw says that Germans were morally insensitive to the fate of Jews. And while Germans generally did not share the same enthusiasm for antisemitism as the leadership, they implicitly supported Nazi policy, given their deep-seated anti-Jewish attitudes and feelings.

Kershaw writes: "Most Germans were neither dyed-in-the-wool Nazis nor convinced anti-fascists. Partial rejection of Nazism existed in large parts of the population alongside partial approval of the Nazi regime."

Elaborating on this theme, he says that Germans usually reacted negatively to the persecution of Jews when they were personally confronted with the evidence of Nazi brutality, or when their economic interests were directly at stake.

A case in point was Kristallnacht in November 1938, when Germans here and there displayed a frisson of public sympathy for Jews. "There were few occasions, if any, in the Third Reich which produced such a widespread wave of revulsion – much on moral grounds – as the Kristallnacht pogrom," says Kershaw.

In most cases, however, Germans were perturbed by the material destruction and the tasteless hooliganism of the attacks.

Otherwise, Germans seemed unconcerned by the steady drumbeat of state antisemitism. "Increasingly, Jews were depersonalized, forced out of social and economic contact with non-Jews," he observes. "The consequence for the shaping of opinion was less the creation of dynamic hatred than of lethal indifference towards the fate of the Jewish population. The further Jews were removed from the 'real world' of everyday life, the more apparent was the indifference of the non-Jewish population."

Germans greet Adolf Hitler rapturously

The notion that ordinary Germans were unaware of the Holocaust has been disposed of by Walter Laqueur in his book The Terrible Secret. Nevertheless, it is impossible to ascertain how many people knew about the mass killings and what degree of knowledge they possessed.

"But what can be established beyond question is that widespread rumours were in circulation about the fate of the Jews, and that the information… was often explicit enough to provide an unmistakable indication that Jews were being killed in great numbers in the east," writes Kershaw in a sweeping generalization that seems perfectly reasonable. "No less [a person] than Hitler himself referred to public rumours about the extermination of the Jews in one of his Table Talk monologues in October 1941. And a year later, Martin Bormann [a top-level Nazi] felt it necessary to counter rumours about 'very sharp measures' taken against Jews."

In short, many, many Germans knew that genocide was being committed in their name, and that German civilization was being besmirched by it.

I feel fortunate to follow in my father's footsteps

My father grew up in a world of uncertainty and volatility. He came to Canada, worked hard to build a successful business and a stable life for his family. Part of that stability is the Romspen Mortgage Fund which has delivered a reliable fixed income to both of us each and every month. It's important that my father has an investment he trusts. Knowing that he doesn't have to worry is very comforting to me.

Leon Katz (with father Eugene)

You've heard of the Romspen Mortgage Investment Fund. Isn't it time you found out more? Call us to receive an information package or visit www.romspen.com.

ROMSPEN mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

50th Anniversary

camp rockwood

April 9, 2011

www.camprockwood.com

The Speakers Action Group and the Canadian Jewish Civil Rights Association invite you to hear

TAREK FATAH

Canada's most important Muslim intellectual, discuss his new book,

THE JEW IS NOT MY ENEMY

.... Unveiling The Myths That Fuel Muslim Antisemitism

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 8TH, 12 PM

Tarek Fatah, liberal Muslim and critically acclaimed author and commentator, courageously exposes the history of centuries of Muslim animosity towards Jews.

An outspoken critic of fundamentalism and radical Islam, Fatah explores the roots and political history that inflame antisemitism in the Muslim world today.

Bennett Jones LLP
One First Canadian Place
Suite 3400
100 King Street West

Lunch, $25 Reservation Required Space is Limited
Dietary Laws Observed Doors Open at 11:45 am

To Reserve: www.speakersaction.com

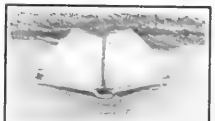
Enquiries: projectmanager@speakersaction.com
Phone: 416 966 0722

Jewish Life

Lessons from the shamash

By RABBI LORI COHEN

Chanukah, or Chag Ha'urim, the Festival of Lights, is a most beloved holiday. During the long, dark evenings, we want to flood our homes with light as we feast on latkes, and sufganiyot. It's a holiday, although minor in the Jewish calendar, that's widely observed. It's also become increasingly common to bring our chanukiyot into public squares, roadways and mall parking lots. But is this really a modern practice?



Rabbinic Reflections

The Talmud says we should put our chanukiyah in a place that's visible from outside the house in order to proclaim the miracle to all who pass by. The greater community was to be brought within "our light," to witness our celebrations. Of course, the rabbis said that during a time of danger, we should keep our lights inside our homes and not visible to others.

Here in Canada, we're free to display our decorations andlights. We're definitely fulfilling the rabbinic instruction to advertise our story. With our 20-foot-high chanukiyot and our competition for gift-giving, we're very visible to the wider community. It seems somewhat ironic that the historical significance of Chanukah was about fighting assimilation, yet today we see our minor festival competing with another group's major festival on the public stage.

But perhaps we've taken this mitzvah a little too far. We've forgotten the significance of the shamash, the extra candle that's necessary because Chanukah lights can't be used to kindle other lights.

A story is told of a young man who became an apprentice to a blacksmith. He learned all the skills – how to hold tongs, lift a hammer, smite an anvil and blow the fire with the bellows. After his apprenticeship, he found work as a royal blacksmith. But his delight turned to despair when he realized he had failed to learn how to kindle a spark. All the other skills were useless if he didn't know how to light the fire.

Each of the eight lights of Chanukah is important, but without the shamash, we can't kindle other lights. The spark is what makes everything else possible.

So what can we learn from the shamash?

First, we must know how to kindle the spark within us. We must have knowledge of, and passion for, Judaism. The letters of Chanukah can also spell "chinuch" – education. It's our responsibility to make sure we have the necessary skills to live Jewish lives. Each of us may define that in a different way. For some, it's about ritual, for others prayer. Some feel the power of our history, while others do tikkun olam. But without the spark, the passion, we can't truly live it.

Second, the shamash teaches us that we must sanctify ordinary things. We're not just Jewish when we go to shul, attend a simchah or make Shabbat. We must be Jewish in how we interact with people – at the grocery store or at work. Being Jewish is 24/7.

Third, the shamash shows us that it's not our job to simply stand alone and burn. We're also responsible for helping others truly shine. Our light must extend beyond ourselves. It's our responsibility to reach out to meet others' needs. We're our brothers and sisters keepers!

Perhaps this is how we should publicize the miracle – not with decorations, but with our characters. It's not how high our chanukiyah is placed, but how high we raise others. The shamash, which may seem insignificant, has so much to teach us. May each of us this year learn to be a shamash.

Rabbi Lori Cohen is spiritual leader of Temple Shalom in Waterloo, Ont.

We're not alone in the dark

In rabbinic literature, Chanukah not only speaks of the events of the Maccabees, but also speaks of the winter solstice, the time of year when darkness appears to be overtaking light. The days are shorter, and the symbolism of the dark night, with its connection to darkness of learning and spirit, can easily overtake us.

Darkness also has an aspect of hidden elements, in that it's easy to hide in the dark. When we speak of divulging new meanings, we speak of "bringing things to light."

Midrashic Moments
By Rachael Turkienicz

This year, there's an interesting intersection between what we are reading in Torah and the holiday of Chanukah.

The Torah portions tell us the story of Joseph. The young boy who must hide his pain of exclusion within his family ends up as an Egyptian ruler hiding his true Jewish identity. It's difficult to read the portions in which Joseph needs to turn away from his brothers who reappear at his doorstep begging for food. He must turn away, because he's overcome by emotions and a yearning to reveal who he is, but at the same time not surrender the safety of hiding his true self. He retreats to darkness and continues pretending to be someone other than his true self for as long as he can, but in the end his identity is revealed.

In the events of Chanukah, we're also made aware of an element within the Jewish nation that chooses to Hellenize themselves and likewise hide their true selves. Even the heroes of the story, Judah the Maccabee and his brothers, are called by their Greek names, already speaking of a blend of identities.

Interestingly, the only other holiday the rabbis connect with Chanukah, and also enacted as a Jewish holiday, is Purim. Clearly the aspect of hidden identity is key to the Purim tale, too, as Esther, the hero, hides her identity for most of the story.

In each case, the realization of being true to an inner identity and allowing it to speak outwardly is what prompts change. Joseph saves his family and impacts Jewish history forever once he reveals who he really is. The Maccabees are able to unite under one leader and also impact Jewish history forever once the question of identity is confronted, and Esther saves the entire nation once she's able to state her true identity.

Within all of us, there are the hidden parts that lie in deep, dark places within ourselves. At times, those hidden thoughts can lead us to lonely places. When the days get shorter and the darkness extends around us, it can be easy to give power to the hidden elements. How wonderful to have Chanukah peer into that darkness and bring eight little moments of light and collective identity.

The miracle of Chanukah is not just the victory of the Maccabees, nor is it only the oil jug that lasted eight days. The miracle also includes communities and families coming together at a time when we want to be home and cocoon ourselves in the darkness. Those are the moments we must gather together and bring light. Really, we're not creating a moment of sharing, but understanding that as deep and dark as our inner heart might be, it never stands unsupported.

In the midrash, this is stated beautifully, when it's said that even before we finish shaping a thought in our heart, the Holy One already understands it.

Rachael Turkienicz is the director of rachaelscentre.org.

Jewish Life

Italians and Jews

Past Forward
By Alex Gropper

I got involved recently with a project that highlights the close relationship between Italians and Jews, thanks to the efforts of Gianni Bardini, the consul general of Italy in Toronto.

For me, it was a wonderful opportunity to promote friendship and understanding between ourselves and our Mediterranean neighbours. The project got started when some prominent Italian-Canadian builders told the consul general that it was Jews who gave them their first opportunities in business in Canada, for which they were very grateful.

Yet this relationship should come as no surprise since Italians and Jews have been intertwined for thousands of years. The Maccabees were the first to send a delegation to Rome before the Common Era. There is evidence as well to suggest that there was already a colony of Jews in Rome by that time.

Jews were among the earliest supporters of Julius Caesar. By the first century CE, Rome's Jewish population had grown tremendously, augmented by the huge influx of Jewish slaves who had been captured in the first Jewish Revolt against Rome, which culminated in the sack of Jerusalem in 70 CE and the capture of Masada three years later.

The victory parade of the Emperor Titus commemorating the capture of Jerusalem, with the menorah from the Temple as part of its spoils, was vividly portrayed in his Arch, which still stands at the entrance to the Roman Forum. It is even said that Titus' mistress was Bernice, the granddaughter of Herod the Great.

Many of the Jewish slaves who came into Rome were put to work building the Coliseum. Ironically, some 2,000 years later, Italians who had immigrated to Canada went to work for Jewish builders.

It has even been estimated that at the height of the Roman Empire, in the first and second centuries of the Common Era, as much as 10 per cent of the total population might have been Jewish either by birth or conversion.

Some of the earliest and most imposing synagogues were to be found scattered throughout the Empire in places such as Ostia Antica, the harbour of Rome, and Sardis, one of the major cities located in the eastern part of the Roman Empire in what is now southwestern Turkey.

The toleration that the Roman Empire had shown to its Jewish citizens would change when Christianity became the official religion of the Empire in the fourth century CE under the Emperor Constantine. This trend would be briefly reversed when Constantine's nephew, Julian, inherited the throne. Julian was even contemplating allowing the Jews to rebuild the Temple in Jerusalem, but he was assassinated before he could put his plans into effect.

For the next 1,500 years Jews had a mixed history in Italy. In some eras they did well and in others they did not. Remains of Jewish cemeteries and synagogues have been found throughout the peninsula, attesting to a Jewish presence there for two millennia.

Unfortunately, Italy's Jews were not able to escape the horrors of the Holocaust. Mussolini had initially welcomed all people into the Fascist party, and Jews were among his first supporters. One of his early mistresses was of Jewish background. But this would change once Mussolini got entangled with Hitler.

Yet as individuals, many Italians aided the Jews. On a personal note, it was Italian PoWs returning from the Russian front who smuggled my in-laws and a group of other refugees out of Poland and into Italy at the end of World War II.

For the love of latkes, Part 1

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

Chanukah is almost here. And to celebrate, it's time to pay tribute to the latke.

We all know the story about the menorah and the miracle and the oil. But just how did potato pancakes enter into the picture? Phyllis Glazer explains that wherever Jews have lived, they have developed food traditions using ingredients that were commonly available. Jews in the Middle East or around the Mediterranean used fresh-pressed olive oil to fry their Chanukah foods, including olive-oil fried puffs of dough. But "for Jewish villagers living in Russia or Poland, pickings were slim in winter and potatoes were cheap." And rather than olive oil, latkes were fried in schmaltz, or rendered fat. [http://bit.ly/latke11]

If you happen to be in Israel over Chanukah and order a latke, you might be served a blank stare in return. Try ordering a "Ieviva" instead. But Nathan Jeffay says that even if you do know that Hebrew word, you may still be out of luck because Israel has become somewhat of a latke-free zone. He cites a surprising economic reason. In the 1920s, the trade union of Jewish workers in Mandate Palestine was concerned that Chanukah provided few commercial opportunities. Jeffay quotes food historian Gill Marks: "Latkes are homemade and so are useless for business." The unions seized on the tradition of sufganiyot, Chanukah doughnuts, and encouraged bakeries across the country to sell them. "They can generate weeks of work for bakers, people transporting them, and sellers." [http://bit.ly/latke12]

Who would have imagined that there's a whole sub-genre of latke humour lurking on the web? In the "Ritual Slaughter of the Latke," Raphael Finkel expounds upon the intricate (and phony) Jewish laws that ensure that latkes are kosher. For example, just as kosher meat must be salted, we must "remember to salt the potato and leave it to drain for at least 24 hours. We do this in memory of Lot's wife, Latke, who was turned to salt. Use a lotta salt, in memory of Lot's daughter, Lotta." [http://bit.ly/latke13]

Then there is the classic "Latke vs. Hamantash: A Materialist-Feminist Analysis." Robin Leidner of the University of Pennsylvania's sociology department tries to settle that age-old question: which food is more liberating for women – latkes or hamantashen? Let's just say that things don't come out too well for our favourite pancake. [http://bit.ly/latke14] Actually, this food fight has been fought on at universities since 1946. Check out the delightful Wikipedia entry. [http://bit.ly/latke15]

What is the perfect complement to a steaming latke, apple sauce or sour cream?

Argues Nicole: "Only applesauce with latkes. Sour cream is for blintzes."

Counters UnConundrum: "Sour cream, sour cream, sour cream, until about the sixth or seventh one… then the sour cream starts to get rich, and I like to switch to apple sauce… :)" [http://bit.ly/latke16]

While many people seem to get a chuckle out of latkes, the same can't be said for Jill Fenton. When she was challenged to spell "latke" during the final day of competition at the National Spelling Bee, the seventh grader from Central Christian Middle School in Kidron, Ohio, spelled the food as "lotka." Deb Friesen, assistant principal at Central Christian, said she couldn't have spelled the word, either. That enabled Sean Conley of Shakopee, Minn., to walk away with first prize when he correctly spelled "succedaneum." [http://bit.ly/latke18]

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based Internet producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be reached at highway@rogers.com.

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !

ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER

Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida

You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.

We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.

Call now for reservations (954) 802 - 8100

03

Did your son just have a birthday? Did your daughter just have a baby?

SEND US YOUR PHOTO ALONG WITH 25 WORDS.
GO TO WWW.CJNEWS.COM
CLICK THE FAMILY MOMENTS BANNER

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES

The BEST Family Tours in North America!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

WINTER SPECIAL 2010 BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
July 3 - Jul. 17
July 17 - Jul. 31
July 24 - Aug. 7
July 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28

FALL/WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FLIGHT INCL. 5 NIGHTS IN 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1515 +TAX

Community Mission May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com

Greater Toronto Area

Modelling the latest fashions, left photo, Nadine Joffe and Cory Bickof, right photo, Julia Slater. [Vito Amati photos]

Zareinu Fashion Show draws hundreds

By CARA EDELL
Special to The CJN

Fashion and philanthropy came together recently in celebration of the children of the Zareinu Educational Centre of Metropolitan Toronto.

Hundreds of people of all ages attended the seventh annual Zareinu Fashion Show, a fundraiser held at the Royal Ontario Museum on Nov. 16.

Models, Zareinu students and their family members walked the runway, while awareness was raised about the issues faced by children with special needs.

Zareinu is a world-renowned treatment centre and school that provides individualized therapies and special education to children with a wide range of physical and developmental challenges.

Zareinu's staff delivers innovative therapeutic interventions and programs to meet the unique needs of children with disabilities including cerebral palsy, Down syndrome, autism spectrum disorder and other neurological and developmental impairments.

Produced by Erika Larva of Monarch Events together with Hala Event and Communication Inc., the event was hosted by fashion icon Jeanne Beker. It featured collections from Vintage Couture, Matooka, Ross Mayer and Shenkin West, among others.

Singer Michael Burgess entertained guests with a special performance during the show. The evening also gave Zareinu supporters, volunteers and parents a chance to share their personal stories with the audience.

"It is our goal to enhance the profile of the issues faced by families of children with special needs and to educate the community about the incredible work being done at Zareinu," said Randy Spiegel, Zareinu's executive director.

"We hope that people who need us will find us, and if they know others who need Zareinu, they will share the information and this will open the doors to them and their children."

Spiegel said Zareinu relies heavily on donations, which makes the fashion show a critical fundraiser. The need is greater than ever, as the students require a bigger centre to facilitate their learning and development.

Stacy Markin, event co-chair alongside Renee Rosenzweig, revealed during the show that a building fund is in the works to provide the students with a new state-of-the-art facility.

"Zareinu currently doesn't have the space needed to help everyone who wishes to attend the school. Therapies are being performed in the hallways. Classes are overflowing. It is time to give these children and the incredible Zareinu team the home they deserve."

Markin said she was most excited about watching the Zareinu students take to the stage. "It's very emotional and inspiring to see. Some children are carried, some have walkers. Some are very slow, but determined. There is no other event that demonstrates these children's abilities and showcases inclusion like the Zareinu Fashion Show."

Markin's teenage daughter, Shayna Bracha, is a Zareinu student who has participated in the event for several years. Told by doctors as a child that she would probably never walk, Shayna amazed the audience as she graced the runway with little assistance.

"In those early difficult months of learning, my child had severe disabilities and a grim future. Zareinu was everything we could ask for," Markin said. "We were told Shayna would never recognize me as her mother. We were told to put her in an institution. Today, Shayna definitely knows me and everyone dear to her. I am very indebted to Zareinu."

A GIFT FOR ALL SEASONS

THE MULTI-AWARD WINNING
2011 DANCAP SUBSCRIPTION SERIES

6 GREAT SHOWS FROM $210!*

BOOK BY DECEMBER 3RD TO SAVE UP TO 25%
AND SECURE THE BEST SEAT LOCATIONS!

BUY A SUBSCRIPTION!

DancapTickets.com
Fast and convenient 24/7

416-644-3665
Mon.–Fri., 9am–5pm,
Sat. 10am–4pm

Gift Certificates Available!

Captivating Broadway Theatre

facebook twitter

VISA

dancap

Josh Freedman, left, Mitch DeBora and Melissa Perez at the Chabad Youth Network gala.

Teen leaders honoured

By MICHELLE BITRAN
Special to the CJN

The Chabad Youth Network (CYN) honoured young community leaders at its second annual gala benefit, held Nov. 16 at the Terrace Banquet Hall in Vaughan.

Mitch DeBora, Josh Freedman and Melissa Perez were the award-winners of the night, each of them taking home the CYN Young Leadership Award for their work with other Jewish youth.

The CYN, headed by Rabbi Shmuli Nachlas and his wife, Chani, offers programming such as educational initiatives, retreats and volunteer work for young Jews in the Toronto area.

The non-denominational group sees more than 250 teens pass through the doors of its two locations – one in Thornhill and one in midtown– each week.

"It's the hand of God that blesses our work," Rabbi Nachlas said in his speech at the event.

To the kids, he's Rabbi Shmuli, the glue that holds CYN together. Throughout his talk, he recounted stories of young people who've been personally affected by CYN's work.

Rabbi Nachlas' passion has certainly rubbed off on the evening's three honorees.

"I understand the importance for Jewish youth to stay together… When we're young, it's the ideal environment to stay together," DeBora said of why CYN means so much to him.

DeBora, 18, is a first-year engineering student at Queen's University who has spent the last five years attending, and then running, CYN programs.

DeBora first got involved with CYN through Torah 4 Teens, the accredited high school course program for teens. He said he enjoyed the classes so much that they led hiwm to take part in other CYN programs, until he eventually started planning and chaperoning various events and retreats.

Freedman, also 18, shares DeBora's sentiments about connecting young Jews. Two years ago, the now-first-year economics student at Queen's co-founded the CYN program called Teens for the Community, which co-ordinates visits to seniors homes and organizes fundraisers, among other outreach initiatives.

High school students are able to complete their required community service hours through the program, but many stay on even after they've fulfilled the mandatory commitment.

"It was a part of their week they actually enjoyed," Freedman said of the more than 60 teens now involved with Teens for the Community.

Like the other two winners, Melissa Perez, 21, believes CYN is vital to keeping young Jews engaged and united. Having been involved in various Chabad youth programs for the last nine years, Perez now focuses on organizing events for CYN alumni, who are university students like her.

"It's very exciting," Perez said of winning the award. "It's very rewarding to see that you've inspired someone, even if it's just one person."

Toronto doctor feted

Compiled by CJN Staff

Canadian Friends of Sarah Herzog Ezrath Nashim Hospital recently honoured Dr. Paul Garfinkel at its annual concert.

A member of the Order of Canada, Garfinkel was honoured on his retirement as CEO of Canadian Addiction and Mental Health Centre.

Singer Dan Hill was the featured performer at the concert, and the keynote speaker was Dr. Ezekiel Caine, CEO of Herzog Hospital. The event was co-chaired by Dr. Dorothy Pullan and Lena Shugar.

TOM'S PLACE • MILES NADAL
WAREHOUSE SALE
at the Miles Nadal JCC
Wednesday, Nov. 24 - Sunday, Nov. 2
SUPER SUITS at SUPER PRICES
MEN'S SUITS 5 FOR 1 LESS $250 (WITH THIS AD)
ITALIAN & GERMAN DESIGNER SUITS 50-75% OFF (REGULAR RETAIL) OR 3 FOR $1200
WOMEN'S WEAR 90% OFF REDUCED ANOTHER 50% OFF
MEN'S SHIRTS & SWEATERS 5 FOR 1
MEN'S SPORTS JACKETS REDUCED ANOTHER 50% OFF
LEATHER JACKETS REDUCED 50%
TOM MIHALIK SUPERHERO OF SUITS
HAPPY CHANUKAH Tom Mihalik & Staff
Established 1958
Tom's Place
Miles Nadal JCC Fall Warehouse Sale
750 Spadina Av. (Bloor St. near Spadina Subway)
Wednesday, Nov. 24 – Sunday, November 28
Wed 11-8 • Thurs 10-5 • Fri 11-8 • Sat 10-6 • Sun 11-6
For more information contact the store:
416-596-0297
toms-place.com
Miles Nadal JCC • www.mnjcc.org

A NEW GENERATION LEADING UJA TODAY

Introducing UJA's 2011 Bay Street Cabinet

UJA's Bay Street Cabinet brings [illegible] community's leading professionals from all aspects of financial servic[illegible] innovative programs, we are engaging a new generation of committed community members to UJA Federation's annual campaign wh[illegible] the lives of Jews across the street and across the globe.

(Back row, l to r) David Bloomstone, James Menkes, Dan Zeevi, Michael Dorfman, Anthony Segal (chair) and Dov Zevy (chair)

(Front row, l to r) Peter Shin, Ben Mogil and Yaron Gr[illegible]

Absent: Ari Black, Howard Cohen, Michael Dobkin, Edwin Gruber, Bruce Kagan, Ari Levy, Daniel Sonshine, Jay Wintraub

NEW CHALLENGES.
ETERNAL STRENGTH.

A new generation is taking the lead!

United Jewish Appeal

Critics slam thesis that alleged 'Jewish racism'

U of T comes under fire

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

The University of Toronto is coming under fire for granting its "imprimatur" to a master's thesis that critics say is an allegation of "Jewish racism" and is of low academic standards.

In a letter to University of Toronto president David Naylor, retired sociology professor Werner Cohn said the thesis posits that "the Jews of the world, most particularly those of Canada and the United States, are racist and seek to oppress people of colour everywhere."

The thesis, Cohen goes on, is averse to empirical data, and its author, Jennifer Peto, "makes wild… charges against her fellow Jews without a shred of evidence."

The document in question is titled The Victimhood of the Powerful: White Jews, Zionism and the Racism of Hegemonic Holocaust Education. It was submitted as part of a master of arts degree in the department of sociology and equity studies in education at the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education (OISE), a branch of the University of Toronto.

Summarizing her thesis, Peto stated that it "focuses on issues of Jewish identity, whiteness and victimhood within hegemonic Holocaust education. I argue that today, Jewish people of European descent enjoy white privilege and are among the most socio-economically advantaged groups in the West. Despite this privilege, the organized Jewish community makes claims about Jewish victimhood that are widely accepted within that community and within popular discourse in the West.

"I propose that these claims to victimhood are no longer based in a reality of oppression, but continue to be propagated because a victimized Jewish identity can produce certain effects that are beneficial to the organized Jewish community and the Israeli nation-state.

"I focus on two related Holocaust education projects – the March of the Living (MOL) and the March of Remembrance and Hope (MRH) – to show how Jewish victimhood is instrumentalized in ways that obscure Jewish privilege, deny Jewish racism and promote the interests of the Israeli nation-state."

Cohn, who is retired from teaching at the University of British Columbia, said the thesis is making the rounds in academic circles and was forwarded to him by a friend at the University of Washington in Seattle. PajamasMedia.com carried a critique of the document and the University of Toronto, while the National Post ran an article from the Eye On A Crazy Planet website, run by blogger Richard Klagsbrun. .

Cohn said the University of Toronto had failed to adequately vet the thesis before approving it. "It's terrible that an arm of the University of Toronto gave it its imprimatur, that this is a contribution to knowledge.

"As I point out in my blog, she makes assertions, but it can't be called an advancement of knowledge as she doesn't test it in any way."

Cohn said much of the thesis is subjective and personal. While "in some fields of social science, you want to evaluate how it affected you personally, you need a check on that so that [it conforms] to academic standards.

"To show how subjective the whole thing is, she thanks her comrades in the [Coalition Against Israeli Apartheid] who taught her how to put the theory of the thesis into practice."

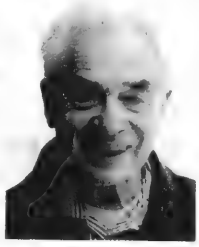
In her thesis, Peto acknowledged she is "an anti-Zionist Jew" and she argued that "by supporting Israel, [Jews] are supporting a brutally oppressive regime."

She said it can be painful for Jews to become anti-Zionist, but it was less painful for her "because I was already an outcast in the Jewish community and estranged from my family for being atheist, queer, gender-queer, feminist and generally outspoken in a highly normative, Orthodox setting."

Cohn pointed out that analyses of the MOL and MRH were key parts of the thesis, but Peto failed to survey the scholarly literature about the programs. MOL brings Jewish high school students to Nazi death camps in Europe and then on to Israel while the MRH focuses on non-Jewish university-aged students who visit only Europe.

Peto summarizes her analysis of the MRH as exploring "the racist and imperialist effects of the hegemonic Holocaust education that targets non-Jewish people, especially people of colour."

As for the MOL, "I want to demonstrate how the MOL centres the violence experienced by European Jewish people in order to obscure the privilege now enjoyed by most Jews of European descent, to erase the history of the ethnic cleansing of Palestine and to ensure that participants support the ongoing violence of Israeli apartheid."



Werner Cohn

MOL national director Eli Rubenstein said, "It's very sad to read this kind of stuff. She didn't speak to me or to anybody from MOL or MRH.

"She hasn't been on a trip where you see a Holocaust survivor holding the hand of someone who survived the Rwandan genocide or the Sudanese genocide, that it's comforting and helps them to heal.

"How can you write a master's thesis and not speak to a single survivor, educator or student in the program, and how can the university accept that?" he asked.

"We have survivors who rebuilt their lives and want to share their stories of survival and make sure that it doesn't happen to anybody, and here you have someone criticizing us for that… it's very sad."

Responding to a request for an interview, the University of Toronto issued a written statement by vice-president and provost Cheryl Misak: "Due to our privacy obligations to students, I cannot discuss an individual student's academic work or his or her performance. What I can, say, however, is that freedom of expression issues are ever-present in our society, especially on a university campus. The University of Toronto's Statement on Freedom of Speech makes it clear that freedom of inquiry lies at the very heart of our institution: 'all members of the University must have as a prerequisite freedom of speech and expression, which means the right to examine, question, investigate, speculate and comment on any issue without reference to prescribed doctrine, as well as the right to criticize the University and society at large.'

"Of the thousands of MA theses written at the University of Toronto in partial fulfilment of degree requirements, it is inevitable that some will have elements that offend various individuals and groups. In such cases, the university is committed to allowing and encouraging a full range of debate. The best way for controversy to unfold is for members of our community to engage with the perspectives and arguments they dispute. It is intelligent argument, not censorship, that lies at the heart of our democratic society and its institutions."

Shoshana Shier Memorial Lecture

Emil Fackenheim on the State of Israel

Professor Michael L. Morgan
Monday, November 29 at 7:30 PM

Professor Morgan is an expert on the work of Emil Fackenheim (1916–2003), one of the most important Jewish philosophers of the twentieth century. Dr. Fackenheim, who narrowly escaped from Germany in 1939, called on the world to bear witness to the Holocaust as an unprecedented assault on Judaism and on humanity.

LECTURE IS WHEELCHAIR ACCESSIBLE

Beth Tzedec Congregation
1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario M5P 3K3
Tel: 416.781.3511 Fax: 416.781.0150
email: info@beth-tzedec.org web: www.beth-tzedec.org

בית צדק
Beth Tzedec Congregation

SINGLES EVENTS

DEADLINE:
Wednesday 4 p.m.
8 days preceding issue date

For rates or to place an ad call 416-391-7856

Shaar Shalom Singles
(in conjunction with the Intersynagogue Singles (45+) Invite you to a special

CHANUKAH ONEG SHABBAT

Led by
Cantor Ben Silverberg
Friday, December 3, 2010 – 8 pm
Shaar Shalom Synagogue
2 Simonston Boulevard
(1 light north of Steeles on Don Mills)
Kiddish and Mix&Mingle - following service
For information, please call David (416-224-9494)

BNEI AKIVA HIGH SCHOOLS OF TORONTO

EXPERIENCED JEWISH STUDIES TEACHERS AND SUBSTITUTE TEACHERS

Yeshivat Or Chaim Boys' School and Ulpanat Orot Girls' School are rooted in the traditions of Torah and Religious Zionism. We are seeking teachers who will inspire our students.

The candidates must posses the following qualifications:
- University degree in Education or Jewish Studies
- Post-secondary education in an Orthodox Zionist Yeshiva
- High level written and oral fluency in modern Hebrew
- In depth knowledge of Israeli history.
- Personal commitment to Religious Zionism
- Commitment to excellence in education.
- Warm and energetic personality

Submit resume to:
Rabbi Scot A. Berman, Headmaster – Bnei Akiva Schools
159 Almore Ave. Toronto, On M3H 2H9

Have Your RRSP Returns Been Less Than Stellar These Past Few Years?

TEL AVIV: +35% VS TORONTO: +5%*

Put Israel's powerful economy to work for your RRSP.

QuestionsAnswers

An interview with Zale Newman, President, Bond Street Mercantile Inc., who recently launched the Holy Land Investment Fund, said to be, in his words: "a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy AND put your money where your heart is."

Why invest in Israel?

Israel has been the western world's economic success story for the past five years. Israel is an economic miracle and suffered no ill effects from the 2008 recession. The Tel Aviv stock market hit its all time high in late October. (Compare that to most western countries whose stock markets are struggling to get back to where they were 4 years ago.)

Holy Land Investment Fund

Israel is booming in many sectors of the economy including real estate, oil and gas, technology, pharmaceuticals, financial services and tourism. It is hard to see why anyone wouldn't want to put at least some portion of their investments into Israel. Now there is an easy, Canadian way to invest there.

Have any internationally renowned investors invested in Israel?

Absolutely! There are many examples. Warren Buffett, the most recognized international investor, recently addressed the Israel Ministry of Industry and Trade. He told them that he invests almost exclusively in the United States – with ONE exception – Israel! He has now purchased four companies in Israel, including two more this past August. And he is on the lookout for more. He was amazed by, "Israel's combination of brains and energy."

Bill Gates has major investments in Israel, as does Potash Corporation of Canada and David Azrieli, the legendary Montreal real estate mogul who owns the majority interest in Israel's 8th largest public company.

How does the economy in Israel compare to that of Canada and other countries?

Israel's economy is booming and it far outstrips the performance of Canada, the USA and all other major western economies.

	Exchange	4 YR Returns (to Sept 30/10)
1.	TEL AVIV	35.0%	(7.8%/yr)
2.	TSX	5.2%	(1.3%)
3.	FTSE	-6.9%	(-1.8%)
4.	S&P 500	-14.6%	(-3.9%)
5.	Nikkei	-41.9%	(-12.7%)

For example, if you had invested $100 in Canada (via the TSX index) four years ago, you would now have only $105; and had you invested $100 in the USA (S&P 500), you would have only $86 today (as of 9/30/10). BUT, had you invested that same $100 in Israel (TASE) you would have $135 today – 30% more than in Canada and 48% higher than the USA!

What does the HLIF invest in?

The HLIF is a balanced "fund of funds." This means it holds a group of investment funds in Israel that specialize in either Israeli corporate and government bonds or Israeli stocks on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. Right now the HLIF holds seven funds from Israel's best performing fund managers. Four are bond funds, one is a fixed income fund and two are equity funds, including the best performing fund in Israel last year. On an ongoing basis, we look for additional Israeli investments with excellent management and a stellar track record.

What type of equities do these funds hold?

The HLIF holds investments that Canadians understand. We are primarily invested in Israeli public companies in real estate, oil and gas, financial services and medical equipment.

Did you say "oil and gas" companies? Isn't that for countries in the Middle East other than Israel?

Our world has changed – for the better. As highlighted in the Wall Street Journal on October 13th, Israel is now on the brink of becoming a major player in the world oil and gas market. Last February Israel announced the discovery of the Tamar gas find off the coast of Haifa. It was the world's largest in 2009 and has enough gas to supply Israel's needs for the next 50 years. This past June, the initial results of the Leviatan project were announced, with enough oil and gas to cover Israel's needs for the next 100 years.

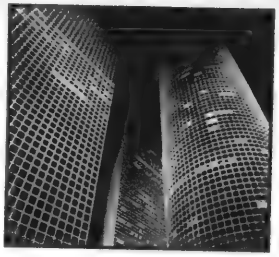
When these projects come on stream, Israel will become a major exporter of oil and gas. Our funds have invested in these opportunities and we expect excellent returns from these oil and gas investments.

What is the minimum investment and is this fund RRSP and RRIF eligible?

For Accredited Investors, the minimum investment is only $5,000 for non-registered funds and $22,000 for registered funds (this year's maximum RRSP contribution) that are either being transferred in from an existing RRSP account or from new RRSP contributions.

How do I find out more about the HLIF?

The best way is to attend one of the Wednesday night seminars held at our office at 801 Eglinton (at Bathurst). Additionally we have information available on our website at bondstreetmercantile.com, in our presentation kit (which you can order in a hard copy or electronic version) and through private appointments. Just call our office at 416-783-0505.



Please see our website at bondstreetmercantile.com for more information.

EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS

Call 416-783-0505 to book your seat at our for Accredited-Investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity.

Register Now. Don't Be Disappointed.

Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com

BOND STREET MERCANTILE

801 Eglinton Ave. W., Suite 117, Toronto ON M5N 1E8 tel 416.783.0505 fax 416.783.7107

www.BondStreetMercantile.com

*Over the last 16 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX), 30% better As of September 30, 2010
Past results do not guarantee future performance. Results will vary depending on many factors including market conditions and available opportunities.

Bardikoff goes from monkeys to the monkeybars

By Frances Kraft

Carly Bardikoff has an honours BA in history from McGill University and an MA in child study and education from the University of Toronto's Institute for Child Study, Ontario Institute for Studies in Education (OISE).

But working with children in Africa for four of the past five summers has enriched her formal studies immeasurably.

"I learned so much, and I've been able to bring it into the classroom," said the 25-year-old teacher of Grade 3 math, science and social studies, and Grade 4 language arts, at Leo Baeck Day School's Thornhill campus.

Last year, she taught an animals unit to a Grade 2 class. "That was perfect," she said in a recent interview. "In Grade 3, we're learning about communities."

In Africa, she said, "Everyone is so nice and appreciative of what you're doing, and willing to bring you into their communities.

"I loved the land. I think it's absolutely beautiful," said Bardikoff, sporting earrings from Ghana and a colourful necklace of recycled paper from Uganda.

This summer, she was a volunteer educator in Uganda, at the Ngamba Island Chimpanzee Sanctuary.

Prior to that, in 2007 and 2008, Bardikoff worked as a teacher in Botswana, home schooling two young boys. Her first summer in Africa was in 2006, when she volunteered at an orphanage in Ghana, working with children who had special needs.

A LESSON FROM THE TEACHER

"I really do believe in letting students follow their interests and build on what interests them, and feel proud about the work they do."

Why Africa, after years of working at the Reform movement's Camp George? "I'm very into history, and at McGill I took a lot of African history courses," she said.

Bardikoff also loved working with kids, and thought she could combine her interests by working with children in Africa.

A 2005 stint as a teaching assistant at Dr. Abraham Shore She'arim Hebrew Day School – which served students with learning disabilities, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and mild forms of autism – played an important role in setting Bardikoff on her career path. "I just loved it," she said.

As well, she noted, her mother, Ricki Wortzman is an educator who once taught at Leo Baeck. Her father, Alan, is a psychologist.

A Toronto native who attended French immersion school, Bardikoff joined Leo Baeck's staff last year, shortly after graduating from OISE. In her first year, she taught Grade 1 and senior kindergarten French, and Grade 2 math, science and social studies.

As a teacher, she said, she has "so much fun" with her students. "I enjoy watching how excited they get... when something clicks."

Although she wasn't looking to work in a Jewish school specifically, Bardikoff has taught Sunday school at Holy Blossom Temple, worked at the Toronto Heschel School in 2006, and was involved in Jewish programs as a student. As well, she ran a private Jewish unaffiliated religious school for elementary school children.

Bardikoff believes in "having children be active participants in their own learning" through hands-on experience. To build critical thinking, in part, she uses games from all over the world, she said.

Not surprisingly, some of them are from Africa.

Carly Bardikoff [Frances Kraft photo]

ASK ABOUT OUR MOVE-IN INCENTIVE!
NOW OPEN
THE FINEST IN RETIREMENT LIVING
Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
Three meals daily including snacks
Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
Secure Assisted Living Floor
CALL TODAY TO RESERVE YOUR SUITE!
905-738-0905
FOUR ELMS
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6 | Visit our website: www.fourelms.ca
Join us on Thursday, November 11, 2010 at 10:30am to 1:00pm for a Remembrance Day Presentation by Gerry Grossmann followed by a delicious Four Elms Lunch.
Please RSVP at 905-738-0905 as space is limited.

A POWERFUL WIN-WIN TAX BENEFIT IS NOW AVAILABLE FOR YOUR ORGANIZATION

"Purchase flow through LPs and donate rollover mutual shares and receive two tax deductions"

Mr. Joe Dwek, President of Mineral Fields, will be conducting a series of seminars to introduce and explain this ground breaking opportunity to members of your Synagogue or School Board.

If you are interested in hosting a presentation, please contact :

Mr. Michael Morris

President of the Social Strategy Group

416-230-6181

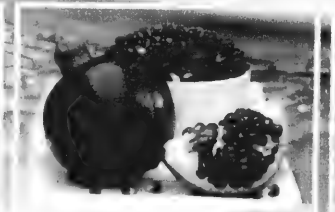
mike.morris@rogers.com

Sobeys is your Chanukah destination for delicious meals, easy entertaining & so much more.

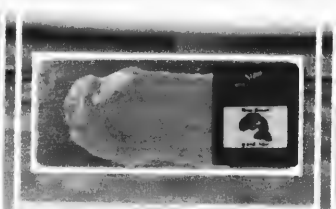
Sobeys

Happy Chanukah

Tzali's
Borekes
Assorted Varieties, 600 - 800 g
4.99

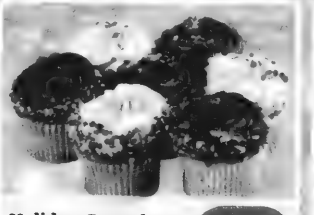


Jumbo Size Pomegranates
Product of USA
2/$4



Strub's
Smoked Steelhead Salmon
Frozen, 200 g
5.99

Glatt
Kosher Prime Rib Roasts or Rib Steaks
22.00 kg
9.99



Holiday Cupcakes
Assorted Varieties
Pkg. 6, 350 g
3.99

Elite
Gold Coins
Selected Varieties, 24 x 25 g
7.99

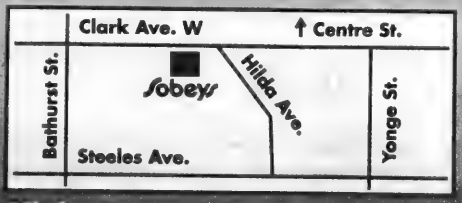
Carmel
Potato Pancake Mix
6 oz.
1.79

Chanukah Candles
Sorted Varieties, 44
.99

Kosher Market
Clark & Hilda

[illegible] Clark Ave. West (at Hilda)
Store Hours: Mon-Wed, Sat, Sun 8am-10pm
Thurs 8am-11pm, Fri 7am-10pm
All items or product is subject to availability, subject to change & while quantities last.
Prices effective Thursday, November 25th to Thursday, December 2nd, 2010

We're proud to [illegible] to carry the largest selection of kosher product in North America, for all your Chanukah needs.



Visit us at www.sobeys.com

PAYLESS TRAVEL
and Cruises
Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service
NESS HANNUKA HAPPENED HERE
EL AL SPECIAL
Winter special - non stop flight to Israel
$649.00 +tax
Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 6 – 15, 2011
Learn more about this unique trip: Sun., Nov 28, 4 pm
Bonnie Stern School of Cooking, 6 Erskine Ave.
RSVP by Nov 26: 416-922-0116 ext. 1 – Michelle
Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 – June 5, 2011
Jewish Heritage Tour – CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222
ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com
Downtown Office - 416-922-0116 Michael ext. 1
Toll-Free 1-866-344-6342 – 1027 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON
Promenade Office - 905-770-3300 – Sima ext. 225
Toll-Free 1-888-000-4747
7700 Bathurst Street & Centre, Thornhill, ON

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pad
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Factory Direct Pricing
Free in-home service
Dover Pad
UNBEATABLE QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary MagnaLoc
Canada Wide: 1-800 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca

JACS TORONTO
Jewish Addiction Community Services
DAILY CRISIS SUPPORT
Are you or is someone you love struggling with a drug, alcohol or gambling problem?
Thursday night Here to Help meetings at 8 PM for newcomers and family support
Call 416-638-0350 for help www.jacstoronto.org
858 Sheppard Avenue West
Toronto, Ontario M3H 2T5
CRA863109757RR0001
Saving Lives by Solving Addiction Problems.
TEAM UP

North Toronto's Kosher Destination
DELICACIES CAFE & GRILL
HOLIDAY PARTIES AT DELICACIES
...book yours today and enjoy our refined Kosher cuisine in a relaxed, cozy dining environment
1416 Centre St. (just E. of Dufferin) • 905-597-8116

Greater Toronto Area

Palestinians not viewed as agents of change

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

With last week's announcement that Israel might accept a new 90-day moratorium on West Bank housing in exchange for enhanced U.S. security and diplomatic guarantees, western media focused, once again, on Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Is he sincere? Can he get the approval of his fractious cabinet? If he can, will he move the negotiating process ahead with Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas and the PA?

Accepted as a given in much of the coverage is the idea that progress for peace rests almost entirely on Israel's shoulders. The assumption is that – and this is critical – if Israel makes the expected compromises, a two-state solution would be right around the corner. After all, that's what the Palestinians have been yearning for, even demanding.

What the media have failed to examine, however, is what's actually going on among the Palestinians. What, after all, do we know about Abbas' own commitments, and willingness – and, indeed, capacity – to compromise with Israel? Similarly, what do we know about the support he has within the Palestinian community to deliver if a political deal with Israel started to take shape?

What we do read about is that Fatah in the West Bank and Hamas in Gaza remain as bitterly divided as ever, despite Egypt's efforts to broker a reconciliation. Beyond that, what do we really learn from the media? Very little, it seems.

Danny Rubinstein recently provided some of the missing details in a feature on Abbas and his Fatah party in the Oct. 25 issue of Jerusalem Report magazine. Fluent in Arabic and a longtime observer of Palestinian affairs, Rubinstein has met with every major Palestinian political figure and knows the inner workings of their power structure and society.

Rubinstein made the following points:

• While Abbas is the chairman of the governing Fatah party, the largest faction of the PLO, he has a lot of opposition within the party and other PLO factions to a negotiated two-state deal with Israel. This has left Abbas quite isolated and weak. (Palestinian media mostly ignored demonstrations last month in Ramallah, Nablus and elsewhere in the West Bank against resuming peace talks.)

• In mid-September, only nine of 18 members of the Fatah Central Committee showed up to discuss negotiations with Israel. Although the results of the forum have not been made public, it appears that Abbas did not get a mandate to pursue talks with Israel. He nonetheless decided to go to Washington, D.C., at the urging of U.S. President Barack Obama, though accompanied by only a small group of familiar aides including Saeb Erekat and Nabil Shaath. (The lack of support might be one reason that, as reported in the Jerusalem Post, just a few days after he met with Netanyahu at the Washington summit, Abbas declared his refusal to compromise: "If [the Israelis] demand concessions on the rights of the refugees or the 1967 borders, I will quit. I can't allow myself to make even one concession.")

• While PA security forces have done a good job arresting Hamas activists and disrupting their cells, Hamas remains quite popular in the West Bank. Despite an improved economic climate, many Palestinians still view Fatah leaders as belonging to a corrupt organization. They also look upon Abbas and other compliant Fatah leaders as "lackeys" of American and Israeli interests.

Rubinstein's overall assessment is chilling: "From my last two visits to Ramallah [Abbas' headquarters], my impression is that Fatah, the leading party of the Palestinian government, is disintegrating. And of even greater concern, there is no candidate in sight who might replace Chairman Abbas."

The failure of the media to pay sufficient attention to developments within Palestinian society and its ruling structures is longstanding and does not reflect a lack of access. Rather, it appears to stem from a lack of interest in the Palestinians in their role as agents of change, as opposed to their more familiar role as victims.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

on cjnews.com

The CJN's French-language reporter in Montreal, Elias Levy, writes about:

• Centre Hillel plans to partner with other student-oriented groups to serve its members and expand its activities.

• The Université du Québec à Montréal recently honoured Israeli-American sociologist Elihu Katz with an honorary degree for his scientific contribution to the the field of social sciences, especially communication.

Also this week on the web:

• Montreal writer Kortney Shapiro comments on Hillel's annual Shabbat dinner which celebrated the lives of Holocaust survivors.

• Israeli wineries can boast of over 120 years of tradition.

• Animator breaks into feature films with Summerhood.

Greater Toronto Area

Rabbi Nachman's 200th yarzheit celebrated

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to the CJN

Simplicity: it's a wonderful idea in theory, but the details continue to elude us as we struggle with the demands of modern life. But real answers are available from a very old source: chassidic leader Rabbi Nachman of Breslov.

Rabbi Jonathan Rietti, senior lecturer of Gateways International, crediting Rabbi Nachman for "the vast majority of my inspiration," believes Rabbi Nachman's teachings are as relevant today as they were in the 18th century – if not more so.

In a recent celebration of Rabbi Nachman's 200th yahrzeit, Toronto's Breslov Research Institute hosted Rabbi Rietti at a fundraiser brunch for more than 150 supporters at Aish HaTorah in Thornhill. Speaking on the topic of "Simplicity: Connecting with your Inner Self," Rabbi Rietti used humour and gentle, accessible lessons to bring Rabbi Nachman's core concepts down to earth for a modern audience.

Rabbi Jonathan Rietti
[J. MacLeod photo]

"There are three time zones – past, present, future," said Rabbi Rietti. "You only really exist in the present. You can't live in the past, and the future doesn't exist." That can be liberating – not only for us as Jews, but also for anybody trying to live a meaningful life, free from wallowing in past mistakes. "Every moment is a completely different creation. Who I was an hour ago does not define me."

From Rabbi Nachman's wisdom, Rabbi Rietti believes that focusing on the present moment means really focusing. Multi-tasking has become something to be proud of: "I can do more than one thing simultaneously!"

Rabbi Nachman would say we've got it all wrong. If you're at work, be at work, not on the phone with friends, in the middle of a solitaire game, planning your next vacation, said Rabbi Rietti.

Driving down the highway sipping a cup of coffee, listening to the radio, talking on the phone: "Where's the real me?" he asks. "When you're busy with your child, be busy with your child." If you're texting at the same time, your child will notice – and suddenly, your life is a whole lot less simple.

In Rabbi Nachman's writing, this intentional focus is referred to as temimus (temimut). Its root is the word "tam" – a word that can mean either "simple" (the same word describes the "simple son" in the Passover Haggadah) or "whole." Our forefather, Jacob, is referred to in the Torah by this term.

Someone once asked Rabbi Nachman's greatest disciple, Rabbi Nosson, "What's the greatest thing you ever saw your rebbe do?" His answer: "Whatever he was doing in that moment." Everything he did, he tried to accomplish through unifying himself: mind, soul, emotions, into one consciousness.

These may seem like difficult ideals, said Rabbi Rietti. Even Rabbi Nachman couldn't live up to them all the time, claiming he sometimes fell 100 times a day. "But what matters," said Rabbi Rietti, "is how many times you get up."

Sometimes, simplifying also means letting go of futile obsessions, like the idea of changing the people around us. "You're not here to change anybody – nobody ever succeeded in changing anybody."

Instead, we must learn to accept other people, and indeed, our own circumstances in our lives with temimus. Good circumstances and nice people may be easy to accept, but harsh or unpleasant ones are an opportunity to ask God for clarity to help change ourselves to face that moment. "That's how we change others – others will respond to a different me."

Rabbi Nachman left an astonishing spiritual and intellectual legacy in his 37 years. In 1810, dying of tuberculosis, he moved to Uman, Ukraine, then a major centre of the Haskalah (enlightenment) movement. Today, the town has become a pilgrimage site for tens of thousands of followers who arrive before Rosh Hashanah and throughout the year.

Unlike most chassidic leaders, Rabbi Nachman left no successor, but his main disciple and student, Reb Noson, worked tirelessly to publish and disseminate Rabbi Nachman's works and ideas. To continue that effort into the modern age, the Breslov Research Institute was founded in 1979. Dedicated to promoting Rabbi Nachman's teachings in clear, modern, understandable language, the institute has translated his ideas into English, Hebrew, Spanish, Yiddish and Russian.

Breslov Research Institute founder and writer Rabbi Chaim Kramer also spoke at the event, pointing to the upcoming holiday of Chanukah as a perfect opportunity to focus on the continuing relevance of Rabbi Nachman's words. "One little candle can light an entire room... we will light up the darkest moments until there's light all over the world."

Bath n' Bedtime

...where the white sale never ends

Semi-Annual Clearance

20–85% OFF

Everything in the store

Last 4 days • Sale ends Sun Nov 28

STORE HOURS
Wed 10-7 • Thurs 10-7 • Fri 10-7 • Sat 10-6 • Sun 11-5

502 Lawrence Ave. West (at Bathurst)
Lawrence Plaza • 416-781-8600

Coast to Coast

No basis for Diab's claims, prosecutor says

Compiled by CJN Staff

A Crown prosecutor in Ottawa last week asked Superior Court Judge Robert Maranger to reject defence claims that France manipulated evidence or misrepresented key facts in the extradition request for alleged terrorist Hassan Diab.

Defence contentions about the alleged French wrongdoing was "a teetering house of cards that won't be standing much longer," Crown attorney Claude LeFrancois said, according to a report in the Ottawa Citizen. He said claims by defence lawyer Donald Bayne that France had manipulated evidence were "preposterous."

In court documents, LeFrancois also stated, "The abuse alleged represents a direct attack on the conduct of French prosecuting authorities."

Earlier, Bayne had asked the court to stay extradition proceedings against Diab, a Lebanese-born former sociology professor who is alleged to have planted a bomb in a motorcycle saddlebag outside Paris' Rue Copernic synagogue in 1980 that killed four passersby and wounded more than 40.

Bayne argued that evidence provided by France may have come from unknown sources, perhaps foreign intelligence agencies, including those of Germany and Israel, and may have been obtained by torture.

He also alleged that French evidence was full of "contradictions, inaccuracy and omissions" which amounted to a failure of due diligence and perhaps "abusive manipulation."

Responding to Bayne's assertions, LeFrancois said the defence lawyer had accused lead French prosecutor Marc Trevidic of obstructing justice.

"That is a very serious accusation to level at any of our extradition partners," he said. "In my 13 years of practice in this area, I have never heard anything so sinister directed at a foreign state."

"There is no evidence that any of the 'misrepresentations,' if misrepresentations at all, were other than inadvertent," he said.

Handwriting analysis provided by France showed a high degree of probability that Diab signed a Paris hotel slip under a false identity, which was also used to purchased the motorcycle used in the bombing. LeFrancois said it is up to the trial judge, not one presiding over an extradition case, to determine validity of the evidence.

Diab, 56, has denied all charges against him and said he was a student in Beirut at the time.

Associated students not affected by area shooting

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Elementary students at Associated Hebrew Schools' Posluns Education Centre on Neptune Drive were never at risk in the wake of a fatal shooting that took place half a kilometre from the branch, school officials said.

Principal Eric Golombek sent an e-mail – co-signed by Associated's director of education Mark Smiley and executive director Elliott Brodkin – to parents last Friday in response to the death of 16-year-old Tyrone Bracken.

The student of nearby Sir Sandford Fleming Academy was discovered by police with gunshot wounds around 4 p.m. on Nov. 17 in a stairwell of 135 Neptune Dr., a government housing building where he lived.

Golombek told parents that the "safety and security of the Posluns community – our students, parents and staff – is our highest priority."

He said school officials have been in touch with Toronto Police 32 division, who told them the shooting wasn't random and that Associated students "were not at risk at any time. They confirmed that had there been any threat to the school community, we would have been contacted immediately."

Golombek said school officials are maintaining contact with the Toronto Police's community response team and are consulting with UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's director of community security.

"Please be assured that there are very stringent security and safety protocols that remain in effect at Posluns," Golombek said.

Golombek spoke to students in grades 1 to 5 about the incident at a regular school-wide tfillah service the day after the shooting.

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

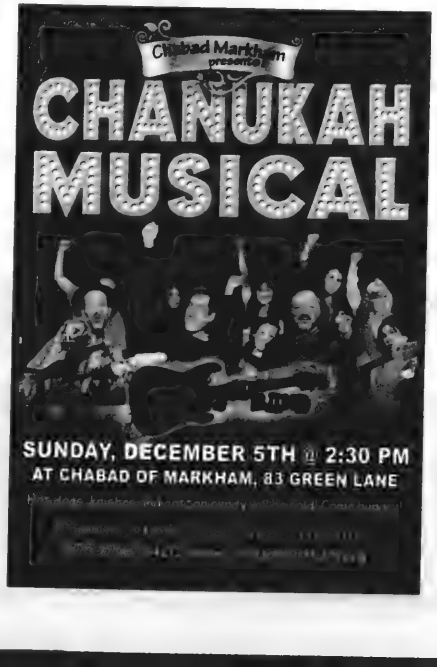
The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.



דער יידיש ווינקל

דזשערי קעין

הוי איז עס געשריבן אַז בלויז אין פֿאַטיטאָ לאָטקעס געפינט מען דעם לוסטיקן אָן פֿריילעכן טעם פֿון חנוכה?

פֿאַר אונדז מיזרח איראָפּעישע יידן האָט דער מינהג פֿון עסן לאָטקעס הנוכה אַן אָנהייב געוואָרצלט אין דער אָרמקייט פֿון שטעטל לעבן. "לאָטקע" איז אַן אוקראַיניש וואָרט. אונדזערע סלאַווישע שכנים, וואָס האָבן געלעבט אין די זעלבע אָרעמע אומשטענדן וי שטעטל יידן, האָבן אויך געגעסן לאָטקעס. דער פֿאָרוואָס איז אין נישט שווער צו פֿאַרשטיין. קאַרטאָפֿל זענען געווען גרינג צו פֿלאַנצן און פּראָסט צו באַקומען.

איידער די שפּאַניש מאַראַנן האָבן געבראַכט קאַרטאָפֿל פֿון דרום אַמעריקע אין 15טן יאָרהונדערט האָט אייראָפּע נישט געוווסט פֿון אַזאַ מאכל. שטעלט זיך די פּראָגע, אויב נישט קאַרטאָפֿל וואָס וואָלט מען געפֿרעגלט צו פֿייערן חנוכה? וען מען קוקט אַרײַן אין דער געשיכטע פֿון יידיש, יום-טובֿדיקע רעצעפּטן געפֿינט מען צוויי אומבאַגרענעצטע פֿאַקטן. ערשטנס האָבן יידן, אין אַלע עקן וועלט געפֿרעגלט אין ברימל. צווייטנס האָבן יידן געפֿרעגלט אַלערלייַ עסנוואַרג צו פֿייערן חנוכה.

ס'איז דער ברימל וואָס איז וויכטיק נישט די לאָטקע. דער ברימל דערמאָנט אונדז וועגן די חשמונאים, זייער קאַמף צו באַפֿרײַען די יידן פֿון אַנטיוכוס עפּיפֿאַנוס, און דאָס צוריקנעמען דעם בית-המקדש אין ירושלים. די גמרא דערציילט אַז וען די חשמונאים זענען אַרײַנגעקומען אין בית-המקדש האָבן זיי געפֿונען איין רײַן קריגל מיט ברימל צום אָנצינדן די מנורה, אָן דער ברימל איז נעוועז גענוג פֿאַר איין טאָג. אָבער עס איז געשען אַ נס און דער ברימל האָט געברענט אַכט טעג. דאָס וואָרט "חנוכה" מיינט דער וויידער "דערהיליקונג" פֿון בית-המקדש. דינט דער אָנצינדונג פֿון קריגל ברימל רופֿט מען חנוכה דער יום-טוב פֿון ליכט. די דינקע ליכטעלעך וואָס לייכטן אין דער מנורה דערמאָנען אונדז וועגן דער אָנגיינדיקן קאַמף פֿאַר פֿרייהייט אוּן שלום פֿאַר דער גאַנצער מענטשהײַט.

די אַשכנזים האָבן איך גיכן פֿאַרשטאַנען אַז דער ברימל איז מער ווי אַ סימבאָל. ס'קומט צונויף אין טאָג טעגלעכן לעבן. ווי בעסער פֿאַר אַ התנערקער מענטשהײַט צו פֿייערן חנוכה דען מיט צעריבענע קאַרטאָפֿל נעפֿרעגלט אין ברימל?

וועי זענען זיי ערשטע צו מאַכן לאָטקעס פֿאַרן חנוכה טיש? ס'שטייט געשריבן אַז די איטאַליענישע יידן זענען נעוועז די ערשטע צו פֿייערן חנוכה מיט לאָטקעס. אָבער ווי האָבן זיי געמאַכט זייערע לאָטקעס מיט ריקאָטע קעז. פֿאַרוואָס קעז– חיילי חנוכה איז אַ מילכיקיקער יום-טוב. אין די מיזרח לענדער, אוּן היינט אין ישראל, איז סופֿגניה דער נעפֿרעגלטער מאכל האָס מען לעקט זיך די פינגער מיט.

מיט חנוכה זענען פֿאַרבונדן פֿאַרשידענע פֿאָלקס מינהגים וי: געבן קינדער חנוכה געלט, שפּילערײַען אין קאָרטן, קינדער שפּילן אין דרײדל, אוּן מאַכן פֿאַרשטעלונגען פּונקט וי אין פּורים.

נו, צינדט די דינע ליכטעלעך אַן אוּן פֿאַרברענגט מיט פֿרײַנדט אוּן משפּחה. אָבער עסט נישט צו פֿיל. ס'זענען דאָ מענטשן וואָס האַלטן אַז נעפֿרעגלטע איז נישט גוט פֿאַרן נעזונט. איך האַלט אַז מענטשן וואָס וואַרפֿן דאָס וואָרט "קאָלעסטעראָל" אַפֿן חנוכה טיש זענען שוגא-ישראל. לאָמיר אָלע פֿאַרברענגען אונדזער יום-טוב פֿון דערהיליקונג אוּן פֿרייהייט. נעמט אַ צוויי לאָטקעלע.

אויב איר האָט נעדאַנקען וועגן אונדזער וויקל שרייבט דורך פּאָסט אָדער בליץ-פּאָסט: info@thecjn.ca

Proposed restructuring concerns CJC members

Continued from page 1

Since June, according to Congress' online documents, its subsequent correspondence with CIJA has served to worry and anger various CJC members, particularly Schwartz.

In a separate letter sent to Louise Davey – an outside consultant retained by CIJA's restructuring committee who is also COO at RSM Richter Chamberland in Montreal – Schwartz concurs that while the national Jewish community would be "well served" by a single advocacy organization, his board was "displeased" and "strongly disagrees" with suggestions set out in a CIJA brief called The Newco Document that allegedly proposes turning Congress board members into mere "committee members of Newco."

Barbara Bank

"Committees will lack the glue and succession planning that a regional board has… Simply put, if [CJC's Pacific] regional board is disbanded, Newco should assume the loss of many, if not most, of the current board members," Schwartz wrote. "Not only will valuable and committed volunteers not rush to join committees, but the long-term relationships of trust and confidence, the key to effective advocacy, will be lost."

Efforts by The CJN to obtain The Newco Document were unsuccessful.

Schwartz also wrote that CIJA's propositions in The Newco Document are not "clear" on future funding for his region, and he seeks assurances from CIJA that "core funding" for Pacific region staff will continue.

> 'None of us are privy to what's happening,' Bank said. 'We get these reports [from CIJA], but they're not that detailed.'

Speaking to The CJN on Nov. 19, Schwartz said he had just received "Draft 2" of CIJA's Newco Document from Davey, which he termed "a work-in-progress."

He said he intended to read through the new brief over the weekend to determine whether Congress' concerns had been addressed, but said he felt that CIJA's "ideas" about the restructuring were "amenable to change."

When asked if he could forward a copy of the second draft of the Newco Document to the paper for review, Schwartz said that "it's only being sent on a confidential basis to the different organizations for their feedback via Ms. Davey." She then circulates responses to the CIJA restructuring committee, he said.

Bank told The CJN she, too, was looking over the second Newco Document draft late last week, but as far as she could tell at the time, there seemed to be little difference in this iteration.

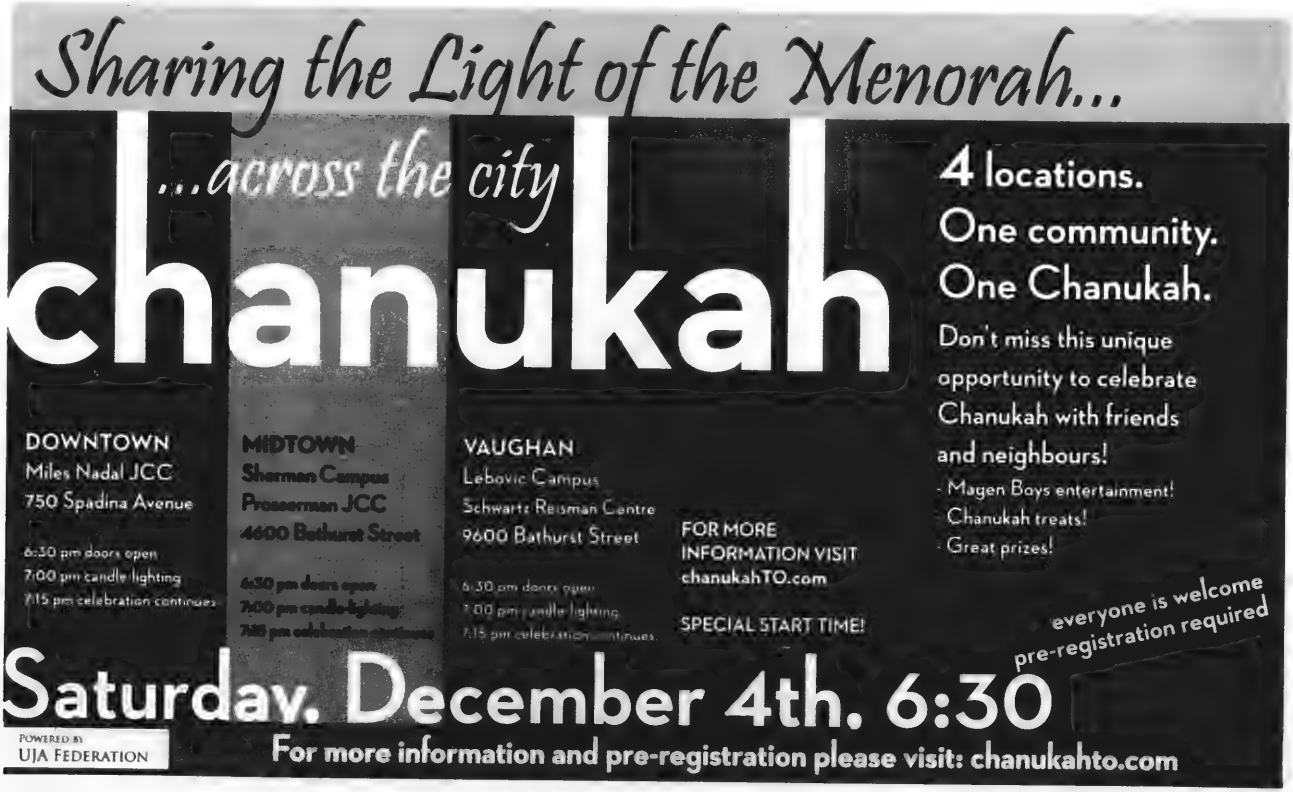
"None of us are privy to what's happening," Bank said. "We get these reports [from CIJA], but they're not that detailed."

She said Congress has been told the restructuring would happen soon, though deadlines have come and gone without any implementation or followup from CIJA.

"We were told a new CEO was going to be put into place three weeks ago, and that hasn't happened yet. But I know they're trying hard to do this as quickly as possible."

Bank said CIJA's new national advocacy structure appears to be "pared down, with a single board of directors as opposed to what is currently in place – a CIJA board of directors, a Congress board, a CIC board, a UOC board, etc. So it's really a plan that would tie us into the local federations more. It's a different approach to advocacy, it's more a real public affairs [structure] rather than an advocacy one."

She said Congress' main concern is that its 90-year history and resonance with the community would be lost in this reorganization.



Coast to Coast

Brandon, Man. elects its first Jewish mayor

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Brandon, the second-largest city in Manitoba, has elected its first Jewish mayor, and she's also the first woman to be chosen for the position.

"I have always been busy," Shari Decter-Hirst, who was elected Oct. 27, told The CJN. "But now I am moving at breakneck speed, attending openings or putting in appearances at different functions and getting up to speed on a variety of city projects."

Shari Decter-Hirst

Brandon, with a population about 41,000, is located 200 kilometres west of Winnipeg. Decter-Hirst defeated eight-year incumbent Dave Burgess by almost 1,500 votes (7,037 to 5,573).

Decter-Hirst launched her campaign more than a year ago. "There was a group of us who were becoming more and more frustrated by the lack of transparency and accountability at city hall," said Hirst, who up until her election was director of college advancement at Assiniboine Community College. "My campaign presented a clear vision of where we would like to take Brandon."

One of her focuses is on revitalizing the downtown area. "I like what Fargo did," she said, referring to the city of about 40,000 about 300 kilometres south of Winnipeg, in North Dakota. "Fargo turned its downtown into a hospitality and entertainment centre.

"We have a lot of offices downtown but after 6 [p.m.], everything closes down. We need to get more people living downtown. We have had a couple of successful affordable housing projects open downtown. What we need now are more market-driven accommodations."

Decter-Hirst is a rarity in Brandon in that she is a fifth-generation Jewish resident of the city. She noted that her Jewish roots in Brandon go back to the early 1900s.

"My maternal grandmother's family, the Cripps, were among the first Jewish families in Brandon," she said. "I admire the courage of those early Jewish residents of Brandon. They faced many hardships living within a less-than-welcoming larger community."

While there was a good-sized Jewish community at one time, the Jewish population has dwindled considerably. The synagogue was closed many years ago.

Brandon University, she noted, does have some Jewish professors and students.

"Without a synagogue though, it is hard to hold a community together," she said. "It's sad to see our Jewish community disappearing."

Decter-Hirst has fond memories of growing up in Brandon, where her father worked for Manitoba Hydro and her mother was a nurse. She went to university in Saskatoon and also attended the University of Manitoba. She has worked primarily as a fundraiser for various capital campaigns, including the building of Asper Jewish Community Campus in Winnipeg in the early 1990s, and served as board chair of Manitoba Public Insurance just prior to her decision to run for office.

She met her Winnipeg-born husband, Dr. Derry Decter, when she was working for a women's group in Brandon and the new, single, doctor in town was recruited to work with the group.

"We have a lot of family in Winnipeg on the Decter side," she said. "It has been nice being part of a larger family and being included in the bar mitzvahs and weddings."

THANK YOU: Former prime minister Jean Chrétien recently returned to the Jewish General Hospital to thank his surgeon, Dr. Jeff Golan, right, and nurse François Aubé. Chrétien was treated for a condition known as spontaneous subdural hematoma at the Montreal hospital last summer. To read story, please go to cjnews.com

Half The Kingdom:
the next generation
20th anniversary!
20 years ago the film Half The Kingdom challenged us all to rethink the role of women in Judaism.
Now in its 20th year we ask, "what is next?"
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 7:15 PM
LOOR CINEMA / 506 BLOOR ST. WEST
OPTIONAL PRE-EVENT FILM SCREENING AT 6:00 PM
Join us for a panel with Michelle Landsberg, Dr. Norma Joseph, Rabbi Elyse Goldstein, and Dr. Naomi Goldenberg together with Alison Pick, Rabbi Miriam Margles, and Rabba Sara Hurwitz, the first ordained Orthodox woman in America. Introduction by Francine Zuckerman, director/producer; moderated by actress Marilyn Lightstone
Sponsored through the generosity of The Shaffer Foundation and Dorothy Shoichet
General admission $36 / students with ID $20 / Hillel students $10 (Limited spaces)
"The Queendom" $180 includes: tax receipt for $136, reception with the panelists, DVD of Half The Kingdom, reserved seats and acknowledgment in booklet.
FOR TICKETS PLEASE CALL 416.638.1881 X.4235 ONLINE TICKET SALES AT HTTP://HALFTHEKINGDOM.EVENTBRITE.COM
CO-PRESENTED WITH POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION
KOLEL
Miles Nadal jcc
prosserman

Class Acts

ZAREINU VISIT: Grade 6 girls from Netivot HaTorah Day School recently visited Zareinu Educational Centre, where they toured classrooms and took part in a workshop to help them experience what it would be like to have challenges in fine and gross motor and verbal skills. Pictured, from left, are Alyssa, Ayala and Sarah. [Rebecca Ansel photo]

CHAGALL IN TRAINING:

Junior kindergarten student Ryan Press, from Associated Hebrew Schools' Posluns Education Centre on Neptune Drive, proudly displays his artistic creation, inspired by the image of a tallit in the painting The Prayer by Marc Chagall.

Ask us how to
Grow When Markets are Rising, Yet Protect & Still Grow When Falling

Inquire about our Unique Solution for Today's Markets

Allan Newman
H.B.A., LL.B.

Greg Newman
B.Comm., LL.B.

ScotiaMcLeod
The Newman Group
Wealth Advisors
Expect More
416-863-7756 or 800-387-0489

E-mail us to receive a brief e-mail explanation (PDF) or call for a Brochure
greg_newman@scotiamcleod.com

* Registered trademark used under authorization and control of The Bank of Nova Scotia. ScotiaMcLeod is a division of Scotia Capital Inc. Member CIPF

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Arlene & Murray Finkelman were thrilled to be in Israel for the birth of their great-granddaughter, Yael. Proud parents are Sarah & Ikan Sharabi.

Mazel tov, Harold & Anne Goldman on their 65th wedding anniversary. Much love from Heather & Robert, Louise & Ken, Cheryl, Barbara & Roni, your grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Jerry & Linda Garshon are thrilled to announce the engagement of their son, Kevin, to Sarit Kapon, daughter of Rina Kapon and Rami Kapon.

Happy 85th birthday to a very special lady, Eva Kay. All our love, Marleine, Alan, Sparkie, Oliver, Lucky Frank, Miriam, Dash & family.

Jeff & Susan Armel (née Randall), together with their children and parents, are proud to welcome twins Daniel and Samantha to the family.

Paul, Lisa and Hannah Kay welcome Ryan Samuel, born Aug. 1. Great/grandparents, Brenda Gorendar, David & Elaine Cooper, Noreen & Gary Kay, Malka Gorendar, Sari Troister.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Congratulations on your Special Birthday"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Our regular columnist, Leila Speisman, is away on medical leave.

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
call 416-636-3575
or email alina@travelsecure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Dec. 9 is Nov. 29. Deadline for Dec. 16 is Dec. 6. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Nov. 25

MICHAEL WEX

Author Michael Wex comes to Beth David with his new book, The Frumkiss Family Business. 7:30 p.m. Free. All welcome. 416-633-5500.

Friday, Nov. 26

TORAH CLASS

Beth Tikvah Torah class, Saturdays to December. Lionel Sharpe does parshah Vayeshev. 9:45 a.m.

SHABBAT SERVICE

Erev Shabbat Service followed by choir presentation of African-American spiritual music. Temple Emanu-El, 8 p.m. 416-449-3880.

Saturday, Nov. 27

FUNDRAISER DINNER

Dystonia Medical Research Foundation, Toronto chapter, holds its 22nd annual dinner. 6:30 p.m. Hazelton Place, 111 Avenue Rd. Silent auction and raffle. $55. dystoniacanada.org.

POTLUCK AND GAMES

Women's vegetarian potluck and games night. 7:30 p.m. 30 Holly St. party room (Yonge/Eglinton). Bring a friend and join Kulanu for delicious food, good company and fun games. Opportunity to meet other Jewish gay women. RSVP by Nov. 25 to kulanutoronto@gmail.com, saying what vegetarian/dairy food item you would like to bring.

Sunday, Nov. 28

BOOK TALK

The book Victor Kugler: The Man Who Hid Anne Frank is discussed by the book's author, Rick Kardonne, and Irving Naftolin at Anshei Minsk Synagogue. 7 p.m. Q&A period follows.

GIFT AND CRAFT SHOW

Our Kinda Gift and Craft Show, in support of Hospice Thornhill. 10:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. North Thornhill Community Centre, 300 Pleasant Ridge Ave.

THYROID DISEASE

"Thyroid Disease: The 'Hidden' Health Problem." With Dr. Ronald Goldenberg. Beth Emeth, 9:30 a.m. $10. 416-633-3838 to reserve.

CHANUKAH PREPARATION

Prepare for Chanukah with a program for women. Ulpanat Orot, 45 Canyon Ave. 9:30 a.m. 416-781-1777. Babysitting available.

YOUNG ENTREPRENEURS

Students aged 5-18 are asked to apply in advance for a booth and pay a small fee to participate in Shaarei Shomayim's first craft show and sale. 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Raquel, raquelmilgrom@yahoo.ca.

Tuesday, Nov. 30

'PHOTOGRAPHY LESSON'

"Photography Lesson: Part 2," with Aaron Bacher. Bring your lunch at noon, presentation begins at 12:30 p.m. Coffee and cookies served. Temple Har Zion members $3, guests $5. 905-889-2252.

'PRISONERS IN IRAN'

"Prisoners in Iran." Marina Nemat spent two years as a political prisoner in Evin. She is the author of bestseller Prisoner of Tehran and was awarded the first Human Dignity Prize by European Parliament in 2007. Lunch and learn. Beth Tikvah, 12 p.m. By reservation. 416-221-3433.

RABBI BOWMAN SPEAKS

Rabbi Shmuel Bowman discusses Operation Lifeshield, which provides above-ground air raid shelters to save the lives of civilians under constant attack in Israel. Beth Tikvah. 8 p.m.

Continued on page 29

Reena FOUNDATION
THEATRE NIGHT AFTERNOON
BILLY ELLIOT THE MUSICAL
FEBRUARY 6, 2011
TO ORDER CALL
905.764.1081 EXT.34

WELCOME HOME

Whether it's our pets in residence, our flowering plants or our employees that act more like family than staff, Thorne Mill on Steeles provides day-to-day experiences that are truly the best.

At Thorne Mill on Steeles, we believe your home should also be where new possibilities exist. We provide a welcome environment for people who want to reconnect with their active lifestyle or enhance their current one. Drop in today to experience the energy, activities and choices that await you. You deserve nothing less.

You don't have to travel far to take a holiday. Enjoy a week in our Get-a-way suite and experience senior living at it's finest.

THORNE MILL
ON STEELES
A SUNRISE SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY

484 Steeles Ave. W
[between Yonge and Bathurst]
Thornhill, ON L4J 0C7
905-731-4300
www.thornemillonsteeles.ca

INDEPENDENT LIVING
Assisted Living • Memory Care

Continued from page 28

ART LECTURE

Focus on Art with Doug Purdon. "Great Crimes in Art," 1:30 p.m. Council House, 4700 Bathurst St. $10. info@ncjwc-ts.org, 416-633-5100.

Other News

JEWISH FILM FESTIVAL

Toronto Jewish Film Festival. Nov. 26-28. Ahead of Time, Hidden Children (L'affaire Finaly), A Matter of Size and The Debt. 416-487-3281 to register. $95 for Temple Sinai members, $115 for non-members.

ISRAELI ENGINEERS

"Engineering With Soul: Achievements of Israeli Engineers Without Borders." With Mark Talesnick, associate professor in the Technion faculty of civil and environmental engineering. Beth David. Dec. 2, 7:30 p.m. All welcome. Free.

LINE DANCING

BDBIBA Sisterhood presents line dancing with Annie Wilder-Sharpe. Dec. 7, 8 p.m. Beth David Sisterhood Hall. Sisterhood members free, guests $5.

CHANUKAH PARTY (1)

Solel Congregation of Mississauga's Chanukah party. Dec. 5, 1-3 p.m. $5 per person, $20 a family. Latkes, pizza, sufganiyot, face painters, clowns. 905-820-5915.

CHANUKAH PARTY (2)

Temple Sinai Social Club. Celebrate Chanukah with lights, latkes and laughter. A Touch of Klez performs. Dec. 9, 7:30 p.m. $10. By reservation only. 416-487-3281.

BAYCREST VOLUNTEERS

Baycrest is looking for volunteer gallery guides and arts and crafts facilitators. If you have an art background, skills in jewelry design, drawing, painting, photography, creative writing, storytelling and more, call 416-785-2500 ext. 2572.

JIAS GENERAL MEETING

Annual meeting for Jewish Immigrant Aid Services. Guidy Mamann, of Mamann Sandaluk Immigration Law Firm, on "Recent Trends in Immigration and the Impact on Our Community." Dec. 14, 7 p.m. Prosserman JCC.

ONEG SHABBAT

Shaar Shalom Singles invites the public to a special Chanukah Oneg Shabbat, led by Ben Silverberg. Dec. 3, 8 p.m. Shaar Shalom Synagogue. Kiddush and mix and mingle following. David, 416-224-9494.

BOOK SALE

Dec. 3-5. 70% off Canadian publisher's price on thousands of books. Profits to Crohn's and Colitis Foundation of Canada. 120 Duffield Dr. Markham. Friday, 9 a.m.-8 p.m. Saturday, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday, 11 a.m.-5 p.m.

MUSICAL RECITAL

Concert at Borochov Cultural Centre, 272 Codsell Ave. Dec. 12, 12-2 p.m. Refreshments served. Tax receipts for donations $18 and over. Sponsored by Na'amat Canada.

NCSY CONCERT

30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. Dec. 12, 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsyconcert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211. "Broadway's Great Jewish Composers: Harold Arlen." Music historian Jordan Klapman talks about his life and music. Nov. 25, 1:30 p.m.

Connecting the Generations. Catered lunch plus Jewish heritage visit to ROM. Meet a student. Ext. 155.

Chanukah Musical Celebration. Aviva Chernick entertains. Dec. 9. Reserve by Dec. 6. Ext. 155.

Computer course for beginners. 3 instructors, 6 students. Tuesdays 1 to 3 p.m. for 8 weeks.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Dec. 15, departs 10 a.m. Lunch and Laughter: latkes, etc. Nov. 30, 12 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Social circle – needlepoint, etc. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen. 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Lecture: "Famous Jewish trials: Adolf Eichmann." With Gerald Ziedenberg. Nov. 30, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Chanukah lunch and concert. Dec. 1, 12-2:30 p.m. $13 members, $17 guests.

Wellness lecture: "How Do I Follow a Low Sodium (salt) Diet?" With dietician Ilana Kobric. Dec. 2, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. www.prossermanjcc.com, 416-638-1881.

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 18

What's New

Half The Kingdom challenged us, 20 years ago, to rethink the role of women in Judaism. Now we ask, "What's next?" Nov. 30, 7:15 p.m. Bloor Cinema. Optional screening of movie at 6 p.m.

Family Programs: Shabbat Party, Preschool Dance, Sports With Jay and Sing-along with Deborah Maes. Monique Shapiro. Ext. 4012.

Not your usual potato latkes. This class for adults puts a new spin on traditional holiday food. Make latkes out of sweet potato, zucchini, beets with cumin and coriander and traditional potato. Dec. 1, 7-9 p.m. Members $25, guests $35. With Ellen Grossman.

"The Female Ruse: Stories of Women's Deception in Genesis" with Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Rachel Adelman. $10 at door. Dec. 13, 7:30-9:30 p.m. Room 105.

Registration for January courses open. Study recorder, Latin dance, acting, folk dance, etc.

Chanukah party. Latkes and entertainment with Shaya Petroff. Free. Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m.

Friday night dinner, Nov. 26 with Jewish singles group Plenty o Gefiltefish. meetup.com/plenty-o-gefiltefish or ext. 4235.

Intermediate line dancing. No partner necessary. Fridays, 10:30-11:30 a.m. Pay at the door.

"God, Torah, Israel: The Jewish Tripod." How do we deal with Judaism's three big ideas – revelation, authority and community? And how do they guide the theory and practice of liberal Jewish life? Dec. 2-16. Members $90, guests $130, students/seniors $50.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel holds services Sundays, 8 a.m., and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Complete kosher breakfast after services. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

Toronto Jewish Film Society. 2011 subscription season selling out. Eight great films from January to December on selected Sundays at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. Joelle: ext. 139 to register.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22 regular, $18 group. Ext. 0.

1960s-themed Book Salon and Coffee House. Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m. Harold Troper discusses his new book, The Defining Decade, with Dan Mendelsohn Aviv. Musical performances feature songs from and inspired by the '60s. Ext. 154.

Nov. 28, 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m. "We've Come a Long Way – or Have We?" Equality, inclusiveness, and innovation in Jewish life, lecture with Aviva Goldberg. $9 drop in. sharonis@mnjcc.org, ext.154.

Book launch, Nov. 29, 7 p.m. Jacobs Lounge. Adam Seelig's literary debut, Every Day in the Morning (slow). Ext. 154.

Chanukah cooking workshop. Nov. 30, 7-9 p.m., with Elise Burton. Ext. 154.

Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m. Family Chanukah celebration. Ext. 277.

Media Mondays, lectures with film clips. Nov. 29, 7 p.m. Contemporary foreign-language cinema. Eye Weekly film critic Adam Nayman examines recent art-house exports. $12, $6 for students with ID. Ext 606, esthera@mnjcc.org.

Utah's Crying, an original rock musical. Dec. 2-4, 8 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $15 online, $20 at the door. utahscrying.com, 416-731-7253.

Toronto Jewish Film Society presents God Is Great... I Am Very Small, with Audrey Tatou. Shlomo Schwartzberg speaks. Dec. 5, 4 and 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. Tickets sold 15 minutes prior to screen times. $15, $10 for ages 18-29 (7:30 screening only). esthera@mnjcc.org, ext. 606

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

SUPPORTING ISRAELIS WITH INTELLECTUAL DISABILITIES: Canadian Friends of AKIM-Israel Association for the Mentally Handicapped gathered recently to hear retired admiral Amichai Ayalon speak about the work of AKIM. From left are Olga Eisen, Alex Eisen, Saul Feldberg, Ayalon, Toby Feldberg, Diane Richler, Alexander Serota and Michael Sax. [Erin Sullivan photo]

Cuisinart 15 Piece Compact 350 Watt Personal Blender
Perfect for Shakes N' Smoothies, Baby Food, Sauces N' Soups
• BPA FREE Containers • 3 Year Warranty
Lowest Price In Ontario
59.99
KIT
Compare at 69.99
Chop, Grind, Crush & Blend!
Full Money-Back Refund Policy!
Always 1st Quality!
THE NEW ADVENTURE!
WAREHOUSE OUTLET
125 Tycos Dr.
Cayne's
THE SUPER HOUSEWARE Store
Shop Online at www.caynehousewares.com
112 BONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont.
One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St.
905-764-1188
Mon-Fri 9-9
Sat&Sun 10-8

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Cutler, Leah	Oct. 28/10	3580 Bathurst St
Gastfreund, Josek	Oct. 29/10	64 North Meadow
Goldhar, Jack	Oct. 30/10	477 Dell Park
Kahn, Nathan	Oct. 30/10	3 Duplex Ave
Czaryski, Barbara	Oct. 30/10	10 Kenneth Ave
Moskoske, Benjamin	Oct. 30/10	29 Clevedon St
Schonberger, David	Oct. 30/10
Lorber, Aaron Alfred	Nov. 4/10	40 Reiner Rd
Brenner, Irwin	Nov. 4/10	4001 Bayview Ave
Plachta, Nathan	Nov. 2/10	Private
Cohen, Charles	Nov. 2/10	4300 Bathurst St
Tolson, Ruth	Nov. 3/10	170 Red Maple Rd
Raymond, Harry	Nov. 3/10	4 Glen Edyth Dr
Muller, Susan	Nov. 5/10	260 Betty Ann Dr
Ingel, Yosef	Nov. 6/10	38 Oxford St
Richards, George	Nov. 6/10	Private
Wolfstadt, Elizabeth Shirley	Nov. 6/10	8 Covington Rd
Tsimberg, Yana	Nov. 5/10	625 Finch Ave. W
Posin, Lottie	Nov. 5/10	Private
Geist, Isaac	Nov. 7/10	7300 Yonge St
Smith, Arlene	Nov. 7/10	82 Buttonwood Av
Ivanova, Anna	Nov. 7/10	Private
Wulf, Lea	Nov. 9/10	3580 Bathurst St
Wagman, Beatrice	Nov. 9/10	645 Castlefield Ave
Perlamutrova, Sofa	Nov. 10/10	Private
Aberbach, Etka	Nov. 11/10	3560 Bathurst St
Mazor, Toby	Nov. 11/10	86 Crown Heights
Freedman, Rose	Nov. 11/10	55 Ameer Ave
Judelman, Shenella	Nov. 13/10	644 Sheppard Ave
Kremer, Esther	Nov. 13/10	550 Cummer Ave
Fischer, Klara	Nov. 13/10	14 Blue Forest Dr
Pliskow, Ruth	Nov. 13/10	541 Finch Ave W

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Marvin Fox	Nov 7/10	95 Overbrook Pl
Dave Moskot	Nov 7/10	110 Promenade Cir
Rose Rubinoff	Nov 7/10	11 Mallaby Rd
Bugsy Golosky	Nov 8/10	55 Skymark Dr
Morris Sheridn	Nov 9/10	2075 Bayview Ave
Saul Linder	Nov 9/10	64 Old Colony Rd
Tillie Bildner	Nov 9/10	150 Heath St W
Uriel Rozen	Nov 10/10	88 Boultbee St
Ruth Greenberg	Nov 9/10	1 Concorde Place
Ann Singer	Nov 10/10	866 Sheppard Ave W
Freda Stern	Nov 11/10	11 Townsgate Dr
Syma Kosher	Nov 11/10	9 Sandale Gardens
Irwin Rose	Nov 11/10	9 Fairway Heights Cr
Donna Schachter	Nov 10/10	32 Camberwell Rd

Judith Irene (Joey) Greenspoon ז"ל

Passed away in Calgary on Oct. 26th, 2010, at age 55, after a brief battle with colon cancer. Beloved daughter of Murray Greenspoon and the late Mildred (Emilia) Greenspoon, sister of Sylvie (Rick Levine) and Bernie Greenspoon. Joey is survived by her children Kati LeClair and Adam LeClair, Calgary, her nephews, Aaron and Samuel Levine of Ottawa and many close and loving friends and relatives. Joey used her skills in Reiki and spiritual healing, working with seniors and battered women. She battled MS for 30 years with courage and ingenuity, using her knowledge to help others. Joey lives on in our hearts. Her legacy of helping others and healing continues to inspire us.

Donations in her memory may be made to the MS Society or to Holocaust Education. Cards may be mailed to Ottawa.

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH
• HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE
• DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
COR
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

On Campus

Queen's U rector censured for speaking out against Israel

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

A Queen's University student rector was censured by the university's student government after he used his Remembrance Day speech as a platform to speak out against Israel.

Speaking in front of a large crowd at the university's Remembrance Day ceremony, Nick Day began by talking about his family's contribution to World War II. He then went on to discuss the First Nations people in Canada and the Rwandan genocide before landing on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"My grandfather would have been troubled by the international silence on Palestinian human rights," Day said.

"He would have been dismayed by the following order, issued by the Israeli Defence Force's central command to its soldiers: 'When our forces encounter civilians during the war or in a raid, the encountered civilians may, and even must, be killed. Under no circumstances should an Arab be trusted, even if he gives the impression of being civilized.'"

It is this statement that troubles Mitchell Rattner, the president of Queen's Israel on Campus.

The IDF command that Day quoted, Rattner said in a written statement, has some serious omissions. The actual quote, taken from Edward Said's book The Question of Palestine, is: "When our forces encounter civilians during the war or in the course of a pursuit or a raid, the encountered civilians may, and by halachic standards even must be killed, whenever it cannot be ascertained that they are incapable of hitting us back. Under no circumstances should an Arab be trusted, even if he gives the impression of being civilized."

Day's "omissions betray his intent to condemn Israel and inspire anti-Israel sentiment, even at the cost of false misrepresentation," Rattner said in a statement.

"From Day's presentation, one might logically conclude that this quotation reflects current official government policy, but this is untrue.

"To provide accurate context, this quotation was published in a theological pamphlet during the 1973 Yom Kippur War. The quote was originally issued by Rabbi Abraham Avidan, an army chaplain for the Israel Defence Forces, not a combat officer or politician… This quote is therefore not government policy; rather, it is a rabbinic interpretation of wartime Halachah. Following a condemnation of the pamphlet by Mapam [an Israeli political party], it was retracted," he continued.

Nick Day
[photo courtesy Queen's Journal]

"The section on Israel is the only part of [Day's] speech where he presents a direct quote, which… was terribly misquoted," Rattner said in an e-mail to The CJN. "His remarks about Israel are meant, in my opinion, to be divisive, to sting and thereby have the effect of alienating students."

Jessica (who requested that her last name be withheld), a Queen's University graduate student who was at the ceremony, said that parts of Day's speech were inappropriate.

"I think it was important and courageous to mention ongoing conflicts and crises around the world, [but] it was not appropriate to misquote Israeli military policy in a way that vilified Israel. His speech made me uncomfortable as he presented biased and selective information that misrepresented Israel and the conflict," she said.

On the same day as the ceremony, Queen's student government, the Alma Mater Society (AMS), passed a proposed censure of Day at a regularly scheduled meeting of the AMS Assembly. Fourteen members voted for it and 10 against, while 11 abstained.

"Misinformed, anti-Israel rhetoric goes unchallenged on too many campuses, and I was impressed that the AMS responded to it so quickly," Jessica said. "I feel it established an important precedent. Should student leaders desire to use their positions to speak publicly about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, they will have to ensure an adherence to the facts."

Rattner, however, said he is not entirely satisfied with the outcome of the meeting.

"The censure only dealt with the inappropriate timing of his remarks and didn't specifically address what he said. As president of Israel on Campus at Queen's, I felt it was my responsibility to respond to his specific comments about Israel.

"Nick Day made no effort to apologize. In fact, he said that were he to be presented with this same opportunity again, he would do the same thing," Rattner said.

"If he were not rector and his comments were not made to a 'captive audience' on such a day, I would feel differently. We are all entitled to our opinions. It just frustrates me that he can make such comments about Israel, especially in this venue, and completely get away with it."

Day declined to be interviewed, however, updates from his Twitter account made after he spoke confirm his stance. He tweeted: "I stand by my speech! Will continue to speak out" and "my duty is to speak my mind and live up to my campaign promise on social issues."

'Our inheritance is the survivors' legacy'

Hillel Montreal's recent annual Shabbat dinner celebrated the lives of Holocaust survivors. Seen here from left are Holocaust survivor Olga Sher, Kortney Shapiro and her grandmother, Vera Gold, at Hillel Montreal's annual Shabbat dinner. To read Kortney Shapiro's account of the event, please go to cjnews.com

A dreidel, a menorah, some Chanukah gelt... Chanukah gifts you gave your children

Now that they're all grown up, give them something that will connect them to the community throughout the year

Give them their own subscription to The Canadian Jewish News

From now through the holiday The CJN is discounting gift subscriptions by $10

To order, call

1-866-849-0864

and use promo code N10CHK or complete the coupon

New addresses only

The Canadian Jewish news

P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

New addresses only
$27.80* for 1 YR. in PRINT
Quote Code: N10CHK
Canadian Delivery, New Address Only
*Expires Dec. 31st 2010

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$20.95*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑
*H.S.T INCLUDED	H.S.T. #R105201149
$135.00 CND	1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN	❑

Name_____

Address_____

City_____

Province_____ Postal Code_____

Telephone_____

Email_____

❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift

Subscriber No._____

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.

AMOUNT ENCLOSED $_____

CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑

❑ ❑ ❑

NUMBER_____

EXPIRY DATE_____

PRINCIPAL FOR LEADING ELEMENTARY JEWISH DAY SCHOOL

Solomon Schechter Academy, a leading Conservative Jewish elementary day school committed to academic excellence, is seeking a dynamic, motivated individual to fill the position of Principal and education leader of the school to commence on August 15, 2011.

The Principal will report to the Head of School. S/He will be the academic leader of the school, responsible for all matters relating to pedagogy, faculty (engagement and evaluation) and curriculum.

The successful candidate will have:

- An educational vision consistent with the mission statement of the school
- Educational leadership ability and experience in an administrative capacity
- Strong organizational and communication skills
- A degree in Education
- Working knowledge of the QEP (Quebec Education Program)
- Working knowledge of the French or Hebrew language is an asset

Please send curriculum vitae to the Academy's Head of School to shamerman@solomonschechter.ca. Website www.ssa.qc.ca

Deadline to submit applications: December 10, 2010. We thank everyone who applies, but only those candidates eligible for an interview will be contacted.

0914

On Campus

Suzuki distances himself from tour

Continued from page 3

"I have news for the people in Ottawa: everybody else in the world is already talking to Hamas... If you want to resolve a conflict, you have to talk to the people who are engaged in the conflict."

Michael Brown, who is a professor at York University, said he wishes Galloway had not spoken at York, but feels York is unfairly receiving a lot of excess attention because of it.

"I'm sorry Galloway was on campus," he said. "I would have been much happier if he wasn't.

"[However], he is going to other universities as well and no one's making a fuss about that... York has been very good to Jewish students and the community."

Galloway's next stop, in Montreal on Nov. 17, saw him challenge Immigration Minister Jason Kenney (who was responsible for banning Galloway from entering Canada in 2009) to a boxing match. He also said the Harper government's support of Israel was responsible for Canada's failed UN security council bid.

"I don't understand why this great country of Canada allowed itself to become effectively an embassy for the racist apartheid state of Israel," he said.

Galloway's 10-city tour has also taken him to Halifax, Hamilton, Calgary, Yellowknife, Edmonton and Vancouver.

His visit to Vancouver led to an online movement encouraging supporters of one of the tour's sponsoring organizations to withdraw their endorsements.

Environmental activist David Suzuki; Spencer Herbert, a Vancouver MLA; Dan Chambers, a United Church minister; the Green Party of Canada; and the Green Party of British Columbia have all asked to be removed as supporters of StopWar.

StopWar, which calls itself "Vancouver's Labour/Community coalition of organizations united for justice and peace," brought Galloway to Vancouver on Nov. 22. The organization has, according to its website, 171 (previously 174) endorsing members, some of which have either disbanded or do not exist.

Through the StopStopWar.ca Facebook page and the website stopstopwar.blog.ca, supporters of the project are contacting StopWar's endorsers to inform them of Galloway's support of Hamas and Hezbollah.

When contacted by the StopStopWar movement, Suzuki responded by saying he had never heard of StopWar.

"Thank you for the information. I quite honestly have never heard of this organization and have no idea whether or how my name became associated with it. I have taken your information and demanded the immediate removal of my name," Suzuki's response read.

Suzuki's name was removed from the StopWar website on Nov. 18. However, Irene MacInnes, one of the StopWar founding members, told the National Post she requested and received Suzuki's endorsement previous to the 2003 Iraq War.

Rael Katz is the president of Hillel's Israel Awareness Club at the University of British Columbia and one of the founders of StopStopWar.

The purpose of StopStopWar, which Katz said "transpired very quickly," (the first post on their website was on Nov. 15), "is to contact the organizations of individuals who have committed to StopWar.ca to claiming they are against war in Iraq.

"StopWar is abusing their privilege and abusing their membership base to bring in speakers that contradict the very essence of stopwar.ca," Katz added.

Rev. Gary Paterson of St. Andrew's-Wesley United Church in Vancouver, where Galloway spoke, told the National Post that he rented the space to StopWar not knowing Galloway was the speaker, and made it clear that the talk was not a church-sponsored function.

Galloway's Canadian speaking tour wraps up with a visit to Winnipeg on Nov. 26 and one to Ottawa on Nov. 27.

York U threatens to sue rabbi

Former British MP, George Galloway's first stop on his Free Afghanistan, Free Palestine, Free Speech tour at York University last week has left York threatening a lawsuit against a local rabbi.

Rabbi Ahron Hoch of the Dan Family Village Shul sent a mass e-mail prior to Galloway's visit encouraging community members to take action against it.

"George Galloway is a known supporter of Hamas and an activist for terrorist organizations," Rabbi Hoch wrote in the e-mail.

"[York President Mamdouh Shoukri] defends the decision to allow him to speak under the pretext of freedom of speech. The concept of freedom of speech was never meant to be used... to spread support for terror, murder and genocide.

In a Nov. 15 letter, York's office of the counsel asked Rabbi Hoch to cease and desist.

"You state that 'Mr. Shoukri has again showed his amazing tolerance for antisemitism and lack of vigilance regarding the feeling of safety for Jewish students on campus.' This statement is untrue, is harmful to President Shoukri and his reputation, and to that of the university... We expect a retraction and apology forthwith."

Alex Bilyk, York's director of media relations, said a lawsuit against Rabbi Hoch is to be determined.

"The trigger for the letter... was the fact that Rabbi Hoch suggested Dr. Shoukri was antisemitic and not concerned about the safety of Jewish students on campus. That's untrue," he added.

Rabbi Hoch, however, said he never called Shoukri antisemitic.

"I want to make something very, very clear. I'm sure Mr. Shoukri is an honourable man, a man of peace. I never accused him of being antisemitic.

"If a speaker comes in that supports [Hamas], then you are being tolerant of antisemitism."

Prof. Michael Brown, who teaches at York University, said the lawsuit is "not going to happen.

"[It is an] empty threat and possibly a stupid one... an excellent way for York to ensure that the Jewish community be angry," he added.

— L.S.

חנוכה שמח

James Pasternak

School trustee for York Centre wishes the residents in our community a very Happy Hanukkah

Trustee James Pasternak – York Centre
5050 Yonge Street – 5th Floor
Toronto, Ontario
M2N 5N8

Phone: 416-395-8406
Fax: 416-397-3114
Email: james.pasternak@tdsb.on.ca
www.tdsb.on.ca/pasternak

Toronto District School Board

Chanukah Food & Gift Ideas

Relax and enjoy something fried

By SUE EPSTEIN
Special to The CJN

At a time when watching every calorie passes for "virtue" or "goodness" and eating high-calorie foods is seen as "bad," one of the things I love about Chanukah is the freedom to enjoy fried foods without feeling guilty. After all, the miracle was about oil, not "oven-baked."

You don't have to go overboard: eat fried foods judiciously, but for this one week, or at least a day or two of Chanukah, relax and enjoy something special cooked in oil to commemorate that miracle.

Israelis eat sufganiyot, the French eat beignets, Americans eat donuts. In the southern part of the United States, fritters are very popular. Every country or region has some form of fried dough that is popular at Chanukah.

Whether it's sufganiyot, donuts, beignets or fritters, all of them are easier to make than you think. In most recipes, the dough can be mixed just before you are about to fry them.

Fried food, whether it be chicken, fish or sweets, will be greasy if the oil used isn't hot enough. The oil should reach 375 so that the food will not absorb the oil. Also, do not prick the food with a fork or knife while it is frying. Remove the food from the oil when it's done and drain on crumpled paper towel. The reason for crumpling the paper towel is so that the food doesn't sit on the oil drenched paper and reabsorb the oil.

I have not given specific amounts in these recipes because the number will depend of the size you make.

BANANA BEIGNETS

3/4 cup flour
2 tbsp. sugar plus 2 tsp.
1 tsp. baking powder
3/4 cup plus 2 tbsp. pareve milk, water or apple juice
1 egg
oil for deep frying
4 bananas, each quartered crosswise powdered sugar

[Barry A. Kaplan photo]

Mix flour, sugar and baking powder in a bowl. Add liquid and egg and stir until smooth. Heat oil in deep fryer or heavy, deep skillet to 375.

Working in batches, dip bananas into batter and then carefully add to oil. Cook until golden brown, about 3 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Serve with good quality store-bought caramel sauce. Pour caramel sauce onto plates. Set bananas on top of sauce. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve.

APPLE FRITTERS

1 cup boiling water
1/2 cup (1 stick) margarine or butter
1 cup flour
4 eggs
2 cups peeled, diced apples sugar, powdered or granulated cinnamon (optional)
oil for frying

In a medium-sized saucepan, heat the butter or margarine and water together, until the butter is melted. Add the flour all at once, and stir vigorously until the dough forms a ball. Remove from the heat and allow to cool for 5 minutes. Add 1 egg, and beat until it is thoroughly combined. Repeat, adding the remaining eggs one at a time and beating thoroughly after each one. The dough will be very stiff. Add diced apples and mix until combined.

Heat the oil to 375. Place the sugar and cinnamon, if you are using it, into a large paper bag. Place the dough in the hot oil by teaspoonfuls. Do not try to crowd the pan, as that will lower the temperature and make them greasy. Fry until golden on one side. Turn and complete frying. Lift them from the oil with a slotted tool and place on crumpled paper towels for a moment to drain, then put them into the sack with the sugar. Shake to coat them, then remove and put them on a platter. Repeat with the rest of the dough. Serve.

Preserving family recipes

By BEVERLY LEVITT
Special to The CJN

This year my mother, Celia Levitt, will celebrate her 93rd Chanukah.

In our family, holiday gatherings are always potluck – picture three generations bustling about our very different kitchens, recreating recipes passed down by our mamas and grandmas for more than 100 years.

Although I consider myself a fairly accomplished latke maker, I find myself calling mom at least 20 times – "Should I use peanut oil or safflower?" "How can I make my latkes stay crisp for more than two minutes?" And finally, "If I don't put zucchini and garlic into the batter, will you eat them?"

Truth, I already know the answers to my questions, but I love that I can still call her for advice. And as much as I like asking the questions, that's how much she loves answering them.

Somehow it restores the balance. It's hard when your daughter grows up, but even harder when your mother grows old.

For years, mom and dad made the latke batter for our annual Chanukah party. Actually she directed – he grated. Since our extended family is 50-strong, that was no mean feat. Nobody could figure out why her latkes were more delicious than anyone else's. I knew the secret. But I wasn't talking.

Like my mother, who was keeper of the kingdom of both of my grandmas' recipes, I struggled for years with their Ashkenazi delicacies from Poland and Russia: brisket and tzimmes, potato kugels, chopped liver, which all but shout, "Ummm… we're home." These recipes have soul, and nobody makes them like my mother.

When I saw Pamela Hensley Vincent's Jewish-Sicilian Cookbook (Overlook Press), which, she admits, she wrote, not because she's the world's greatest cook, but to pay tribute to her parents, grandparents and husband, I loved the book and its intent – preserving family memories through recipes.

The chapters have one-word titles – Yetta, Manny, Gail, Jack and Duke – with photos, recipes and remembrances. I loved that the photos showed all the relatives when they were young, as they aged and finally, the last few photos she'd taken of them. I felt closer to my family just looking at hers.

When we met at her book signing in Beverly Hills, Calif., the effusive, former actress confided, "I had a childhood filled with so much beauty, I needed to say thank you to all of them."

She writes, "I remember grandma standing at the kitchen sink for what seemed an eternity, cleaning the chicken, muttering "Feh!" as her nail-bitten but capable little hands pulled the unwanted fat from the bird, preparing it for soup. After the pieces were clean, she would lovingly place them into a large pot and sprinkle coarse salt over them before adding the water. I follow the same ritual."

"Grandma Yetta clearly influenced my decision, 40 years later, to write down the recipes," says Hensley Vincent, who treasures memories of her family gathered around Yetta's immaculate, white-cloth-covered dining table, laughing, arguing, imploring the family matriarch to stop "hovering" and just sit down.

The ritual beginning to every meal was the small platter of fresh, crisp vegetables Yetta would place in the centre of the dining table. A work of art all its own, it seems a healthy bridge from the old world to the new.

I myself was struck with pangs from the past as Pamela described the tradition. I remember my mother serving this same salad practically every night. It strikes everyone but me as strange that raw vegetables are my comfort food.

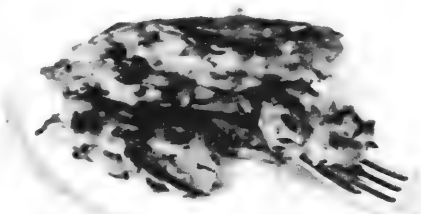
Washington, D.C. artist Mindy Weisel preserves her mother's Old World traditions, handing them down to her three daughters to nourish their own families. She feels close to her mother, Lili Deutsch, as she pours pure olive oil into glass inserts, sets down the wicks and lights the sterling silver menorah just as her mother did in Hungary before the Holocaust.

Lili missed her beautiful home so much when the Deutsches moved to America after the war that she needed everything to be as it was in der haim – in her home in the Old Country.

"It was my mother's fierce desire to keep the beauty she remembered alive," says Weisel, who was born in the displaced persons camp in Bergen-Belsen, Germany.

"My mother instilled in me an appreciation of beauty and an awareness of people's feelings. When I realized I could express my emotions through my art, I was compelled to paint," she says. Weisel's passion and her rage fill her canvases, fraught with the colour blue, her mother's favourite, and often named Remembrances.

Continued on page 36



Nortown FOODS

WE WISH ALL OUR CUSTOMERS A VERY HAPPY & HEALTHY CHANUKAH

CHANUKAH SPECIALS

RIB STEAKS & PRIME RIB ROASTS $6.99lb

Whole Roasted or Smoked TURKEYS $5.99lb carved $6.99lb

BEEF BRISKETS $3.99lb
SINGLE $5.49lb

Enjoy our Delicious Homemade-Style POTATO LATKES
Small $1.25 Large $2.49
Vegetable Latkes $2.49

BONELESS CHICKEN BREASTS $5.49lb

L&L GRILL SAUCE & MARINADE $3.99 375 ml

LEAN MINCED CHICKEN $2.99lb

OUR DELICIOUS COLE SLAW $2.99lb
(Creamy or Vinaigrette)

FRESH PROVIMI BONELESS VEAL SHOULDER ROAST $5.49lb

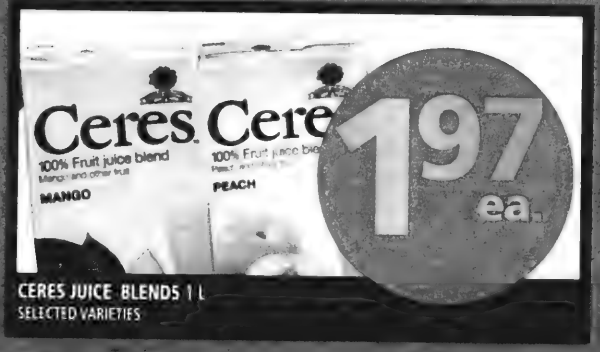
*We now carry naturally raised beef from Paradise Farms, hormone & anti-biotic free

Specials in effect Thursday, November 25th - Sunday, December 5th

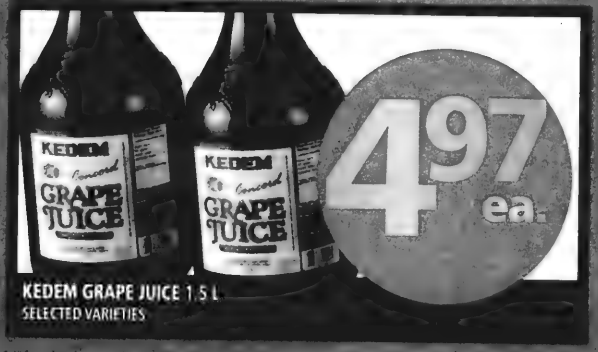
892 Eglinton Ave. W. Toronto 416 - 789-2921
303 York Mills Rd. Toronto 416 - 447-0310
The Promenade Mall Thornhill 905 - 889-1610

Happy Chanukah

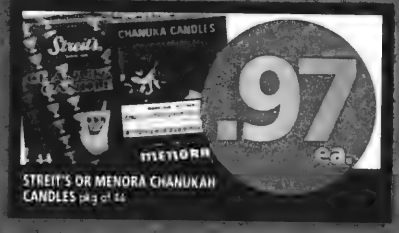
To all our friends, from all of us at Food Basics, may the joy of the Season remain with you throughout the coming year.



CERES JUICE BLENDS 1 L
SELECTED VARIETIES

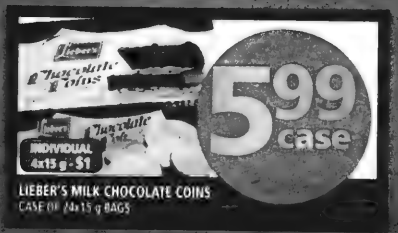


KEDEM GRAPE JUICE 1.5 L
SELECTED VARIETIES

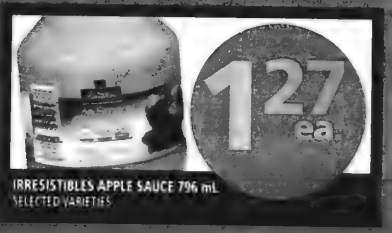


STREIT'S OR MENORA CHANUKAH CANDLES pkg of 44

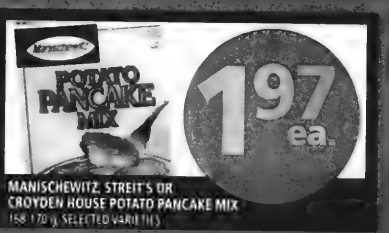
MANISCHEWITZ TAM TAM CRACKERS
226-227 G, SELECTED VARIETIES



LIEBER'S MILK CHOCOLATE COINS
CASE OF 24x15 g BAGS

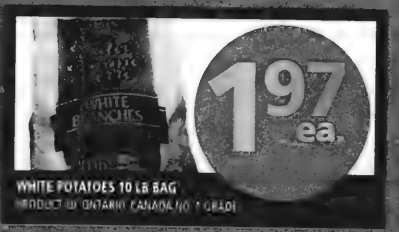


IRRESISTIBLES APPLE SAUCE 796 mL
SELECTED VARIETIES



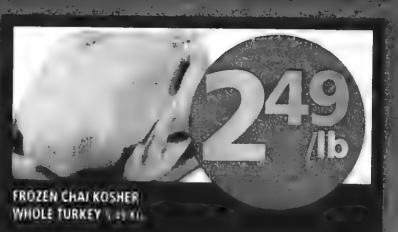
MANISCHEWITZ, STREIT'S OR CROYDEN HOUSE POTATO PANCAKE MIX
158-170 g, SELECTED VARIETIES

KINERET POTATO LATKES 600 g
SELECTED VARIETIES, FROZEN



WHITE POTATOES 10 LB BAG
PRODUCT OF ONTARIO, CANADA NO. 1 GRADE

WHITE MUMS
6 INCH POT



FROZEN CHAI KOSHER WHOLE TURKEY 6-10 KG

WE WILL NOT BE KNOWINGLY UNDERSOLD BY OUR MAJOR COMPETITORS ON 1.5 L GRAPE JUICE, CHOCOLATE COINS OR CHANUKAH CANDLES.

food Basics

always more for less!

2, 2010,

LOCATIONS ONLY:

- 300 JOHN STREET, THORNHILL

Mothers share Chanukah favourites

Continued from page 34

Just as Hensley Vincent's cookbook reflects the love she felt for her family, Weisel's paintings evoke the essence of her mother's stories and her feelings.

Weisel also remembers her mother's joy in making wonderful meals for her. For the Jewish holidays, especially, she cooks her mother's favourite Hungarian dishes – Chicken Paprikash and Veal Goulash. Like Hensley Vincent, Weisel published a cookbook, The 7-Day Colour Diet (Capital Books, 2003) and included the famous Hungarian chicken recipe.

"My mother was a wonderful cook but it was hard getting recipes from her," Weisel laughs. "She never used them. She used to say they were an American tradition. Everything she cooked was by feel. That's the way I cook too," Weisel smiles. "I learned to cook by emulating my mother."

Chef Laura Frankel inherited her parents' attitudes toward food, albeit in a much more modern setting. The chef/owner of Shallots Bistro in Skokie, Ill., was encouraged to look at cooking as creative, challenging, but most of all, fun. When she was a teenager her dad, Gunnard, embarrassed her by what she considered "strange combinations." Imagine melting sharp cheddar cheese atop a slice of apple pie.

Frankel laughs at her provincial teenage tastes but remembers how she desperately wished she could have salami on rye with mustard like the other kids. Now the innovative chef respects his sense of wonder at discovering new creations and revels in exciting new combinations at her restaurant.

Frankel's mother, Charlene, was, as her daughter calls her, "your basic purist." Her soup was made from scratch, and there were no packaged, canned or processed foods in the pantry. As a result Laura fills her kosher restaurant with seasonal, organic produce, sustainable poultry and meat. If she can't find wild salmon, salmon is scratched from the menu that day.

Frankel remembers how much fun her parents had as they cooked together. It created a warm family unity, she says. It's no wonder that both she and her brother love to cook.

Frankel wrote an award-winning cookbook straight from her heart, Jewish Cooking for all Seasons. It's dedicated to her parents.

"When you sit down to write about people you love, it just flows out of you," Hensley Vincent says. "I visited haunts both magical and sorrowful. As I went along, I recognized the cookbook was, in fact, a scrapbook locked away all those years."

As our family gets older and the thought of losing them looms large, especially around the holidays, it's a rewarding pleasure to spend time recording sweet moments of their life, including their favourite recipes. Have a dedicated tape recorder and keep it with you, as the best conversations are usually impromptu. Be sure to label each tape. Ask for photos throughout their life so that you can have a pictorial chronology. It's a wonderful tribute to them to assemble a book of meaningful moments.

As a relative gets older, gather the ingredients for their signature dishes and get in the kitchen with them. Just as older people love talking about their past, they'll be flattered to conduct a cooking demonstration. As they're throwing in a pinch of this and a handful of that, before the ingredient hits the bowl, carefully measure each item. Even if you have to redo the amounts later, you'll have a basis.

Take, for example, the way my mother starts with the basic latke recipe, and for more nutrition, grates celery, garlic, zucchini and parsnips into the batter, and for extra flavour, folds in fresh parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme. She isn't being sacrilegious – she says even sacred recipes can be enhanced.

Celia runs her kitchen the same way she lives her life. The ultimate iconoclast, she believes that even if something seems "carved in stone," it should be examined, experimented with and, if necessary, redefined.

ZUCCHINI AND POTATO LATKES

From Celia Levitt, developed at home in her kitchen.

1 lb. zucchini, peeled
1 lb. red and white potatoes, peeled and grated
1 medium onion, peeled and grated
2 garlic cloves, pressed
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tsp. salt
white pepper to taste
1/2 tsp. dried basil
1/2 tsp. dried oregano
1/2 tesp. dried thyme
1/4 tsp. cayenne
1/4 cup toasted whole wheat bread crumbs
peanut oil

Grate zucchini down to the seeds; discard seeds. Squeeze out liquid. Add potatoes and onion. Put mixture into mesh strainer to remove excess liquid. Add garlic to mixture, then squeeze through cheesecloth. Mix pulp with eggs, salt, spices and bread crumbs. Fashion into circles. Heat oil in skillet; drop mixture into oil by tablespoonfuls and fry until golden brown. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Continued on page 37

MY ZAIDY'S
PIZZA AND BAKERY

Happy Chanukah!

TRY OUR DELICIOUS
SUVGANIOT order early

Now with 3 locations in Thornhill to serve you

7241 Bathurst St. 905-763-0373
441 Clark Ave. West 905-731-3029
9340 Bathurst St. (at Rutherford) 905-832-4800

YITZ'S
346 Eglinton Ave. W., at Avenue Rd.
DINNER SPECIALS
Daily

POACHED SALMON & Chef Salad with Dijon Vinaigrette Dressing $11.95

MEAT BALLS & PENNE with homemade Tomato Meat Sauce $8.95

BREADED VEAL CUTLET with homemade Spanish Vegetable Sauce and Caesar Salad $9.95

HONEY GARLIC MIAMI RIBS and French Fries $9.95

Weekend

Choice of Soup
ROAST BREAST OF TURKEY served with
Gravy & Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes & Carrots
Slice of Pie
$15.95

Choice of Soup
ROAST BRISKET OF BEEF
served with Gravy & Horseradish
Mashed Potatoes & Carrots
Slice of Pie
$15.95

SOUP TIME AT YITZ'S
Redeem this coupon when you join us for dinner.
With every $35 restaurant bill (before tax), receive a jar of Yitz's homemade soup, a $7.99 value.
(not included: chicken in the pot; flunken in the pot or in borscht) expires January 31, 2011

MRS. WHYTE'S
SINCE 1892

HAPPY CHANUKAH
Add some zest to your holiday table with Mrs. Whyte's Kosher Pickles and their other great Kosher Products

Chanukah traditions are passed down

Continued from page 36

YUKON GOLD POTATO LATKES

From Laura Frankel, chef/owner of Shallots Bistro in Skokie, Ill.

3 Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and cut into medium dice
3 Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and grated
2 leeks, finely chopped
3 eggs, lightly beaten
salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup flour or as needed canola oil for frying dried cranberries or fresh pomegranate seeds for garnish

Place diced potatoes into a medium saucepan with enough water to cover. Cook until tender over medium high heat, about 5 to 8 minutes. Drain thoroughly. Combine cooked potatoes with grated potatoes and leeks. Fold in eggs, salt and pepper, using enough flour to bind the mixture. If the latke batter is too dry, add another beaten egg. It should resemble a loose cookie dough.

Fill a large sauté pan with oil to a depth of 2 inches. Heat oil until blazing hot. Carefully drop batter by tablespoonfuls into the oil. Lightly flatten the top with a spatula. Cook until golden brown, about 3 minutes on each side.

Drain on paper towels and serve immediately, or put into moderate 250 oven and cover with foil until ready to serve. Garnish with dried cranberries or fresh pomegranate seeds. Serve with cranberry applesauce. Makes about 2 dozen 3-inch latkes.

CRANBERRY APPLESAUCE

From Laura Frankel

6 Granny Smith apples, peeled and cored
1/2 cup sweet white wine (optional)
2 cups fresh or frozen cranberries
1 1/2 to 2 cups sugar
1 cinnamon stick

Place apples, wine, if using, and the cinnamon stick in a medium saucepan. Add enough purified water to barely cover apples. Cover pan and place it over medium heat. Cook apples until quite soft and fragrant, about 15 minutes. Let cool.

Drain apples, reserving liquid, and place them in a bowl. Mash apples with a fork; set aside. Place cranberries in the same saucepan and add back the apple cooking liquid. Add additional liquid if necessary to cover the cranberries. Add sugar and cook over medium heat until cranberries are "popped" and quite thick, about 15 to 20 minutes. Pour cranberries through a fine sieve to remove skins. Stir cranberries into the apples until combined. Adjust sweetness if necessary. The sauce will keep covered in the refrigerator for 5 days, or can be frozen for 3 months. Makes 3 to 4 cups.

HENRIETTA'S SALAD WITH DUKE'S RUSSIAN DRESSING

Adapted from The Jewish-Sicilian Cookbook by Pamela Hensley Vincent (Overlook Press, 2004)

1 large head organic iceberg or romaine lettuce
3 carrots, peeled and thinly sliced into sticks
3 stalks celery, trimmed and thinly sliced into sticks
6 whole scallions, trimmed
1 large beefsteak tomato, in wedges
1 medium cucumber, sliced into thick rounds
2 hard boiled eggs, peeled and cut in quarters

Russian dressing juice of 1 lemon
2 tbsp. apple cider vinegar
1 garlic clove, crushed
1 tsp. chili sauce
1/4 cup olive oil
1 tsp. seasoned salt
pinch of sugar

Place lettuce leaves, carrot and celery sticks, scallions, tomato wedges cucumber slices and hard boiled eggs artfully on a ceramic tray in the middle of the dining table.

For the dressing: In a small bowl combine all ingredients and mix well. Family or guests will make their own salads by taking vegetables that please them and tossing with a spoonful of dressing.

CHICKEN PAPRIKASH

From Mindy Weisel's mother, Lili Deutsch, who loved making it on Chanukah because it reminded her of home in Hungary (in Yiddish it was "in der haim")

1 large onion, minced
1/2 pound cremini mushrooms, sliced
1 tbsp. olive oil or as needed
1 chicken, cut into quarters
1 to 2 cloves garlic, peeled and pressed
1 to 2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. imported paprika
2 tsp. dried basil, crushed
1/2 tsp. oregano
1/2 tsp. rosemary (optional)

Preheat oven to 350. Sauté onion and mushrooms in oil until light golden brown. Rub chicken with fresh garlic; season with salt, pepper, paprika, basil, oregano and rosemary. Place chicken pieces in casserole and cover with onions and mushrooms. Bake, covered, for 45 minutes and uncovered for 30 minutes. Baste several times while chicken is baking.

everyone loves

$22.99

- Atrium on Bay 312 Yonge St. 416.977.6677
- 2300 Yonge St. 416.485.1244
- Sherway Gardens 416.621.4465
- Leslie St. 416.493.4444
- Markville Mall 905.470.7400
- Erin Mills Town Centre 905.828.4344
- Promenade Mall 905.764.3444
- Centerpoint Mall 416.226.4444
- Yorkdale Mall 416-785.8881
- Vaughan Mills 905-669-2544

The PICKLE BARREL always something for everyone contact your nearest location or call catering at 416.493.4333

Happy Chanukah

May the Joy of the Season remain with you throughout the coming year.

4.99 ea.

KEDEM GRAPE JUICE
1.5 L
Selected Varieties

1.99 /lb

FRESH CHAI KOSHER WHOLE CHICKEN
4.39/kg

1.99 ea.

CERES JUICE BLENDS
1 L
Selected Varieties

2.49 ea.

MANISCHEWITZ TAM TAM CRACKERS
226-272 g
Selected Varieties

1.99 ea.

MANISCHEWITZ, STREIT'S OR CROYDEN HOUSE POTATO PANCAKE MIX
168 - 170 g
Selected Varieties

1.29 ea.

IRRESISTIBLES APPLE SAUCE
796 mL
Selected Varieties

2$ FOR 5

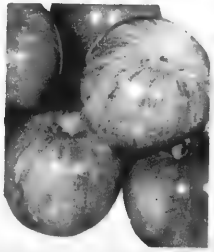
SWEET RED PEPPERS
Product of Honduras,
No. 1 Grade
pkg of 4

2.99 ea.

KINERET POTATO LATKES
600 g
Selected Varieties
Frozen

5.99 case

LIEBER'S MILK CHOCOLATE COINS
Case of 24 x 15 g bags



.88 /lb

ROYAL GALA APPLES
Product of U.S.A.,
Extra Fancy Grade
1.94/kg

metro
my savings. my life. my metro

Prices effective until Thursday, December 2nd, 2010 at the following Metro locations only:

- 1030 Adelaide St. N., London
- 250 Greenbank Rd., Nepean
- 3090 Bathurst St., North York
- 600 Sheppard Ave., W., North York
- 291 York Mills Rd., North York
- 2300 Yonge St., Toronto
- 656 Eglinton Ave. E., Toronto
- 1390 Major Mackenzie Dr., Vaughan

My Cooking Class is a hands-on primer

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Firefly Books, a local publisher, has just published My Cooking Class, an innovative set of cookbooks sure to appeal to both seasoned and novice hands in the kitchen.

Recipes are presented, step by step from start to finish, in visual sequence.

Every pot, pan and utensil is cleanly photographed.

Better still, each and every ingredient is shown in the correct quantity and in the order in which it will be used.

My Cooking Class thereby takes you as close as you can possibly get to a cooking class without leaving your home.

The series consists of six books.

Middle Eastern Basics, with text by Marianne Magnier-Moreno and photographs by Frederic Lucano, covers a lot of ground.

Appetizers from hummus to spinach dip. Soups and sauces from lentil soup to tarator sauce. Side dishes from couscous to rice pilaf. Meats from roasted lamb to shish kebab. Fish from stuffed trout to monkfish tagine. Desserts from date and walnut cake to rice pudding.

Vegetable Basics, by Jody Vassallo and Clive Bozzar-Hill, is comprehensive, too.

A chapter on roots and tubers zeroes in on a wide range of dishes from french fries to sweet potato crumble. "Fruit-like vegetables" includes vegetable lasagna, eggplant parmigiana and stuffed peppers.

Under the heading of cabbage, you will find delicacies like cabbage rolls and cauliflower with cheese. "Onions" brings on caramelized onion tart and leek and potato soup. "Leafy vegetables" introduces you to salad leaves, arugula and parmesan salad. "Pods and seeds" gives you such treats as corn fritters and stir-fried snow peas.

Pasta Basics, by Laura Zavan and Pierre Javelle, leaves no stone unturned.

You'll learn how to make a variety of pastas and whip up a rainbow of sauces. Recipes for such succulent dishes as eggplant macaroni and fusili with pepper sauce are at your fingertips.

If fish and meat are your preferences, recipes for spaghetti with fresh tuna, anchovy and onion spaghettoni, veal ragout timbale and lamb maltagliati will surely appeal.

As well, there are mouth-watering recipes for salads, lasagna, stuffed pasta and gnocchi.

Sauce Basics, by Kedas Black and Frederic Lucano, complements Pasta Basics.

Pasta sauces run the gamut from bechamel and aioli to pesto and classic tomato. Contemporary sauces include carrot sauce, mustard sauce and bell pepper relish. Salad dressings range from a vinaigrette to a caesar dressing. Sweet sauces include zabbaglione, mango coulis and lemon curd.

Steaming Basics, by Orathay Guillaumont and Pierre Javelle, proves that steam is not hopelessly bland.

You'll discover new condiments (garlic oil), dim sum (fish balls), "easy vegetables" (green peas, mint and ricotta), stuffed dishes (mushrooms with ginger), special suppers (sole rolls) and desserts (banana flans).

Last but not least, Chocolate Basics, by Orathay Guillaumont and Vania Nikolcic, will leave chocoholics pleased and sated.

The chapter on basics is an introduction to pastry cream and egg mousse. "Rich and moist" is a primer on cupcakes and muffins.

"Foamy and creamy" offers cream puffs and the chocolate milkshake, while "crunchy and soft" takes you into the world of cookies, mousse, brownies and pies. Chapters on cakes, truffles, fudge, pralines and macaroons open up fresh new vistas.

These cookbooks, if used faithfully and often enough, can transform you into a confident kitchen pro.

A Family Tradition for over 80 Years
From our family to yours, we wish you a Happy and Healthy Chanukah
חנוכה שמח
Strubs
THE COOLER PICKLE with No Preservatives!
www.strubpickles.com

DAITER'S
CREAMERY & APPETIZER
DAITER'S HOMEMADE LATKES $1.99 EA. BUY 3 GET 1 FREE
DAITER'S OWN MINI LATKES $6.99 DOZ.
DAITER'S OWN HAND SLICED NOVA LOX $29.99 LB. FRESH - NEVER FROZEN
DAITER'S OWN BLINTZES $9.99 6 PK $4.99 3 PK 8 VARIETIES
LANA 0.5% MF COTTAGE CHEESE $5.49 EA. 500 GR.
SPECIALS AVAILABLE TO THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9/2010 OR UNTIL SUPPLIES LAST
3535 BATHURST ST. 416-781-6101
We wish all our Customers a Joyous Chanukah

An Israeli child delights in her freshly baked sufganiyah.

HIGHLAND FARMS

Specials Effective from Thursday November 25th to Wednesday December 1st, 2010

Happy Chanuka to all our valued customers and friends

Kosher Products available at the Dufferin, Mississauga and Vaughan locations only.

69¢ /lb 1.52/kg
Ontario Homegrown
Fresh Cortland Apples
Fancy Grade

3.17 /lb 6.99/kg
Chai Kosher, COR 218
Fresh Whole Chickens

99¢ 3lb cello bag
Ontario Homegrown
Fresh Carrots
No. 1 Grade

2.49 170g pkg
Manischewitz
Potato Pancake Mix
Assorted Varieties

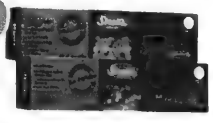
1.19 300g pkg
Maison
Egg Noodles
Fine, Medium & Broad

6.99 /lb 15.41/kg
Chai Kosher, COR 218
Fresh Ground Chicken
Dark Meat

99¢ each
Ontario Homegrown
Fresh Celery
No. 1 Grade, Large Stalk

2.49 272g pkg
Manischewitz
Tam Tams Crackers
Assorted Varieties

1.49 170g pkg
Streits
Soup Mix
Assorted Varieties

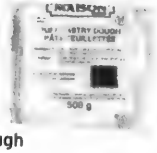


1.99 750g tub
Western
Plain Yogurt
1.1%, 2%, 3.2% & Fat Free

99¢ /lb 2.18/kg
Fresh Sweet Onions
Product of Peru
No. 1 Grade, Jumbo Size

5.99 1.5L bottle
Kedem
Grape Juice
Concord or Muscat

2.49 500g pkg
Maison
Puff Pastry Dough

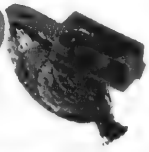


2.49 301g box
Golden, Frozen
Potato Pancakes
Assorted Varieties

79¢ /lb 1.74/kg
Fresh Red Potatoes
Product of U.S.A.
No. 1 Grade

89¢ pkg of 44
Menora
Chanuka Candles

3/1.00 15g pkg
Lieber
Chocolate Coins
Assorted Varieties



2.49 250g tub
Western
Cream Cheese
Regular, Light & Green Onion

VISIT OUR
5 GRAND LOCATIONS
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK.

Special Effective from Thursday, November 25th to Wednesday, December 1st, 2010

DIRECT PAYMENT · VISA · MasterCard

3300 RUTHERFORD RD. AT HIGHWAY 400 905.303.3999

4750 DUFFERIN ST. AT SUPERTEST RD. 416.736.6606

850 ELLESMERE RD. AT KENNEDY RD. 416.298.1999

140 BENNETT RD. AT LAWRENCE AVE. 416.282.5759

50 MATHESON BLVD. AT HURONTARIO ST. 905.501.6900

Store Hours: Monday – Saturday 7:00a.m. till 10:00p.m. Sunday hours 8:00a.m. till 8:00p.m.

Although we strive for accuracy in illustration, copy and regulatory requirements, unintentional errors may occur. We reserve the right to correct any errors

Potato latkes now easier on the knuckles

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

Making potato latkes from scratch has always been a labour of love, especially in the days before food processors, when the potatoes had to be grated by hand

One person with a vivid recollection of this gruelling task is Susanne Keppler. She says she and her sister used to scrape their knuckles at Chanukah time, grating potatoes for their mother's "light and crispy" latkes.

"Grating enough potatoes seemed to take forever," she recalls. "But I endured the pain. The payoff was worth it. No matter how many pancakes I ate, I could never get my fill."

Keppler now makes her own potato latkes, but her daughter, Lillian Stratton, doesn't have to grate the potatoes. Keppler says she doesn't have her mother's latke recipe, but she's getting "similar results" from a recipe she adapted from My Mother's Kitchen by Mimi Sheraton (HarperCollins Publishers 1979).

You can actually make latkes without grating or processing raw potatoes. According to Montreal-based nutritionist, Gitta Bixenspanner, latkes made from cooked potatoes – they're called chremsel in Yiddish – were popular in some parts of Poland and Hungary. "My mother is Hungarian and she prefers latkes made from cooked potatoes. Some people like them salty, while others like them sweeter. Hungarians sweetened their latkes with syrup and sugar."

Bixenspanner says her sweet potato latkes can be broiled or fried. "The squash in the recipe counteracts the sweetness of the sweet potato." Squash is also an ingredient in her Amazing Vegetable Latke recipe.

You can find more of Bixenspanner's latke recipes in the family section of the Aish HaTorah website at www.aish.com. If people have questions about the recipes, they can also contact Bixenspanner at gittastuart@sympatico.ca.

MIMI SHERATON'S TRADITIONAL POTATO LATKES

7 or 8 medium potatoes, about 2 1/2 lb.
1 large onion, peeled (don't scrimp on the onion)
2 eggs
2 tbsp. matzah meal
1 tbsp. salt
1 tsp. pepper (white, if you prefer) vegetable oil for frying

Grate the potatoes and onions into a strainer set over a bowl or grate them together in a food processor. (Hand-grating is better for taste but bad for the knuckles.) Pour processed vegetables into a strainer. Squeeze out as much liquid as possible with a wooden spoon. Pour the potatoes and onions into a dry bowl. Mix in the eggs, matzah meal, salt and pepper. Add a little more matzah meal if the batter seems too loose, but it should not be thick or pasty.

Heat about 1/2 inch of oil in a heavy skillet and test with a little bit of batter. If it sizzles, the oil is hot enough. Make about 2 tbsp. of batter at a time into a thin pancake. Flip when one side is brown. Drain the finished pancakes on paper towels and keep warm until ready to serve. Yields 4 servings.

COOKED POTATO LATKES

3 large potatoes, peeled
3 eggs
1 small onion, grated
1/2 tsp. salt
oil for frying.

Boil potatoes and mash them well. Transfer mashed potatoes to a large mixing bowl. After the potatoes are cool to touch, add eggs, onion and salt. Mix to form a smooth batter. Form batter into patties and fry in a skillet on medium heat until pancakes are golden brown on both sides. Yields 3 servings.

SAVOURY SWEET POTATO LATKES

1 large sweet potato, cooked
1 small butternut squash, cooked
4 eggs
1 tsp. honey
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsp flour
1/2 tsp. nutmeg (optional)
oil for frying (optional)

In a large mixing bowl, combine sweet potato and squash and mash. Add eggs, honey and spices. Form batter into patties. To broil, grease cookie sheet with oil and place patties on the sheet. Broil 10 minutes on each side. To fry, grease a skillet and fry on medium heat until pancakes are golden brown on both sides. Yields 6 servings.

nofrills
lower food prices
1054 Centre St., Vaughan • 1631 Rutherford Rd., Vaughan
270 Wilson Ave., North York • 6220 Yonge St., North York

Happy Chanukah
save on your favourites

Elite instant coffee
200 g
save $5
3.99

Kedem sparkling grape juice
selected varieties
750 mL
save $3.00
2.99

King of the Sea solid tuna
170-198 g
save 30¢
1.29

Alma chocolate or lemon Belgian wafer
250 g
save 50¢
.99

Ceres juices
selected varieties
1 L
save $1.50
1.99

Elite chocolate coins
selected varieties
24 x18 g case
18 g bag .39 ea.
save $9
7.99

Golden Blintzes
frozen selected varieties
368 g
save 90¢
3.99

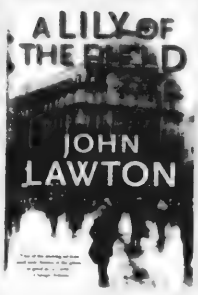
Mother's Own egg noodles
selected varieties
283 g
save 50¢
1.79

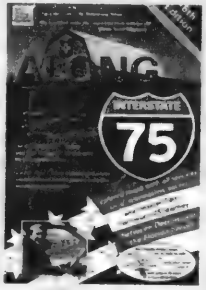
WON'T BE BEAT on Chanukah Candles, Chocolate Coins, Ungar's Gefilte Fish and Kedem Grape Juice 1.5L

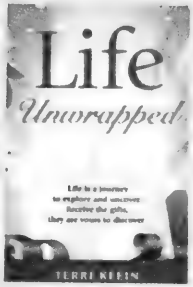
PRICES EFFECTIVE UNTIL THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9TH, 2010

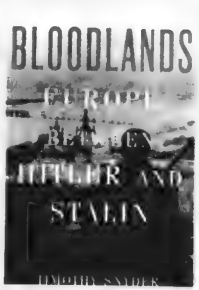
All references to any savings claims (ie. "Save", "was", "1/2 price", etc.) is in comparison to our regular retail. We reserve the right to limit quantities. Some franchise and independent stores may have sold or will sell for less. Product selection may vary and may not be available at all stores. Image prevails when text does not correspond to the description of advertised product. ™ trademarks of Loblaws Inc. © 2010 Loblaws Inc.

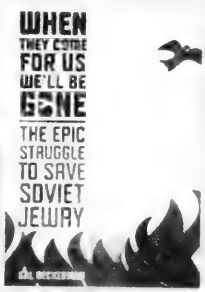
Books for every taste











By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

It is estimated that there are approximately 130 million unique books in the world. Whether fiction or non-fiction, drama or comedy, fantasy or historical, there are books for every kind of person. Here's a sample of recently published books for adults.

Biography

Simon Wiesenthal: The Life and Legends* by Tom Segev, Doubleday

This is the first fully documented biography of legendary Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal. Liberated from the concentration camp at Mauthausen, Wiesenthal made bringing Nazi war criminals to justice his lifelong crusade. With access to Wiesenthal's private papers and records of the U.S., Israeli, Polish and East German secret services, Segev is able to reveal the intriguing secrets of Wiesenthal's life, including his role in the capture of Adolf Eichmann, his controversial investigative techniques, his unlikely friendships with Kurt Waldheim and Albert Speer and his rivalry with Elie Wiesel.

Mordecai: The Life and Times* by Charles Foran, Knopf Canada

This is the definitive, detailed and intimate portrait of Mordecai Richler. It is the first major biography with access to family letters and archives. Award-winning novelist and journalist Charles Foran brings to the pages the richness of Richler's life as a young bohemian, irreverent writer, passionate and controversial Canadian and deeply romantic lover.

History/Politics:

The Ghosts of Europe* by Anna Porter, Douglas & McIntyre

In her latest book, the bestselling author of Kasztner's Train examines the social and economic climate of former Soviet bloc countries. Porter travelled to Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and Hungary to discover whether – and how – democracy has taken root in the countries that were once behind the Iron Curtain. Peter C. Newman called this "a must read."

When They Come For Us We'll Be Gone: the epic struggle to save Soviet Jewry* by Gal Beckerman, HMH

It's all in the title. Beckerman, a reporter with The Forward, draws on newly released Soviet government documents as well as hundreds of interviews with Refuseniks and activists. He shows how small acts of defiance turned into an open struggle in which thousands of activists fought to be allowed to leave the oppression of the Soviet Union.

Bloodlands: Europe Between Hitler and Stalin* by Timothy Snyder, Basic Books

Snyder, an award-winning historian, offers a groundbreaking investigation of the purposeful murder of 14 million people by the Nazi and Soviet regimes. From the famine Josef Stalin directed in Ukraine and the Great Terror of 1937 and '38, to the combined German and Soviet destruction of Poland and the Nazi Holocaust, this is a history of genocide and political mass murder.

Fiction and Fun Stuff:

A Lily of the Field* by John Lawton, Publishers Group Canada

Set in Vienna, London, Canada and the United States, from 1934 to 1948, Lawton's ninth novel follows the loosely parallel lives of cellist Metek Voytek and physicist Karel Szabo at a pivotal moment in history. This historically accurate novel explores the diaspora of two Europeans from the rise of Hitler to the post-atomic age.

Book Lust to Go* by Nancy Pearl, Sasquatch Books

"America's rock star librarian" provides recommended reading for more than 120 destinations around the world. Planning a trip to Rome? Pearl recommends you read Colleen McCullough's Masters of Rome series. Going to New York? Pearl suggests Mark Helprin's great novel Winter's Tale or Adam Langer's Ellington Boulevard: A Novel in a Flat. Great fun for the world traveller.

Along Interstate-75* by David Hunter, Mile Oak Publishing

If you're not really a world traveller but do hibernate in Florida, then this guide to the popular freeway is for you. Containing local knowledge, "insider" tips, and lodging and restaurant recommendations, this mile-by-mile coloured road trip contains over a hundred maps, charts and diagrams and all sorts of information. A must for the snowbird.

Life Unwrapped* by Terri Klein, Celebrate Life Daily Press

This book of inspirational poetry is written by a lifecoach and motivational speaker. Formatted as an easy to negotiate book of poetic insights and reflections, it invites readers to scroll the table of contents and choose the poem they need to help guide them toward personal enlightenment.

the Biggest. the Best. the Original.

Wm. Ashley Annual November Warehouse SALE

save up to 90%*

SALE IS ON NOW!

DON'T MISS Our Best Sale Ever!

save up to 90%* on Brand Names

Wedgwood
Royal Doulton
Waterford • Lenox
Aynsley • Krups
Portmeirion • Atlantis
Rosenthal • Aram
Denby • Dansk
Royal Crown Derby
Villeroy & Boch
Mikasa • Noritake

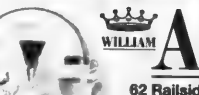
CANADA'S LARGEST GIFT CENTRE

Amazing Warehouse Sale Savings

Holiday Gifts • Contemporary Gifts • Christmas Decor
Home Decor and Furnishings • Housewares • Children's Toys
Casual and Formal Dinnerware Sets • Bath Accessories

ReStocked Daily

Over 40,000 Sq. Ft. of Incredible Savings



SALE HOURS

Wednesday	Nov. 24	10 AM – 9 PM
Thursday	Nov. 25	10 AM – 9 PM
Friday	Nov. 26	10 AM – 9 PM
Saturday	Nov. 27	10 AM – 6 PM
Sunday	Nov. 28	10 AM – 6 PM

(Closed Monday & Tuesday)

William ASHLEY

62 Railside Rd, Toronto • 416-515-SALE
www.WilliamAshley.com/WarehouseSale

*Save up to 90% off the Nat. Sugg. Price or Comp. Reg. Value. We reserve the right to limit quantities. No strollers or car seats permitted. Personal shopping only. Cash, Debit, Visa, Mastercard & Amex. All sales are final. No cheques or credit notes. Not all items illustrated are available. E. & O.E.

Food seen as a factor in identity and adaptation

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

When new immigrants arrived in the United States at the turn of the 20th century, they usually acceded to the pressures of assimilation, adapting to new ways and learning English.

As Jane Ziegelman observes in 97 Orchard: An Edible History of Five Immigrant Families in One New York Tenement, published by HarperCollins, they also went to "extraordinary lengths" to preserve their traditional foods and food customs.

Ziegelman, a food writer and director of the Tenement Museum's culinary centre, has written an altogether fascinating book about the role of food in identity and adaptation.

"Within the immigrant community, food cemented relationships, and immigrants turned to food as a source of ethnic or national pride," she writes.

The focus of her book, the Lower East Side, was a teeming city within a city whose Jewish, German, Irish and Italian inhabitants formed a classic melting pot in urban America.

Ziegelman's account of the German Glockners, the Irish Moores, the Jewish Gumpertzes and Rogarshevskys and the Italian Baldizzis is really a story about the foods they consumed and how they influenced and broadened the gastronomic tastes of Americans.

The Germans brought their taste for herring to a broader segment of the population, introducing Americans to such mouth-watering delicacies as pickled, rolled and smoked herring.

Germans, too, were the progenitors of the delicatessen, which specialized in smoked, brined and spiced meats. In time, however, the New York deli, a beloved institution, would be associated with Jews.

Interestingly enough, the braided challah loaf, hailed as a Jewish invention, was a German staple.

Through the first half of the 19th century, New York's bakers were mostly Scottish and Irish. By the 1860s, the baking industry had passed into the hands of Germans.

Irish immigrants mostly asserted their identity through religion, music and dance rather than food, Ziegelman claims. The exception to this rule was alcohol, mainly Irish whiskey.

In America, as back home, Irish newcomers were attached to a an "oppressively dull" diet consisting of potatoes and buttermilk, oatmeal, turnips, cabbage and bacon, she notes.

Italians revelled in their culinary traditions, regarding them as "cultural touchstones," Ziegelman says.

Apart from pasta, Italians were drawn to olive oil and olives, anchovies, jarred peppers, dried mushrooms, artichokes cured in salt, canned tomatoes and tomato paste, vinegar, herbs like oregano and garlic, cured meats and cheeses.

And Italians, particularly Sicilians, were extremely fond of bread.

At first, Americans showed contempt for Italian fare, but today no national cuisine, as exemplified by spaghetti, is more embraced than Italian.

Jewish immigrants relied at first on a diet of dried peas and beans, potatoes, porridge, rye and black bread, cabbage, turnips and dried and pickled fish.

Like the Irish, Jews depended on the lowly potato because it was cheap and dense in calories and nutrients.

The potato kugel, the mainstay of Polish Jews, was concocted from grated raw potatoes and onions, goose fat, eggs and bread crumbs, all mixed together and baked until golden and crispy.

A Jewish-owned store in New York City in the 1930s.

Chicken noodle soup was a luxury usually reserved for Fridays and holidays.

Goose fat, which represented the essence of goodness, was widely used in Jewish households, but eventually, it was supplanted by chicken fat.

To Jews, the pushcart – a ubiquitous sight in crowded outdoor markets – was a reminder of the old country. Of the 4,000 pushcarts in Manhattan, 2,500 could be found on the Lower East Side.

Ziegelman says that tenement housewives shuttled between the pushcart and the kitchen frequently to ensure the freshness of their meals.

Pickle stands were also popular, with pickles sold individually or fished from the barrel and packed into jars.

By the 1890s, delis were as common "as bricks in a building." But the dairy restaurant, with its focus on vegetarian foods made from grain, vegetables, milk and eggs, soon came into vogue.

Informative and well-written, 97 Orchard brims with intriguing facts and thoughtful observations, lifting the lid off the melting pot.

Hurry in. Don't pay til May!

HONDA Certified Used Vehicles

We've cut our prices on pre-loved Hondas and are offering financing as low as 1.9% or no payments due until May 2011. Now, for this month only get a BONUS of winter tires or $500 gas card AND three oil changes.

SISLEY HONDA
family driven

Greg Ashkenazy
Used Vehicle Sales
gashkenazy@sisley.ca
800-211-0931 ext.356

Seymour Ezer
New Vehicle Sales
sezer@sisley.ca
866-384-7916 ext.333

88 Steeles Ave. W,
SISLEY.ca
866-490-6721

Interactive books for toddlers, teens and parents

By ELAINE COHEN
Supplements Co-ordinator

Chanukah, the Festival of Lights, is an ideal time to present captivating books and an interactive journal. Usually, the younger generation receives a fair share of latkes, coins and dreidels. However, when it's time to settle down, books serve as a permanent memento of the occasion.

Bear in Underwear* by Todd H. Doodler, aka Todd Goldman, Blue Apple Books

Preschoolers love to touch everything they see, and the colourful illustrations on the cover of Bear in Underwear are sure to catch their eye. A cutout portion of the hardcover includes an insert of soft, white cotton underwear. Once the kiddies touch the fabric, they are eager to turn to page 1.

American author/illustrator Todd H. Doodler is also well known in the art world as Todd Goldman. This is his debut with Blue Apple Books. It's distributed by Raincoast Books in Canada. The talented, modest, author refers to himself as a "professional doodler," and his illustrations and prose are proof of his sense of humour and keen perception of people, places and things. He is the author illustrator of several books and has appeared on MTV.

Sometimes youngsters are reluctant to make the transition from diapers to training pants. There is no guarantee reading Bear in Underwear will solve the problem, but witnessing the thrill shared by bear and his furry animal friends when they discover a backpack filled with underwear may well serve as an incentive. Moreover, it may have a positive effect.

The whimsical tale is presented in large, boldface print. The illustrations combined with print prompt children to follow along. Bear has a wide choice of panties. Despite the array of flamboyant styles and hues, this curious creature surprises everyone by picking a conventional pair of plain, white underwear.

Alice's Adventures in Wonderland* by Lewis Carroll

Some stories never go out of style, and Alice's Adventures in Wonderland is an example of fantasy fiction that bridges the generation gap. Author Lewis Carroll, pseudonym of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, penned this book in 1865 and also wrote another Alice story, Through the Looking Glass, as well as T*he Hunting of the Snark*. Alice is such a polite girl that she serves as a model of refinement. Of course, the story is pure fantasy, but like real people, the cast of characters embraces diverse temperaments.

However, the significance of the illustrated edition published by Chronicle Books is Cooper Eden's compilation of illustrations. Eden, with Starsnap Studio, owns one of the largest collections of vintage picture books in the world. This classic edition of Alice's Adventures in Wonderland is distributed by Raincoast Books in Canada. Readers are treated to an extensive collection of images created by artists from different eras, including the original illustrator, John Tenniel, as well as Arthur Rackham, Margaret Tarrant, Charles Robinson, Gertrude Kay, Maria Kirk and Millicent Sowerby.

Readers and art lovers of all ages will be enthralled by the stunning illustrations depicting each illustrator's interpretation of Alice and the other characters.

Just between us: a no-stress, no-rules journal for girls and their moms* by Meredith and Sofie Jacobs, Chronicle Books

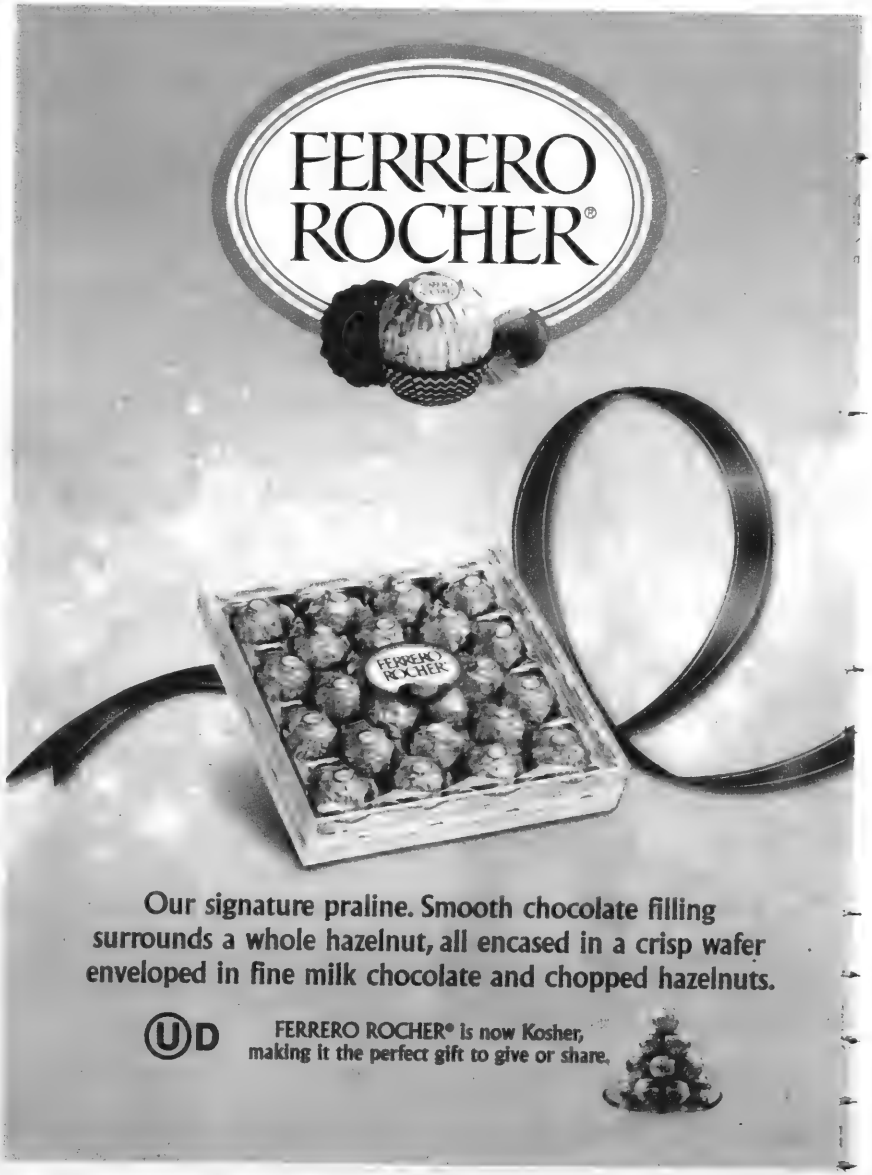
In today's busy world, it's often hard to find the opportune time to broach sensitive subjects with our loved ones. A daughter may be confused or worried, or eager to share exciting news, but at that very moment, her mom may be preoccupied or unavailable. Invariably, people postpone these chats and ultimately fail to interact.

When faced with a similar situation, Sofie, then nine, took the pro-active approach. She immediately jotted down her concerns and placed her prose where her mother would be sure to spot it. Sure enough, Meredith responded and a spirited repartee ensued. Moreover, Meredith recognized the merit in her daughter's jottings and subsequently elaborated on the process. To ensure continuous interaction, Meredith started to include useful prompts in her journal. Here is a sampling: "My first crush (and what I've learned since!)," "Questions I have for you," "My favourite sport to play (or why I don't like sports)."

Now Sofie is a teenager and their engaging solution shows no signs of waning. The dedicated mother and daughter team continue to address each other and plan to save their documentation for future generations. Consequently, today's journal will become tomorrow's memoir and their progeny will gain insight into the kinship, interests and concerns of their matriarchs.

Just between us is a beautifully bound 144-page hardcover journal distributed in Canada by Raincoast Books.



FERRERO ROCHER®
FERRERO ROCHER
Our signature praline. Smooth chocolate filling surrounds a whole hazelnut, all encased in a crisp wafer enveloped in fine milk chocolate and chopped hazelnuts.
FERRERO ROCHER® is now Kosher, making it the perfect gift to give or share.

It's time to sing. Dafna is back!

By MORDECHAI BEN-DAT
Editor

In time for Chanukah, Dafna is back. The celebrated, spirited singer, songwriter and educator has just released two new CDs aimed, typically, and engagingly, at the listening senses of young children and their grateful parents.

Eight: Chanukah with Dafna! offers eight songs, one ostensibly to accompany each candlelighting. Her voice partners with the guitar as smoothly as peanut butter does with jam. But, of course, we hear the sounds of more than the guitar. Harmonica, mandolin, viola, banjo, piano and percussion round out the harmonies throughout the collection.

Four of the songs are familiar Chanukah tunes, the traditional melodies of the holiday that we sang when we were youngsters. Dafna sings them with her signature clarity and bold voice.

The other songs are either original compositions or original music to familiar holiday poems by Dafna and her husband, Adam Kotok. The song Shmona, for example, sung somewhat in a brassy country and western style is a rallying declaration of freedom.

Ocho Kandelikas by Flora Jagoda and Joshua Jacobson, sung in Spanish with children joining, is a playful countdown of the holiday's candle-lighting.

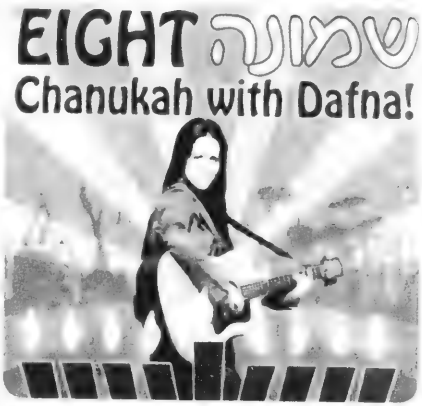
Shelanu is Dafna's characteristic hybrid of musical offerings. Sung in Hebrew in varying styles, beats, and to a mixed array of musical accompaniment, the CD reaches out to children but touches us, their parents, too.

The first song on the disk, Shelanu, from which the CD takes its name, is a musical seminar on sharing and caring. The soft harmonies and smilingly mischievous singing ensure the message hits home.

Lo Norah makes the musical point that it's not so bad to fall because falling means we learn how to rise – a lesson for us all.

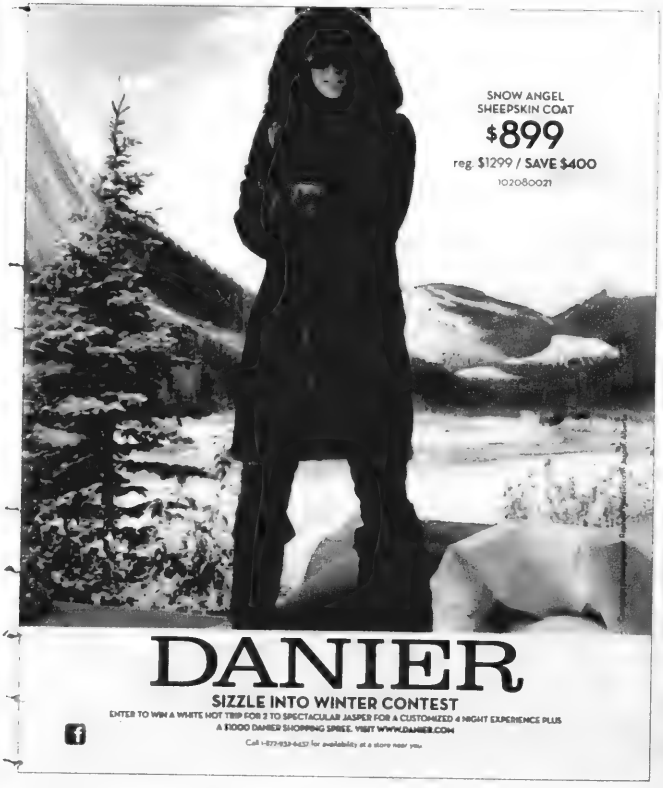
Even Bob Dylan's Forever Young is treated in a uniquely Dafna-ian manner: in Hebrew, emphatically, positively with sweet acoustic guitar riffing.

The New York-based artist, who has a degree in music therapy, is a chanteuse for children. Her music combines an infectiously happy, enthusiastic singing manner with a teacher's gentle didacticism. Her "lessons" touch us like sparrow's kisses: tender yet memorable.

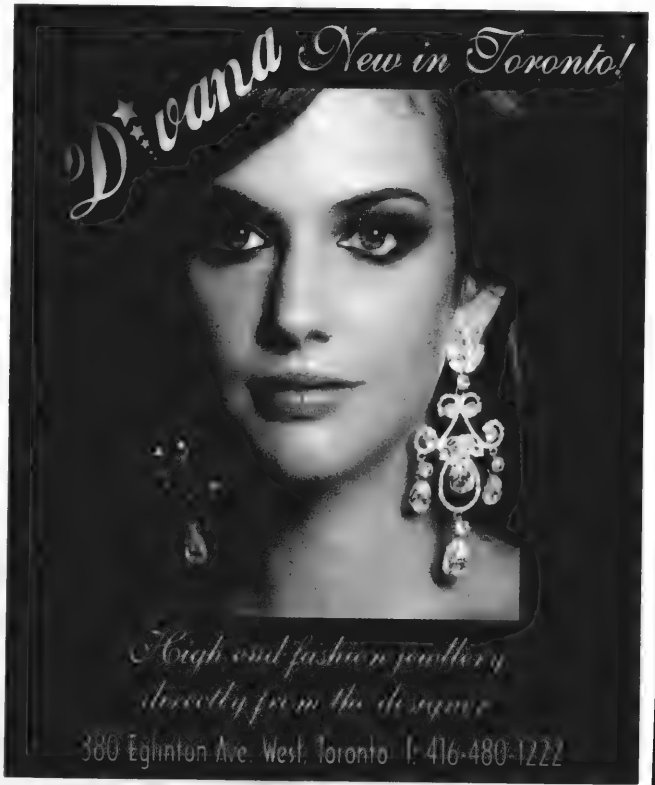


Part folk singer, part rock artist, part kindergarten teacher, Dafna is a welcome influence for our children and entertaining listening for us.

Shelanu and Eight: Chanukah with Dafna! are available at shirfun.com and dafnamusic.com, as well as at Amazon.com, cdBaby, iTunes and other digital storefronts.



SNOW ANGEL
SHEEPSKIN COAT
$899
reg. $1299 / SAVE $400
102080021
DANIER
SIZZLE INTO WINTER CONTEST
ENTER TO WIN A WHITE HOT TRIP FOR 2 TO SPECTACULAR JASPER FOR A CUSTOMIZED 4 NIGHT EXPERIENCE PLUS
A $1000 DANIER SHOPPING SPREE. VISIT WWW.DANIER.COM



Jewish toys help parents relate the Chanukah story

By EDMON J. RODMAN
JTA

Want to increase your odds for Chanukah fun? Holiday offerings this year feature Jewish toys that flash, spin and challenge – including No Limit Texas Dreidel, a poker version of the classic top game. There's even something for the family pet

With new Jewish designs from niche and mainstream manufacturers, finding something your kids will want won't be a stretch. Or if it is, at least it'll be a wearable one.

"We expect Chanukah silly bands to sell a ton," says Laurie Glusman, founder of the OyToys cyber store, of the Chanukah-themed variation on the fad elastic wristbands being worn by American schoolchildren.

The bands, which feature shapes like the outline of a menorah, Maccabee or dreidel, come in packs of 18 and sell for under $5.

"My three kids come home from school wearing the regular ones," says Glusman, who runs her six-year-old business out of Atlanta. "It's great they now have Jewish ones to trade and wear."

The bands are part of an inventory of children's toys, games, puzzles and craft sets with a Jewish theme that Glusman says has been growing since OyToys.com has been in business. The company ships to Canada and anywhere around the world.

Among the new offerings, the oldest Chanukah toy, the dreidel, is still a "huge seller," she says. "No Limit Texas Dreidel is a distant cousin of the earliest humble versions that were made out of lead.

Will kids test the table limit on gelt?

The Texas version combines the dreidel game with poker, offering kids nine and older the opportunity to "check, bet, raise or fold, depending on the strength of your dreidel hand or how much you like to bluff," according to the online catalogue

Other updated dreidels include a pair of Dueling Bouncing Light Up Dreidels, as well as a Techno Dreidel with Light and Sound.

After surveying the new offerings at this year's wholesale toy shows, Glusman sees a return to "standard popular items" and expects "board games, dreidels and card games such as Chanukah Go Fish to sell well this year."

Big this year are also Jewish toys for the family dog. OyToys sells a blue plush toy bone marked "kosher" and a plush ant marked "shpilkes," among others.

Jewish toys are a niche product category that has long been dominated by small, sometimes traditionally oriented companies such as JET, Jewish Educational Toys of Chicago.

JET produces board games with halachically wholesome content and imagery that until recently usually sold in Jewish bookstores.

Now you can buy one of its popular games, Kosherland, which is inspired by Candyland, at Moderntribe.com.

JET, also drawing from the shelf of popular American word games, produces Jewish and Junior Jewish editions of Apples to Apples, that "game of hilarious comparisons."

Until recently these companies have had little competition from larger American toy companies. But since 2004, the year Glusman opened her business, "the number of products have increased dramatically," she said.

During that time, the mainstream toy manufacturer Melissa and Doug, already known to parents for its sturdy line of wooden activity toys, entered the Jewish toy market with several holiday peg puzzles.

Looney Labs, publisher of Fluxx, the card game "of ever-changing rules," also has entered the Jewish market with an expansion pack with "Jewish themes of the Torah and Shabbat."

Continued on page 48

Low Calories High Fiber Low Sodium Fat Free

Low Carb Canada
Natural Organic Ingredients

Diabetic Friendly BREAD
ZERO NET CARB CERTIFIED

Maintains Blood Glucose Level
100% Money back Guaranteed!

Comparison Chart: Serving Size 28G

	White Bread	100% Whole Wheat	Low Carb Canada
Calories	74	78	60
Sodium	136mg	97mg	60mg
Carbohydrate	14g	14g	7g
Fiber	1g	2g	7g
Protein	2g	2g	6g

WWW.LOWCARBCANADA.CA
customerservice@lowcarbcanada.ca

780 Birchmount Rd., Units 6-7, Toronto, ON M1K 5H4
Ph: 647-728-7028 Fax: 416-285-6032

* We sell 1000+ Diabetic Friendly, Sugar Free and Low Carb Food
Wholesale and Retail

Mention Promo Code #JM001 for 10% OFF

NEED A COAT?

By far the best selection of beautiful cloth, down and all weather coats
Made in Canada.

Luxurious coats from Italy and designer brands including Michael Kors, GEOX, Junge, Sanyo Shokai, Soia & Kyo and Rainforest.

Women's sizes 0 to 24.
Men's 34 to 50,
in lots of colours.
Children's down coats - Ages 4-14.

Find the perfect coat for travel or any season in less than 5 minutes.

LORNE'S
COATS THAT LAST
101 Spadina Ave.,
(at Adelaide), Toronto
Mon.-Sat. 9-7
Sun. 10-6
416-596-1058

Lilliane & Robin's fine jewellery

Chag Sameach to all

416-920-7676
Hotel InterContinental
220 Bloor Street West Toronto
lrljewels@yahoo.ca

out of Character intimate portraits of theatrical stars

Join us for the second exciting performance in a five-part series that features some of Canada's most revered theatrical talent performing unplugged at the intimate George Weston Recital Hall. Jackie Richardson, Len Cariou, Michael Burgess, Valerie Boyle, and Rebecca Caine will each perform songs, monologues and stories, accompanied by musical director David Warrack. Len Cariou is currently starring in CBS' new TV series Blue Bloods.

Len CARIOU
DECEMBER 18, 2010
with Musical Director
DAVID WARRACK

For Tickets call 416-872-1111, visit the TO Centre Box Office or ticketmaster.ca
Use Code OGCCJN to receive 35% off.

GEORGE WESTON RECITAL HALL
Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge Street | www.tocentre.com

Rebecca Rubin has a Chanukah-themed outfit

Continued from page 47

Included is a "New Rule" card with a "Judaic bonus": "If you're wearing a Magen David or a chai, you may play an extra card on your turn."

Magnetic Poetry is offering a Yiddish version of its popular line that comes with the shpiel: "Words that will make your bubbie kvell." Perhaps the most famous dive into the Jewish toy box was in 2009 when American Girl, which is owned by Mattel, debuted the Russian-Jewish girl doll Rebecca Rubin.

The doll continues to attract seasonal attention with the addition of a Chanukah-themed outfit, a purple jacquard-striped dress with white stockings and shoes, and an accessory set that comes with a menorah, candles, dreidel and gelt.

Soon after the launch, however, American Girl discovered that its entrance into the Chanukah toy market would not come without a bit of tzuris. According to the Product Reviews on the American Girl website, the outfits were "way too snug" and were difficult for a child or an adult to put on.

Not to worry: Rebecca hadn't eaten too many latkes.

An American Girl spokeswoman, Susan Jevens, acknowledged in an e-mail that there were "fit issues" with the popular doll in its first production run, "but they have been resolved."

Glusman, who is also a child psychologist, says Jewish toys can help parents relate the Chanukah story to their children.

"It's a way of parents and grandparents to share their knowledge," she says.

Glusman adds that for households in which one of the parents is not Jewish, "toys are a non-threatening way to introduce understanding of Judaism."

A One-Stop Gift Shop

Discover the perfect gift shop....Dr Flea's. With over 400 vendors, you're sure to find the perfect gift. There's something for the whole family. At the same time discover the big savings. Find out why Dr Flea's is truly a One Stop Gift Shop and you'll walk out with a smile.

HAPPY CHANUKAH
from Allen & Simone Koffman and family

Fun for the whole family!

Dr Flea's FLEA MARKET
Hwy 27 & Albion Rd • 8 Westmore Drive
416-745-FLEA (3532)
Toronto's Largest Indoor Flea Market
400 Vendors • Sat-Sun 10-5 www.drfleas.com

SHOPPERS DRUG MART

WE'VE MOVED!

visit our new location at 1115 Lodestar Rd. (Allan Rd./Rimrock)
416. 633.8778

*Kosher section *Cosmetics dept.
*Photo center *Full Grocery dept.

Happy Chanukah to all our Customers

SPECIAL CHANUKAH EVENT
CHANUKAH MAKEOVERS!
Thursday, December 2nd
12 noon - 6 pm.
Call now to book an app't.

FOLLOW US

petvalu
your pet [illegible] store

182 Wilson Avenue 416-482-1300
(One block west of Avenue Rd.) Parking available

Happy Chanukah
Buy your pet a toy.
10% of every sale will go to Baycrest Foundation with this coupon.

COME IN AND RECEIVE YOUR PERSONALIZED REWARDS LOYALTY CARD

petvalu REWARD CARD
FOR EVERY 9 BAGS OF FOOD PURCHASED GET THE 10TH BAG FREE petvalu.com

LIMITED TIME OFFER
Owner Cindy Stern

HAPPY CHANUKAH
from SUPER COOL KIDS' CLOTHING

SCKC

EXTRA 25% OFF already reduced prices

Mix and Matchable and totally Comfortable visit us at 2656 Yonge St (Opposite Sporting Life) and at sckc.ca

The Gold Step Jewellers Ltd.
Designers & Manufacturers
Gemstone Merchants
Happy Chanukah

CREATIONS by Gsc Ltd.

Initial Rings Available
Also with diamonds in 14k & 18k
REPAIRS DONE ON PREMISES
420 Hwy. #7 East, Ste. 203,
Richmond Hill
(Between Leslie & Bayview in the McDonald's Plaza)
905-881-1606
www.goldstep79.com

Social Networking @ for the :-) generation

International

Israel & the Jewish World

If you're reading this ADVERTISING WORKS! To book your ad in this spot call 416-391-1836

Lebanon PM to visit Iran over UN Hariri report

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM – Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri is due to pay an official visit to Tehran on Saturday, amid tension in the country regarding an investigation into his father's 2005 assassination, a Lebanese government source said Monday.

The visit comes after Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad visited Lebanon on Oct. 13, where he received a hero's welcome from his allies, the Lebanese Shiite movement Hezbollah, Hariri's rivals on the Lebanese political arena.

Hariri is due to head a large delegation in his two-day visit to Iran. Iran, along with Syria, provides Hezbollah with finances, weaponry and training.

News of Hariri's visit coincided with speculation in Beirut that the UN Special Tribunal for Lebanon (STL), which is probing the 2005 assassination of former premier Rafik Hariri, is due to issue its indictment next month.

An investigation by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., published Sunday, claimed that UN investigators and a Lebanese police officer have unearthed evidence implicating Iran-backed Hezbollah in the 2005 assassination.

The report by CBC News details a months-long investigation which links Hezbollah to the Hariri murder, and faults the UN for having key information on the case, which it failed to pursue further.

According to the report, the UN International Independent Investigation Commission's findings are based on an extensive examination of Lebanese phone records.

According to a phone analysis by Lebanese and UN investigators, the records suggest that Hezbollah officials were in frequent contact with the owners of the cell phones that were allegedly used to co-ordinate the bomb detonation that killed Hariri.

Saad Hariri

The CBC report also points to errors done by the United Nations, such as misplacing the Lebanese phone records which allegedly identify the phones used by Hariri's killers – a crucial piece of evidence in the investigation. The report also faults the UN committee for the inadequate security provided for a key Lebanese officer who was killed after he helped the UN crack the case.

The latest evidence is a major development in the UN investigation which initially implicated Syria, even though recent media reports have already said that the United Nations prosecutor may issue indictments against members of Hezbollah. Hezbollah, however, denies any involvement.

A spokesperson for the United Nations declined to comment Sunday on the substance of the allegations.

Victims Matter. Les victimes comptent.

The Government of Canada is taking action for victims of crime. So can you.

Find the information you need at:

VictimsMatter.gc.ca

1 800 O-Canada

Le Gouvernement du Canada agit pour les victimes d'actes criminels. Vous pouvez agir vous aussi.

Renseignez-vous à :

Lesvictimescomptent.gc.ca

1 800 O-Canada

Government of Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

Canada

Social media placing IDF soldiers in the crossfire

By AMOS HAREL
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — Almost two years after Operation Cast Lead, the Gaza Strip continues to haunt the Israel Defence Forces.

An American or European website, with the likely aid of Israelis, hit the IDF's underbelly last week after releasing a list of "war criminals," soldiers and officers who took part in the Gaza war. On the home front, meanwhile, the trial of a soldier from the Givati Brigade, charged with the most serious allegations thus far, kicked off with a media flurry as the defence uncovered what they claimed was an attempt to cover up the affair.

Attempts by left-leaning groups, both in Israel and abroad, to list those commanders who took part in the Gaza fighting began as soon as the Gaza war ended. But the list published last week, which included 200 names in both English and Hebrew, is a project on an entirely different scale. Apart from the names one would expect to see on such a list (the IDF chief, his incoming successor, the head of military intelligence, the Israel Air Force chief, and others), the register also included battalion commanders, company commanders, platoon commanders and even conscripted soldiers.

Photographs were also attached to many of the names, as well as the soldiers' ID numbers and even updated home addresses.

The senior officers who oversaw the operation are already used to threats and irritations. Many of them avoid travelling to countries such as England or Belgium, where legal actions have been weighed against IDF officers since the Gaza war ended. From now on, however, European travel may entail some risk even to a young platoon commander from the Paratroopers Brigade, who may have in the meantime been released from the IDF and was considering studying abroad. Beyond the threat of arrest, a publication of this nature may trigger some very unpleasant responses with which Israelis may have to contend.

Anyone who was surprised to find his name on the list could have a shot at a libel suit against the site, considering that the information will most likely not be taken off the Internet.

Who's responsible for the publication? While the list is riddled with inaccuracies, such as the inclusion of soldiers who never participated in the Gaza fighting, it remains clear that Israelis – maybe even soldiers – were part of the long-time effort to gather meticulous details concerning those listed.

Some of the data (birthdates, places of residence, certainly of those higher up in the command) is not information that is readily available to the public. Considerable proficiency is in play here: even the names of those who replaced wounded battalion commanders during the war are named.

The IDF was visibly embarrassed as a result of the publication. Maj.-Gen. Avi Zamir, head of the IDF's personnel directorate, vowed to "support soldiers and officers" whose names appear on the list, but the situation probably calls for something more, perhaps even an investigation into whether soldiers aided the list's compilers.

As a side note, it is interesting to note that technology and the Internet have again worked to the detriment of the security forces, as was the case earlier this year with the assassination of Hamas' Mahmoud al-Mabhouh in Dubai, which local police has blamed on the Mossad.

In the case at hand, ordinary soldiers have left digital footprints (Facebook pages, blog entries, photographs, media appearances), which allowed allegations to be hurled against them. Members of the Givati and Paratroopers brigades, who were interviewed more frequently during Operation Cast Lead – or are more active on Facebook – have a much larger stake in the list, compared with other units.

CHAT vice-principal 'shocked' at yeshiva's proposal

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

A representative of an Israeli yeshiva recently offered $1,000 to Rabbi Eli Mandel, vice-principal of Jewish studies at the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto, for every student who attends the yeshiva after leaving high school.

Referring to the yeshiva, which accepts North American students for a post-high school year, on Nov. 8, Rabbi Mandel wrote on Lookjed – a listserv for Jewish educators affiliated with Bar-Ilan University's Lookstein Center for Jewish Education – "I recognize that recruitment for Israel yeshivot is a cut-throat business, but I was (perhaps naively) shocked at a recent proposal made to me by a somewhat prestigious yeshiva, to remain nameless."

He added that it is the first time he has been approached with this type of offer in seven years of doing Israel guidance.

Rabbi Mandel declined to comment further, but Paul Shaviv, TanenbaumCHAT's director of education, told The CJN in an e-mail that he has not come across the phenomenon before either. Others who responded to Rabbi Mandel's posting, however, indicated that such offers are not the only inappropriate practices by Israeli yeshivot.

Todd Berman, associate director of Yeshivat Eretz Hatzvi in Jerusalem, wrote that it is time to draft ethical guidelines for all institutions and recruiters. Issues that might be addressed could include publicly criticizing other institutions, pressuring students before the agreed-upon date for acceptances, stringing along candidates by offering acceptance letters and not delivering, and misleading advertising, he suggested.

Rabbi Mandel was criticized by at least one listserv member for not naming the yeshiva.

Shaviv explained: "The school decided to remain discreet regarding the identity of the institution involved. However, we have informed them that we are not sending them any students for the time being. Our responsibility is to give the best possible, objective and carefully considered advice to our students under all circumstances, which we will continue to do.

"It is self-understood that every school always has to act honestly and ethically," he added.

Plan approved to renovate Western Wall Plaza

JTA

JERUSALEM — Israel's cabinet approved a $23-million plan to renovate the Western Wall Plaza and part of Jerusalem's Jewish Quarter.

The five-year plan approved Sunday will preserve and improve accessibility to archeological findings, upgrade infrastructure and provide a place to hold educational activities for students and soldiers, according to a statement issued by the Prime Minister's Office.

Work is expected to start next year and be completed in 2015.

Some eight million people visited the Western Wall in 2009, up from four million in 2004.

The plan will be administered by the Prime Minister's Office and will be implemented through the Western Wall Heritage Foundation. It will be financed by the interior, transportation, tourism, public security and education ministries, as well as by the Israel Land Administration, according to the statement. "The Western Wall is the Jewish people's most important heritage site," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said. "We are committed to developing and maintaining it so that it may continue to be the focus of visits and a source of inspiration for millions of visitors, tourists, young and old, from Israel and around the world."

THE 3,000,001ST!

Israeli Tourism Minister Stas Misezhnikov, right, greets Pastor Rivhmer Areu Lhadislau as the 3,000,001st tourist to visit Israel this year. Pastor Lhadislau arrived with a group of pilgrims from Brazil on Nov. 22.
[Flash90 Photo]

Jewish groups condemn effort to ban circumcision

JTA

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco-area Jewish organizations condemned a proposed ballot measure to outlaw Jewish ritual circumcision in the city.

The Anti-Defamation League, the local Jewish Community Relations Council, the Board of Rabbis of Northern California and the American Jewish Committee together issued a statement expressing "great concern" about the proposed measure, which would make the practice of brit milah, or ritual circumcision, on anyone under age 18 a misdemeanour carrying a $1,000 fine.

"For thousands of years, Jews around the world have engaged in this important religious ritual, which is of fundamental importance in the Jewish tradition," the statement said. "The organized Jewish community is deeply troubled by this initiative, which would interfere with the rights of parents to make religious decisions for their own families."

San Francisco resident Lloyd Schofield is spearheading the effort to collect enough signatures to get the anti-brit milah measure on the ballot next year. At least 7,100 signatures are needed to qualify. Schofield wants to ban the practice of male circumcision, including for Jewish religious purposes. Female circumcision is already illegal. Likewise, Schofield argues, male circumcision on boys under the age of consent should be illegal, too.

"People can practise whatever religion they want, but your religious practice ends with someone else's body," Schofield said in a recent interview with CBS. "His body doesn't belong to his culture, his government, his religion or even his parents. It's his decision."

While the proposed measure has drawn international media attention, the Jewish agencies who condemned the effort said they believed any such measure would be defeated at the ballot box.

"San Francisco has a tradition of embracing the diversity and respecting the religious customs of its citizens," the joint statement said. "We trust that the voters of San Francisco will see this proposed initiative as an affront to that tradition and to their freedom."

Call for Claims Conference ombudsman

JTA

NEW YORK — In the aftermath of the discovery of a $42.5-million fraud at the Claims Conference, a group of Holocaust survivors has called for the appointment of an ombudsman.

The American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors and Their Descendants called on the Conference of Jewish Material Claims Against Germany to hire an ombudsman acceptable to the survivor community "to advocate on behalf of and represent the interest of the survivors."

Former and current employees of the Claims Conference were among 17 people charged earlier this month by the U.S. Attorney's Office in New York with participating in the fraud, in which claimants falsified information to receive payments from the Hardship Fund. The fund was established by the German government to give one-time payments of approximately $3,600 to those who fled the Nazis as they moved east through Germany.

In all, 4,957 one-time payments totaling $18 million were obtained from the Hardship Fund through the alleged fraud. Another $24.5 million went to 658 fraudulent pension claims.

The alleged fraud, which dates back to the mid-1990s, remained hidden so long because Claims Conference staffers at various levels conspired to hide and manage the false claims.

Israel begins building barrier on Egyptian border

JTA

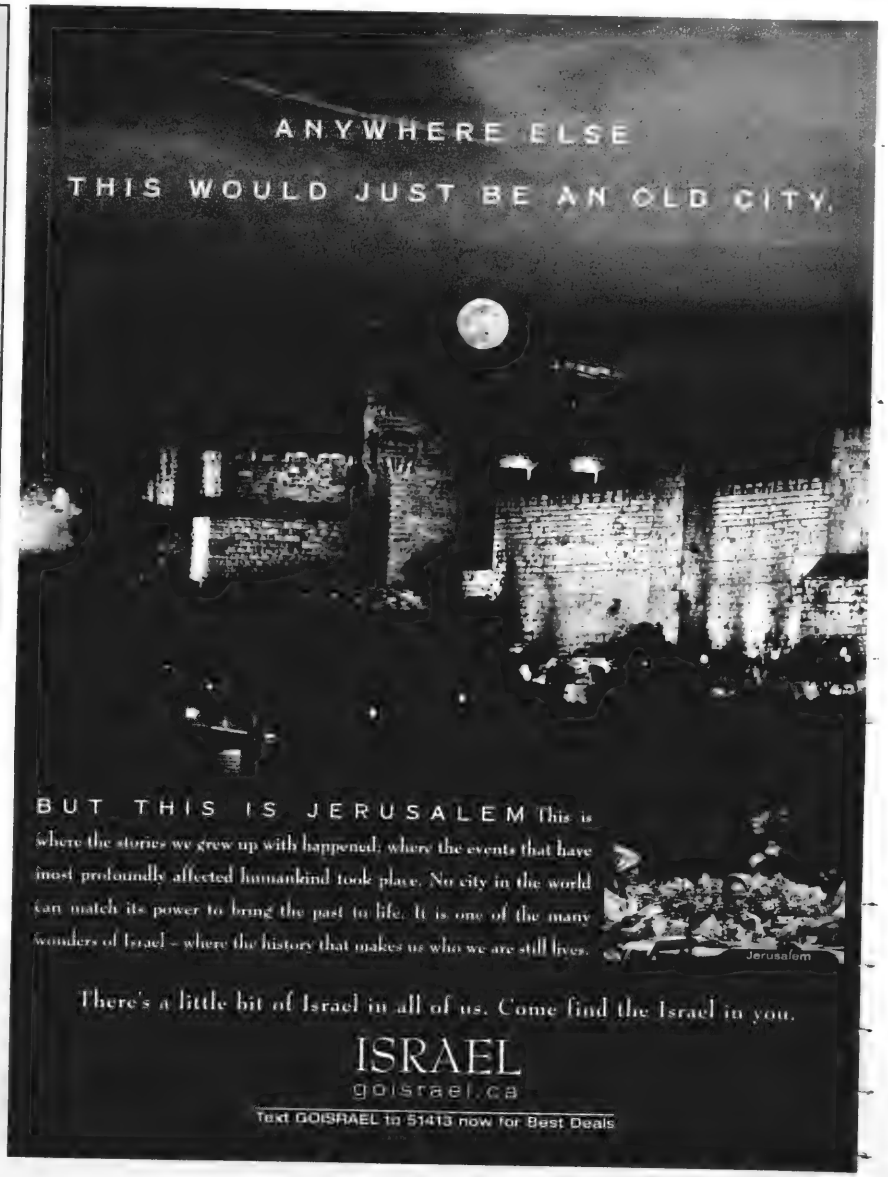
JERUSALEM — Israel has begun construction of a barrier along its border with Egypt.

Engineers were scheduled to fan out along Israel's southern border Monday and prepare the ground for the construction of the barrier and electronic fence.

The nearly $375 million, 155-mile project is being undertaken in order to prevent migrant workers from entering Israel as well as to deter terrorists and drug smugglers.

Hundreds of illegal migrants from Africa enter Israel each week. Nearly 11,000 have entered Israel since January, according to Israel's Population and Immigration Authority. Most are economic migrants searching for work, though a couple hundred asylum seekers have been granted refugee status in recent years.

Dozens of migrants, who pay smugglers thousands of dollars to help them cross the border from Egypt into Israel, have been shot and killed by Egyptian soldiers.



ANYWHERE ELSE
THIS WOULD JUST BE AN OLD CITY.
BUT THIS IS JERUSALEM This is where the stories we grew up with happened; where the events that have most profoundly affected humankind took place. No city in the world can match its power to bring the past to life. It is one of the many wonders of Israel – where the history that makes us who we are still lives.
Jerusalem
There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca
Text GOISRAEL to 51413 now for Best Deals

UNESCO needs a course correction

BY DANIEL S. MARIASCHIN
JTA

OPINION

How's this for a philosophical question: can you hold a conference dedicated to the open debate of some of the biggest issues in society in a nation that is among the least amenable to any free and open public discussion?

Apparently the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) thought you could, and chose Tehran to host its ninth annual World Philosophy Day scheduled for this month.

After an international outcry, and just weeks before it was to start, UNESCO withdrew its support from the Tehran location. The decision by director-general Irina Bokova was the right one, and we commended her for it.

Still, it is hard not to wonder about UNESCO's initial choice – just one in a string of recent puzzling UNESCO decisions.

In late October, UNESCO's executive board decreed, in a 44-1 vote with 12 members abstaining, that Rachel's Tomb and the Cave of the Patriarchs should not be included on Israel's list of national heritage sites. UNESCO's resolution read that "the two sites are an integral part of the occupied Palestinian territories."

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, responding to the UNESCO decision, said that "The attempt to separate the nation of Israel from its cultural heritage is absurd."

Historians – Jewish, Christian and Muslim – have long recognized Rachel's Tomb as the burial place of Rachel, a matriarch in Jewish history. And historians also recognize the Cave of the Patriarchs as the grave site of Abraham and Sarah; Isaac and Rebecca; and Jacob and Leah – Judaism's forbearers.

The two ancient locations are uncontestable Jewish holy sites.

UNESCO's executive board also concluded its 185th session last month by passing a resolution condemning Israel's security fence, which has had success in preventing terror attacks emanating from the West Bank. The resolution made no mention of Palestinian terrorism.

These incidents demonstrate how this UN body, like too many others, succumbs to political pressures. UNESCO needs to be a better steward of its own mission "to create the conditions for dialogue among civilizations, cultures and peoples based upon respect for commonly shared values."

It is impossible to fathom how Iran was tapped to host a conference at which philosophers from around the world would, according to a UNESCO official, hold "debates in which each and every person should feel free to participate according to his or her convictions."

That is something not even remotely possible in Tehran, where protesting the government can at best send you to prison and, at worst, end in a state execution. As state policy, Tehran continues to violate even the most minimal standards of human rights.

As the global leader in state-sponsored terrorism, Iran arms and funds terrorists. Its leaders defy the demonstrated will of the international community by continuing to pursue an illicit nuclear weapons program in violation of UN sanctions and numerous UN Security Council and International Atomic Energy Agency resolutions.

Jews praying at Rachel's Tomb Tisha b'Av this year. [Flash90 photo]

Hosting a prestigious global event, particularly one with the UN imprint, is an honour and elevates the host in stature. How can any legitimate international institution have considered bestowing this honour on Iran, a nation that much of the free world has condemned?

Iran publicly and defiantly – even proudly – threatens to destroy Israel, another UN member state. And yet a UN body, even if temporarily, deemed it a worthy host to an international gathering.

Choosing Iran to host this meeting of the minds sent a significant message that its authoritarian regime is acceptable, and that a nation can simultaneously defy the United Nations in one arena and be honoured by one of its agencies in another.

This is a moral line that UNESCO should never have crossed. The Tehran government represents the polar opposite of free and open discussion.

Philosophy is the study of wisdom and rational argument. It's about questioning what we think we know and the way things could be. It's about debating ideas. The United Nations should have known that the free will and independence required in philosophy are unknown in Iran.

UNESCO's track record in its just-concluded session bodes ill for its neutrality. Without a serious course correction, UNESCO will soon be defined by these bad decisions, and its ability to provide the opportunities to open doors and minds through cultural exchange will be severely damaged.

Daniel S. Mariaschin is the executive vice-president of B'nai B'rith International.

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

Israel Briefs

Seven mild quakes hit north

An earthquake measuring 3.6 on the Richter scale hit northern Israel on Nov. 16, the seventh tremor in two days. The morning's earthquake hit near the border with Lebanon, and marked the highest magnitude quake of the seven that began on Sunday evening with a 2.7 tremor, Ha'aretz reported. Residents of the Upper Galilee reported feeling the quake on Nov. 16, according to the newspaper. No injuries or damage were reported. Israel sits on the Syrian-African fault, and mild earthquakes aren't unusual in the region. Most schools and hospitals in Israel were built before new building codes were enacted, which include earthquake safety regulations, and at least 50,000 residential buildings in Israel don't meet earthquake-proof standards, according to Ha'aretz.

Bnei Brak decree condemned

U.S. Jewish groups condemned rulings by rabbis in the Israeli city of Bnei Brak that ban residents from renting apartments to African refugees. The Anti-Defamation League called the decrees, issued this month, "biased pronouncements." Six leading haredi rabbis in Bnei Brak issued a ruling that followed a similar call in July by rabbis in nearby Tel Aviv. "We encourage the rabbis to follow the Jewish tradition of tolerance and empathy toward other human beings. We call on the religious, political and civic leadership in Israel to stand by the democratic values of acceptance and understanding and speak out against these biased pronouncements," ADL's Israel office said. The American Jewish Committee also condemned the decrees.

Israeli firms win GE contest

Two Israeli companies were among the five winners of the GE Ecomagination Challenge. The challenge, launched last July, is part of General Electric's work to accelerate development of the next generation power grid and global energy transformation through open collaboration. An independent panel of judges selected the ideas, which are designed to create a smarter, cleaner and more efficient electric grid. The winners each will receive $100,000 (US) to develop their ideas. The GridON company of Givatayim created a fault-current limiter to protect the electric grid from disruptions and power outages. The technology was developed in collaboration with Bar-Ilan University and Ricor Ltd. WinFlex of Kiryat Yam produced rotors for wind turbines from light, flexible, inexpensive cloth sheets made of composite materials. Some 4,000 ideas were generated during the challenge.

Israel leaves town

Israel will unilaterally withdraw from Ghajar, a town on its border with Lebanon, Israel's security cabinet decided. The pullout from Ghajar, situated half in Lebanon and half in Israel's Golan Heights, will take place in co-ordination with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon within the next 30 days. The final agreement, including the withdrawal date, will be brought to the Israeli cabinet for a vote to redeploy Israeli troops. The withdrawal satisfies the terms of UN Security Council Resolution 1701 passed after the Second Lebanon War in 2006.

– from JTA

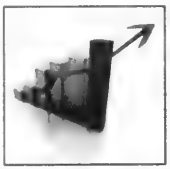
Business

Hand-made golf clubs a family affair

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

It may be golf's off-season, but one big box store has already started marketing new clubs. One name-brand high-tech driver starts at $449, but that's not the highest of the high-end products available. A single Maruman Prestigio Gold Premium Driver can be purchased for the mind-boggling sum of only $2,999.99.



Golf equipment prices include pretty substantial markups, but you don't have to spend an arm and a leg to get good quality clubs, said Daniel Sherkin.

Sherkin, part of the family-owned company, MDgolf, makes custom clubs for tournaments, businesses and even individuals. The price points for various clubs and apparel come in far below even the sale-priced equipment available in retail chains.

Individual clubs range in price from $25 to $35 when batches of 150 are purchased, while drivers sell for $90 to $100 a club. Entire sets, from driver to putter, go for $300 to $400.

Sherkin, who's in business with his brother, David, and father, Marc, painstakingly puts the clubs together himself and guarantees their quality.

Drivers, utility clubs and wedges are the main sellers. Sherkin, who can hit a nine-iron 150 yards, said the longer clubs will give you 15 yards greater length and are 15 degrees straighter than off-the-shelf merchandise.

Sales of the custom-made items have been growing since the business was launched almost seven years ago. Four years ago, the family group added Blue Ice Hockey to its inventory of sporting goods equipment, featuring lightweight sticks employing nano-technology in the shafts.

MDgolf is primarily aimed at the business market. "It's corporate promotional solutions, branding solutions and marketing expertise through sporting goods and events," said Sherkin, 23.

Corporate and charity golf tournaments are a regular feature on the spring sports calendar and participants usually come home with all sorts of giveaways, inlcuding golf balls stamped with corporate logos, hats and assorted golf tools. Sherkin said the utility of that sort of promotion is limited, as the balls and other items are often lost within a few weeks.

Instead, why not offer participants a $30 club bearing the corporate name etched permanently by laser. Not only does that sort of giveaway have a greater impact than balls or a hat, but every time the golfer reaches into his or her bag, the company's name stares back at them, Sherkin said.

Apparently the idea has caught on. Five years ago, the company sold a total of 1,500 clubs. This year, Sherkin expects sales to hit 15,000, and that doesn't include sets made for friends and family.

Data compiled in 2009 by the Strategic Networks Group (SNG) for the National Allied Golf Associations, (Golf Canada is a member), showed that "Canadian golfers spend an estimated $13.1 billion annually on golf, which includes [$2.1 billion in] related equipment."

SNG also found that golf is Canada's largest participatory sport with six million Canadians playing – 2.5 million of them averaging 28 rounds per year.

Adding his own stats, Sherkin said from 2001 to 2006, the market for golf equipment in Canada more than quadrupled and has grown substantially since then.

MDgolf's share of that remains quite modest, as it must be when "every club is made by a Sherkin hand."

Sherkin acknowledges the company's artisan-style manufacturing limits it to a niche market, but it's one with room to grow as more corporations see the value in providing a branded item that lasts for years.

Sherkin got the idea for custom clubs a few years a ago after receiving stamped balls at a tournament and losing them within a few weeks.

"I thought, they spend money for promotional advertising and I said, 'I have a high-quality product that has the ability to be labelled and that people can put in their bags for 10 years,'" he said.

By then, he had already been making his own clubs for a few years. When he was around 16, his dad, a physician and an accomplished golfer, wanted to outfit Daniel with his own set of clubs. When they priced a full set with bag, it came to $3,500.

"My dad wanted to pay, but I said, 'No. I'm only going to play twice and I'm not going to pay $1,700 a round.'"

"My dad said, 'Okay, let's make our own clubs.'"

The two travelled to Montreal where they took a club-making course.

Back in Toronto, with the club head, shafts, grips and other equipment in hand, Daniel started to put together his own clubs. He quickly learned that "it's really easy to screw up a club."

Through a process of trial and error, he found a winning formula. He felt tremendous satisfaction "when I hit a gorgeous shot five feet from the hole."

Friends asked about his new clubs and asked him to make some for them.

Marc Sherkin, left, and son Daniel

When he took his micro-production to the next level, he started with three putters that resemble Scotty Cameron, Halo and 2-ball putters. They've added two utility clubs that resembled the Ping G5, but Sherkin is especially proud of his wedges, which he said look great and are accurate.

Cold calls led to corporate interest, and now the company boasts a prestigious roster of clients that includes IBM, BMW, BMO and, ahem, Hooters.

They've added salespeople and will shop equipment throughout Canada and the United States, though the primary market remains the Golden Horseshoe.

Summer is the busy production season, and Daniel spends long hours at the firm's assembly plant. "I try to produce $5,000 to $6,000 of inventory in one hour," he said.

"It gets redundant," he acknowledged, "but I'm focused on every square inch of the golf club and I double-check every part of the club maybe 10 times. I do really put a seal of quality on all the golf clubs."

About half of sales are to repeat customers, which prompted MDgolf to expand its line. And the firm now operates a satellite sales office in Florida, one of the biggest markets for golf equipment.

A few years ago, they expanded into hockey sticks as Blue Ice Hockey, using a technology suggested by his dad. Employing microscopic nano-technology, the process binds the shaft's carbon layers with nano-particles instead of glue, making it lighter and stronger and reducing the frequency of breaks.

About 5,000 sticks leave the shop each year, most of which are sold at trade shows or through word of mouth.

While Sherkin enjoys both sports, guitars are his passion – although that part of the business is still in the pre-development stage.

Janet Shiner BEd MBA
In-Home Financial Services
Trusted Financial Organization For Seniors
Bill Paying, Tax Organization, Checkbook Balances
Serving Clients In North Toronto
Call 647-822-0048
www.inhomefinancialservices.com

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE
L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS
A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home
Mom. Dad. Bubby. Zaide. Aunt. Uncle. They've lit up our lives for all these years. What better time than Chanukah to light up theirs?
HAPPY CHANUKAH TO OUR RESIDENTS & FRIENDS
L'CHAIM occupies a unique middle ground between retirement and nursing homes. It's a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs caring staff allow them to do just that. Discover everything L'chaim has to offer. — Judy Cohen, Founder 416.398.7898 L'chaim 718 Sheppard W.
www.lchaimretirement.ca Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

The security of a GIC. A 7.25%* rate of return.
Yes, really.
Suitable for ages 60-80. Minimum investment $50,000. Certain conditions apply.
*Rate based on a 70 year old male.
GIC Income Exchange Inc. Call for details. 416.787.1366

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

A different kind of 'vacation'

By MICHELLE BITRAN
Special to the CJN

Lisa Urbach doesn't go on regular vacations anymore.

"My mom says, 'Why can't you go sit on a beach somewhere,'" Urbach said, laughing.

But Urbach, 39, just can't do that. The last two trips she's taken have been charity missions to some of the poorest communities in the world.

"Most people wouldn't think of this as an ideal vacation... but it's the perfect way to travel," she said, explaining that there's nothing better than getting immersed in a culture while helping people in unfortunate circumstances.

Urbach travels and volunteers with Ve'ahavta, a Toronto-based humanitarian and relief organization that focuses on the principle of tzedakah. Two years ago, she went with a Ve'ahavta team to Buenos Aires, Argentina, for five weeks to help underprivileged Jewish children in a daycare.

That trip got her hooked on helping, and just last month, Urbach decided to give it another try, this time in Kenya. She was one of four volunteers who boarded a plane to Kenya's capital, Nairobi, stocked with "kinder kits," bags packed with school supplies, as well as wheelchairs and walkers.

Urbach said that what she saw in Argentina helped prepare her for the desperate conditions in Kenya. "When I went to Argentina, I saw a new level of poverty. I knew what I was going to be experiencing in Kenya would be far worse," she said.

Still, she tried to go into the trip without any expectations. "I really kept an open mind. I didn't want to come with any preconceived notions."

Urbach and her teammates went to help Kenyans who are living in poverty in internally displaced persons (IDP) camps after the violence that erupted as a result of the corruption in the 2007 Kenyan federal elections.

Though Urbach now works as a freelance journalist, she used to be a social worker. She credits her initial training in social work with helping her to communicate with the families in Kenya.

The Ve'ahavta team was based in Nairobi and stayed with local families, but they spent a lot of time in the many IDP camps of Rift Valley Province. While there, they distributed 2,500 schoolbags filled with supplies to local children at schools and orphanages.

The school supplies were donated by one of the volunteer team members, Mark Gavin, and his company Ecojot. Since many of the older children in the IDP camps have at least a three-kilometre walk to school each day, without knapsacks, they weren't able to bring home books and supplies to study, Urbach explained.

Excited children hold kinder kits – school bags with supplies inside – at a school in Rift Valley Province, Kenya. [Lisa Urbach photo]

Lisa Urbach is seen with Mumbi, a five-year-old girl who lives with her family in an Internal Displaced Persons camp in Rift Valley.

The arrival of the Ve'ahavta team and the supplies they brought coincided perfectly with standardized testing in Kenyan schools and gave children the pens, pencils and rulers they needed to write the tests, as well as the schoolbags to carry them in.

Without the help of the Israeli Deputy Ambassador to Kenya, Maor Elbaz-Starinsky, the supplies probably wouldn't have made it through customs on time. In fact, the Ve'ahavta group was assisted by the Jewish communities in Canada and in Nairobi, as well as by Israel and a Kenyan NGO called Marafiki.

For Urbach, it was important to be on a trip organized by the Jewish community. "I think it's important as Jewish people to get out there and help communities that may not know Jewish people other than what they read in the papers," she said.

Urbach's role on the trip was mainly to tutor and play with the children, many of whom weren't able to go to the overcrowded schools. She explained that, although the children were living in abject poverty and many of them didn't even have shoes, their spirits were as playful as those of children you'd see anywhere else.

"It's hard to believe that these were the same little faces that witnessed the trauma that they did," she said, clearly moved by their strength.

Many of the children in the IDP camps are orphans. Others have seen their parents get violently attacked, and still more are living with diseases such as AIDS.

"It was hard at times not to cry," Urbach said about seeing the children in such terrible conditions, "but it didn't feel right [to cry] because they were so happy and so excited to see you."

Urbach was equally surprised at how positive the adults in the IDP camps were. "They didn't seem depressed, they seemed hopeful," she said, adding that, though conditions in the IDP camps are deplorable, the people who live there are safe from the violent enemies that were pursuing them during the post-election chaos. In the camps, they have the opportunity to begin rebuilding their lives in peace.

Organizations like Ve'ahavta give them some of the help they need to do this. Urbach's team member Corinne Farber brought knitting supplies and set out to teach the women suffering from HIV a new skill. "She gave them the needles and the yarn and they just lit up," Urbach said.

Urbach also noticed how the people in the camps were quick to help one another, especially the children. She explained that older siblings took care of their younger brothers and sisters the way parents care for a child. "It really humbles you a lot," she said of how the kids share what little they have and look out for one another.

Though it was not easy for Urbach to see the poverty faced by the people in Kenya, she is glad she went on the trip and is already itching to do another charity mission. "You get so much out of it and you give so much back," she said.

Urbach thinks her next destination may be Haiti. But for now, her mind and her heart are still very much with the people she met and helped in Kenya.

"They're hopeful that things will get better," she said, "and I'm hopeful for their sake too."

Provoking questions asked in Forgiving Dr. Mengele

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

Forgiving Dr. Mengele is a remarkable documentary about an incredible woman.

As young girls, Eva Mozses Kor and her twin sister, Miriam, were two of the Jews subject to brutal medical experiments performed by the ruthless Dr. Josef Mengele on twins at Auschwitz.

Amazingly, archival footage exists of a group of children being led out of the camp on the day of liberation in which Eva and her sister can be seen – in the very front row.

Today Kor, who runs the Candles Holocaust Museum in Terre Haute, Ind., is at odds with some other twin survivors because of one life-changing experience: in 1995, she publicly declared her forgiveness for all Nazis – including Mengele.

After the war, like many survivors, Kor got on with her life, moving to Israel, getting married and then moving to the United States, where she became a successful real estate agent.

Her sister, Miriam, however, became very ill in the 1980s due to an injection she was given at Auschwitz which caused her kidneys to stop growing. Miriam's doctors wanted to treat her but needed to know what drugs she was injected with.

So Kors took it upon herself to find Mengele's files, founding an association of surviving Mengele twins in order to network and facilitate her task. Although this was a fruitless endeavour, and her sister died in 1993, something else happened that changed her outlook.

While researching Mengele she came into contact with another SS camp doctor, a Dr. Munch, who was acquitted of any crimes after the war. She met him at his house in Germany and found him warm and understanding. Also, he, too, suffered from nightmares of Auschwitz.

Eva and her sister lead the children out of the camp.

Remarkably, she decided to invite him to Auschwitz for the 50th anniversary of the camp's liberation in 1995 and walked under the infamous camp gate holding onto the arm of the former SS doctor.

It was there at Auschwitz, with the doctor by her side, that she read her declaration of amnesty. This didn't go over too well with many of the other survivors, who wanted nothing more to do with her. But Kors was unfazed. Her blanket forgiveness gave her complete freedom. "Getting even has never healed a single person," she said.

But Kor's unconditional forgiveness was criticized by many, and she is shown in this film being attacked, challenged and debated for her views by students, academics and other twins who were the subjects of Mengele's experiments.

The documentary has an unnecessary, misguided turn close to the end when Kors visits Israel's West Bank and engages in a debate with some Palestinians. She comes across somewhat poorly, especially when she tells the group that she didn't want to listen to their stories of hardship anymore and wishes that she stayed back at the hotel.

I'm not sure what she intended to accomplish there, but it was clearly a poor decision, both for Kors to attend and for the filmmakers, Bob Hercules and Cheri Pugh, to include the encounter – unless maybe they're just trying to show that she is a human being, imperfect like the rest of us.

Still, though, Forgiving Doctor Mengele is a unique Holocaust documentary that asks some provoking questions. What does it mean to forgive? Are there any limits to forgiveness? And are some deeds simply beyond forgiveness.

See Forgiving Doctor Mengele on Nov. 29 and Dec. 4 at 9 p.m. on ichannel (197 on Rogers, 514 on Bell, 95 on Shaw and 593 on Shaw Direct).

Biblical musical takes on sibling rivalry

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Thornhill, Ont., native Daniel Greenberg plays Dan, Joseph's half-brother in Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, which returns to Mississauga's Stage West.

This updated production of the musical by Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice has an all-Canadian cast, including Greenberg.

This is only his second professional production. He was in The Wedding Singer, also at Stage West, earlier this year.

Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat takes audiences back to the ancient land of Canaan for the retelling of the biblical story with technicolour twists.

"Dan is one of the middle children, a full-brother of Asher," says Greenberg, who, himself is one of seven children from a blended family.

"Brother Dan is very envious and jealous of Joseph because Joseph gets star treatment with Jacob, their father. Dan lives in the shadow of Joseph, among the rest of his brothers."

Daniel Greenberg [Jonathan Tan photo]

After Joseph's 11 jealous brothers sell him into slavery, he lands in prison, but then he decides to capitalize on his ability to interpret dreams. When he correctly interprets the Pharaoh's dream, the Pharaoh appoints Joseph to oversee food rationing, which saves Egypt from starvation. As a result, Joseph becomes one of the most powerful men in Egypt. The plot thickens when Joseph's brothers go to Egypt in search of food and come upon their brother Joseph, although they don't recognize him.

"It is a really great family show. It is full of different styles of music. You've got a country song, a take on a hip-hop song and a disco mega-mix at the end of the show," Greenberg says. "It is a lot of fun."

He says that the show tells us that if you have any envy toward your siblings, to buckle up and deal with it, and then it should all turn out well in the end.

"Growing up Jewish, you learn to work as a family unit and that translates to a "T" into everyday life and theatre especially, because when you work on a production, you learn your role and you learn to work together in your theatre family," Greenberg says.

He got his acting start with a Thornhill group called CharActor's Travelling Troupe, in which he says he honed his skill of acting and developed a love for the craft, before attending the musical theatre program at Sheridan College in Oakville, Ont.

In addition to Greenberg, this production's cast includes Liam Tobin as Joseph, Janna Polzin as the narrator and Shawn Wright as Joseph The show is directed by Lee MacDougall, the musical director is Anthony Bastianon, and the costume designer is Ivan Brozic.

Joseph and the AmazingTechnicolor Dreamcoat runs from Nov. 25 to Feb. 14. For tickets, visits www.stagewest.com or call the box office at 905-238-0042 or 1-800-263-0684.

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

December 1 at 4pm
TORONTO CENTRE FOR THE ARTS
TORONTO PHILHARMONIA
Christopher Zimmerman conducting
NOT A CREATURE WAS STIRRING
ONLY THE FLEDERMAUS
Strauss: Die Fledermaus Overture
Rachmaninov: Vocalise
Corelli: "Christmas" Concerto
Dvorak: "Carnival" Overture
Sibelius: Valse Triste
Tchaikovsky: The Nutcracker Suite
FINCH AVE W
FINCH AVE E
YONGE STREET
TORONTO CENTRE FOR THE ARTS
5040 Yonge Street
SHEPPARD AVE W
SHEPPARD AVE E
HWY 401
BUY 1 GET 1 FREE
at TCA box office
www.torontophilharmonia.com

Arts & Travel

Copper is Chilean town's theme and miners are heroes

By NANCY WIGSTON
Special to The CJN

An estimated one billion TV watchers cheered in mid-October as "Los 33," the Chilean miners trapped deep below the earth's surface since Aug. 5, shot up in a capsule, one by one, from their gold-and-copper mine near Copiapó, capitol of Chile's mineral-rich Atacama region. Each man emerged a hero, and each was embraced by his family, the president, the minister of mines – and, by extension, the world.

Capiapó's mayor voiced his hopes for an increase in tourism - the town boasts history dating back to gold-rush days in the mid-19th century – after the world watched this tale of suspense. Perhaps officials in San Pedro de Atacama, 1060 kilometres north of Copiapó, near the Bolivian border, can advise him.

The oasis of San Pedro attracts thousands of adventure tourists each year to view natural wonders amid the driest desert on earth. Despite the dryness and the elevation (2438 metres above sea level), a visit to Atacama, in the foothills of the Andes, reveals unworldly beauty: clear light, Martian-like landscapes, geysers spewing from the earth.

My personal bit of serendipity in this adventurer's paradise was the discovery of a family connection: the mine where my father got his first job as a newly minted mining engineer. While thumbing my guidebook, looking up "copper" in the index, I realized San Pedro de Atacama was barely an hour's drive from the mine where my dad had landed in 1940. American-owned Anaconda Copper hired him as a straw boss at what was then the world's largest open-pit copper mine. This 20-something Canadian found himself in charge of men more than twice his age, while living in the company town of Chuquicamata (Chuqui for short, pronounced "CHOOchi").

As much as Dad needed the job, he was shocked by working conditions. Breaking his contract, he returned home to Montreal. Some decades later, a young Argentine, Ernesto (Che) Guevera, touring South America on his motorcycle, arrived at the same mine. Che was also shocked by working conditions in the mine. (Among Dad's Chilean tales was the one about the miner who cut off a finger to secure a few weeks' holiday.) In his travel memoir, Motorcycle Diaries, Che recalls meeting a Chuqui Communist who alerted him to "the unsung heroes of this battle," the miners, while disparaging the "blond, efficient, and arrogant managers" who informed him that this was no tourist town.

How times have changed. Nationalized during the presidency of Salvador Allende, the Chuqui mine attracts 40,000 tourists a year. Before I had closed my guidebook, one thing was clear: I had a date with a copper mine. During my childhood, Dad had shown me his treasured photos of the open-pit mine with walls like inverted skyscrapers dug deep into the earth. Despite the harsh conditions, he'd retained a lifelong fondness for his Chilean co-workers, for the Spanish language and for Latin-flavoured jazz. Still, after Chuqui he devoted himself to desk jobs.

A tourist gazes out at Moon Valley Sunset.

With help from my guide, I took a break from touring natural and man-made wonders around San Pedro and reserved a (free) mine-tour ticket. Joining young backpackers on an air-conditioned bus to Calama (population 138,000), the closest town to the mine, I arrived there an hour later, to find Internet cafés, markets, and a myriad of inexpensive shops. Esthetically, copper is the town's theme. The metal decorates everything from church spires to friezes on public buildings. Judging by the statue dominating the main shopping street – a copper miner posed with his drill – miners are local heroes.

A taxi drops me at Chuqui, just as Paula, today's interpreter-guide, introduces the mine's history and geology. Workers have been moved away from Chuqui's polluted air to healthier Calama, leaving intact original buildings from the 1920s and '30s. To my surprise, the tour attracts a capacity crowd, mostly Chileans, with a sprinkling of gringos; we fill the room that was once the company's office-supply store. Mural-sized photographs line the walls, showing men who worked here in an era my father would have recognized. Finishing her spiel in Spanish, Paula switches briefly to English, explaining that the mine, going strong for more than 90 years, will go on for another 90. Each statistic Paula offers is overwhelming. The mine, for instance, is 900 metres deep. Amazed to be here, I photograph everything around me, including adorable five-year-old Stefanie, who is visiting the mine with her mother and grandmother.

A short bus ride later, we all don hard hats as we climb onto the viewing platform at the edge of a mountain-high pit; below us yellow trucks chug out of the earth, in a constant parade. This platform is as far as we get to the inner workings of the mine. We are a disparate group: Americans, Norwegians and Swiss among the Chilean majority, we all take turns posing in front of a giant (but outmoded) truck by the wayside. At 3181 metres above sea level, in bright, dust-laden air, I try to imagine working here. (I fail.) Yet the group's mood is joyful; after all, we are gathered at the edge of a true wonder of the mining world.

Returning by bus to San Pedro, I change out of my dust-laden clothes – enjoy a brief desert shower – and walk across the road to the Awasi Hotel, where a friend is staying. The whole place has only eight rooms, each a self-enclosed luxury apartment. Gourmet fare is served in an open courtyard under leafy trees; we sink down onto linen couches, the better to observe tasteful decorating touches. Could my dad or Che – after my long day they're confused in my mind – imagine this place? Yes and no. No to the prices (room rates begin at $390). But yes to the traditional style: thatched roofs, stone and mud walls, wooden floors, alpaca blankets and lanterns flickering in the courtyard.

In the western-movie set that is San Pedro, stores stay open late selling ponchos, Bolivian weavings, and original pieces of silver and lapis jewelry. There's pasta to eat, Chilean wines to taste and cappuccino to be sipped while Van Morrison on the sound system sings about being born before the sun. Tomorrow beckons with a visit to the splendid local museum devoted to the area's oldest inhabitants, some of them vividly mummified by drifting sand. But for now we are content to wander the unpaved streets, to gaze up at the jewelled heavens, where the Southern Cross – another memory of my dad's – sits low in the night sky.

If you go: check out www.visitChile.com, www.sanpedrochile.com and www.calamachile.com. A good guide is essential in booming San Pedro; Juan Almendras, a Sussex University grad, is such a guide (juanalmendras69@yahoo.com).

Going deluxe? Indulge at the Awasi Hotel (www.awasi.cl) in San Pedro. In Calama, I happened on the charmingly old-fashioned Hotel El Mirador with its open courtyard, fireplace and white tower (www.hotelmirador.cl). Caution: drink only bottled water in this desert – the other kind contains arsenic, for starters.

Air Canada flies non-stop from Toronto and Montreal to Santiago. Lan Chile offers excellent service from several departure points and will help you arrange flights within Chile. The mining towns Calama and Copiapó are two hours apart by plane.

The Chuqui Copper Mine [N.Wigston photos]

Dining Pleasures

Free Times Cafe
LATKES
TO GO FOR CHANUKAH
$12.95 dozen FREE Applesauce & Sour Cream
ALSO AVAILABLE AT ST. URBAIN BAGEL
895 EGLINTON WEST LOCATION ONLY
With purchase of 7 dozen latkes, get an additional dozen latkes FREE
AT FREE TIMES OR ST. URBAIN EGLINTON LOCATION ONLY
416 967-1078 FREE TIMES CAFÉ 320 COLLEGE ST. – 2 BLOCKS WEST OF SPADINA – www.freetimescafe.com

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

STEPHEN SONDHEIM TO MAKE RARE APPEARANCE IN TORONTO

The legendary Broadway composer-lyricist Stephen Sondheim celebrates his 80th birthday, the publication of a new book, and the local revival of an old work with an appearance in Toronto – an onstage conversation with journalist Robert Cushman presented by Mirvish Productions.

Sondheim is expected to reminisce about his career, the state of the musical theatre, the differences between film and theatre, and his own creative process on works such as Gypsy, West Side Story, Company, Follies and Sweeney Todd. Princess of Wales Theatre, 300 King St. W. Monday, Dec. 6, 8 p.m. $22 to $69; premium $99. 416-872-1212, www.mirvish.com

* * *

Sweetest Sounds: Acting Up Stage Company and the Toronto Centre for the Arts present The Sweetest Sounds – A Century of Song from Rodgers to Guettel, with Adrian Marchuk, Sara Farb, Tony MacRae and Jeigh Madjus. One performance only. George Weston Recital Hall, Toronto Centre for the Arts, 5040 Yonge St. $25 to $45. Sunday, Nov. 28, 7 p.m. 416-872,1111, www.tocentre.com

The Sisters of Sheynville

* * *

Chanukah Concerts

• Children's recording artists Judy & David present their 10th annual Chanukah Live! show with some 60 performers, including the CharActor's Travelling Troupe, Toronto Jewish Chorus and Judy & David's usual assortment of characters. City Playhouse, 1000 New Westminster Blvd, Vaughan. Dec. 4 and 5. 905-882-SHOW.

• The Sisters of Sheynville perform their annual Chanukah concert at the Rex Hotel, featuring latkes and Yiddish swing and klezmer music. 194 Queen St. W. Dec. 12, 12 noon. http://therex.ca

• Friends of Yiddish and the Toronto Workmen's Circle present Come Light the Menorah, featuring Yiddish folk and theatre songs by Aron Gonshor of Montreal's Dora Wasserman Yiddish theatre troupe. As a solo performer and leader of the Shore Brothers Orchestra, Gonshor has performed across North America and Europe. Workmen's Circle, 471 Lawrence Ave. W. Sunday, Dec. 12, 2 p.m. Refreshments. $10; $5 for members of Workmen's Circle and Friends of Yiddish. RSVP to Sandy, 416 458-1440 or 416 736-8073 by Dec. 8.

* * *

Film Events

• Media Mondays presents Surfing the New Waves: Contemporary Foreign-Language Cinema, a lecture with film clips by critic Adam Nayman. Titles discussed include The Death of Mr. Lazarescu, Yi Yi, A Taste of Cherry and The Holy Girl. Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, Nov. 29, 7 to 9 p.m. $12 drop in per lecture, students $6. 416-924-6211, ext. 606.

• Toronto Jewish Film Society presents God Is Great . . . I Am Very Small. The charming Audrey Tatou, who starred in Amelie, stars in this honest, unpredictable and sharp comedy of manners; guest speaker Shlomo Schwartzberg. Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre. Sunday Dec. 5, 4 and 7:30 p.m. $15, $10. 416-924-6211, ext. 606

• The Toronto Jewish Film Festival presents a screening of Jaffa, director Keren Yedaya's take on "Romeo and Juliet, Middle Eastern style." A co-production of Israel, Germany and France, the "Chai Tea" film is in Hebrew and Arabic with English subtitles. Cineplex Oden Sheppard Centre Cinemas, Sunday, Dec. 12, tea 4 p.m., film 5 p.m. $15, 416-599-8433. www.tjff.com

* * *

Literary Events

• Harold (Hesh) Troper discusses his new book The Defining Decade, at a '60s-themed Book Salon and Coffee House. With Dan Mendelsohn Aviv and musical performances by Marcia Beck and Annie Gilbert. Miles Nadal JCC, co-presented with the Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School. Free. Thursday, Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m.

• New Star Books and the Miles Nadal JCC present the launch of Every Day in the Morning (slow), a new book by Adam Seelig. Miles Nadal JCC, Jacobs Lounge. Free. Monday Nov. 29, 7 p.m. 416-924-6211, ext. 154, www.mnjcc.org

Chanukah Live! with Judy & David

* * *

Musical Events

• Miles Nadal JCC Active Seniors presents Broadway Great Jewish Composers. Music historian Jordan Klapman talks about the life and music of the great Harold Arlen (Over the Rainbow). Thursday Nov. 25, 1:30 p.m. 416-924 6211, ext. 155.

• Renee Barda – Life Begins Again! is a concert featuring mezzo-soprano Renee Barda singing the classics of Gershwin, art songs and more. With guests Dorothy Krizmanic (piano), Gideon Wilk (clarinet) and John Lettieri (accordion). Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre, Saturday, Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. $22. 416-924-6211, ext. 0. www. algreentheatre.ca

* * *

At the Galleries: Paintings by Rose Lindzon and other artists are on view in the M2 Project Space, Burroughes Building, 639 Queen St. W., third floor. By appointment until Dec. 1. 416-504-5445.

FLORIDA furnished APARTMENTS from Churchill

NORTH MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
INTRACOASTAL YACHT CLUB
16900 North Bay Rd. Sunny Isles Beach, FL
• Gorgeous Intracoastal Waterways views from each apartment balcony
• Waterfront boardwalk, marina and pier
• 5,000 sq. ft health center with spa services
• Children's playground and playroom

special discount

• LARGE APARTMENTS WITH BALCONIES
• FULL KITCHENS AND APPLIANCES
• KOSHER DISHES AVAILABLE FOR MONTHLY STAYS
• WASHER & DRYER IN APARTMENT
• OUTDOOR POOLS AND WHIRLPOOLS

CENTRAL MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
CROWN MIAMI BEACH
6041 Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, FL
• Newly renovated oceanfront property
• Beautiful views from each apartment balcony
• Fitness center with cardio equipment
• Near many shuls and kosher restaurants

Included:
• Manual Keys
• Parking
• Linens and Towels
• Housekeeping

www.ChurchillSuites.com stay@churchillsuites.com 877-424-7848

Toronto Jewish Theatre presents

Canadian Premiere of the fiercely romantic drama

Hard Love
by Motti Lerner

Directed by Ari Weisberg January 5 - 16, 2011

Hannah and Zvi are reunited after divorcing twenty years earlier. Raised in Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim, the couple ended their marriage when Zvi turned his back on Judaism and Hannah did not. Now the teenage children from their second marriages have become romantically involved, forcing Hannah and Zvi back into each other's lives.

PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

THE SWEETEST SOUNDS
A CENTURY OF MUSICAL THEATRE FROM RICHARD RODGERS TO ADAM GUETTEL

Featuring Adrian Marchuk (Frankie Valli in Jersey Boys), with special guests Sara Farb, Toni MacRae and Jeigh Madjus.

SUNDAY NOVEMBER 28, 2010 ~ 7PM

TICKETS: $25 - $45
Available at the T.O. Centre Box Office, TorontoSings.com or by calling 416-872-1111

THE GEORGE WESTON RECITAL HALL
Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge Street | www.tocentre.com

ACTING UP STAGE COMPANY

Philip Roth paints visceral portraits of a time of fear

By NORMAN RAVVIN
Special to The CJN

In recent years Philip Roth's novels – Everyman, Indignation and The Humbling – have been called minor works by reviewers, often in contrast with such earlier masterpieces as The Human Stain and American Pastoral.

By Norman Ravvin
Special to The CJN

These two books, reviewers recognize, encapsulated their era, finding in the lives of eastern American Jewish characters experiences that allowed Roth to interpret the political and social shifts of the post-World War II era.

His new novel, Nemesis (Hamish Hamilton), is receiving familiar treatment as a minor work – even J.M. Coetzee, a serious and sensitive reader of Roth's work, took this approach in a recent review essay in the New York Review of Books.

If this way of categorizing Roth's later work was appropriate for Indignation or The Humbling, it is not for Nemesis, which is a cunningly constructed book, a narrative puzzle offering both suspense and the kind of lyrical nostalgia for decades past that Roth has proved himself a master at.

The novel takes place in the sweltering summer of 1944, as the neighbourhoods of Newark watch an outbreak of polio jump unpredictably from one quarter to the next. Weequahic, the section populated by children of Polish Jewish immigrants, is at first unscathed, but in the course of the novel, the disease moves inexorably and mysteriously among the children of Weequahic's Jewish families.

Roth is canny in his treatment of the disease. Earlier books have offered readers detailed essays on glove-making, on boxing and acting, but Nemesis is not a source book for understanding polio. Instead, it portrays the events of 1944 much as they were experienced, in a haze of paranoia, panic and ignorance. No satisfactory prevention existed, since the causes of polio were not known.

The mystery associated with a disease that can paralyze and kill children leads Roth's characters to muse about the meaning of ill fortune. His lead character is Bucky Cantor, a young and beloved teacher of children, who is spending the plague summer overseeing a playground full of neighbourhood kids. Once the disease has killed one of these children, Bucky wonders "where does God figure in this? Why does He set one person down in Nazi-occupied Europe with a rifle in his hands and the other in the Indian Hill dining lodge in front of a plate of macaroni and cheese? Why does He place one Weequahic child in polio-ridden Newark for the summer and another in the splendid sanctuary of the Poconos?"

The novel moves in its second half to the "splendid" Poconos. There Bucky, taking the opportunity to escape the epidemic haunting the city by hiring on at a summer camp, feels he has abandoned his responsibility to his playground charges. It is at Indian Hill camp where the narrative takes a surprising turn. In the New York Review of Books, Coetzee allows that "a reviewer will try not to spoil the impact of a book by giving away its proper secrets," and then adds that he sees "no way of exploring Nemesis further without breaking this rule."

Roth's narrative twists need not be revealed here in order to convey his novel's writerly mastery and it existential punch. The narrative voice in Nemesis is unlike any in Roth's previous work, and so, its way of mining the American past is not comparable to works like The Human Stain and American Pastoral. It includes visceral portraits of a time of great fear; a description of the countryside, which is reminiscent of other great works that set the pastoral alongside urban catastrophe; and a quietly funny portrait of a Jewish summer camp whose philosophy and outdoor rituals follow its director's belief in "the red man as the great prophet of the outdoor life." There is nothing slight or undeveloped about the way Roth concludes his story.

In Nemesis, as well as in the other so-called minor books, one senses, again and again, a tone and point of view reminiscent of Roth's breakthrough book, Goodbye, Columbus. It is the romance of an innocent time of life – of heightened, transformative experience – that Nemesis explores. The way such romance is demolished by adult experience is one of Roth's enduring themes.

Norman Ravvin's new novel is called The Joyful Child. He is chair of the Concordia Institute for Canadian Jewish Studies.

On the Park

Events & Conference Centre

• Weddings • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs • Brunches
• Corporate Meetings & Socials
• 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
• Seven Beautifully Themed Rooms • Kosher Catering Available

Mayor Elect Rob Ford with (from L to R) General Manager, John Neretlis, Vice President of PR Creative Caterers, Joe Elmaleh and President of PR Creative Caterers, Israel Fisch..

416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723

1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT/SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. AVAIL.
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH /SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND/LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND/LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

STRATHALLAN WOOD

Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — BRING AN OFFER!

Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem @ $1,299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE — CLASSIC 3 BDRM

Attn builders & renovators! 2 storey home on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

GLEN PARK CONDO

Dream model penthouse unit, Brian Gluckstein designed, all the bells & whistles. Wraparound terrace, gourmet kitchen, 2 bdrms, den, exquisite finishes, $845,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

FEATURE CONDO OF THE WEEK

3000 BATHURST CONDO

Newly renovated & decorated thruout. 2 + 1 bdrms, 2 baths, approx 1,500 sq ft, W exposure, generous entertaining area, gleaming parquet flrs, brand new appls. Shows a 10+ Avail immed. $399,900 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDOS

FOR SALE: Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes thruout. 2 pkg, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

FOR RENT — NEW LISTING! Bright, sunny 2 bdrm, 2 baths, open concept, w/o to open balcony. Shows well. ONLY $1,650 / MONTH — ACT NOW! Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECOR

ALAN NEWTON
REAL ESTATE LTD., BROKERAGE

HOUSES FOR SALE

BATHURST/CENTRE

Fabulous Freehold Twnhse 3 Br, Huge Family Room Fin.Bsmt, New Maple Kit, Double Driveway, Just Reduced!!! *Helen Winer

BATHURST/ANTIBES – NORTH VIEW

Large 2 Br. Corner Suite with U/g Parking & Locker, Wood Flrs, Thru'out, Huge Wrap Around Balcony, Appl, All Window Coverings, Approx 1500 Sq.ft, Great Room Sizes, $269,900 *Ted Waxman

BATHURST/CENTRE – EXQUISITE!!

Fab 2 Br Corner Unit with Locker & Parking, Great Custom Finishes Thru'out, 2 Baths, S/S Appls, Custom Blinds, Granite & Laminate Flooring, One-Of-A-Kind!! Must See $369,900 *Ted Waxman

*Sales Representative

905-764-7200

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-633-7373

WILMINGTON/OVERBROOK

3 bdrms, 2 bths, L-shaped liv & din, updated eat-in kit, fin bsmt, lrge lot, dble drive, gar, extras.

416-633-7373

15 HOUSES FOR RENT

Dufferin/Rutherford. House for short-term sublet. 3 bed., $1850/mo. Jan. 25 - Aug. 25. 905-731-7100.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

A 2 bdr. co-op apt. Person selling is also a stylist offering FREE haircuts. Call: 416-782-8451.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.

Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms. 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths. Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting. 6 Apts. per flr.

canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 • 416-621-0388 Supr.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

ESSIE SHER

Yonge/Eglinton
New condo $669,000

Approx 1200 sq ft luxury building, 2bd 2bath plus den. Gorgeous finishes.

Call Essie 416-464-5261

Re/Max Realtron Rlty. Inc.
416-782-8882

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Bathurst/Steeles PRIMROSE II
2 bedroom, 2 baths. Jan 1 occupancy. Laundry. Outdoor pool, bright, very clean, security, A/C. Indoor parking 416-410-3311 Michael Marmur

Yonge/Shepp., lux. 2 bdr., 2 bth., lndry., pkg., locker, subway, 24 hr. sec., $1600 incl. 647-299-0371.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Bigger Than the Average Condo!
3636 Bathurst, "The Empress House"

LARGE 2 bdrm. SPECIAL! Central a/c. Hardwood. New Appliances. Ceramic Tiles. new kitchens. Quiet "Professional type" building. large [illegible] FREE Membership to the Empress House Fitness Centre. Sauna. Exercise. Laundry. Visitor parking. Steps to [illegible]

416-931-2206 • 416-781-4672 • 416-663-8662

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)

416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:

Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statutory or Jewish holiday the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT

For male in condo-safe Bath./ Steeles/Shepp., shared kit., liv. rm. & den, incl. util.,cable, indry. & priv. wshrm. Near TTC. No smkng./ pets. Call 416-522-8147.

87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

SUMMA PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
Professional Property Management & Consulting

With over 25 years experience we manage Condominiums and Individual property investments. We also manage larger multi-unit Commercial/Industrial and Residential Properties.

At Summa, we get "TOP MARKS" for Management, Consulting and Renting!

647-341-7990
www.summapm.com
propman@summapm.com

124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES

IT'S 78 & SUNNY IN ARIZONA
Now is a great time to buy! Prices and Rates are Low! Vacation, Investment, Relo

PENNY FIELD, Broker
480-282-0964
penny@pennyfield.net
HomeSmart Real Estate
Phoenix, Arizona

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
c: 514.518.3543
o: 514.937.1717
LONDONO

FLORIDA
c: 305.613.4500
o: 305.408.8401
ECR

DELRAY/BOCA
Addison Reserve
An Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBytheGross.com

Century Village Deerfield. Most gorgeous renovated unit in the village. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. 514-287-1256.

CENT. VIL. - DEERFIELD BEACH 1st. Flr. Corner-Westbury H, 2 bed., 1.5 bath., close to Synagogues! $89,900 416-784-1431.

Deerfield CV, Richmond C, hi-rise, 2nd flr., lux. 2 bed., 2 bth., fully furn'd. Excellent cond. Balcony over-looking golf course, walk to shul. Call 905-881-4545.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

Boca Raton. Spacious sunny 3 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms. 4 to 6 months. Available Jan. 3, 2011. Ocean clubhouse/new gym. $4,500 negotiable. Mary Ann 1-561-866-8544.

100 Arlen House East, 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

North Miami Beach - Arlen House. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. December - March $2300 monthly. 514-488-7724.

Miami Beach. Oceanfront view. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. 3 months $1575 monthly 4 months $1475 monthly. 1-918-361-3222.

Hallandale condo. 3 1/2 sleeps 4, fully furnished, 2 bathrooms, KOSHER KITCHEN, overlooking Intercoastal, min. 3 months: Barbara, 514-683-7683.

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. Call 301-907-0842.

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 See photos: www.hallandale.webs.com

Boca Raton, C.V., 1 bdr., 1.2 bth., exc. cond., kosher kit., lake view, min. 4 mos. 416-633-3268.

Ft. Lauderdale, Hollybrook, 2 bed., 2 bth., totally brand new reno., 3 - 4 mos. Jan. - Apr. 647-280-7011.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

WINTER SEASON RENTALS
MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA
Escape from the Cold. Studios, 1 Bedroom, 2 Bedrooms. Fully Furnished – Direct Ocean Views.
Call Ace at 305-531-3625
RentalGroupTRG@aol.com

West Palm Beach. Beautiful 1 bdrm., 1 1/2 bth., fully furn'd., AC, 55+, exercise equipment, pool, close to Shul. Call betwn. 9am - 6pm. 347-828-7888.

Florida, Deerfield Beach, Century Village Tilford N. One Bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Ground floor. Available January 9, 2011. 514-594-3965.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Aventura/Waterways. Intracoastal condo, designer's own, 2 bed., full svc. bldg., 2 pools, avail. immed. Call 212-585-0441.

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

Century Village, Boca Raton. Seasonal-reasonable rent. Two bedrooms, 1 1/2 bathrooms. New appliances. 1-561-302-5933, 1-561-852-7356.

CV Deerfield Bch. 3 mo. min. rental. 1 bed.,1.5 bth., 2nd flr. garden. No lift .Excel. condition. $1500 USD/mo. 954-725-6137.

Arlen House East. 2 bed., 2 bth., For season from Dec.1 - Mar 31. $1800/mo. USD. 416-256-0862.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

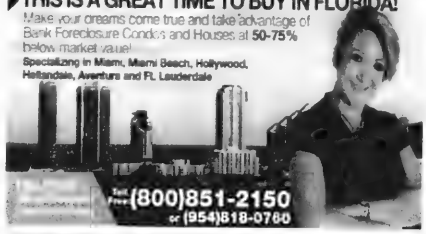
The Summit, Hollywood, 2 bdr. furn., $3000/mo.-rent, $339K-sale. Call 905-881-7408 Doris/Richard.

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

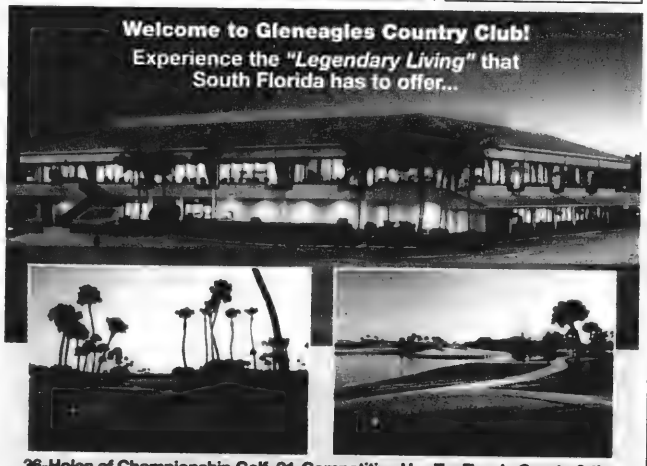
Miami Beach - New spacious, lux., furn'd. studio, 1 bed. & 2 bed apts. w/balcs. avail. at oceanfront Crown, 40th & Collins. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, valet pkng. incl. 877-424-7848, stay@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

Sunny Isles - Lux. spacious, furn'd. 1 bed., 2 bed. & 3 bed. apts. w/ balcs. & intracoastal views. 2 bl. from beach. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, marina. Call 877-424-7848, iyc@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE



THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!
Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
Specializing in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura and Ft. Lauderdale
Toll Free (800)851-2150
or (954)818-0780



36-Holes of Championship Golf, 21-Competitive Har-Tru Tennis Courts & the Florida Sunshine You'll Love...
...An elegant atmosphere boasting an unparalleled lifestyle!

- Prime Delray Beach, Florida Location
- State-Of-The-Art Fitness Center
- Magnificent Clubhouse & Fine Dining
- 8-Sparkling Swimming Pools
- 24-Hour Gated & Manned Security
- Annual/Seasonal Rentals & Sales

Gleneagles is centrally located less than 30-minutes from the West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale International Airports. All ages are welcome. Homes and condominiums offered from the low $100,000's to over $500,000 USD.

www.GleneaglesFlorida.com • Tel: 561.819.5397

Ben G. Schachter, Licensed Real Estate Broker

GLENEAGLES COUNTRY CLUB

232 BUSINESS FOR SALE

Kosher Catering/Take-Out/ Bakery/Restaurant for sale. Busy Jewish location in Hollywood, Florida. Turn-key business. Call Betty at 305-989-6848.

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

KETUBAH.COM
F/T Asst. Customer Service Manager at upbeat, online company downtown. Excellent English and read/write Hebrew. Resume & cover letter to: careers@ketubah.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced with Quick Books, I.O.A, Excel & Word. Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Reliable w/refs. cleaning lady. 5 yrs. experience. For apts., homes, offices 647-567-0591.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Personal support lady - 14 yrs. exper. for elderly at home + cleaning. Days/nights. Refs. 416-240-1513.

Priv. caregiver for elderly. Exper. Full/part time. Day/Evening/Weekends. Driver's lic. 416-258-0742.

255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED

Live-in caregivers required for seniors. Please call 416-436-1267.

259 SENIORS

If you require live-out help for a senior with meal prep., shopping dr.'s appts. & light housekeeping or require a companion for a senior in a retirement or long-term care facility, call Gail at 416-665-3815. Refs. available

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

2 brothers, handsome & estab., 50'ish, looking to date 2 sisters or friends, 35-45 for fun & friendship. CJN Box # 5308.

Newly divorced woman, 49 (with kids), attr, prof, with positive outlook on life & a happy disposition. Seeks to meet (not marry) man in similar situation who has & values these qualities; integrity, kind- ness, sensitivity, self awareness, self insight & willing to share these; intelligence, a sense of humour, relative emotional stability & physical attractiveness. Reply to CJN Box #5310.

300 ARTICLES FOR SALE

Living room: sofa $275, loveseat $175. Taupe floral pattern. Coffee table $75-$100, shelving unit $100. Excellent condition. Jonathan, 416-576-6057.

Estate Sale. Women's shoes, clothes, more. 8 Covington Rd., #1105. Sun. 12-5pm. 416-206-1581.

Audio: Harmon Kardon HK550VXI stereo receiver $85, HD400 CD player $75. Jonathan 416-576-6057.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?
Address your mail to:
The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4
Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.
CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
• BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
• SIMCHAS
• SHIVA MEALS
• SHABBOS DINNERS
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

GLATT
Take-out & Catering
Shiva Meals
Simchas
Shabbat Dinners
905 - 597 - 7571

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile, water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

A-1 Handyman. Expert kitchen repairs and refacing. New kitchens and countertops, plumbing and electrical. For free estimate call 647-887-5075.

Kitchens, Bathrooms, Closet Org. Doors, Trim, Carpentry, Drywall. Hadyman, Jobs, Electric, Plumbing, Flooring S&H 416-450-8578 Sol.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-782-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

Katz Painting Services. Free Estimates 416-520-6890.

460 PLUMBING

PLUMBER ON CALL!
Drain, Plumbing, Heating, A/C
Call TOM the Plumber
647-654-8099

470 RENOVATIONS

KRAV RENOVATIONS. General renovations - big or small. Best quality work and reliable service. 416-508-6654.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bernie the upholsterer has all fabrics 1/2 price. Dining room seats $25/ea. 416-931-2660.

Greater Toronto Area

AJC holds biennial meet

BY JOEL JACOBSON
Atlantic Correspondent

HALIFAX — The theme of the biennial conference of the Atlantic Jewish Council – What Will Our Future Hold – is a dilemma facing every small community in Canada.

The answers coming from panellists and almost 100 delegates from the four Atlantic provinces at the Nov. 20-21 event echoed every discussion. Representatives from St. John's, Nfld. to Fredericton and from Charlottetown to Halifax all stated the same mantra.

"We need more people in our communities. We need more programming. Camp Kadimah plays a major role in keeping our youth together and connected to Judaism. We have to get along with our [non-Jewish] neighbours. We have to get along with ourselves."

Arnold Bennett of St. John's, who emigrated from the United States 15 years ago, told how he and fellow Jews in his city have worked with leaders of various other church groups for a common cause – to stamp out poverty and lessen the gap between rich and poor. The combination of religious backgrounds has tightened the sense of good feeling between all communities on the island.

Jerry Costa of Annapolis Royal, N.S., who emigrated from New York 40 years ago, discovered "major differences between New York City with eight million people and thousands of Jews, and Annapolis Royal with 900 people and nary a Jewish person," has worked to bring Jewish knowledge and understanding to the community and many people in surrounding towns by hosting them at Chanukah, Passover and Rosh Hashanah celebrations to explain Jewish tradition.

"We want everyone to learn everyone else's culture so we won't look so different to each other," she said, stressing the importance of "getting along with our neighbours."

However, there were concerns that smaller numbers in both small and large communities is in major need of attention. Even Halifax has its problems despite having the largest Jewish population in the region at about 2,500 synagogue members and countless unaffiliated Jews, plus at least 1,000 Jewish students attending local universities, 800 at Dalhousie University alone.

In his final report to the community, outgoing Atlantic Jewish Council president Howard Conter of Halifax talked of divisions in both Halifax and St. John's.

"Halifax rallies around its two synagogues [Orthodox and Conservative] and has not come together as a strong unified Jewish community or voice. If it cannot be a strong beacon, there will not be much left for our children and grandchildren. A committee trying to unify the Jews of Halifax into a community first and a place of religious choice second is hard at work, and I applaud it."

He said a division between groups in St. John's "makes moving forward on initiatives as one community almost impossible." Yet, Bennett, part of Jewish Community Havura of Newfoundland and Labrador, stressed the co-operation between that congregation and the Conservative Beth-El Synagogue in many initiatives, including a Holocaust Yom Hashoah ceremony each year.

Immigration of Israeli families with Russian backgrounds to Halifax, Fredericton and Moncton, with new expansion to Saint John, N.B. has generated enthusiasm and hope. There was discussion of lack of integration of these families into Jewish life, but Nana Steinberg, a newcomer to Halifax two years ago, emphasized the concern for her family initially was finding living quarters, furniture, food and work, while trying to master English. Integrating into the community was a lesser concern.

Dov Harris
[J. Jacobson photos]

Mila Voihansky from Toronto is executive director of JIAS Canada. She is a Russian immigrant from a few decades ago, and asked the communities to be patient in seeking immediate congregational, and even community, involvement.

"Immigrants suffer a loss – of family, familiar surroundings, comfort – when they move here. Their culture is different. We have to allow time and be patient for them to get settled in new communities."

Rabbi Josef Goldman of Fredericton, a member of that community's immigration committee, said working with newcomers is an obligation for Jews. "It's a positive opportunity for us to give back as people did when our grandparents and parents came to Canada."

Another highlight of the event was the recognition of four individuals with the AJC Community Service Award.

Bennett, Shirley Burnstein of Halifax, Arnold Chippin of Fredericton and Francis Weil from Moncton, were honoured for their lifelong commitment to both Jewish life and the work they have done in the broader communities.

At a Sunday brunch sponsored by United Jewish Appeal Canada, CEO Linda Kislowicz praised Atlantic community leaders for what has been accomplished in the last two years, including the proactive immigration effort, the development of the Simon and Reva Spatz Chair in Jewish Studies at Dalhousie University, the continued strength of Camp Kadimah and the volunteerism of young people to the newly-elected board of AJC.

Dov Harris, retiring after 35 years as a fundraising executive with UJA, including 25 years of concentration in Atlantic Canada, was honoured for his special connection and affinity to the region.

In an emotional thank you, Harris said, "I don't see donors in front of me today. I see friends. What a community! You have so much to be proud of, your sense of vitality, the strong campaigns you've had. This vitality is you," he emphasized.

Shulamith Medjuck of Halifax, left was elected president of the Atlantic Jewish Council at the organization's biennial conference Nov. 21. To read story, please go to cjnews.com

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
FALL IN ISRAEL
FROM $650* + tax
*specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1356

Toronto freshman makes Cornell soccer starting lineup

By BEN FISHER
Special to The CJN

For many, the first year of university is a time for new experiences. That is particularly true for Daniel Haber, a Toronto-born freshman at Cornell University whose first-year experiences happen to include tallying a critical goal and assist in his first game as a member of the Big Red men's soccer team.

Down 2-1, Haber's first goal with the team tied things up in the 77th minute of Cornell's home opener against Hartwick College. An assist on junior Will Ogden's game-winner a little more than a minute later keyed the 3-2 comeback victory and earned the 18-year-old co-rookie of the week honours amongst Ivy League squads.

But for Haber, the fondest memory came right after the goal as he was hoisted in the air by celebrating teammates.

"As I was sitting on the shoulders of my teammates and looking back at hundreds of fans cheering in the crowd," recalled Haber, "all I could think was, 'These next four years are going to be fun.'"

Just reaching this point has been an incredible journey for the youngest in a family of three soccer-playing brothers.

With oldest brother Jeremy attending Tufts University and Dylan enrolled at Queen's University, Daniel, a graduate of York Mills Collegiate Institute, knew he wanted the experience of branching out and living on his own. After a three-day camp for potential soccer recruits on the Cornell campus, the decision of where to go was an easy one.

"It was always important to me to use my soccer abilities to get the best education possible, and I knew where I wanted to be once I saw the beautiful campus," said the 5-10, 165-pound Haber. "Standing next to my father on the last day of the camp, I immediately accepted the coach's roster spot offer."

Life on the pitch seems to have come easily for Haber since joining the men's team. Earning a spot in the starting lineup after a strong pre-season showing, the forward is one of only two Cornell freshmen (along with Jake Rinow) to have played in all 16 Big Red games thus far this year. On an offensively challenged team, he's scored one of Big Red's 13 goals.

Daniel Haber is only one of two first-year players to start every game for Cornell.
[Cornell Athletic Communications photo]

Off the field, his Ivy League experience has been distinctly multicultural, studying alongside students from all over the world.

"Being at Cornell has given me the opportunity to get to know people from all over Europe, Asia, the Middle East and even a few from Africa," Haber said. "My best friend here is a girl from Sri Lanka who has taught me so much about her side of the world."

That's not to say that Haber is new to international experiences. In fact, his soccer talents brought him to Israel in 2009 to represent Canada's Under-18 team as part of the 18th Maccabiah Games. His Canadian side fell 3-0 to Mexico in the quarter-finals, but it was the connections he made with other Jewish athletes from all over the world that will stay with him.

"[The Games] gave me a great opportunity to meet Jewish athletes from all over the world," said Haber. "Whether the athlete was from Canada, the United States, England or Sweden, they all played the game with respect and a humble attitude while maintaining a high level of competitiveness."

Despite a level of soccer skill that has already taken him to Israel and is now helping him thrive at an NCAA Division-1 school, Haber has shared the same humble trait he observed in his fellow Maccabiah athletes, thanks to strong outside presences in his life.

Family has played a major role in Haber's life, with his parents – Lorie Haber and Reena Berlind – stressing the importance of a good education and grandfather Ben Haber serving as a constant source of support for his soccer passion.

The younger Haber can always rely on his grandfather to be cheering from the sidelines while keeping him motivated with tips on how to improve his game.

Beyond family influences, Haber credits his coaches at the Thornhill soccer club Spartacus – coach Alex Shikov and club president Yuri Studin – with helping him prepare for competition at the next level. Shikov preached the importance of strong technical skills and all-around play, while Studin first recognized the potential in his former protégé at the age of 12, telling Haber he "has the potential to be great."

Not that Haber is at a point where he can rest on his laurels. Despite the success of the home opener, the Big Red stumbled to a 4-8-5 record and their eighth losing season in the past nine. Haber will be a key element of Cornell's attempted return to respectability in the coming years.

Looking further down the road, soccer should remain a major part of Haber's life for a long time to come.

"I love to play soccer," said Haber, "and I will continue to play as long as it remains enjoyable."

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____
CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.
Due key W10FXCTN

A raw deal

NEW TO CANADA

By NINA SHENHAV

I'm not a sushi person. In fact, I'm not a sophisticated gourmet at all.

But I pretend to be one, so when you invite me over, I'll praise and extol dishes with names I can't pronounce (usually French), but all in all, I'm a simple gal. Serve me a plate full of scrambled eggs, a soft cheese side and savoury country bread, and I'm the happiest creature in the kitchen. You can even serve me a plate of flavourful hummus with fresh pitas, and I'll get all giddy. (What can I say? You can take the girl out of the Middle East, but you can't take the Middle East out of the girl.)

So when Meir suggests paying a visit to a new "all you can eat sushi" place, I react coldly.

The problem is that while I'm indifferent, the kids are already jumping up and down in excitement. Yep. I've managed to raise some fineshmekers in my home. Especially the little one, who makes my life miserable when I try to feed her an innocent sandwich, yet makes me open my eyes in horror to the sight of huge pieces of raw salmon being swallowed by her little crater.

As we enter the restaurant, the hostess (who has good instincts) demands to measure the girl's height. My baby fails the test. She needs to pay as an adult. I take the hostess aside and convince her to measure her again, while ordering Meir in Hebrew to take off the girl's shoes and socks immediately. "Bend a little," I whisper to the girl.

"She has a difficult life, so that's her natural posture," I explain sorrowfully. No luck. People here are so suspicious!

We head to our table and start ordering. Very pleased with ourselves, we watch the portions pile up on our table. Gosh, we know how to spend our money wisely!

"Just a note," says the waitress. "What you don't finish eating, you pay for. Have a nice meal!"

We're shocked. I review the loaded table and look at Meir in horror. We start eating, as if the world is coming to an end, or at least food is. "Everything must go!" I shout nervously, recalling a commercial slogan. "Eat up, eat up! For God's sake!" Meir cries to our frightened kids.

We can hardly taste the food. All we know is that if we don't finish everything on the plate (hello, Jewish moms), bad things will happen.

"I can't eat any more," weeps my son after a few hectic, tense minutes.

"I have a shiver!" says the girl, her mouth full of raw tuna, her eyes glassy.

"Less talking, more eating!" I say to speed the people up. Meir glares at me.

"She'll throw up," he says as he tries to keep me from stuffing the girl's face. "It's only money," he adds, unconvincingly.

I'm on a mission. "You wanted sushi? You'll finish it!" I holler."

"Maybe we can shred some piece so it'll look like we started eating them," suggests my genius son, and right away we all start crushing and mashing some poor tofu and avocado slices. Finally, we're done.

We look at an abstract spot on the wall, our tongues drooping heavily out of our open mouths, and ask for the bill.

But instead of the bill, out come four large portions of tempura, dumplings and salmon teriyaki that we forgot we'd ordered.

"Sorry, those dishes take time to prepare", explains the waitress with a cruel smile. "Would you like to pay the bill now or later?"

Nina.shenhav@gmail.com

THREE-APPLE APPLESAUCE FOR YOUR LATKES

Make your own – it's easy!

- 2 medium Golden Delicious apples
- 2 medium Granny Smith apples
- 2 medium Fuji apples
- 1/4 c water
- 1 tblsp sugar

Peel, core and thinly slice all apples. Place apples in large microwave-safe bowl. Add 1/4 c water to bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and microwave on high 10 minutes. Stir apples. Continue to microwave, uncovered, until apples are very tender, about 5 minutes longer. Using large fork, coarsely mash apples. Mix in 1 tbl. sugar. (Can be prepared 2 days ahead. Cover and refrigerate.)

THE CAPLAN FAMILY EXTENDS BEST WISHES FOR A HAPPY & HEALTHY CHANUKAH

CAPLAN'S

a family of stores all under one roof experience the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot directly across from the store

Calcium supplements

FITNESS CORNER

By FELYCE ZOMPARELLI

For more than two decades, we have been told to eat right, exercise and supplement our diets with adequate amounts of calcium as it strengthen our bones and helps to prevent osteoporosis.

The amount of calcium recommended for adults, male or female age 18 to 50, is 1,000 milligrams daily, 1,200 milligrams if you are over 50. There are two ways to insure you get the calcium you need every day: by eating foods rich in calcium, such as dairy products, green vegetables, citrus fruits, nuts and fish or, the easiest way, through a supplement.

However, a recent study published in the British Medical Journal concludes that calcium supplements increased the risk of heart attacks by 30 per cent in people over 40. Dr. Mark Bolland completed an analysis of 15 randomized studies involving 12,000 participants.

The data collected showed higher levels of calcium in the blood can lead to the hardening of arteries, damaged blood vessels or blood clots. An increase in dietary calcium did not show the same results and previous studies have reported that an increase in dietary calcium does not increase cardiovascular risks, leading to the conclusion that the risks are associated with the supplements.

The data collected for this analysis involved studies using calcium supplementation alone, without vitamin D. Vitamin D is very important as it increases the absorption of calcium in the blood. Other studies have found vitamin D decreased the risk of heart disease and should always be taken with calcium supplements.

Visit me at www.felycesfitness.ca to learn more.

Bshas had'chak?

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

URBAN WRITER

Our community has arrived at a place where it's safe to be critical of our surroundings, city hall and our police force. Or has it?

This question is not a trite one, a simple one, as it was only a few short years ago Jews felt totally uncomfortable criticizing the broader community structure, quietly believing we were guests here in Toronto, in Canada.

This sense encouraged fear of public expression. We remembered that history shows when we are comfortable, Jews suffer a short time later. While we carried with us, as well, an appreciation of the non-Jew for caring for our huddled masses, nothing jarred the phrase "None is too many" from our minds.

And from time to time we were reminded of our often tenuous position in society when a sloppy government minister or a cashier at a dollar store let an antisemitic gaffe slip down and off his/her tongue oh so unceremoniously.

I think about all of this when I consider writing an article about our local police force and its reputation for using excessive force.

To this day I struggle with the impact a written piece criticizing Toronto would have on the Jewish people.

I lug that baggage around, that trepidation. I ask, "Will we be unprotected by the police should antisemitism slide its serrated blade out of its scabbard of hatred"?

This hesitation and fear weighs heavily upon me particularly because I have listened to horrendous testimonials of abuse men and women have suffered at the hands of local police officers.

(I take a little comfort knowing this same tension has been faced by Jews of conscience throughout history.)

So when does a person place greater value on self/community security over writing an article about injustices?

Perhaps we should look at the Jewish concept of "bshas had'chak" (in a time of danger) to answer this.

In a time of danger, much changes within the Jewish community. As an example – our sages tell us during such times we should not advertise our Chanukah menorah in our window so as not to bring danger to our family and community.

In this case, our security is more important than promenading the light of Chanukah – a very big mitzvah.

But are we in Canada living in such times? Must we consider the laws of bshas had'chak when reporting?

It is correct to say that the Jews of Iran are in imminent danger – living in an environment of bshas had'chak. Positive quotes from Jewish community leaders defending the regime seem to suggest they are in grave danger. Stating the obvious, the brutal Iranian regime is a very real enemy of the Jewish people and Israel and would bring them death and suffering.

We, however, in Canada are not in fear for our Jewish lives, or fearful of the collapse of our democratic process. Persecution is not imminent.

While Israel is at the centre of ugly campaigns in many corners of our town, the Jewish community of Canada cannot, I believe, remove itself from acting as a witness to injustices happening within our broader ranks.

Antisemitism does exist here, of course, and we must always gauge our written and spoken words, so as not to place our community in a perilous situation. It is not, however, encroaching on our freedom to be a Jew. It is therefore imperative we speak out when able and never shy away from assisting our brothers and sisters, be they Jewish or otherwise. We have that luxury and must take advantage of it.

Our police force needs change. Long live Canada.

Go to http://avrum.net to comment.

Enjoy 3 months' payments waived*.

Because we know you'll give it a good home.

BRING HOME A
MERCEDES-BENZ
EVENT

In addition, receive 25% off installed Genuine Accessories.

Lockable utility bar | Navigation media system | Rear roof spoiler

The Bring Home a Mercedes-Benz Event is the best time for you to save. You'll receive your first three months' payment waived* and 25% off installed Genuine Mercedes-Benz accessories. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group
Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

© 2010 Mercedes-Benz Canada Inc. *Lease and finance offers based on a new 2011 C 250/2011 E 350 BlueTEC available only through Mercedes-Benz Financial on approved credit for a limited time. Lease example based on $358/$738 (excluding taxes) per month for 48/36 months. Down payment or equivalent trade of $6,700/$8,600 plus first monthly payment and security deposit of $400/$600, and applicable taxes due at lease inception. First, second and third month payment waivers are capped up to a total of $1,350/$2,550 including taxes for lease and finance programs. Payment waivers are only applicable on new 2011 B/C, E (sedan/sedan only) ML/GLA models. Not applicable to AMG models. MSRP starting at $35,900/$62,300. A.P.R. of 3.9%/5.9% applies. Total obligation is $22,934/$37,848. Finance example based on 84-month term at an A.P.R. of 1.9%/3.9% and an MSRP of $35,900/$62,300. Monthly Payment is $365/$1,033 excluding taxes with down payment $6,015/$8,715. Cost of borrowing is $1,585/$5,749 for a total obligation of $38,560/$68,124. 18,000 km/year allowance ($0.20/$0.25/km for excess kilometres applies). Freight, PDI of $1,995. Dealer Admin fee of $295, air conditioning levy of $100. Tires, filters, and batteries, stewardship fee of $29.70, $23.86 and provincials fee of $5 are now included in the final purchase price. License, insurance, regular taxes, and PPSA are extra. Payment examples do not include vehicle accessories. 25% off incentive is based on manufacturer suggested list price excluding destination charges. Applicable sales taxes are extra. Some accessory applications may require additional parts and charges. Discount applies only to Genuine Mercedes-Benz Vehicle Accessories, excluding all winter wheel packages, Mercedes-Benz Collection products, tires, and regular maintenance parts. Accessory selection at time of purchase is subject to availability. Incentive only applies to vehicles ordered/ listed above, and cannot be used for other models. Offer may change without notice and cannot be combined with any other offers. Some vehicles are shown with optional equipment available at extra cost. See your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer for details. Offers end November 30th, 2010. C-Class accessories shown.

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Enhanced Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

104 Pages | Thursday, December 2, 2010 | 25 Kislev, 5771 | $1.25

This Week

National

Israel faces new threat, ex-Spanish PM says. Page 3

Prayer-O-Plan aimed at getting a minyan. Page 21

Chanukah Greetings

Chag Samayach to everyone. Section B

Sports & Leisure

Israeli-born soccer player stars for York U. Page 62

On cjnews.com

Chanukah customs stand the test of time.

Index

National	3
Editorials & Letters	8
Perspectives	9
Opinions	10
The Kirshner File	11
Jewish Life	14
According to Reports	23
Family Moments	27
What's New	28
Obituaries & Notices	30
On Campus	40
Just Between Us	40
Heebonics	41
Spice of Life	44
Israel & the Jewish World	45
Business	49
Arts & Travel	53

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

March of the Living inspires Jewish identity

A recently released report confirms that participation in the March of the Living program helps inspire Jewish identity and concern for human rights. In this file photo, a young woman places a sign stating "We will never forget" on railroad tracks leading to a Nazi death camp. Please see related story on page 36.

Toronto community funds IsraAID's cholera clinic in Haiti

By JENNY HAZAN
CJN Israel Bureau

JERUSALEM — An Israeli-run cholera clinic in Haiti funded by the Toronto Jewish community is stepping up its operations.

Since it opened in September, the cholera clinic in Leogane, Haiti, has served primarily as an educational outreach facility, training physicians and community members on how to identify, treat and reduce the spread of the disease, which has claimed 1,250 lives and seen the admission of more than 20,000 patients to hospital since the earthquake in January.

The clinic is operated by the Israeli NGO Tevel B'Tzedek (The Earth – In Justice), one of 17 organizations under the umbrella of IsraAID – the Israel Forum for International Humanitarian Aid. It went into full operation last week as a patient treatment centre in time for an anticipated hike in the rate of infection, which is expected to peak in the next week or two. The facility will handle the overflow of patients from the main hospital in Leogane.

"We're proud to partner with IsraAID on this initiative and many others in which IsraAID has demonstrated its extraordinary skill, courage and compassion on behalf of hundreds of thousands whose lives have been devastated by natural disaster," said Ted Sokolsky, president and CEO of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, which raised $1 million to support IsraAID's operations in Haiti.

These funds have gone to several programs run by IsraAID-affiliated NGOs, among them Fast Israeli Rescue and Search Team, which sent an emergency medical delegation to Port-au-Prince four days after the earthquake; the Negev Institute for Strategies of Peace and Development, which launched water management and agricultural production programs in Jacmal,

Continued on page 46

A member of the IsraAID medical team stands among patients outside the clinic. [Shachar Zahavi photo]

Shabbat Chanukah – Miketz
Candlelighting: 4:23
Havdalah: 5:29
Greater Toronto Area

today vs k.
ws.com

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(U)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 019
PO BOX 972 STATION F 849
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Communal advocacy restructuring nearing completion – please see page 37

The News in Brief

Canada

Rae Denies Rumour

OTTAWA — Liberal MP Bob Rae last week denied rumours he was about to be named Canada's next ambassador to Israel. Calling the rumours "completely false," the outspoken supporter of Israel told the National Post he'll run again in Toronto Centre in the next election. Canada has already appointed Paul Hunt as the successor to outgoing ambassador to Israel Jon Allen

World

Store Forced To Close

LONDON — An Ahava store in London was forced to close again after pro-Palestinian activists blocked the entrance. Two activists reportedly chained themselves Nov. 22 to a cement-filled barrel and had to be removed by police, the Jerusalem Post reported. Ahava produces lotions and bath crystals using Dead Sea minerals on West Bank land claimed by the Palestinians. It has been the target of boycotts and protests worldwide. Similar protests forced the same London store to close twice in 2009.

Return Art: Panel

VIENNA — An Austrian government panel urged that the Leopold Museum in Austria return seven paintings looted from Jewish owners by the Nazis. The art commission set up by the Austrian ministry of culture said Nov. 23 that the paintings – five by Egon Schiele and two by Anton Romako – should be restituted to the heirs of their former owners, Karl Maylaender and Maurice Eisler. The decision is nonbinding, Bloomberg News reported. The paintings are currently part of the Leopold Museum Private Foundation. The museum paid $19 million earlier this year to settle another restitution case. It's currently completing research into the origins of its entire collection.

Boycott Urged

OSLO — Some 100 leading Norwegian figures in arts and culture have signed a petition for a cultural and academic boycott of Israel. The effort is being led by Egil Drillo Olsen, coach of the national soccer team, the Jerusalem Post reported. Olsen wrote in Aftenposten, the country's second-largest newspaper, that a boycott of Israel would be "in line with what 90 per cent of the world's population believes. There cannot be many other opinions."

Islamic Textbooks Slur Jews, BBC Reports

LONDON — Textbooks used in a network of Islamic schools in Britain promote antisemitic views, the BBC reported.

The textbook says Jews were cursed by God and "looked like monkeys and pigs," and it asks children to list the "reprehensible" qualities of Jews. The curriculum also contains homophobic views and instructs children on where to amputate the hands and feet of persons convicted of theft, in accordance with Islamic law, the report says.

The report was broadcast Nov. 22 on the program Panorama.

The textbooks, which are part of a Saudi Arabian government curriculum, are used in more than 40 British part-time Islamic schools and clubs with 5,000 students, the report found. The schools reportedly are overseen by the cultural bureau of the Saudi Arabian Embassy in London.

Saudi officials quoted by the BBC said passages from the Qur'an often are "taken out of their historical context." British officials quoted in the report said they would not tolerate any antisemitic teachings in British schools.

Jailed For Threats

CHICAGO — A dual Jordanian-U.S. citizen was sentenced Nov. 24 to 25 months in jail for mailing a bomb threat to a Chicago Jewish day school. Mohammad Alkaramla, 26, of Chicago's North Side, was jailed for mailing a letter to the Ida Crown Jewish Academy that threatened to blow up Jewish educational institutions as well as injure or kill Jewish individuals in the city. The letter, received on Dec. 31, 2008, during Israel's war in Gaza, was addressed to rabbis and community leaders.

Nazi Dies Before Trial

BERLIN — Samuel Kunz, one of the world's most wanted Nazis, died in Germany before he could be brought to trial. Kunz, 89, was charged earlier this year with assisting in the murder of 430,000 Jews during the Holocaust at the Belzec death camp. He died Nov. 18, the court in Bonn said Nov. 22. He was third on the Simon Wiesenthal Center's list of most wanted Nazis.

Stonecraft Monument Factory

Large inventory of top quality

Granite Monuments

in our own North York factory

SAVINGS to DEC. 31/10

Single Monuments $1400 | Double Monuments $2400

SERVING THE JEWISH COMMUNITY FOR MANY YEARS

121 BRISBANE RD., #1 DOWNSVIEW 416-667-1474

WWW.STONECRAFTMONUMENTS.COM

A HAPPY & HEALTHY CHANUKAH FROM STONECRAFT MONUMENT FACTORY

A Chanukah Reminder from

Steeles Memorial Chapel

For many of us, Chanukah is a time to recall memories of time spent with family and loved ones.

Unfortunately, some seniors are left with only that ... memories.

If there's an elderly person whom you care for, visit, and light a candle with them. Make sure they're in good health, eating nutritionally and taking medication as prescribed.

It's amazing how a little love and caring can make such a big difference.

www.steelesmemorial.com

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

Beth Tikvah Synagogue Tour
Amazing Jewish Heritage Trip to

ITALY

May 11 – 23, 2011

Once-in-a-lifetime journey to legendary sites & the Jewish Soul of Rome, Florence, Siena, Tuscany & Venice

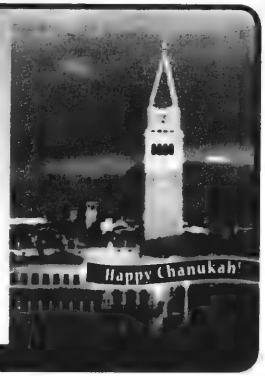
Please Call 905-771-7800

aufgang travel & cruise centre

7077 Bathurst St., Suite 204 Thornhill, ON, L4J 2J6

www.aufgangtravel.com



The Canadian Jewish news

Vol. XL, No. 47 (1,976)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Shen Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

Rabbi B. Baskin, E. Burakowski, B. Gladstone, L. Hart, G. Koren, J. Siblin-Librach, E. Malamet, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, L. Spersman, G. Steinberg
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, Jose De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr, Steven Cummings, Michael Goldbloom, Igor Korenzvit, Julia Koschitzky, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe
Directors

George A. Cohon, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Honourary Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.

CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

The Canadian Jewish news

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.or ca

IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
Manufacturers of Custom Made Table Pads
• FREE IN-HOME SERVICE
• MADE IN CANADA
• BEST SERVICE-PRICE-QUALITY
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
TORONTO 416-283-2308 | HAMILTON 905-383-1343
CANADA WIDE 1-800-668-7439
www.ptpads.com

National

Greater Toronto Area

Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future? Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
Sonny Goldstein, CFP
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Israel faces new threat, ex-Spanish PM says

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Israel faces a new and insidious threat to its existence as a sovereign nation, says Jose Maria Aznar, the former prime minister of Spain.

"It's not a conventional war as in 1948, 1956, 1967 or 1973," he told a UJA Federation of Greater Toronto dinner on Sunday night. "It's not the kind of terrorism [Israel] endured during the 1970s, 1980s, 1990s and after 2000."

Describing the threat as "a war against the idea of Israel," Aznar said, "We're dealing with a new form of attack against Israel's legitimacy, against Israel's right to exist."

Branding it a campaign of delegitimization, he observed, "It's a 'soft war' in which the enemies of Israel use legal tricks, exploit multilateral bodies and use dubious non-governmental organizations to portray Israel as an illegal state, a barbaric state, one that must be isolated and turned into a pariah state."

Aznar, Spain's prime minister from 1996 to 2004, pledged to combat efforts to delegitimize Israel and its right to live in peace within secure borders.

"I have always thought that a politician's actions speak louder than words," he declared, unveiling a plan to counter such attempts.

Aznar launched the Friends of Israel Initiative in Paris at the end of last May, on the day a pro-Palestinian flotilla approached the coast of the Gaza Strip in an attempt to breach Israel's siege.

Jose Maria Aznar

"It was a real coincidence that convinced us even more about the need to fight against the increasing delegitimization of Israel," said Aznar, a conservative politician whose final days in office were marred by an Islamic terrorist attack on a commuter train in Madrid that killed 191 people.

By all accounts, the bombing was in retaliation for Spain's decision to send troops to Iraq and Afghanistan.

Aznar, who was also due to speak at York University on Nov. 29 at an event sponsored by UJA Federation and Hillel of Greater Toronto, said his initiative is supported by private donors and was founded under his leadership by such figures as John Bolton, the former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and Alejandro Toledo, the former president of Peru.

"We don't defend nor do we justify specific policies of current governments in Jerusalem, nor do we promote the particular interests of any political party," he said in a prepared speech.

"What we aspire to defend is the State of Israel, its right to exist peacefully and to be treated with fairness – nothing more, nothing less."

Currently executive president of a Spanish think-tank known as the Foundation for Social Studies and Analysis, Aznar said the Friends of Israel Initiative is guided by several principles: Israel's right to exist should not be questioned, and that Israel is an integral part of the west, shares western values and should not be weakened.

In an opinion piece in the Times of London shortly after the group's formation, Aznar – a board member of Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation and of the Atlantic Council – wrote, "Israel is our first line of defence in a turbulent region that is constantly at risk of descending into chaos; a region vital to our energy security; a region that forms the front line in the fight against extremism."

He added, "If Israel goes down, we all go down… The West is what it is thanks to its Judeo-Christian roots. If the Jewish element of those roots is upturned and Israel is lost, then we are lost, too. Whether we like it or not, our fate is inextricably intertwined."

In his article, Aznar ascribed "the real threats" to stability in the Middle East to the rise of radical Islamism.

Continued on page 37

BOXING WEEK SALE IS ON NOW!
SAVE UP TO 65% OFF EVERYTHING IN STORE!
Visit our new 10,000 sq. ft. Leather Gallery plus our new SleepWorks mattress gallery!

DECORIUM
www.decorium.com
Just what you're looking for in a furniture store.*
416 736 6120 • 1 800 232 2267
363 Supertest Rd. Toronto, ON M3J 2M4
Join us on: facebook
www.facebook.com/decorium
*Not to be combined with any other offer, not subject to prior sales. Event ends January 02, 2011.

Proud Supporters of: Baycrest

Benjamin Group

Through the generations ...a sacred trust

MY GRANDFATHER'S PROMISE

"Our family continues to uphold my grandfather Henry Benjamin's promise to serve our community's funeral-related needs."

Michael Benjamin

My grandfather was a Russian immigrant with a grocery store on College Street. Since he had a wagon, a rare thing in our community at the time, Toronto's first Chevra Kaditsha asked for his help delivering bodies for burial. Over time, he became deeply committed to the sacred work of the Chevra Kadisha. For more of Henry's story, please visit the Benjamin Group website.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto

416-663-9060

www.thebenjamingroup.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services.

Greater Toronto Area

They're not joking

Not surprisingly, merely days after the government of Israel announced that it had set aside funds to renovate the Western Wall plaza, the Palestinian Authority (PA) announced that the Western Wall had never been part of the structure of a Jewish temple.

Al-Mutawakil Taha, deputy minister of information in the Palestinian Authority and also a renowned poet and writer, last week released a five-page study on the PA website that categorically denies any connection between the Western Wall and the Temples that once stood in Jerusalem.

"This wall has never been a part of what is called the Jewish Temple," the report claimed.

And with that tightly phrased, curt conclusion, the distinguished Palestinian poet, writer and legislator cavalierly dismissed centuries of history, science and archeology. He purported to throw out the window of the PA Palace of Propaganda and Expedience certain inconvenient details that underpin much of western civilization itself.

The tone of the report is sneering and dismissive. He essentially spits the words as if to emphasize the fact that he regards the Jewish claim to a historical connection to Jerusalem as so much detritus.

"The Zionist occupation falsely and unjustly claims that it owns this wall, which it calls the Western Wall or Kotel."

Taha writes his own history.

"Al-Buraq Wall [the name given by Arabs to the Western Wall] is in fact the western wall of Al-Aqsa Mosque... One can only conclude that Al-Buraq Wall is a Muslim wall and an integral part of the Aqsa Mosque and Haram al-Sharif [the Temple Mount]."

The report also contains a warning aimed primarily at the Jewish People – in Israel and beyond.

"No one has the right to claim ownership over it or change its features or original character."

And then, either ominously as a threat, or cleverly as a tactic as a way to "box in" PA President Mahmoud Abbas' negotiating room, with Abbas' connivance, of course, Taha added: "No one has the right to agree with the occupation state's racist and oppressive measures against history and holy sites ... no Muslim or Arab or Palestinian had the right to give up one stone of Al-Buraq Wall or other religious sites."

From the editor's desk...

To ensure that the world knows that the report was written and released ex-cathedra, as the policy of the PA, Taha told the Associated Press that the views in the study reflected the official Palestinian position.

He punctuated his remarks with what we can characterize only as dry, droll irony.

"It was Islamic tolerance," he added, "which allowed the Jews to stand before it and cry over its loss."

When we read and hear such statements emanating from the Palestinian leadership, our first instinct is to dismiss them as insensitive political posturing.

But we would be wrong to do so.

The PA is not joking.

They do not utter the pronouncements for the benefit of the Arab street with tongue-in-cheek, all the while winking and nodding their acknowledgment of and belief in the true facts of history to western officials standing off to the side of the room.

They firmly believe in the truth of their narrative of history. Former PA president Yasser Arafat, it will be recalled, without shame or embarrassment, made the very same ignorant remarks to U.S. president Bill Clinton at Camp David more than a decade ago.

In response to the PA study, we should not simply shrug in disbelief or disgust. We must reiterate for the record, for the sake of preserving truth and for the sake of the Jewish People, the facts of history.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu criticized the study at two very crucial levels: substantively and politically. Regarding the substance of the PA's conclusions, he said: "Denying the link binding the Jewish People and the Western Wall by the Palestinian information office is a travesty."

Regarding the political implications that arise from these views, he said: "When the Palestinian Authority denies the connection between the Jewish People and the Western Wall, it raises serious questions as to its intentions to reach a peace deal founded on coexistence and mutual recognition."

Even legislators to the left of the prime minister cannot abide the PA's disfigurement of history. Labor party Knesset member Einat Wilf was reported by Ha'aretz to have said that Palestinians are stupidly trying again and again to somehow create an alternative reality in which the Jewish People are strangers in this land.

All peoples who are part of, belong to, benefit from and champion western civilization should prevent this from happening.

–MBD

Correction

The caption with the photograph "Colourful welcome to men in uniform," on the front page last week, included incorrect information. Walter Natynczyk, whose name we misspelled, is chief of the defence staff of the Canadian Armed Forces. We apologize for the errors and for any embarrassment we may have caused. –MBD

SeeJN

PAYING TRIBUTE FOR HUMANITARIAN WORK

The Canadian Armed Forces' Disaster Assistance Relief Team (DART), the Canadian people and the medical relief team of the Israel Defence Forces recently received the Meir 2010 Humanitarian Awards Of Distinction from the Canadian Friends of Meir Medical Center (CFMMC), in Kfar Saba, Israel, for their work in Haiti after the earthquake there last January. Standing, from left, are Sam Primucci, dinner co-chair; MP Derek Lee; MP John McKay; MP Rob Oliphant; MP Joe Volpe; MP Ken Dryden. Seated from left are a member of DART Haiti; chief of staff of DART Haiti, Maj. David McQueen; CFMMC president, Arie Raif; CFMMC national director, Daliah Raif; Canadian military assistant, Maj. Michel Lavigne. At right, Minister of State of Foreign Affairs (Americas) Peter Kent presents the Award of Honour to Lt.-Col. Dr. Asher Elhayany, CEO and chief of staff of Meir Hospital.

BEING JEWISH DOESN'T HAVE TO BE EXPENSIVE!®

THE ISRAELI SOURCE

SUPER SAVINGS!

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1
SAVE 65%
$1.99/12
$3.49/24

Chanukah Silly Bands

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2
SAVE 60%
$18.00

"EZ-Lites" Pre-Filled Olive Oil Candles
Small or Large

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3
SAVE $$$!
75% OFF RETAIL PRICES

Chanukah Partyware
Assorted Designs

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 5
SAVE 60%
FROM $19.99

Electric Menorahs
Assorted Colours

SAVE $$$ ON A HUGE SELECTION OF CHANUKAH MENORAHS, CANDLES, TOYS & GAMES, BOOKS, AND MORE!

MONDAY, DECEMBER 6
SAVE 60%
$3.99

Chanukah Crayola Cookie Kit

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 7
SAVE 50%
$24.99

KidKraft 31-Pc Wooden Chanukah Toy Set

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 8
SAVE 60%
FROM $6.99

Chanukah Serving Dishes
Assorted Designs, Sizes and Shapes

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9
SAVE 80%
99¢

Musical Light-Up Dreidels

twitter.com/IsraeliSource · facebook.com/IsraeliSource

60 Doncaster Ave., Thornhill · (905) 482-2025 · 1-877-613-1818
Sunday 10-5 · Monday-Thursday 10-6 · Friday 10-2

Greater Toronto Area

Israel ambassador enjoying current posting

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Israeli ambassador to Canada Miriam Ziv is enjoying her time in the Great White North.

In an interview with The CJN from her Ottawa office last week, Ziv said that the first two years of her four-year term – she was installed in September 2008 – have been "a pleasure," more so because of Canada's friendly stance towards Israel.

Asked about how Israel perceives the support being shown it by Canada, she said Israelis read about Canadian support in their daily newspapers and have been struck by Prime Minister Stephen Harper's strong statements of friendship and backing of their country and Canada's quick enactment of economic sanctions against Iran this year.

Miriam Ziv

"Canada also [announced last week] that it will boycott the so-called Durban III conference in New York next year. That will be noticed and appreciated by Israelis. Israelis know of Canada's friendship. It's no secret," Ziv said, adding that Israelis are now much more exposed to Canada because of the multiple economic missions to Israel by various provincial leaders and captains of industry over the last year.

Ziv said one of her priorities upon arriving for her post in Canada was to focus on how to get the individual provinces more involved with Israel.

Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty and Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger both made trips to Israel this year and numerous Memoranda of Understanding (MOUs) have been signed between Israeli and Canadian medical and tech-sector companies in 2010.

She said she's also met with the premiers of Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia – Brad Wall and Darrell Dexter respectively – and noted they both expressed interest in visiting Israel in the near future and that she had extended invitations to both.

Dexter has traveled to Israel previously, but never as premier, Ziv added.

But she is not content to rest on past laurels and doesn't gauge the embassy's success by how many Canadian officials it can convince to visit Israel.

Ziv said she's now focused on the next two years of her ambassadorship, in which she will try and bring Canadians and Israelis "even closer" to each other both culturally and economically.

"We can do much more. And since Israel leads the world in science and technology innovation… and since Canada invests a lot in research but does less well than Israel in commercialization, there is an interest for more work together."

She said initiatives like the recent announcement of joint Israeli-Canadian collaboration on the new Ontario Brain Institute are just the "launching pad for a new process of working together on so many levels."

The expectation is that both Canadians and Israelis, through the growing exposure of researchers, scientists, businesspeople and diplomats to one another, will know the value of the "special relationship" between the countries.

Ziv is quick to give credit to "all the various Israeli agencies" in Canada who do the hard work of promoting their country across the nation.

"I don't have to tell you that seeing Israel [firsthand] changes people's perceptions and makes them more eager" to want to do business and meet with Israelis.

The time is opportune, she said, for Canadians to do business with Israel.

Ziv said she's not surprised by the willingness of Canadians to trade with and embrace Israeli innovation.

One of the traditional detriments to Canadians doing business with Israel was the physical distance between both countries, she said. Ziv noted that these distances are now smaller due to advancements in technology as well as the opening up of free trade agreements between Israel and its other trading partners.

Canadian Minister of International Trade Peter Van Loan recently announced that Canada and Israel were looking to expand on the Canada-Israel Free Trade Agreement (CIFTA).

On another front, Ziv said the growing Israel Apartheid Week (IAW) movement on Canada's university campuses is "very worrisome" to her.

She said there is now a dedicated staffer at the embassy to do outreach to the various Jewish campus organizations to help them respond to IAW pressures.

Of the many diplomatic achievements she's achieved thus far, Ziv said to date she's most proud of the Canada-Israel 60th anniversary commemorative stamp issued in April this year, which was achieved through the efforts of the embassy.

The stamp depicts a red maple leaf and a blue Magen David made up of people and was a joint product of Canada Post and the Israel Postal Company.

"This will be something collectors will always have in their albums. This is the highlight so far."

On a personal level, Ziv said that while she doesn't ski or skate, that hasn't affected her appreciation of what Canada has to offer.

"I do watch hockey and I do know some of the rules now," she said, laughing.

Asked about her impressions of the Canadian Jewish community, Ziv said she was "impressed."

"It's a vibrant community."

Enjoy 3 months' payments waived*. Offer ends soon!

BRING HOME A
MERCEDES-BENZ
EVENT

In addition, receive 25% off installed Genuine Accessories.

Lockable utility bar — Navigation media system — Rear roof spoiler

The Bring Home a Mercedes-Benz Event is the best time for you to save. You'll receive your first three months' payment waived* and 25% off installed Genuine Mercedes-Benz accessories. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group
Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

THE TORONTO AREA RETAIL GROUP WISHES ALL OUR FRIENDS A VERY HAPPY CHANUKAH.

Offers available to retail customers who lease and finance through Mercedes-Benz Financial Services on approved credit from a limited time ... Lease example based on $358/$738 excluding taxes per month for 48/36 months. Down payment or equivalent trade in of $6,700/$8,419 plus first monthly payment and security deposit of $0/$0 and applicable taxes due at lease inception. First, second and third month payment waivers are capped credits in total of $1,350/$2,160 including tax for lease and finance programs. Payment waivers are only applicable on new 2011 C-Class Sedan, Wagon, and Luxury, M-Class models. Not applicable to AMG models. MSRP starting at $39,990/$62,500. A P.P. of $1,695 applies. Total obligation of $23,194/$34,522 at 1.9%/3.9% finance example based on 60 month term and A.P.R. of 1.9%/3.9%, and an MSRP of $38,490/$62,500. Monthly Payment is $565/$1,032 excluding taxes with down payment $6,045/$8,419. Cost of borrowing is $1,565/$3,749 for a total obligation of $38,560/$68,124. 18,000 km/year allowance. $0.20/km for excess kilometres applies. Freight, PDI of $1,895, Dealer Administration fee of $295, air conditioning levy of $100, EMF tires, filters, and batteries, all dealership fee of $29.75, $23.86 and provincial fee of $5 are now included in the final purchase price. License, insurance, registration, taxes, and PPSA are extra. Payment exempters do not include vehicle accessories. The 25% off accessories incentive is based on manufacturer-suggested retail price excluding installation charges or select vehicles. Applicable taxes taxes are extra. Some accessory applications may require additional parts and charges. Discount applies only to select Genuine Mercedes-Benz Vehicle Accessories, excluding all winter wheel packages, Mercedes-Benz Collection products, tires, and regular maintenance parts. Accessory selection at time of purchase is subject to availability. The accessory incentive only applies to new vehicle models listed above, and cannot be used for other model purchases. Offer may change without notice and cannot be combined with any other offers. Some vehicles are shown with optional equipment available at extra cost. See your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer for details. Offers end December 31st, 2010 and are subject to vehicle availability. C-Class accessories shown. Available accessories vary by model.

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints
Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
, 500 Dom Mills Rd Suite 205, North York, Ont M3B 3K4

Sadly, the cedars are being uprooted

We can only imagine what Saad Hariri truly thought as he stepped onto the tarmac of the airport in Tehran last Saturday. And we can only shake our heads in empathetic sorrow at the surreal role in which the Lebanese leader has been cast.

Hariri was in Iran on a two-day state visit to try to ensure that his country does not soon break apart into its sectarian components. In his heart of hearts, however, he knew the trip was a widely visible, publicly humiliating display of subservience and obeisance by the government of Lebanon – and especially its western-oriented, Christian constituency – to the Shia rulers in Iran.

Although he used different words on the eve of his departure to say so, Hariri explained that the reason for his trip was to conscript Tehran's help in controlling Hezbollah. Hariri is worried about Hezbollah, because its leader, Hassan Nasrallah, recently warned that he would overthrow the Lebanese government, of which his party sits as a coalition member, if the United Nations investigation into the murder of Hariri's father, Rafik, concludes what everyone already knows, namely, that Hezbollah was responsible for the killing.

"Impairing the stability of any country of the region is a threat to the interests of Arabs and Iran at the same time," Hariri told reporters before his trip. "Therefore, I consider that Iran is concerned… to provide elements of stability in all countries of the region, including Lebanon."

The irony of Hariri's appeal to Iran is rich with Alice-in-Wonderland inversion and incongruity. The Shia rulers of Iran are the main financial, military and spiritual benefactors of Shia Hezbollah.To a large degree, Hezbollah is Tehran's surrogate in Iran's attempt to control events in Lebanon. It is hardly likely that the Hezbollah assassins would have murdered Saad's father without prior approval from Tehran.

Hariri was greeted on Saturday by Vice-President Mohammad Reza Rahimi, who vowed to deepen ties with Lebanon. "We should use all of our capacities to expand the ties… and to take giant steps in line with our interests," Rahimi said.

"The visit will expand ties between Iran and Lebanon and will surely strengthen the resistance movement against the Zionist regime," said deputy Foreign Minister Reza Sheibani, the state-run Iran Daily newspaper reported.

It requires no fecundity of imagination to see in Rahimi and Sheibani's words the sinister image of spidery Iran casting its web ever more intricately and constrictively over the freedom-seeking people of Lebanon. As of this writing, Hariri had not yet met with Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei or with Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. But he was scheduled to. Oh how triumphant they must have felt. Alas, we can only regret Hariri's visit to Tehran.

The tall and strong cedars of Lebanon, symbols of a proud, independent country, are now becoming uprooted.

25 years ago in The CJN

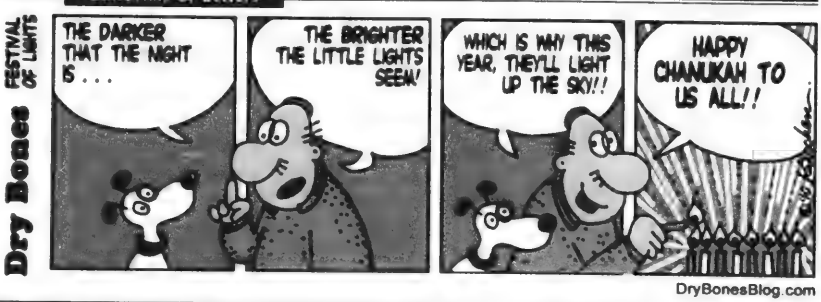
Israel issued an apology to U.S. secretary of state George Shultz after U.S. Navy counter-intelligence officer Jonathan Pollard admitted that he had provided Israel with classified U.S. military intelligence since the spring of 1984. Shultz said he was satisfied with Israel's statement.



Dry Bones
FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS
THE DARKER THAT THE NIGHT IS . . .
THE BRIGHTER THE LITTLE LIGHTS SEEM!
WHICH IS WHY THIS YEAR, THEY'LL LIGHT UP THE SKY!!
HAPPY CHANUKAH TO US ALL!!
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Aboodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Teleni, Nelson Wiseman.

Community's restructuring (1)

As The CJN has reported, the way that advocacy on behalf of the Canadian Jewish community is delivered is being restructured ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring," Nov. 25; "Advocacy revamp coming soon," Nov. 4).

Because I am a member of the restructuring committee that is charged with recommending what these changes will look like, I have not up to this point made any public comment on the issue. It now is appropriate that I do so.

The restructuring committee has been working on a continuously evolving document that is meant to serve as a "Road Map" for the path forward, and that will soon be made public.The process to get to this point has been an iterative one, marked by considerable discussion of important issues. Input has been solicited and received from a wide range of community organizations and from the professionals and lay leaders of our current advocacy agencies.

While such a process is ongoing, it is a challenge to provide information to the public. An unsurprising though regrettable consequence is that people may become concerned about the process or its potential outcome. It is also not surprising that people and organizations with strong views will want to advocate on behalf of what they consider to be the best interests of the Jewish community.

Through all this, however, the committee has been making considerable progress, which I find encouraging, and consensus has been reached on many of the key fundamental issues. Other issues remain to be tackled, and there are still important details to fill in. I intend to be fully engaged in that continuing process. What I can clearly state is that the current document provides a constructive framework for the way forward toward an effective and efficient advocacy voice, and on that basis, I support it and commend it for consideration to the broader community.

Mark J. Freiman
National President
Canadian Jewish Congress

* * *

Community's restructuring (2)

As a member of the restructuring committee involved in the reorganizing of the current community advocacy structure, I would like to clearly state that I support the current document and recommend it to the broader Jewish community as a Road Map toward an effective and efficient advocacy voice.

Moshe Ronen
Chair
Canada-Israel Committee

LET THEM GO…

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1622

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

* * *

Community restructuring and Congress

I was somewhat shocked to read the article "Congress wary of CIJA restructuring" (Nov. 25), concerning the transition of the Canadian Jewish Congress from the effective voice for Canadians into some kind of public-relations advocacy group.

I observed the CJC during a six-year undercover investigation into the world of white supremacists. Between 1988 and 1994, I was able to see the good work Congress was doing on behalf of all Canadians in monitoring and reporting the activities of these domestic terrorists.

The effectiveness of the CJC is one of the main reasons the right wing was set back 20 years in Canada and why Canada became a much safer place as a result. Wolfgang Droege, the now-deceased former leader of the Heritage Front, once told me that he felt that his biggest obstacle was the "chronic observation he was under by [Congress CEO] Bernie Farber and the CJC." The CJC was many times described by Heritage Front members as one of its biggest enemies.

I urge the decision-makers to take a long hard look at the good work that the CJC has done to ensure that government investigations were being done so that Canadians could be protected from this homegrown cancer.

Grant Bristow
Edmonton

* * *

Survivor appreciates Congress

On April 11, 1945, I was liberated from Buchenwald Concentration Camp. I was 14 years old and one of only 426 children to survive Buchenwald. I was the youngest of six children. My immediate concern was to be reunited with my family, but it was too dangerous to return to Poland. Returning Jews had been attacked and killed. The two options left were Canada or Australia. Canada was my number one choice, and it was the CJC that sponsored us. I can't thank Congress enough for allowing me to become a human being again; for allowing me an opportunity to rebuild my life.

I hope that any discussions about the future of Jewish advocacy organizations in Canada will take to heart the importance of the name "Canadian Jewish Congress" ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring," Nov. 25). This name is crucial to us Holocaust survivors who it brought to Canada and to Canadians whose lives have been touched by its work.

Robert Waisman
Founder and Past President
Vancouver Holocaust Education Centre

For more letters, see cjnews.com.

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

New theatre pits left vs. right over hurting Israel

By LESLIE SUSSER
JTA

Residents of the arid West Bank town of Ariel got a taste of Paris last month.

Defying left-wing calls for an actors' boycott, the Beersheba Theater group inaugurated a new cultural centre with a moving performance of Piaf!, a musical tribute to the undisputed doyenne of the French chanson.

The very staging of the show went to the heart of a bitter argument between left and right over which side can claim to be today's true Zionists. Each accuses the other of betraying the Zionist heritage and giving succor to a rising tide of delegitimization that calls for Israel's dismantlement or at least questions its right to exist.

Israeli Culture Minister Limor Livnat

For the left-wingers, the tricky dilemma is how to criticize the government and the occupation without providing ammunition for Israel's foes.

Right-wingers argue that sharp left-wing attacks on the settler project, such as calling for a cultural boycott of the settlements, play into the hands of would-be delegitimizers, who also use the boycott weapon. Left-wingers retort that only by ending the occupation, the target of virtually all their criticism, will Israel finally be able to put to rest the growing rumblings against its international legitimacy.

In the run-up to the Piaf performance, left-wing actors, directors, authors and academics wrote letters calling for a boycott of the Ariel cultural centre to make crystal clear their opposition to the ongoing settlement enterprise.

"It was essential to remind Israeli public opinion that there is no consensus on the legitimacy of the settlements," playwright Yehoshua Sobol, one of the leaders of the protest, told JTA. "It's a case of Ariel or Israel. Ariel will destroy Israel if it goes on like this."

Israeli Culture Minister Limor Livnat responded with two proposals, both of which enraged the left: that government financing for theatre groups be dependent on prior agreement to perform anywhere under Israeli control, and that a prize be created for "Zionist" work.

Outraged left-wingers argued that it would be wrong to attach government strings of any kind to creative work. Moreover, they asked, who would define what was or was not "Zionist"?

"There is a semantic confusion here," Gadi Baltiansky, director of the Geneva Initiative, a 2003 blueprint for peace with the Palestinians, said in an interview with JTA.

"When Culture Minister Limor Livnat says her answer to those who don't want to perform in Ariel is to give a prize to a 'Zionist' work, she is turning things upside down. The true Zionists are the people who don't want to keep the West Bank, and those who do are the ones undermining the legitimacy of the Zionist enterprise."

The right-wingers contend that Israel, surrounded by irredentist enemies and facing growing international criticism aimed at delegitimizing its very existence, desperately needs a single unifying ideology based on the justice of its cause. Otherwise, they say, the country might not survive.

"If we are to withstand everything the Israeli Arabs, the Islamic world and the post-modernists who see nationalism as outmoded and immoral want to do to us, we need a defining ideology that highlights the justice of our cause," Yisrael Harel, chairman of the Institute for Zionist Strategies, told JTA. "Otherwise, over time, there won't be a Jewish state because there will be no one left to fight for it."

Left-wingers respond that it is precisely the monolithic ultranationalism pushed by people like Harel that could make Israel an international pariah. On the contrary, they say, a place of honour for Israel among the nations depends on a commitment to universal, humanistic ideals and an end to the occupation.

For the past few years, Eran Shayshon of the Tel Aviv-based Reut Institute has been working on strategies to combat Israel's would-be delegitimizers. In an interview with JTA, Shayshon argued that vocal Israeli left-wing critics can actually play a key role in the fight against delegitimization. Coming from them, he said, criticism of the delegitimizers carries more weight.

The new cultural and sport centre that opened Nov. 8 in Ariel. [Flash90 photo]

But Shayshon says that not all left-wingers take a helpful stance. Some are wary of even acknowledging that a delegitimization problem exists, he says, because they fear that to do so might compromise their freedom to criticize the government. Others go too far, using terms such as "apartheid," which plays into the hands of delegitimizers.

"We need people from the liberal left first to acknowledge that a delegitimization problem exists and then to distance themselves clearly from the phenomenon," Shayshon said.

Shayshon maintains that while the ultranationalism on the Israeli right is clearly a response to delegitimization, it is not a very effective way of fighting it. In some cases, he says, it even helps the delegitimizers depict Israel as an intolerant and close-minded society.

In Shayshon's view, what Israel needs is to make a very clear distinction between delegitimization of the state and legitimate criticism of government policy, and then to be receptive to the criticism while isolating and marginalizing the delegitimitizers.

The trouble is that this requires a subtlety of mind that Shayshon says doesn't readily exist in Israel.

"Israelis tend to adopt a 'narrow tent' mindset, which says, 'If you are not with me, you are against me,' whereas the delegitimizers do the opposite, embracing anyone who is not against them," he said.

"That is a much more effective strategy, and I think we should adopt it. The narrow-tent approach could push critics who care about the country into the arms of the delegitimizers who don't."

Nevertheless Shayshon – who has been focusing on areas such as London, the San Francisco Bay Area, Madrid and Montreal, where delegitimization groups are strong – predicted the beginnings of a positive turnaround.

He said that "2011 is going to be the first year we fight back. When I say we, I mean the government as well as pro-Zionist groups in Israel and abroad.

"There is a much greater awareness of the potential power of delegitimization, and we are finally gearing up to meet it."

Left-wingers insist that it's relatively easy for them to be against the occupation but for the Israeli state and against the delegitimizers who would destroy it.

"I, for example, came out against the boycott calls and wrote a letter to the University of California at Berkeley when it was necessary," Baltiansky said. "I also came out against those who are in favour of a Palestinian state but forget there is another state here, too."

Baltiansky does not think the delegitimizers pose an immediate threat to Israel's existence, but he is worried about longer-term trends.

"It could start with an isolated academic boycott, which turns into a much larger economic boycott, followed by refusal to meet Israeli officials," he said. "People could start asking, 'Why is Israel necessary?' And that could lead to really damaging isolation. That's why we are so strongly against BDS" – the term used to describe the campaign for anti-Israel boycotts, divestment measures and sanctions.

In Baltiansky's view, a credible peace process would help arrest the negative trend, and achieving a two-state solution as envisaged by the left would finally remove questions about Israel's legitimacy and marginalize the remaining hard-core delegitimizers.

"The two-state solution gives legitimacy to Israel, to Zionism and to the right of the Jewish people to self-determination," Baltiansky maintained. "And the lack of such a solution puts our legitimacy at risk."

Selective free speech

In his Nov. 20 National Post column, political commentator David Frum reflected on York University's double standard in its approach to invited speakers.

In February of this year, when Daniel Pipes, the noted historian and founder of Middle East Forum, was scheduled to speak at York, the students who invited him were required to pay the high cost of providing police security for the event. When they declined to do so, Pipes' appearance was cancelled.

Lawrence Hart in Hamilton

Former British MP George Galloway, notes Frum, was likewise invited by a student group, this time the York Federation of Students, which was similarly expected to cover the cost of policing the speaker's appearance. This group is amply funded and readily complied. Galloway's speech went ahead as planned Nov. 16, but, eerily, not before the university threatened legal action not only against anticipated disrupters of the event, but also against a Toronto rabbi, Ahron Hoch.

With Rabbi Hoch, the York administration, through its legal counsel, went so far as to demand that he immediately disavow, and remove, a web posting wherein he'd criticized Mamdouh Shoukri, York's president, for defending the decision to allow (Galloway) to speak on campus. In addressing Shoukri, Rabbi Hoch had remarked that "the concept of freedom of speech was never meant to be used as a vehicle to spread support for terror, murder and genocide" and that "Mr Shoukri has again shown his amazing tolerance for anti-Semitism and lack of vigilance regarding the feeling of safety for Jewish students, [which] needs to be strongly protested."

York's differential treatment of Pipes and Galloway speaks to a moral incoherence that defies rational interpretation. But even more so, it illuminates a flawed and patently absurd mindset that pervades academia well beyond York. What this tries to enforce is that, under the facade of free speech, content cannot be controlled. This means that short of breaching the Criminal Code, speakers can more or less say whatever they like, regardless of whether their words are false, misleading, intimidating, divisive, discriminatory or even hateful.

Conversely, however, behaviour can be controlled. Loosely translated, this allows penalties against anyone who "disrupts" it talk. Such obvious asymmetry gives a free pass to the speaker while abjectly shutting down any protest from the audience that goes beyond what's regarded as "respectful" disagreement. In this way, provocation by the speaker, no matter how egregious, is tolerated, but reaction by the audience, beyond what's minimally indignant, is not.

Consequently, until such hypocrisy is effectively deconstructed, we should expect to see much more of the sort of travesty that defined Galloway's boorish romp across Canada.

What does Israel owe the Jews of the Diaspora?

The relationship between Israel and world Jewry – or more accurately the diminishing relationship – is at the fore of Jewish institutional and leadership concern today. What can be done to combat the perceived disengagement from and increased alienation toward Israel?

One focus of the efforts is on improved public relations and education of world Jewry as to the case for Israel. An increased ability by Jews to defend Israel to others will lead to a parallel increase in affinity toward and possibly affiliation with Israel.

Dauniel Hartman in Jerusalem

Israel, however, cannot combat alienation unless it ceases to generate it and be one of its primary causes. If Israel wants a Jewish world with a strong affinity toward Israel and its needs, it must also take into account the impact of its policies on world Jewry. At issue is not only legislation on issues of conversion and the rights of liberal Jews to pray at the Kotel. Israel must recognize that its foreign policy moves equally affect both Jews' relationships with Israel and their relationship to their home countries.

A world Jewry engaged with Israel is a world Jewry impacted Jewishly and personally by Israel. It's a world Jewry that connects its identity as Jews with the State of Israel. As Israelis, we yearn for this type of engagement. It's time we recognize the responsibility that it generates.

An example is the recent talks between Israel and the United States about an additional three-month settlement freeze. If reports are accurate, Israel has bartered a freeze in return for F-35 fighter jets at a bargain price and written U.S. assurances on security issues.

Let's leave aside the political debate on the legitimacy of the settlements, their importance or lack thereof for the future security of the State of Israel, and the dangers or benefits of further unilateral Israeli gestures toward the Palestinians for the future of the peace talks. The deal between Israel and the United States is so bizarre and troubling on so many levels that short of a blanket condemnation of both the United States and Israel for short-sightedness, it begs for an explanation.

One cannot question the intelligence of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton or President Barack Obama. If the settlement freeze is tolerable to Israel's security and political interests, why not agree to it when our most significant ally asks? On the other hand, if a 10-month freeze was ineffectual, why is an additional three-month freeze the object of such desire that the United States is willing to bribe Israel to achieve it?

The purpose of the promises is to provide Netanyahu with a bribe for his coalition partners, many of whom see no value in negotiating with the Palestinians, nor with ensuring that Israel and the United States are in sync with each other.

This not only extracts a price from the U.S. administration, but from Jews around the world. It's embarrassing for Jews to see the Israeli government haggle with a friend who has been at our side.

Jews around the world have for decades argued for the consistency and coherency of their loyalty to Israel with the loyalty they have to their home countries. Loyalty to Israel has been a source of pride and enhanced Jewish identity. When Israel sacrifices the identification of Jews around the world with Israel on the altar of short-term coalition interests, it belittles Israel and makes a case for alienation.

Let Netanyahu lead with principles, whatever they may be, and Jews around the world will at least be able to respect Israel and their affiliation with it. Let Netanyahu take responsibility for implementing the two-state solution that he publicly advocates and put the future of his coalition and his government on the line for his principles. When he does this, he will find himself less worried about Israel delegitimization and will find a Jewish community around the world at his and Israel's side.

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

Robert Bernstein's human rights reality check

On Israel, "Human Rights Watch's attacks on almost every issue [have] become more and more hostile." This stark judgment and the detailed evidence to prove it did not come from wild-eyed Zionist fanatics, but from Robert Bernstein, the founder of Human Rights Watch (HRW).

Gerald Steinberg in Jerusalem

Bernstein has dedicated more than 35 years to fighting on behalf of democracy, freedom and human rights, while looking beyond the hype to discern actions on the ground. From this perspective, he realized that HRW had become ethically bankrupt, and began to speak out, first in the New York Times and now in the Goldstein Lecture on Human Rights, delivered at the University of Nebraska.

He told students and faculty how he decided to establish Helsinki Watch (as it was first known) in 1976, following business trips to the Soviet Union. As a book publisher, he met and encouraged dissident scientist Andrei Sakharov to write his autobiography. Sakharov came under increasing harassment, including exile to Gorky, while Natan Sharansky was jailed and sent to the gulag for his activism. Bernstein actively provided them with support, and the Soviets cancelled his visa.

Bernstein fought back by founding HRW, which became the "gold standard" for promoting universal human rights and accurate reporting. But, after three decades, he saw that this movement had been hijacked by a biased political framework, particularly in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) division. Bernstein realized that "Human rights organizations, including the one I founded," as well as Amnesty International, the Carter Center, and other groups, are leading the political war against Israel.

Instead of championing democracy and demanding the opening of closed societies, HRW and the human rights movement has used their power to attack democracies and support dictatorships. MENA director Sarah Leah Whitson went to Saudi Arabia in 2009 to raise funds for expanding the attacks on Israel. Bernstein doubts that she discussed textbooks published and distributed by the Saudis that call Jews "apes and pigs."

These failures led Bernstein to resume an active role at HRW after many years focusing on China. Upon returning, he observed the close co-operation between HRW officials and the UN Human Rights Council, which was "so critical of Israel that any fair-minded person would disqualify them from participating in attempts to settle issues involving Israel." He also realized that HRW has little expertise in many key areas, while its officials use legal language that consistently "faulted Israel as the principal offender."

Like journalists, diplomats and academics, Bernstein was "inclined to believe what Human Rights Watch was reporting. However, as I saw Human Rights Watch's attacks on almost every issue become more and more hostile, I wondered if their new focus on war was accurate." When HRW's "senior military analyst" who wrote most of the reports on Israel was fired and forced to remain silent, the credibility gap increased.

HRW played the central role in promoting retired South African judge Richard Goldstone – a close ally of executive director Kenneth Roth, and an HRW board member – as the head of the UN's assault following the Gaza war. "Human Rights Watch has been, by far, the biggest supporter" of this campaign to "bring war crimes allegations against Israel – based on [Goldstone's] report." As Bernstein observed, HRW has ignored "many responsible analyses challenging the war crimes accusations made by Goldstone," as well as the detailed refutations of HRW's own reports filled with unverifiable and false claims.

HRW is not alone in having lost its moral compass in waging warfare against the Jewish nation. Aided by cynical public relations machines, many groups that claim to promote liberal agendas actually engage in poisonous activities, such as the boycott, sanctions and divestment movement, that are neither moral nor liberal. But in sharp contrast to Bernstein, their leaders, including professors, jurists and rabbis, lack the courage and clarity to confront these ethical failures and fight for a return to universal justice, including for Israel.

The Kirshner File

The struggle in and for Afghanistan

The twin announcements were coordinated, signalling a fresh and uncertain phase in the protracted and increasingly unpopular war in Afghanistan. Two days after the United States announced it would end its combat mission there by 2014, leaving behind a residual force to train, mentor and assist Afghanistan's untested army and police, Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper confirmed that Canada's military role in that strife-torn country would conclude by 2011, as planned, and that the bulk of Canada's 2,700 troops would be withdrawn. But in an important disclaimer, Harper said that 950 Canadian soldiers would remain in Afghanistan until 2014 to support reconstruction and aid efforts.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

These announcements were followed by the news that NATO – which has some 130,000 troops in Afghanistan in the International Security Assistance Force, or ISAF – will gradually transfer responsibility for security to the pro-western Afghan government of President Hamid Karzai by the close of 2014.

The NATO communique, issued at a meeting in Lisbon last week, cautioned that the withdrawal of foreign forces from Afghanistan will depend on conditions on the ground and the ability of Afghan forces to assume their responsibilities. NATO, in other words, has committed itself to an open-ended struggle against Islamic radicalism in Afghanistan. But ISAF's decision to redefine its mission from combat to nation-building is a sure sign that fatigue has set in after nine years of warfare and that virtually all its members are anxious to leave.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper

When the United States and its allies invaded Afghanistan in October of 2001, in response to Al Qaeda's terrorist attack on the World Trade Center in Manhattan and the Pentagon in Washington, D.C., on Sept. 11 of that year, the general consensus was that the battle to oust the Islamic fundamentalist Taliban regime in Kabul and its ally, Al Qaeda, would be of short duration.

True to this sober analysis, U.S. forces unseated the Taliban in less than a month, driving its leadership and Al Qaeda into the rugged mountains of Afghanistan and into the remote tribal areas of northwest Pakistan. The successful military campaign to rid Afghanistan of the Taliban – which had gained power a few years after the ignominious retreat of Soviet forces – and Al Qaeda was greeted positively by the majority of Afghans.

The Taliban had alienated Afghans, especially women, with its imposition of a strict and austere form of Shariah law and with its cavalier decision to harbour and assist Al Qaeda, which jeopardized Afghanistan's hard-won sovereignty.

With the Taliban having been unseated, Afghans could be forgiven for thinking that Afghanistan – a desperately poor and underdeveloped nation that fought off British and Russian invasions in the 19th and 20th centuries – could be transformed into a viable and progressive Islamic state.

Yet nine years on, Afghanistan, although a work in progress due to improvements in infrastructure through public works projects and the advancement of women's rights, continues to be mired in feudalism and corruption at the highest levels.

And despite an infusion of 30,000 new American troops to Afghanistan in the past year, mimicking the U.S. surge in Iraq in 2007, the Taliban has grown stronger. As a result, the security situation has deteriorated and Afghanistan is now more dangerous than it has been in years. "Afghanistan is a trap for the [western forces] that are there," Alain Juppe, the French defence minister, said in a sombre assessment recently.

The shifting sands in Afghanistan have prompted the United States and its allies to seek a peaceful solution, even as they escalate the war and shift the burden of the fighting to the Afghan government.

With Karzai's approval and encouragement, the Obama administration is trying to end hostilities through negotiations with the Taliban, a scenario that would have been unthinkable and inconceivable not too long ago.

But Washington's desire to devise a workable exit strategy is clouded by its alignment with Pakistan, which has been accused of pulling its punches in confronting the Taliban, pursuing an agenda at odds with that of the United States and acting like an unreliable and untrustworthy ally.

As the war grinds on, perhaps the biggest problem facing the Obama administration is the perception that the Karzai government is hopelessly corrupt and that ordinary Afghans are ashamed of and disgusted by it. The Karzai regime brings to mind the venal and doomed South Vietnamese government the United States once propped up.

According to Transparency International, Afghanistan ranks 179th out of 180 countries in terms of corruption. Only Somalia, a failed state, is worse off. Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. special representative to Afghanistan and Pakistan, has described corruption as a "malignancy" that could destroy well-intentioned American efforts and drive Afghans into the hands of the Taliban.

A case in point is Ahmed Wali Karzai, one of the president's brothers. He is widely suspected of being a principal in the country's booming drug trade, which produces 90 per cent of the world's opium, reportedly supports 1.4 million households and financed Taliban military operations to the tune of $600 million from 2005 to 2008.

President Hamid Karzai

At one point, ISAF's high-minded policy was eradication of poppy fields. But in recent years, ISAF has not destroyed the poppy harvest, fearing that eradication will anger farmers and give the Taliban a recruiting tool.

Karzai's older brother, Mahmoud, is also under a cloud, with prosecutors having accused him of taking advantage of his family status by engaging in insider dealing in real estate and the cement industry.

The president himself has not been tainted by personal corruption, but the Obama administration has criticized Karzai, a prickly figure, for having tolerated it and manipulated the last general election.

In an attempt to deal with this extremely troubling issue, the United States launched a campaign against the pervasive culture of corruption, but soon backed off after realizing it would antagonize the powers that be and thereby create an intolerable political vacuum of authority that the Taliban would exploit to its advantage. In the same spirit, U.S. officials have been careful not to press Karzai too hard over the question of women's rights.

Four years ago, the Taliban was active in four of Afghanistan's 34 provinces. Today, however, the Taliban operates in all but one of its provinces.

ISAF has stepped up its offensive against Taliban fighters, boasting that the enemy body count has risen, Vietnam-style. The Taliban has responded by escalating attacks. ISAF's commander, Gen. David Petraeus, claims he has "regained the initiative," but the war is far from over, as NATO Secretary General Anders Fogh Rasmussen suggested recently.

Acutely aware that military pressure alone will not bleed the insurgency to death, ISAF has allowed Karzai to negotiate with the Taliban in the hope that a peace agreement can be signed. But the Taliban may hold out for an unequivocal victory.

With bases in Pakistan, the Taliban may be impregnable. Pakistan's leadership officially opposes Islamic jihadism, but its intelligence service, ISI, has reportedly helped the Taliban. The Pakistani army has gone after the Taliban, but not in North Waziristan, and Pakistan has complained about U.S. drone strikes on Taliban forces on its soil. The United States wants to prevent the region from turning into a launching pad for terrorism, but Pakistan is most concerned about its nemesis, India.

With friends like this, who needs enemies?

Earn Chanukah Gelt 12 Months a Year.

Playing dreidel may be fun, but not with your hard earned savings. That's why you should consider the Romspen Mortgage Investment Fund. The RMIF is a $500,000,000 income fund that pays excellent interest to investors on the 15th of every month. The Fund's monthly revenue is derived from its portfolio of short-term commercial first mortgages across Canada.

The majority of our 2000 investors are Jewish. To you and your family, we wish a happy Chanukah and continued success.

RMIF is managed by Romspen Investment Corporation. The company's five partners are Arthur Resnick, Mark Hilson, Wesley Roitman, Blake Cassidy, Sheldon Esbin

ROMSPEN mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

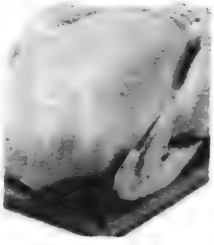
www.romspen.com

Happy Chanukah

May the Joy of the Season remain with you throughout the coming year.

2.88 ea.

KEDEM SPARKLING GRAPE JUICE
750 mL
Selected Varieties



1.99/kg

FRESH CHAI KOSHER TURKEY
4.39/kg

5.99 case

LIEBER'S MILK CHOCOLATE COINS
Case of 24 x 15 g bags

2.49 ea.

STREIT'S, MANISCHEWITZ, OR CROYDEN HOUSE MATZO BALL & SOUP MIX
168 - 170 g
Selected Varieties

2.49 ea.

GOLDEN POTATO OR VEGETABLE PANCAKES
300-301 g mL
Selected Varieties

3.99 ea.

CENTRAL-EPICURE GEFILTE FISH
600 g. Frozen
Selected Varieties

.99 ea.

MAISON HOMESTYLE EGG NOODLES
283-300 g
Selected Varieties

2$ FOR 1

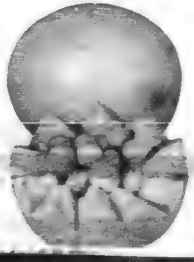
OSEM BISSLI SNACKS
70 g
Selected Varieties

1.88 ea.

MAISON HOMESTYLE PUFF PASTRY DOUGH
500 g
Selected Varieties

2.49 ea.

YELLOW FLESH POTATOES
Product of Ontario, Canada No. 1 Grade
10 lb bag



2$ FOR 5

HONEYDEW MELONS
Product of Mexico

2$ FOR 5

STRUB'S ORIGINAL DILL
1 L

metro
my savings. my life. my metro

Prices effective Friday, December 3rd until Thursday, December 9th, 2010 at the following Metro locations only:

- 1010 Adelaide St. E., Toronto
- 250 Greenbank Rd., Nepean
- 309 [illegible]
- 600 Sheppard Ave. W., North York
- 293 York Mills Rd., North York
- 100 Yonge St., Toronto
- 290 Eglinton Ave. E., Toronto
- 1200 Major Mackenzie Dr., Vaughan

Magna founder honoured by JNF

BY CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

Frank Stronach, the founder and chairman of Magna International Inc., the world's largest auto parts supplier, was the 2010 honoree at the Jewish National Fund's annual Negev Dinner in Toronto recently.

"I am more blessed than honoured that I can make a meaningful contribution to the Jewish National Fund on behalf of Israel," Stronach told The CJN at the Nov 21 dinner.

In the 62nd tribute dinner book, Stronach wrote that he is pleased he can lend a hand to help raise funds for projects in the Negev. "[These] initiatives [are] designed to encourage settlement and stimulate economic growth," he wrote.

The money raised at the 2010 Negev Dinner campaign will be directed toward two projects for the people of Halutziot, Israel: the Naveh Entrance Development and the Besor Negev Research and Development Station.

Naveh is the new home of former Gaza Strip residents from Atsmona, who are building a new future in the western Negev.

The Besor Negev Research and Development Station is in the southwestern region of the Negev Desert, where agriculture is one of the main methods of protecting land. The station will play a major role in creating sources of income for the new settlers and encourage people to come to the Negev.

The MC for the evening was Belinda Stronach, the honoree's daughter. Well-known in her own right, she spoke about her father as a role model, and the importance of being a good person and giving back to the community.

The Jewish National Fund's Negev Dinner honoree Frank Stronach and his daughter, Belinda.
[Darren Levant photo]

Frank Stronach has served on numerous corporate, government and university boards. He is the recipient of an honorary doctorate from Haifa University in Israel, and in 2005, he received the B'nai Brith Canada Award of Merit for distinguished humanitarian service.

He has been inducted into the Canadian Business Hall of Fame and won the Richard Ivey School of Business 1997 Business Leader of the Year Award. He was named a member of the Order of Canada in 1999.

Stronach was born in Weitz, Austria, and immigrated to Canada in 1954 with nothing more than a suitcase, a few hundred dollars and a dream to one day start his own business.

In 1957, with a background in tool and machine engineering, he formed a tool and die company, Multimatic Investments Limited, which subsequently expanded into the production of automotive components. In 1969, Multimatic Investments Limited merged with the Magna Electronics Corporation Limited, and became known as Magna International Inc.

Magna currently employs 74,000 people in 240 manufacturing operations, and has 76 product development and engineering centres in 25 countries.

Regarding Israel and other democracies around the world, he said, "We should not take democracy for granted. We must support democracies everywhere."

Stronach said that people blame others because things are so bad in their countries. "The key is where there is poverty, it is easy to inflame people. Therefore, you have to put money where there is poverty," he said.

Lawrence Bloomberg and Michael Harris were the co-chairs of the dinner. Nathan Disenhouse, Jewish National Fund Toronto president, and Josh Cooper, JNF Toronto executive director, presented the JNF citation to Frank Stronach.

The Renanim Youth Singers opened the evening's program with O Canada, and soloist Samantha Cooper ended the evening with Hatikvah. The dinner's musical presentations included performances by Jeff Madden, who portrays Franki Valli in the Toronto production of Jersey Boys, and other members of the show's cast .

Celebrate the Magic
$250 FREE
In Dining and Attractions Passes
HOTEL WATERPARK PACKAGES FROM $159
Come celebrate Chanukah with a Splash!
Book your Hotel Waterpark Package and receive $250 FREE in dining and attraction passes
Hotel Waterpark Package offers:
• Accommodations at Sheraton on the Falls, Crowne Plaza Fallsview, Skyline Inn or Hampton Inn by Hilton & the Falls
• 4 two day passes to Fallsview Indoor Waterpark
FALLS AVENUE
Sheraton on the Falls
CROWNE PLAZA
Skyline Inn
866.596.5234 • fallsviewwaterpark.com/cjnews

GOT Q.O.L.?
We do.
Kingston...Quality of life.
Beth Israel
Congregation
www.kingston-bethisrael.ca

SENIOR BOOKKEEPER

A major Toronto not-for-profit organization is looking for a Senior Bookkeeper reporting to the Controller.

Duties include but are not limited to: bank reconciliations, G/L analysis, credit card processing, A/R, regular monthly reports and banking.

Qualifications: Bookkeeping certificate or 1st year CGA/CMA student, excellent computer skills including advanced Excel, minimum 5 years in a business environment, ability to multi-task and meet deadlines, excellent organizational, analytical and customer service skills.

This is a full time position.
Excellent compensation and benefits.

Please forward resume and letter of intent, quoting: REF# BK-FIN-210
by December 10, 2010 to hbiderman@ujafed.org

905-881-3334
info@dearbornbaby.com
Est. 1979
Dear-Born Baby
www.DearBornBaby.com
Voted Toronto's Best Baby Store!
Nursery Furniture, Strollers, High Chairs, Car Seats, Bedding, and so much more.
72 Doncaster Avenue, Thornhill
(One Stop Light North of Yonge & Steeles)
Visit us online at DearBornBaby.com
Holiday Shopping Made Easy....
Shop online at DearBornBaby.com and get
10% off with coupon code CJN10
Some exceptions do apply. For full details of the promotion please visit www.DearBornBaby.com/cjn.html

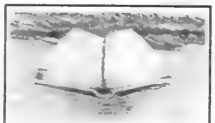
Jewish Life

Civilization: learning to be kind

By RABBI YONAH BERMAN

Why didn't Joseph send word to his father that he was alive and well in Egypt?

It's understandable how a servant in Potifar's house or an inmate in an Egyptian jail wouldn't be able to contact his family in the faraway land of Canaan. But Joseph's lot changed substantially when he became the viceroy of Egypt. One would expect that he would have found the time and the means to contact Jacob and say, "Dad, I'm alive and well, and in fact, I've made it to the top of the Egyptian political pyramid."



Rabbinic Reflections

In order to understand Joseph's actions (or lack thereof), we must identify the pattern that has developed heretofore in Genesis. The stories of the patriarchs are rife with the theme of chosen and rejected children. Isaac emerges as Abraham's chosen son, while his brother Ishmael is cast away. And of Isaac's two sons, Jacob ultimately becomes the bearer of the family legacy, to the exclusion of his brother Esau.

Rabbi Yoel Bin-Nun, a leading Bible teacher in Israel, proposes that Joseph thought that he had been rejected, just as his uncles Ishmael and Esau had been in the preceding generations. Knowing that Jacob sent him to his brothers before they threw him in the pit, Joseph figured that he was meant to try to make his own way in the world, without any further connection to his family.

Joseph had no way of knowing that in his generation, all of the sons would share their father's blessing, together becoming the progenitors of the future Nation of Israel. Joseph, in other words, thought that he was simply – and bluntly – unchosen.

Chanukah is the decisive response to Joseph's mistaken assumption.

Symbolizing the victories of Chanukah, the menorah is placed where people can see its candles burning, for the sake of pirsumei nisa – publicizing the miracle. Furthermore, the obligation to light Chanukah candles is defined as ner ish uveito – a requirement for the head of the household together with the entire family. These two concepts remind us that Chanukah's warmth and light are meant to be shared, both within the family and with the larger world. The Chanukah celebration's response to Joseph is to remind him that each and every person can – and must – be included in the celebration.

I was recently privileged to travel to New Orleans with a group of 22 idealistic and very mature teenagers from Montreal, as part of the new Jewish Eco-Leadership Training program. In addition to volunteering at wetland restoration projects and joining the Canadian delegation to the Jewish Federations of North America's General Assembly, we spent Shabbat with Congregation Beth Israel.

This Orthodox community's beautiful synagogue was flooded during Hurricane Katrina, its Torah scrolls damaged beyond repair and its building destroyed by water and mould. We were most inspired by the congregation's response to these overwhelming losses: they leased space from the local Reform congregation, Gates of Prayer, and have begun building a new home for their community on that synagogue's campus.

The two congregations function as separate entities in the areas where their customs diverge, but constantly strive to work together in the many areas of shared values and celebration. This united community exemplifies the finest values of Chanukah – reaching out to as many people as possible in the beauty of Jewish life and peoplehood.

May Chanukah inspire us to share Judaism's unending warmth and light with every member of the children of Israel, and with the larger community beyond.

Rabbi Yonah Berman is associate rabbi at Congregation Shaar Hashomayim in Westmount, Que.

The seven marks of a wise person

Wisdom From Philosophy to Neuroscience* by Stephen S. Hall, Knopf Publishing.

Bookmarks
Bernard Baskin

Wisdom is a rare and precious commodity. The biblical Book of Proverbs asserts: "Wisdom is better than rubies, and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it." In Pirkei Avot, the tractate from the Mishnah, it is asked, "Who is wise?" and the answer is given, "He who learns from every man."

Avot also indicates that there are seven marks of the wise person. "He does not speak before one greater than he is in wisdom; or break in upon the words of his fellow; or hasten to make reply. He asks what is relevant and gives a proper answer; he speaks on the first point first and on the last point last; if what he has heard lacks tradition, he says, 'I have heard naught,' and he agrees to what is true."

Obviously, wisdom is more than the sum total of our accumulated knowledge, but a unique mixture of experience, understanding, insight and humanity.

Some years ago, according to the author, Canadian psychologists asked a random group of college undergraduates to nominate persons, historical or modern, who struck them as especially wise. Here are the names they came up with: "Mahatma Gandhi, Confucius, Jesus, Martin Luther King Jr., Socrates, Mother Teresa, Solomon, Buddha, the Pope, Oprah Winfrey, Winston Churchill, the Dalai Lama, Ann Landers, Nelson Mandela and Queen Elizabeth II, in that order."

It is significant that not one person was chosen from the worlds of science, literature or North American history. Another troubling surprise is the relative absence of women, and the questionable wisdom of some of those chosen.

Stephen Hall is a veteran science journalist who has written extensively and in a popular fashion about the intersection of science and society.

What is noteworthy, and even exciting, about this book is how modern brain science can explain some of the most important facets of mental activity, such as language use, reasoning, moral judgments and imagination. The advent of MRI scanners has for the first time made possible burrowing down into successive layers of the brain and observing it actually at work.

The demand for wisdom is thrust upon us on a daily basis, in matters significant and mundane, in settings as private as the bedroom, or as public as a jury room.

Hall writes of a prominent neurosurgeon who spotted unmistakable signs of early Alzheimer's disease in U.S. president Ronald Reagan while he was still in office. Watching him nod off during president George Bush's inauguration he said to himself, "Brain stem gone." He added, "I was convinced that a significant portion of Reagan's second term had taken place in the shadow of his slippage toward early dementia."

Recent findings, writes Hall, indicate that older adults are more supple in their assessments of problems and are able to perceive the social context of a situation better than younger adults. And perhaps most important, when it comes to settling on a strategy of action they display greater flexibility.

Perhaps, ultimately, the quest for wisdom must remain a chimera. It involves subjective judgments, the values and mores of a particular time or place and often a range of ambiguous possibilities. Socrates should give us pause with his apothegm, "If you think you're wise, you're probably a fool."

Nonetheless, this ambitious, informative and well-written study is an invaluable guide to a complex and many-sided subject.

Jewish Life

Did we make a difference?

By ELLIOTT MALAMET

When the CJN abruptly informed me two weeks ago that, after 14 years, this would be my last column of "Jewish Education – The Next Generation," because the paper wished to use this space for other purposes, I was left with an interesting dilemma. I had to decide what I'd like to ultimately say, given the 500 or so words allotted to me.

As everyone knows, there are many serious issues facing all forms of Jewish education. Perhaps at the top of the list is the ever-worrying problem of money and the skyrocketing, and often unaffordable, tuition that parents now pay and will continue to pay in the future. Interconnected with this is the perennial doubt about what one is receiving for those dollars. Is the education inspiring? Sophisticated? Identity-building? Worth it? Are we training teachers to meet the challenges of guiding Jews in a contemporary context? Is there enough emphasis on the Hebrew language? Too much emphasis? What role should the Holocaust and Israel play in educating students about Judaism? Why don't most Jewish adults learn any Jewish texts at all – not once a week, not once a month, not even once a year?

The questions are endless, the solutions difficult. But I'd like to conclude this final piece with one basic idea: that education is not about comfort, but perhaps the reverse – the discomfort of challenging one's preconceptions in the search for truth.

To many, this sounds counterintuitive in today's educational universe. The plan is to "facilitate" and avoid conflict, not to go down the road to confrontation. And while I'm all for progress and happiness – can one say one is against these things? – there's a heavy price to pay for real growth if all interactions have to be comfortable.

Mark Edmundson puts this very well in the prologue to his memoir, Teacher, where he remarks that "our mythologies make us forget that the great teacher is not always a bringer of sweetness and light… a great teacher is not necessarily a friend, much less a facilitator. He can be a spiritual antagonist and a goad as much as an ally."

My students insist, again and again and again, that most information they receive rolls in one ear and then gets swallowed up by the next test, never to return, as though it's a burden they need to carry for a while until they can lay it down at the teacher's feet, a sacrificial offering to the marking gods.

What do they remember? Here's the list I've compiled. Feel free to fill in your own.

Were we nice to them? Did we give them a break when they were in the throes of growing-up craziness? Were we patient when they couldn't think of an answer and encouraging when they could? Did we give them something real to think about to help chart out a voyage on a new sea – and that if they wished, they could follow that boat to a different horizon than they would have chosen? Did we manage to help them negotiate part of their world, even their destiny, for now and forever?

Thank you for reading.

For the love of latkes, Part 2

The light it lasted for eight nights
Relieving people of their plight.
Yes, fry the latkes in the oil
To celebrate ancestor's toil
Chanukah is here at last

Let's all go and have a blast! [http://bit.ly/latke19]

Frying up a latke is a wondrous thing. But having your bubbie do it for you is sublime. Unfortunately, not all of us have a bubbie at our beck and call. If you fall into that category, just remember Bayla Sher of "Feed Me Bubbie" fame. Bayla is the star of a delightful series of Jewish cooking videos in which she pairs up with her grandson, Avrom Honig. In the latke episode, watch her whip up a batch. [http://bit.ly/latke20] You can find many more video recipes on YouTube. [http://bit.ly/latke21]

At the All Recipes site, there are tips about what kind of potatoes to use (russet), how to keep them from turning pinkish-brown (keep them under water) and how to make sure they don't fall apart when you're frying them (squeeze the potato mixture in a cheesecloth.) [http://bit.ly/latke32]

If you ever tire of bubbie's traditional potato latke, don't despair. The Jewish Food latke archives have 113 varieties to tempt you including Drunken Apple, Cauliflower-Cheddar and Sephardic Bonuelos. [http://bit.ly/latke23]

Over at the RFCJ Recipe Archive, there are dozens more such as Chestnut Flour, Risotto and Norwegian Lox. I think I'll pass on the Brain Latkes. [http://bit.ly/latke24] People who cannot tolerate gluten will appreciate Karina's Potato Latkes. [http://bit.ly/latke25]

Every year, amateur cook Roger Mummert holds court in his Long Island kitchen for chefs with the tastiest and most extreme latke recipes. The event has been covered by National Public Radio, which archived its radio report along with recipes for Larry's Firecracker Latke Poppers, Spana-Latke-Kopita and Mexi-Latkes with Jalapenos & Red Peppers. (Click the link at the bottom of the page for a recipe for Mushroom Pecan Levivot with Smoked Salmon and Pickled Ginger.) [http://bit.ly/latke26]

Rather than oil, the Zenchef fries his latkes in duck fat. "I expect a cease and desist letter from the potato latke council any day now. I have nothing to say for my defence except that 1) I can't help being French and 2) potato's best friend is duck fat." [http://bit.ly/latke27]

What should you do if you love latkes but not the fat? The American Institute for Cancer Research recommends the no-oil Lean Latke. Coat a skillet with cooking spray and smooth grated potatoes into a large plate-sized pancake. One serving contains 162 calories and less than one gram of fat. And if a latke just isn't a latke without oil, then go ahead and splurge. Add one tablespoon. [http://bit.ly/latke28]

Those calories don't seem to scare Pete Czerwinski. He wolfed down 46 potato pancakes in eight minutes to take top spot at the National Potato Latke Eating Championship in 2008. "I'm just a power eater. My brain never signals that I'm full," said Czerwinski, who had never eaten a latke before. [http://bit.ly/latke29] Watch him in this video. [http://bit.ly/latke30]

I'll leave the last word to Marjorie Ingall, whose wishes for a modern-day Chanukah miracle are probably shared by latke fans everywhere. [http://bit.ly/latke31]

"My hope is that a miracle will occur and the calories of eight days will count as the calories of one."

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

ECOFLEXTRA - Guaranteed Income for Life

- Guaranteed income for life - no matter how markets perform!
- Lock-in market growth with automatic tri-annual resets
- 5% Annual bonus* up to 15 years
- Death Benefit Guarantee
- Tax efficient for non-registered accounts

KENSTERN
500-1867 Yonge St.
Toronto, ON M4S 1Y5
T: 416-545-5323 | www.kenstern.ca

CLARINGTON INVESTMENTS
INDUSTRIAL ALLIANCE

Did your son just have a birthday? Did your daughter just have a baby?
SEND US YOUR PHOTO ALONG WITH 25 WORDS.
GO TO WWW.CJNEWS.COM
CLICK THE FAMILY MOMENTS BANNER

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
July 3 - Jul. 17
July 17 - Jul. 31
July 24 - Aug. 7
July 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28

WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FLIGHT INCL. 5 NIGHTS IN 3 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1515 +TAX

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7317 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

ISRAELI LAW OFFICE

Legal advice & service on matters of Israeli Law only

Property • Wills & Estates • Family • Litigation

• Member of the Israeli Bar Association
• Approved as a Foreign Legal Consultant in Ontario by the Law Society of Upper Canada

Happy Chanukah!

Itamar Cohen B.A., LL.B. (Mar.)

905.709.3896

www.IsraeliLawOffice.com

Cleaning Protection Restoration

For All Your Stone Surfaces

MARBLE RESCUE

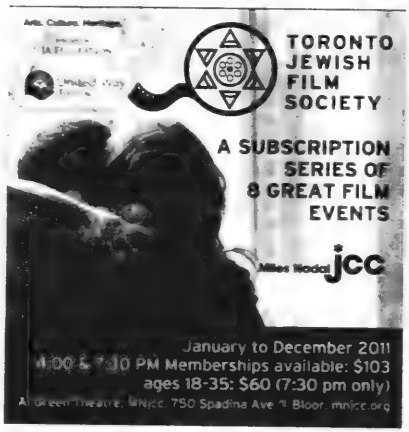
Insured and Bonded

Technicians with over 15 years experience.

We'll beat any written residential quote by 20%

416-782-BUFF(2833)

Don't replace your dull, damaged stone & marble. Turn to us!



TORONTO JEWISH FILM SOCIETY

A SUBSCRIPTION SERIES OF 8 GREAT FILM EVENTS

Miles Nadal jcc

January to December 2011

4:00 & 7:30 PM Memberships available: $103 ages 18-35: $60 (7:30 pm only)

At Green Theatre, MNJCC 750 Spadina Ave @ Bloor. mnjcc.org

SIGN UP NOW: joellem@mnjcc.org (416)924-6211 x 139

Greater Toronto Area

Beit Rayim moves to Lebovic campus

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Beit Rayim Synagogue is moving to the Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Jewish Community Campus.

It will hold its first Shabbat services there this weekend with New York-based Rabbi Moshe Edelman of the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism, who also led Beit Rayim's High Holiday services this year. The congregation will meet in the beit midrash of the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto, Kimel Centre.

This weekend's services – including Friday evening and Saturday afternoon – will be part of a Chanukah Shabbaton.

Following Havdalah, there will be a children's Chanukah study session, then congregants will join UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's community Chanukah celebration in the same building.

The egalitarian synagogue, which is affiliated with the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism, has been holding services at the Reena Battle Centre since 2006. Its administrative offices and Hebrew school will continue to be housed in separate locations for now.

"Our goal is to establish a home where we can get all three operations under one roof," synagogue president Irving Siegel told The CJN last week.

In the new location – in addition to weekly Shabbat morning services led by Cantor Eli Bard – there will be monthly Kabbalat Shabbat services as well as festival and holiday services. Rabbi David Eligberg, who joined the shul four years ago, is no longer with the congregation.

The move to TanenbaumCHAT is considered short-term. Beit Rayim is negotiating with UJA Federation of Greater Toronto about the possibility of renting space at the Schwartz/Reisman Centre, the Jewish Community Centre expected to open on the campus in Vaughan in September 2012.

"Our long-term goal is to have a building on the Lebovic campus," said Siegel, "We're working towards that with a capital campaign."

Last year, the synagogue, which has 240 member households, was planning to partner with Robbins Hebrew Academy to move to the campus by spring 2010 in a shared building, but the school was not prepared to go ahead by that time.

The shul's history goes back to 1975, when a few couples in Richmond Hill started a group that became the Richmond Hill Jewish Community, and then Congregation Shaareh Haim under the leadership of the late Rabbi Sol Tanenzapf. The synagogue folded in the early 1990s due to financial difficulties, but was reborn as Beit Rayim.

Further information is available online at beitrayim.org.

Chanukah party in the Beaches

Chabad House of Danforth-Beaches welcomes author and teacher of inner Jewish wisdom Rabbi Tzvi Freeman. Rabbi Freeman, a classical guitarist and composer, performs at the shul's Chanukah celebration on Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. Latkes and soup will be served. Suggested donation is $12. Chabad of Danforth-Beaches is at 2273 Queen St E. in Toronto. If you wish to attend the event, RSVP to Rabbi Sholom Lezell at 416-809-1365.

Experienced Mohel

Rabbi Avraham Sultan

Cantor Shaarei Shomayim

Performs lifecycle events
Sephardic & Ashkenaze rituals.
Bar/bat mitzvah lessons. Weddings

FREE CONSULTATIONS
FREE FIRST BAR MITZVAH LESSON

Contact: rabbisultan@yahoo.ca

Cell: 416-735-8736

on cjnews.com

The CJN's French-language reporter in Montreal, Elias Levy, writes about:

• Prof. Shmuel Wygoda of Jerusalem will be the keynote speaker Dec. 5 at the Centre ALEPH, during a day of study of the work of philosopher Emmanuel Levinas.

• Spanish author Leopoldo Ceballos recently spoke in Montreal about his new book on Tangier, at a meeting organized by the Féderation Sépharade du Canada.

• In an interview, French Rabbi Marc-Alain Ouaknin talks about his recent book in which he explains the Torah for children.

Also this week on the web:

• Cantor sings anthem at Canadiens home game.

• Canadians hike through Golan to support terrorism victims.

New For September 2011!

Netivot HaTorah Day School

- Grade 1 -

South Campus

Please join us for an information evening
Wednesday, December 8, 2010 at 8:00 p.m.

Shaarei Shomayim
470 Glencairn Avenue
905-771-1234

Netivot HaTorah
נתיבות התורה
Torah. Israel. Derech Eretz.

Become a part of the only Orthodox Zionist Day School of Toronto.

BNEI AKIVA HIGH SCHOOLS OF TORONTO

EXPERIENCED JEWISH STUDIES TEACHERS AND SUBSTITUTE TEACHERS

Yeshivat Or Chaim Boys' School and Ulpanat Orot Girls' School are rooted in the traditions of Torah and Religious Zionism. We are seeking teachers who will inspire our students.

The candidates must posses the following qualifications:

- University degree in Education or Jewish Studies
- Post-secondary education in an Orthodox Zionist Yeshiva
- High level written and oral fluency in modern Hebrew
- In depth knowledge of Israeli history.
- Personal commitment to Religious Zionism
- Commitment to excellence in education.
- Warm and energetic personality

Submit resume to:
Rabbi Scot A. Berman, Headmaster – Bnei Akiva Schools
159 Almore Ave. Toronto, On M3H 2H9

A NEW GENERATION LEADING UJA TODAY

Introducing UJA's 2011 Real Estate Cabinet

UJA's Real Estate Cabinet is comprised of some of our community's leading real estate professionals, all of whom play an important role in the success of UJA's annual campaign. Because when it comes to real estate professionals, there are [illegible] that matter: commitment, commitment, commitment.

(Back row, l to r) Adam Pivnick, Craig Walters (Chair), Nuni Altman, Jonathan Segal, Stephen Diamond (Chair), Fran Gevantsmoller

(Front row, l to r) Jordan Meckinger, Leslie Salmon, Cory Rosen, Alexandra Khazzam

Absent: Leonard Abramsky, Jonathan Sitrin (Chair), Aaron Sinclair, Orli Weiner

NEW CHALLENGES.
ETERNAL STRENGTH.

A new generation is taking the lead!

United Jewish Appeal
OF GREATER TORONTO

Greater Toronto Area

Israeli public speaker seeks peace through PR

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Neil Lazarus has defended Israel's right to security and peaceful borders on a gaggle of major TV news programs worldwide over the years.

And earlier this month, he brought his message on how to promote Israel to Toronto's Jewish community, mainly its youth.

The colourful British ex-pat made aliyah in 1988 and has been working as an expert public relations consultant for the Israel government.

Director of the Israel advocacy website AwesomeSeminars.com, Lazarus describes his site as an "arms-length" partner with the Israeli Foreign Ministry and the Jewish Agency for Israel. The site is an initiative whose goal is to increase the ability of world Jewry to engage in hasbarah effectively, with particular emphasis these days on combating the growing boycott, divestment and sanctions movement (BDS).

In a sit-down interview, Lazarus, 43, told The CJN it's no longer strictly an Israeli responsibility to promote itself as a place of innovation, tourism and culture. It's now up to all Jews worldwide to speak on its behalf if perceptions of it as merely a conflict zone are to change, he said.

"We have to get the message across that Israel is seeking peace. We're encouraging people to get more involved, especially with digital diplomacy" through vehicles such as Facebook and YouTube to reach out, make friends and start dialogues with other faith groups and communities, he said.

But he insists he does not represent the pro-Israel side, per se, as much as he does the pro-peace side.

"My house is one kilometre away from what would be an independent Palestinian state. So I'm pro-Palestinian. I want to have a border, but peace would be even better," Lazarus said, adding that the reality is that there needs to be talk about Israel's security.

He said a "loud majority" of Israelis alongside a "silent majority" of Palestinians want to build a better future for both peoples. But the Palestinians face obstacles the Israelis don't.

"On the [Palestinian] side, they can't march on the streets because they're oppressed by Hamas and others who disagree" with moderates, Lazarus said.

One of the primary issues at hand, according to Lazarus, is that there isn't enough integration between Israelis and Palestinians "on a contact level."

"A lot of what doesn't make the media is what goes on daily between Israelis and Palestinians," he said. "I drive through the West Bank every day and you see very strange things. You'll see Palestinians selling food to Orthodox Jews from the settlement next door. You can go to Gush Etzion where a new supermarket was opened, and you'll see Palestinians and Israelis together.

"That stuff is kinda boring and doesn't make headlines, but it's the reality on the ground and perhaps a reality the Palestinian [representatives] don't feel happy to talk about."

With regard to projecting a new, positive image of Israel on the world stage, Lazarus said it's necessary to depict Israel beyond the confines of the seemingly ceaseless regional conflict.

The Israel-Palestine conflict that makes news headlines is "only a small part of the reality on the ground" in Israel, he said.

"The most dangerous thing in Jerusalem this past summer was the fact that it was full of Americans and Canadians looking for Häagen Dazs ice cream, only to discover it had been replaced by Ben & Jerry's," he quipped, adding that the most dangerous thing in Tel Aviv is the game of matkot (beach paddleball).

Neil Lazarus

Lazarus said in his efforts to pitch Israel in a different light to the world, he avoids the use of the term "branding."

"There's something more fundamental [that needs to] go on, and that is... making friends," he said.

The message Lazarus is espousing is one that says that if one supports a critical press, a liberal agenda, the right of women, of gay rights, then Israel has to be a place you support.

At the same time, he said, if you support the spread of technology and medical development, it's all coming from Israel.

"That's the message that's coming across now. That Israel isn't a threat, it's a partner, even with all its faults. But at the end of the day Israel has to be recognized as a Jewish democracy."

To watch the complete interview with Lazarus, visit The CJN's YouTube channel: http://www.youtube.com/canadianjewishnews.

FINAL 10 DAYS
WILLIAM ASHLEY
WAREHOUSE SALE
China • Crystal • Flatware • Housewares • Gourmet • Gifts
save up to 90%*
the BIGGEST. the BEST. the ORIGINAL.
save up to 90%* on Brand Names
Wedgwood
Royal Doulton
Waterford • Lenox
Aynsley • Krups
Portmeirion • Atlantis
Rosenthal • Aram
Denby • Dansk
Royal Crown Derby
Villeroy & Boch
Mikasa • Noritake
CANADA'S LARGEST GIFT CENTRE
Amazing Warehouse Sale Savings
Holiday Gifts • Contemporary Gifts • Christmas Decor
Home Decor and Furnishings • Housewares • Children's Toys
Casual and Formal Dinnerware Sets • Bath Accessories
RESTOCKED DAILY Over 40,000 Sq. Ft. of Incredible Savings
62 RAILSIDE RD. TORONTO
Sale on Now
Wed. Dec. 1 10 – 9
Thur. Dec. 2 10 – 9
Fri. Dec. 3 10 – 9
Sat. Dec. 4 10 – 6
Sun. Dec. 5 10 – 6
Wed. Dec. 8 10 – 9
Thur. Dec. 9 10 – 9
Fri. Dec. 10 10 – 9
Sat. Dec. 11 10 – 6
Sun. Dec. 12 10 – 6
Closed Monday & Tuesday
NEW SHIPMENTS ARRIVING DAILY
ONLY until Sun. Dec. 12
WILLIAM ASHLEY
62 Railside Rd • 416-515-SALE • www.WilliamAshley.com/WarehouseSale
*Save up to 90% off the Mfr. Suggested Price or Comparable Retail Value. We reserve the right to limit quantities. Personal shopping only. No cheques or credit notes. Cash, Debit, Visa, MC & Amex accepted. No strollers or carts allowed. All sales are final. Not all items illustrated are available. Please Note: Dinnerware selection will be limited from Dec. 8th - 12th. E. & O.E.

You're supposed to yell.
That's how everyone knows you're having fun.
Around here, we let the kids call all the shots. And with our Inclusive Family Package, you really have something to shout about.
That's GREAT WOLF LODGE -IC
NIAGARA FALLS, CANADA
Book our Inclusive Family Package today.
•Includes three meals for each guest, one Cub Club® craft, 20 arcade tokens and one plush toy per child
•Family of four saves over $80!
•Promo code: CJINCLUSIVE
Call 1-800-605-WOLF or visit greatwolf.com
Offer valid only at above location, now-December 30, 2010. Limited number of rooms available for each date. May not be valid during holiday and blackout periods or combined with any other discount or promotional offers. Offer based on 4 guests per room and may be terminated at any time without notice.

About To Lose Your Teeth? Looking For A Change From Dentures?

Through dental implant technology, you may be just a day away from eating what you desire, smiling with confidence, and living the lifestyle you want to live.

Permanent teeth in one day!

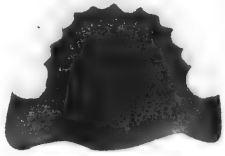
Before

Same Day

Let our dentists determine whether you are a candidate. Call us today.

Which would you prefer?

Permanent Teeth-In-A-Day
Uncovered Open Palate
Non-Removable



Conventional Upper Denture
Covered Closed Palate
Removable

You may be just a day away from smiling with increased confidence.

Call us today.

What a Difference a Day Makes!

Happy Chanukah from the team at Chrysalis

Toll Free: 1-888-SEEMYTEETH
or 1-888-733-6983
Email: info@ChrysalisCanada.com
Web: www.seemyteeth.com

Chrysalis
DENTAL CENTRES

GENERAL DENTISTS

The Canadian Society for Yad Vashem

was privileged to bestow

The Right Honourable Stephen Harper
Prime Minister of Canada

with Yad Vashem's exceptional
Carol Deutsch Portfolio

As the distinguished

Guardian of our Children's Award

In the spirit of Carol Deutsch's remarkable fortitude and legacy, Prime Minister Harper's leadership in the cause of human rights and human dignity and his mission to educate Canadians in the universal lessons of the "Shoah" (Holocaust) stand as his legacy to future generations of Canadians.

Prime Minister Harper holds the Carol Deutsch Portfolio, presented to him by the Canadian Society for Yad Vashem as "The Guardian of our Children's Future Award."

(STANDING FROM LEFT TO RIGHT)
JAMES ADAM GOTTDENKER, FRAN SONSHINE, NATIONAL CHAIR; THE RIGHT HONOURABLE PRIME MINISTER STEPHEN HARPER; YARON ASHKENAZI, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR; JOE GOTTDENKER, VICE CHAIR

CAROL DEUTSCH
[illegible]

About the Carol Deutsch Porfolio

In Antwerp of 1942, when Jewish existence was threatened with extinction, Deutsch created his last work, 99 original illustrations, depicting heroes and narratives of the Bible. Deutsch lovingly placed them in a handmade ornamented wooden box, as a birthday present for his two year old daughter, Ingrid. As a father who understood the tenuousness of his own continued existence, Mr. Deutsch sought to leave Ingrid with a legacy of his Jewish identity.

Carol Deutsch and his wife, Fela, were transported to Auschwitz, where Fela was immediately selected and sent to the gas chambers. Deutsch was eventually sent to Buchenwald and died of exhaustion. At war's end, five-year-old Ingrid, who was hidden with a Catholic family in the countryside, returned with her grandmother to her home in Antwerp. While their apartment was completely looted by the Nazis, the wooden box miraculously survived.

Further to Ingrid's wishes following her death, the Carol Deutsch portfolio was bequeathed to Yad Vashem, where it is on display in the Yad Vashem Museum of Holocaust Art in Israel. A father's personal bequest to his daughter has become a symbol of stalwart resistance to everything the Nazis attempted to obliterate.

The Carol Deutsch Portfolio replicates Deutsch's oustanding artistic expression and is presented to world leaders and individuals who demonstrate the highest commitment to "Zachor" (Remembrance).

About The Canadian Society for Yad Vashem

The Canadian Society for Yad Vashem is one of Yad Vashem's largest and most prominent of its 28 representative bodies worldwide. The Society supports Yad Vashem's initiatives and implements its important vision across Canada. Through its educational and commemorative activities, the Society carries out Yad Vashem's mission of ensuring that the Holocaust and its lessons are forever engraved in the memory of humankind.

About Yad Vashem

Yad Vashem, The Holocaust Remembrance and Education Centre in Jerusalem is the universal guardian and imparter of the Shoah's (Holocaust's) legacy and the protector of human values. Visited by over 1 million people annually, Yad Vashem is internationally recognized as being at the forefront of Holocaust commemoration, education, documentation, and research.

Remembering the past, Shaping the future

For more information visit www.yadvashem.ca

Shul's 'Prayer-O-Plan' aimed at getting a minyan

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

A minyan is "an essential service that a shul has to provide its congregants," says Abe Glowinsky, chair of Beth Sholom Synagogue's minyan committee.

For those who are saying Kaddish – the prayer that mourners recite at twice-daily services for 11 months following the loss of a parent – Beth Sholom's new minyan incentive program called "Prayer-O-Plan" was implemented recently to increase the chances of having a minyan at the end of the day.

Kaddish is recited only in the presence of a minyan – the traditional prayer quorum of 10 men (or 10 men and women in egalitarian congregations).

Beth Sholom's traditional Conservative services are non-egalitarian. Women make up about 15 per cent of the worshippers at weekday minyans, and can use the incentive plan too.

Abe Glowinsky

A former three-day-a-year shul-goer, Glowinsky began saying Kaddish after his mother died in December 2008, never imagining the impact it would have on him. He still attends minyan "pretty much every morning, and a chunk of evenings."

He said he is committed to being there to help make sure that mourners don't have to leave without saying Kaddish.

Glowinsky was instrumental in forming the shul's minyan committee, lobbying board members to commit to attending one evening service a month, among other efforts. Prayer-O-Plan was the result of a minyan committee brainstorming session.

"We tried numerous things," Glowinsky told The CJN.

To encourage attendance, he said, the shul has instituted a monthly "Minyan night at the movies," with dinner and a Jewish-themed film following services at a cost of $10. "We've had some pretty good turnouts."

Larry Shilling – the shul's chazzan sheini, who runs the daily minyan and the Prayer-O-Plan program – said that Beth Sholom has between 18 and 25 worshippers on an average morning, but that it can be difficult to get a minyan later in the day.

When there are not enough people, he said, "We tell them we're really sorry, and try to send them elsewhere."

As well, he said, the synagogue, which has almost 1,000 member families, sends reminder letters to people who will be saying Kaddish for the yahrzeit of a loved one, and invites them to light a yahrzeit candle at the service on the first evening of the yahrzeit day.

Before this year's High Holidays, Beth Sholom members received cards for the new incentive plan in the mail, along with a letter from Cantor Eric Moses and Rabbi Aaron Flanzraich introducing the program.

Adult members whose card is stamped 12 times receive a free High Holiday ticket, to a maximum of two per household. The shul charges between $125 and $250 per reserved seat, depending on its location. As well, once 50 cards are completed, they will be entered in a draw for two air tickets to Israel.

Glowinsky said that many congregations face similar challenges.

At nearby Beth Tzedec Congregation, which has 2,700 member families, ritual director Lorne Hanick said things are fine, with rare exceptions. "Generally it's not a problem because of our central location, and there are a lot of people saying Kaddish."

As well, he added, there are Jewish men who work in the building or who live nearby who can be called on if necessary. At this time of year, when afternoon services are early and people are away for the winter, he encourages members to bring family and friends to the minyan.

"Sometimes we wait five or 10 minutes," Hanick said. He added that it can be embarrassing for women who are not counted, if they raise the number of worshippers to 10. Some women have commented to that effect, he noted.

Another factor at afternoon services is that people who work downtown can attend early Minchah minyanim in office buildings.

Beth Tikvah Synagogue, also a non-egalitarian Conservative congregation, is holding its own, according to ritual director Irv Kirshenblat. "During weekdays, we are probably averaging 15 males and approximately five to six females, both morning and afternoon."

Because of its location – "not [in] a central Jewish area" as well as on a high-traffic main street – Beth Tikvah also faces challenges getting a minyan on occasion.

Recently, a member of the band Safam, who was performing at the shul that night, stepped in to complete the minyan. Kirshenblat was away at the time.

At Beth Sholom, Prayer-O-Plan seems to be working, said Glowinsky. "We have a number of people who've had eight stamps, and I think we have four or five completed."

However, he added ruefully, "I can't tell you how many people never even saw it." Instead, he said, many people took their High Holiday tickets out of the envelope, but paid no attention to other items in the same package. "We just recently told people they can come in and get the card if they have lost or misplaced it."

Rabbi Flanzraich told The CJN he likes the message of Prayer-O-Plan, linking minyan attendance with other mitzvot.

1,000's OF TITLES!

GIANT WAREHOUSE BOOK SALE

NEW TITLES ADDED DAILY!

CHILDREN'S BOOKS
HOW-TO BOOKS
ART BOOKS
COOKBOOKS
GIFT BOOKS
PAPERBACKS
HARDCOVERS
FICTION
NON-FICTION
AND MORE...

70% OFF EVERY BOOK

CANADIAN PUBLISHER'S PRICE

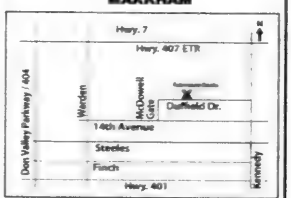
All profits from this sale go to the CROHN'S AND COLITIS FOUNDATION OF CANADA

3 DAYS ONLY!

FRIDAY DEC 3	SATURDAY DEC 4	SUNDAY DEC 5
9 am to 8 pm	10 am to 6 pm	11 am to 5 pm

Enter our draw for an Apple ipod Touch!

LOCATION : 120 DUFFIELD DRIVE MARKHAM



VAUGHAN

Mayor and Members of Council cordially invite all residents to celebrate the Inauguration of Council at a special reception

Monday, December 6, 2010

Paramount Conference & Event Venue
222 Rowntree Dairy Road, Vaughan
(Weston Road, south of Highway 7)

Official ceremony will be broadcast for public viewing at the Paramount commencing at 6:45 p.m.

Mayor and Members of Council will be joining the reception following the official ceremony.

Refreshments at 8:30 p.m.

Fulfilling the Promise

BAYT's Rabbi Taub retires after 30 years

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Rabbi Baruch Taub, founding rabbi of Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto Congregation (BAYT), is now rabbi emeritus of the synagogue, following a celebratory dinner Nov. 21. He will retire at the end of December and make aliyah.

Rabbi Asher Vale will serve as interim rabbi beginning in the new year.

Rabbi Taub, who declined to be interviewed for this article, was feted by 830 people at the dinner held at the Thornhill synagogue he has overseen from its inception 30 years ago. The shul, which originally met in the rabbi's home, has grown from 13 families to between 600 and 700.

"Tonight is to say thank you to our rav, and to pledge to build on the very solid foundations that Rabbi Taub built," said Shloimie (Perry) Romberg, one of the dinner MCs.

As well, a Torah was dedicated in the rabbi's honour earlier that day, a project that raised $300,000 for the Orthodox synagogue.

In a post-dinner speech, Rabbi Taub thanked his congregants and recalled the shul's beginnings, paying tribute to developer Joseph Tanenbaum, who was the driving force behind the shul, as "a true dreamer and builder of Klal Yisrael."

In the early years, Rabbi Taub noted, Toronto was "a strongly non-Orthodox community." However, he said, the BAYT became "an extraordinary catalyst for tshuvah [return to observance]" for many families who made weddings at the shul, because young brides had to learn the laws of family purity to get married there.

Rabbi Baruch Taub

Thornhill MP Peter Kent, Canada's minister of state of foreign affairs, paid tribute to the rabbi as "a man of inspirational faith, boundless compassion, and impressive learning."

Peter Shurman, the MPP for Thornhill, lauded the rabbi's ability to build bridges between people of different religious philosophies, and Vaughan councillor Alan Shefman spoke of his wisdom and leadership.

Rabbi Yacov Felder, speaking on behalf of the Vaad Harabonim of Toronto – the city's Orthodox rabbinic umbrella group – spoke of Rabbi Taub fulfilling the main task of a rabbi through his care and concern for every member of his congregation.

As well, he said, Rabbi Taub's outreach has extended to the community at large. On a personal note, he added that Rabbi Taub has been "a friend to whom I can turn for advice and encouragement for his keen perception and understanding of all issues."

Rabbi Taub's son, Rabbi Shmuel Taub, spoke on behalf of the family, crediting the shul for its "blazing fire" of love of Torah, the land of Israel and the people of Israel, and his father as the "candle" that lit that flame.

Guest speaker Rabbi Nota Schiller, dean of Ohr Somayach Institutions in Jerusalem, also spoke metaphorically, likening Thornhill to a one-time desert, Judaically speaking. But, he said, there has been a "reforestation program."

Rabbi Schiller also praised Rabbi Taub's leadership and ability to inspire people "to transcend particular agendas for the greater good."

HAPPY CHANUKAH!
Mrs. B's
HOMESTYLE RECETTE MAISON
POTATO PANCAKE
CRÉPE AUX POMMES DE TERRE
ORIGINAL POTATO & ONION
SAVEUR ORIGINALE POMMES DE TERRE ET OIGNON
Lazar Gourmet Foods wishes everyone a Happy Chanukah! Make your Chanukah truly special with our new Parve Homestyle Potato Latkes!
Lazar GOURMET FOODS
477 Champagne Drive, Toronto
Ontario CANADA M3J 2C6
Tel: 416-636-7730 • Fax: 416-636-6532
E-mail: lazarfoods@bellnet.ca

PAYLESS TRAVEL
and Cruises
Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service
Happy & Healthy Chanukah
NESS HANNUKA HAPPENED HERE
EL AL SPECIAL
Winter special - non stop flight to Israel
$649.00 +tax
Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 6 – 15, 2011
Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 – June 5, 2011
Jewish Heritage Tour – CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222
ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com
Promenade Office - 905-770-3300 - Sonia ext. 225
Toll-Free 1-888-900-4747
7700 Bathurst Street & Centre, Thornhill, ON.
Downtown Office- 416-922-0115 Michal ext. 1
Toll-Free 1-866-344-6342 - 1027 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON

CBC story stirs the pot on Hariri assassination

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

A major CBC News investigation of what it claims has been a substantially bungled and compromised UN inquiry into the February 2005 car-bombing assassination of former Lebanese prime minister Rafik Hariri has made waves internationally.

CBC's investigative report, which was posted online Nov. 21 and aired under the title "Getting Away With Murder" the following night, alleges that Iranian and Syrian-backed Hezbollah planned and carried out the assassination. The report further argues that the UN's commission of inquiry, though having mishandled key telecommunications evidence implicating Hezbollah, will likely reach this conclusion. (The Beirut-based UN commission was transformed in March of 2009 into the Special Tribunal for Lebanon based in The Hague. With the power to indict and arrest suspects, the STL is headed by chief prosecutor Daniel Bellmare, a Canadian.)

The CBC report was picked up by media around the world, including in Israel. It has been denounced by Bellmare, and was criticized also by current Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri, the son of Rafik.

In the aftermath of Hariri's assassination, when Syrian President Bashar Assad was compelled by the "Cedar Revolution" to remove his military occupation from Lebanon, Saad blamed Assad for his father's murder. His accusation was in line with the finding of the UN commission in late 2005, led by German prosecutor Detlev Mehlis, that Syrian security forces, along with Lebanese officials, were responsible.

Four Lebanese suspects were arrested in Beirut but released years later for lack of evidence. However, under Mehlis' successor, Serge Brammertz, the investigation stalled. It was not until late in 2007 that the UN commission finally started to act on critical evidence, provided in a Lebanese police officer's report that the commission had misplaced during the previous 18 months.

The police officer, Wissam Eid, had tracked the cellphone records of those involved in the assassination. The data pointed unmistakably to members of Hezbollah. But following UN commission meetings with Eid to review this evidence, Eid himself was assassinated in a 2008 car bombing. Hezbollah was assumed responsible.

Neil Macdonald's investigation for the CBC revealed that, according to anonymous claims by former UN investigators, in eliminating Eid, Hezbollah had relied upon a source who knew the intimate details of the UN inquiry – the head of Lebanese intelligence, Col. Wissam Hassan.

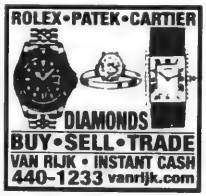
As evidence mounted against Hezbollah and as it appears likely (according to the CBC) that Bellmare's tribunal will point the finger at the radical movement, Hezbollah's leader, Hassan Nasrallah, has gone on the offensive. Nasrallah tried to convince the UN inquiry that Israel was responsible for the Hariri assassination. This charge was not taken seriously.

Then, on Nov. 11, Nasrallah threatened to "cut off the hand" of anyone who tried to arrest any of his group's members. This was seen as a threat not only to the UN inquiry, which Nasrallah has alleged is a U.S.-Israeli conspiracy, but also to leading Lebanese "pro-western" figures including Saad Hariri. (Gabi Ashkenazi, the outgoing chief of the IDF, recently warned that an indictment from the tribunal against Hezbollah could lead to Hezbollah's violent takeover of Lebanon. No wonder that Hariri voiced criticism of the CBC report. But what he really believes is almost certainly something else entirely.)

Complicating the picture of internal Lebanese politics is the fact that in September, Saad absolved Syria of any involvement in his father's murder. For his part, Bashar Assad, who opposes the UN tribunal, warned last July (according to the Lebanese newspaper Al-Akhbar) that any accusations against Hezbollah in the murder of Hariri could lead to the destruction of Lebanon. This dismayed those who believe that Syria is re-aligning itself with Saudi Arabia against Iran's involvement in Lebanon and support of Hezbollah.

In the meantime, while some continue to suggest that Israel might have been behind the Hariri murder, Macdonald was unequivocal in his report: "Nothing the UN has uncovered points remotely at Israel. Everything points at Hezbollah. But invoking Israel always gains traction in the Arab world."

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.



NER ISRAEL YESHIVA
250 Bathurst Glen Drive, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 8A7
Celebrating 50 Years of Torah Continuity
Provides for
KADDISH SERVICES, OBSERVING YAHRZEIT and MEMORIAL PLAQUES
Please invest in the future. Remember Ner Israel in your will.
CALL 905-731-1224

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

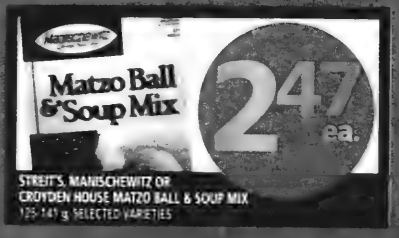
Happy Chanukah

To all our friends, from all of us at Food Basics, may the joy of the Season remain with you throughout the coming year.

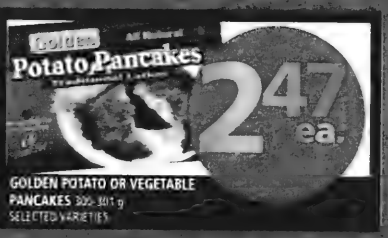
KEDEM SPARKLING JUICE 750 mL
SELECTED VARIETIES
2.88 ea.

FRESH CHAI KOSHER WHOLE CHICKEN 6.59 kg
2.99 /lb

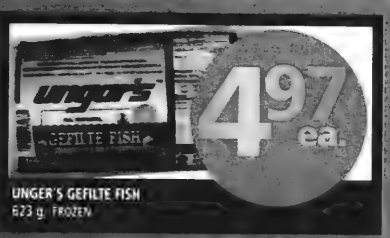
LIEBER'S MILK CHOCOLATE COINS
CASE OF 24x15 g BAGS
5.99 case
INDIVIDUAL 4x15 g - $1



STREIT'S, MANISCHEWITZ OR CROYDEN HOUSE MATZO BALL & SOUP MIX
125-141 g SELECTED VARIETIES
2.47 ea.



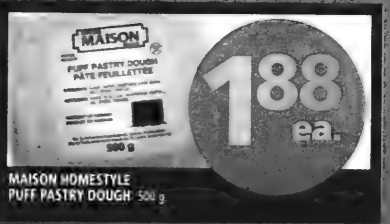
GOLDEN POTATO OR VEGETABLE PANCAKES 300-301 g
SELECTED VARIETIES
2.47 ea.



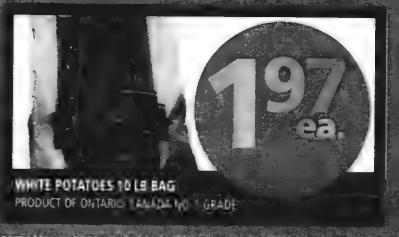
UNGER'S GEFILTE FISH
623 g FROZEN
4.97 ea.

OSEM BISSLI SNACKS 70 g
SELECTED VARIETIES
.50 ea.

MAISON HOMESTYLE EGG NOODLES 300 g
SELECTED VARIETIES
.97 ea.



MAISON HOMESTYLE PUFF PASTRY DOUGH 500 g
1.88 ea.



WHITE POTATOES 10 LB BAG
PRODUCT OF ONTARIO, CANADA NO. 1 GRADE
1.97 ea.

WHITE MUMS
4.97 ea.

AARON'S SMOKED TURKEY BREAST
125 g SLICED
4.49 ea.

WE WILL NOT BE KNOWINGLY UNDERSOLD BY OUR MAJOR COMPETITORS ON 1.5 L GRAPE JUICE, CHOCOLATE COINS OR CHANUKAH CANDLES.

food Basics
always more for less!

DECEMBER 9, 2010,
LAST.
LOCATIONS ONLY:
• 200 JOHN STREET, THORNHILL

Gaza evacuees get help starting a new life

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Israel's evacuation of Gaza's Gush Katif settlements in August 2005 was a traumatic event for the country, but particularly so for the 10,000 Jewish residents forced to leave homes that some had lived in for 30 years.

Judy Lowy

At the time, the government pledged to ease the transition to life outside Gush Katif, but five years later, 85 per cent of the former residents of the southwestern Gaza region, plus others from the northern West Bank, continue to reside in trailers and 18 per cent remain unemployed, far above the country's jobless rate of 6 to 7 per cent.

That's the bleak picture painted by Judy Lowy, a British-born olah who was in Toronto last week to raise the profile – and perhaps some funds as well – for an organization created to help find employment and promote self-sufficiency for the former residents of Gush Katif.

Lowy is executive director of JobKatif, a grassroots organization founded by Rabbi Yosef Zvi Rimon to help integrate the displaced residents of Gush Katif into mainstream Israeli life.

Lowy believes the Israeli government was guilty of poor post-evacuation planning for the residents, who found themselves with no jobs, few prospects, and living permanently in what were supposed to be temporary shelters.

Rabbi Rimon, who like Lowy resides in Gush Etzion, a settlement south of Jerusalem, tried to convince the government to integrate the former residents, but he ran into a virtual brick wall.

"I don't think it was callousness," Lowy said. "It's government bureaucracy. Everything takes longer than it should."

Instead of relying on the glacial speed of bureaucrats to get things done, Rabbi Rimon "became a one-man employment agency," Lowy said.

He set up a website, placed ads in papers and with the help of volunteers using their personal contacts found jobs for the displaced Gush Katif families. In March 2006, JobKatif was formally created as a non-profit agency to carry on the rabbi's work. Over time, it added professional staff so that today, it employs 20 people and boasts a budget of $2 million (US).

It can also boast some successes: 1,600 full-time jobs have been found; 179 new businesses have been started; more than 300 former residents have attended vocational training, and in 2008, Rabbi Rimon received the President's Award for Volunteerism.

The success of the organization has also attracted the attention of the Netanyahu government, which last summer set up an inquiry into the handling of the Gush Katif displaced families. The inquiry, which heard testimony from JobKatif, issued its final report a few months ago. "It was pretty devastating," Lowy said. "In a line, 'the people got a raw deal.'"

The state had encouraged them to move to the region and then, after forcibly evacuating them, did not adequately prepare for their welfare, she added.

In 2009, the government offered to provide some financial support to JobKatif, matching shekel for shekel all sums allocated for job placement. A little under two months ago, satisfied with JobKatif's achievements, the government upped the ratio to three to one, matching every shekel spent by the private agency with three from the government.

Finding jobs has numerous spinoff benefits that go far beyond merely statistical improvements in the jobless data, Lowy suggested.

Many of the former residents were over 45, and 70 per cent had been self-employed in various small businesses, which they had created from nothing.

Particularly noteworthy were the bug-free lettuce and flower hothouses. Altogether, Gush Katif accounted for 15 per cent of Israel's total agricultural exports, and that sector supported various spinoff service industries as well.

Many of the older residents were at a stage in life that made it difficult to find new jobs.

Lowy said JobKatif raises 70 per cent of its operating budget from the Diaspora, mostly the United States, but she believes Toronto could be fertile ground for support.

"I invite people to take the opportunity to trigger the three-to-one government money to help people get back to normal," she said.

Funds can be allocated through UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, which is acting as a conduit for moneys raised for JobKatif, she added.

You are cordially invited to attend the OU/NCSY Gala Dinner Reception & Concert

In support of

THE CAMPAIGN FOR YES!
Youth Education Scholarships at NCSY

and Honouring

No Frills Ontario Represented by Al Tornatore & John Ciarallo John's No Frills

Recipients of the OU/NCSY National Business Leadership Award which will be presented at the Toronto Centre for the Arts on Sunday December 12, 2010

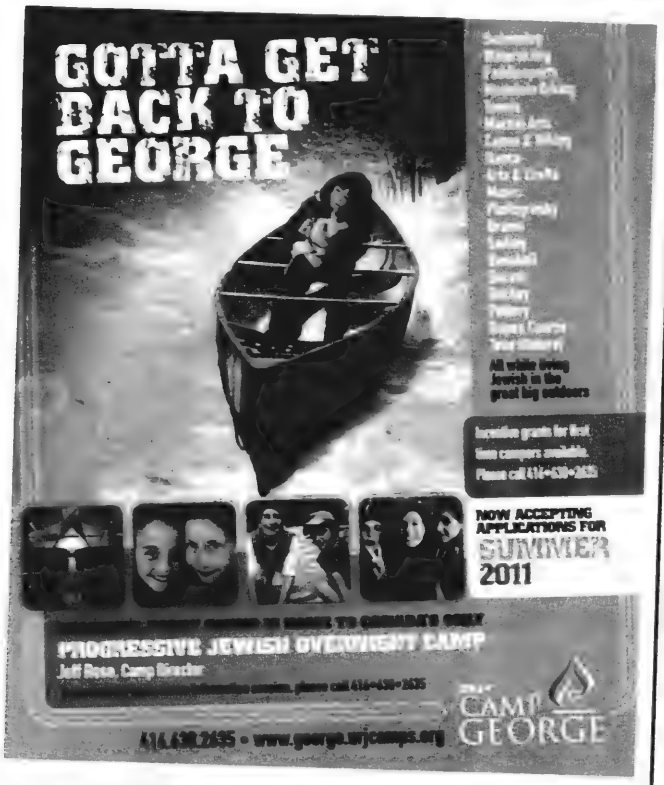
Gala Dinner Reception 5:00 p.m.
Followed by the Concert 7:30 p.m.

featuring
Eli Gerstner and the YESHIVA BOYS CHOIR

NCSY ORTHODOX UNION

Funds raised by this event will go in part to scholarships for Jewish teenagers who cannot afford to participate in Jewish educational programs.

For Dinner Ticket Information please call 905.761.6279 ext. 232
For Concert Ticket Information please call 905.761.6279 ext. 230



GOTTA GET BACK TO GEORGE
NOW ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR SUMMER 2011
PROGRESSIVE JEWISH OVERNIGHT CAMP
CAMP GEORGE
416.630.2635 • www.george.urjcamps.org

Happy Chanukah wishes from Thorne Mill on Steeles

Leave winter worries of snow and ice behind. Enjoy new friends and peace of mind in a cheerful and warm environment. Where you can spend the holidays enjoying wonderful activities instead of maintaining your home. A range of quality, professional care is available, should you ever need it. Come see for yourself.

THORNE MILL
ON STEELES
A SUNRISE SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY
484 Steeles Ave. W
Thornhill ON L4J 0C7
905-731-4300
INDEPENDENT LIVING
Assisted Living • Memory Care
www.thornemillonsteeles.ca

Call Ann Marie, Rhona or Marsha for your personal appointment and to take advantage of 2010 rates.

Class Acts

MATH CHALLENGE: Junior high students Noah Ifergan, left, Shon Ziner, middle, and Jonah Haber of the Toronto Heschel School all ranked among Canada's top 100 students on the www.mathletics.ca math challenge. Pictured with them is Daphne Rosenwald, their math teacher. Heschel ranked seventh overall.

CHANUKAH STORY: Senior kindergarten student Jory Gladman, from Associated Hebrew Schools' Kamin Education Centre in Thornhill, displays the beautiful Chanukah book she created. Her class learned and wrote about the story of Chanukah, and then each student made their own illustrations using colourful geometric shapes.

MIRACLE OF CHANUKAH: Robbins Hebrew Academy nursery students – from left, Layla Browman, Danielle Zylberberg, Makenna Gillick and Joseph Alkon – are pictured in their classroom's model Beit Hamikdash as they re-enact the miracle of Chanukah.

MITZVAH MONDAY: Netivot HaTorah Day School launched its Mitzvah Monday program, a monthly opportunity to give back to the community, with its first initiative, a present-wrapping project to benefit Chai Lifeline. Students from grades 1 through 8 took part in gift wrapping and card making, while preschool students made cards. Pictured, back row from left, are Tamar, Tanya and Talya, and front row, from left, are Daniel, Avivit, Eli, Shalom and Mendy. [Rebecca Ansel photo]

BREAST CANCER DRIVE: Bialik Hebrew Day School's student council held its annual Think Pink campaign in support of Canadian breast cancer research. The event saw the entire senior division dressed in pink. Funds raised from the sale of chocolate and pop went directly to breast cancer research. Volunteering at the lunchtime event are, from left, Jordyn Rochwerg, Danielle Nisker, Jordana Colomby, Brooke Sonshine, Lauren Weintraub, Jordyn Kimel, Maddie Brown, Laura Schwartz, Jillian Elman, Jennifer Glied-Goldsteine and Jordyn Selznick.

Ask us how to

Grow When Markets are Rising, Yet Protect & Still Grow When Falling

Inquire about our Unique Solution for Today's Markets

Allan Newman
H.B.A., LL.B.

Greg Newman
B.Comm., LL.B.

ScotiaMcLeod

The Newman Group
Wealth Advisors
Expect More
416-863-7756 or 800-387-0489

E-mail us to receive a brief e-mail explanation (PDF) or call for a Brochure
greg_newman@scotiamcleod.com

* Registered trademark used under authorization and control of The Bank of Nova Scotia. ScotiaMcLeod is a division of Scotia Capital Inc. Member CIPF

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Happy 64th anniversary. Rose & Jack Silverberg's family wishes them mazel tov and all their love.

Syma & David Forberg celebrate their 66th anniversary after marrying in a displaced persons camp. Mazel tov and love from your whole family.

Aggie & Joel Geller announce Rebecca's engagement to Jesse, son of Brenda & Hersch Rosenberg. Happy grandmothers are Birdie Geller, Ethel Rosenberg and Jean Kowalski.

Announcing the marriage of Ann-Barbara Graff, daughter of the late Ted & Yetta Graff, and Jamie Blustein, son of Joseph Blustein and Benita & Don Langdon.

Whitney & Stuart are overjoyed with the birth of their daughter Kyla Lauren Sherman. Grandparents, Jeannie Berg & Kevie Sherman and Mirah & Howard Detsky.

Mazel tov to our precious mench, Michael Ryczke, on your first birthday. You are absolutely amazing. Love and kisses, Savta Ariela and Mommy Orit.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"In Loving Memory"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Our regular columnist, Leila Speisman, is away on medical leave.

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
416-636-3575
alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Dec. 16 is Dec. 6. Deadline for Dec. 23 is Dec. 13. Note: there is no paper on Dec. 30. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Dec. 2

DEAD SEA SCROLLS

"Bringing the Dead Sea Scrolls to Toronto," presented by Alex Gropper. 7:15 p.m. Room 403, Carr Hall, 100 St. Joseph St., University of Toronto. Gropper gives a brief history of finding the scrolls and explains the process in bringing them to Toronto for the Royal Ontario Museum exhibit last year

ISRAELI ENGINEERS

"Engineering With Soul: Achievements of Israeli Engineers Without Borders." With Mark Talesnick, associate professor in the Technion faculty of civil and environmental engineering. Beth David. 7:30 p.m. All welcome. Free.

Friday, Dec. 3

SHAAR SHALOM SINGLES

Shaar Shalom Singles invites the public to a special Chanukah Oneg Shabbat, led by Ben Silverberg. 8 p.m. Shaar Shalom Synagogue. Kiddush and mix and mingle following. David, 416-224-9494.

Saturday, Dec. 4

TOT SHABBAT

Junior congregation and tot Shabbat – service with songs and a parshah play. 10 a.m. Pride of Israel

CHANUKAH PARTY

Pride of Israel Chanukah party. 7 p.m. With DJ Howie T, games and prizes for every child. Latkes and sufganiyot served. $2 for adult members, $5 for adult guests, $1 for kids and teens. Purchase tickets in advance. 416-226-0111 ext. 10.

Sunday, Dec. 5

ISRAELI MOVIES AND TV

Shaar Shalom adult education program, Israel At the Movies and TV, 7:30 p.m. Srugim season 1, TV series that follows the lives of a group of observant Jews as they try to find a suitable mate.

Monday, Dec. 6

AFTERNOON BOOK REVIEW

Harriet Morris reviews Blooms of Darkness, by Israeli writer Aharon Appelfeld, a story set against the backdrop of an unnamed Ukrainian city during World War II. Dessert 1 p.m., review 1:30 p.m. $15 at the door. Beth Tzedec Synagogue. 416-781-3511.

Tuesday, Dec. 7

JOHN TORY SPEAKS

John Tory, Canadian businessman, political activist, former Conservative Party of Ontario leader and radio broadcaster, brings insights to issues that matter to Torontonians. 12 p.m. Beth Tikvah. Advance reservations. 416-221-3433.

TEMPLE SINAI CHANUKAH

Celebrate Chanukah with lights, latkes and laughter. Featuring klezmer band A Touch of Klez. 7:30 p.m. Refreshments served. $10. Reservations by 12 p.m. Dec. 7. education@templesinai.net, 416-487-3281.

TAX CLINIC

Temple Har Zion Brotherhood's annual tax clinic with Alan Dessau, on getting your documents ready for your 2010 tax return and tax planning options. 7:15 p.m. RSVP: harzionbrotherhood@gmail.com.

LINE DANCING

Line dancing with Annie Wilder-Sharpe. Beth David, 8 p.m. sisterhood@bethdavid.com.

CHANUKAH POTLUCK

Chanukah veggie potluck party and candlelighting. 7:30-10 p.m. Miles Nadal JCC, Room 318. $10. Join Kulanu to light the menorah, sing traditional Chanukah songs and eat latkes and other vegetarian dishes. Kulanutoronto@gmail.com. RSVP by Dec. 5, specifying what vegetarian or dairy food item you would like to bring.

Continued on page 29

The Polish-Jewish Heritage Foundation of Canada
& Young Polish Canadian Professionals Association
Present
Toronto Premiere of
IRENA SENDLER
In The Name of Their Mothers

The true story of how a brave group of righteous Poles risked their lives to save over 2,500 Jewish children from certain death in Nazi occupied Warsaw
The Director
Mary Skinner
will introduce the film and stay for Q&A www.irenasendlerfilm.com
Sunday, December 12th, 2010 – 8:00pm
Congregation Habonim, 5 Glen Park Avenue
(one block north of Bathurst & Glencairn)
The screening of this film is made possible through the generous support of Tridelta Financial Partners (www.tridelta.ca)
LIMITED SEATING COME EARLY
With the support of Tridelta Financial Partners is the sponsor of the 2010-2011 Habonim Documentary Film Series

- JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO -

BRING BACK YOUR JNF BLUE BOXES
IN TIME FOR 2010 TAX RECEIPTS
The final date for submitting Blue Boxes from donors who wish 2010 receipts for income tax purposes is TUESDAY, DECEMBER 14TH
With seasonal holidays occupying the latter part of December, we urge you to submit donations to our office by:
– FRIDAY, DECEMBER 24TH –
100% ISRAEL JNF
TO DROP OFF, OR HAVE YOUR BLUE BOX PICKED UP
CONTACT DEBBIE 416.638.7200 x22
DEBBIE.LENCHNER@JNF.CA
WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA
700-1000 FINCH AVE. W., TORONTO

Continued from page 28

Wednesday, Dec. 8

TAREK FATAH SPEAKS

Tarek Fatah discusses his new book, The Jew Is Not My Enemy, unveiling the myths that fuel Muslim antisemitism. 12 p.m. 1 King St. W., Suite 3400. Lunch $25. Reservation required. Dietary laws observed. speakersaction.com.

THE BOTTOM BILLION

Discussion on important world issues. The Bottom Billion: Why the Poorest Countries Are Failing and What Can Be Done About It. Light dinner followed by discussion led by Rabbi Eleanor Steinman. Dinner 7 p.m., program 7:30 p.m. Registration required for dinner. $10. 416-487-3281 or education@templesinai.net.

EVENING BOOK REVIEW

Harriet Morris reviews Blooms of Darkness by Israeli writer Aharon Appelfeld. $10, includes dessert. Beth Tzedec, 7:30 p.m. 416-781-3511.

Other News

NCSY CONCERT

30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. Dec. 12, 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsyconcert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

SHABBAT SERVICE

Join Solel Congregation of Mississauga on Dec. 10, 8 p.m. With Jay Brodbar, executive director of New Israel Fund Canada. Catered adult dinner, 6:15 p.m. Registration required for dinner. 905-820-5915.

MOVIE NIGHT

Shrek pyjama party and movie night. Dec. 11, 5:30-8 p.m. Shaar Shalom. The Giborim and Maccabee Youth groups will join the congregation for Havdalah. Movie starts at 6 p.m. Snacks served. Register: you@shaarshalom.ca, 905-889-4975 ext. 62.

GAMES NIGHT

Games at Beth Radom. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Texas Hold 'Em, mah-jong, blackjack. Silent auction, door prizes, food. 416-636-3451, games@bethradom.com.

MISHPACHAH MINYAN

Families with young children are invited to participate in Shaar Shalom's mishpachah minyan. Dec. 11, 10:15 a.m. Service starts with Torah reading and ends to coincide with the main service so participants can join congregation members for kiddush. 905-889-4975.

JEWISH HEALING PROGRAM

Healing Service. Dec. 12, 3-4 p.m. Miles Nadal JCC. Rabbi Ed Elkin and Judy Shier Weisberg facilitate. Free, wheelchair accessible. 416-638-7800, ext. 6287.

JIAS GENERAL MEETING

Annual meeting for Jewish Immigrant Aid Services. Guidy Mamann, partner of Mamann Sandaluk Immigration Law Firm, on "Recent Trends in Immigration and the Impact on Our Community." Dec. 14, 7 p.m. Prosserman JCC.

MUSICAL RECITAL

Concert at Borochov Cultural Centre, 272 Codsell Ave. Dec. 12, 12-2 p.m. Refreshments served. Tax receipts for donations $18 and over. Sponsored by Na'amat Canada.

CHANUKAH CELEBRATION

Come Light the Menorah, with Yiddish folk and theatre songs by Aron Gonshor. Dec. 12, 2 p.m. Workmen's Circle, 471 Lawrence Ave. W. Refreshments served. $5 for Workmen's Circle and Friends of Yiddish members, $10 for non-members.

IRENA SENDLER

Toronto première of In the Name of Their Mothers, the new and most complete documentary film about Irena Sendler. Producer Mary Skinner speaks after the screening. Dec. 12, 8 p.m. Congregation Habonim. irenasendlerfilm.com.

RABBI'S TISH

Dec. 25 following Shabbat services. Study session and kiddush with Rabbi Martin Berman. Shaar Shalom. 905-889-4975.

BAYCREST VOLUNTEERS

Baycrest is looking for volunteer gallery guides and arts and crafts facilitators. If you have an art background, skills in jewelry design, drawing, painting, photography, creative writing, storytelling and more, call 416-785-2500 ext. 2572.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

When you're about to separate: what to tell the kids. Workshop for parents about to separate or in the early stages of separation. Dec. 8, 6:30-9 p.m. Lipa Green.

Men's abuse-prevention program orientation evening. Eric Kirsh and Margaret Kata provide information on the 16-week program, starting Jan. 2011. Dec. 7, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green Centre.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211. Connecting the Generations. Catered lunch plus Jewish heritage visit to ROM. Meet a student. Ext. 155.

Chanukah Musical Celebration. Aviva Chernick entertains. Dec. 9. Reserve by Dec. 6. Ext. 155.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Beth Tzedec Seniors. New Horizons for chavurah with Rabbi Miriam Margles, Dec. 13, 1:30-3 p.m. (recurring). Rich discussion and a nosh as we learn from and with each other. All welcome.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Dec. 15, departs 10 a.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Social circle – needlepoint, etc. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen. 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Wellness lecture: "Goal Setting for Well-Being and Longevity," with personal growth coach Judy Weiss. Dec. 9, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

Lecture: "Jewish Honour in the Face of 21st-Century Antisemitism," with Canadian Jewish Congress CEO Bernie Farber. Dec. 7, 10 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. www.prossermanjcc.com, 416-638-1881.

Registration for morning programs and full-day daycare is now open.

Registration for the Tic Tac Summer program is now open – children ages 2 and 3 enjoy a fun and educational experience from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Kosher lunch included. To book a tour or to find out more call Kailah, ext. 4351.

Sharing the light of the menorah across the city. Enjoy Chanukah with a multi-location celebration. Live entertainment, prizes, free treats. Dec. 4, 6:30 p.m.

Registration for winter courses starting in January now open, with more Ryerson/Chang programs for 50+. Recorder, Latin dance, mah-jong and bridge lessons, acting classes, folk dance, current events.

Lunch and Learn with Rabbi Moshe Stern. Dec. 3, 12-1 p.m. Free. Bring lunch, coffee and tea served. Call morning of to confirm program is running.

Chanukah party. Latkes and entertainment with Shaya Petroff. Free. Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m. in the lounge.

Please note there will not be a Creativity Club, Jokers Club or PRO meeting in December.

"The Female Ruse: Stories of Women's Deception in Genesis." Why do women deceive in the Bible? Unique co-teaching with an Orthodox female scholar and a Reform female rabbi. Dec. 13, 7:30 p.m. $10. Room 105. Ext. 4255.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel holds services Sundays, 8 a.m., and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Complete kosher breakfast after services. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

Toronto Jewish Film Society. 2011 subscriptions selling out. Eight films from January to December on select Sundays at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. Joelle: ext. 139 to register.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22 regular, $18 group. Ext. 0.

Media Mondays, lectures with film clips. Dec. 6, 7 p.m. New Wave cinema of Taiwan. With Eye Weekly film critic Adam Nayman. $12, $6 students with ID. Ext 606.

Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m. Family Chanukah celebration. Latkes, music, games and crafts. Ext. 277.

Utah's Crying, an original rock musical. Dec. 2-4, 8 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $15 online, $20 at the door. utahscrying.com, 416-731-7253.

Toronto Jewish Film Society presents God Is Great...I Am Very Small, with Audrey Tatou. Shlomo Schwartzberg speaks. Dec. 5, 4 and 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. Tickets sold 15 minutes before screening times. $15, $10 for ages 18-29 (7:30 screening only). esthera@mnjcc.org, ext. 606

"The December Dilemma: Dealing with Christmas and Chanukah in the Jewish family," with Alena Strauss. Dec. 5, 10:30 a.m.-12 p.m. Free, refreshments served. sharonis@mnjcc.org, ext. 154.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 31

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Laura Bien	Nov 12/10	333 Clark Ave
Jules Kofman	Nov 12/10	32 Saintfield Ave
Ida Centner	Nov 14/10	111 Avenue Rd
Morris Newman	Nov 12/10	167 Thistle Pond Dr
Lt. Col. Irwin B. Weisbarth		1555 Finch Ave E
Ida Centner	Nov 14/10	111 Avenue Rd
Morris Newman	Nov 12/10	167 Thistle Pond Dr
Cheryl Grossman	Nov 12/10	2789 Bucklepost Cr
Max Milgram	Nov 13/10	784 Centre St
Marvin Besunder	Nov 15/10	22 Shallmar Bl
Bryce Goosen	Nov 13/10	12 Thistle Ave
Dr. Joshua Brodey	Nov 16/10	2727 Yonge St
Anne Wagman	Nov 17/10	4300 Bathurst St
Dora Newmann	Nov 17/10	3560 Bathurst St
Lillian Lluba Sharpe	Nov 17/10	77 Avenue Rd
Jean Segalowitz	Nov 19/10	59 Lawrie Shepway
Avrom Siegel	Nov 18/10	111 Avenue Rd
Judy Stein	Nov 17/10	48 Prue Ave
Simona Rotman	Nov 20/10	2 Glamorgan Ave
Betty Simon	Nov 19/10	1995 Lenarthur Dr
Benjamin Lieberman	Nov 21/10	24 Shorthill Rd
Sidney Baker	Nov 20/10	7460 Bathurst St
Harvey Pivnick	Nov 19/10	3397 Hwy. 38, RR # 1
Sara Langer	Nov 21/10	23 Markwood Ln

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Swern, Richard Howard	Nov. 15/10	29 Millcreek Cr
Grosman, Sally	Nov. 15/10	Private
Furst, Richard	Nov. 16/10	16 Anvil Millway
Anidjar, Lola	Nov. 17/10	121 Almore Ave
Deutsch, Frances Diane	Nov. 18/10	50 Disera Dr
Weiss, Harry	Nov. 17/10
Farkas, Tibor (Ted)	Nov. 18/10	20 Baif Blvd
Lewin, Ryan	Nov. 17/10	660 Briar Hill
Fyxon, Khima	Nov. 19/10	Private
Douglas, Adele	Nov. 19/10	3560 Bathurst
Steinberg, Ernest	Nov. 17/10	55 Ameer Ave
Winston, Mildred	Nov. 18/10
Friedrich, Lidia	Nov. 19/10	15 Raglan Ave
Jama, Bela	Nov. 18/10	2 Covington Rd
Seeman, Esther	Nov. 20/10	601 Clark Ave
Bouslov, Arkady	Nov. 15/10
Medvedev, Valery	Nov. 16/10	Private
Gaistman, Morris	Nov. 21/10	Private

HEBREW BASIC BURIAL

Betty Wasserstein	Oct 30/10	1001 Peter Robertson
Ruth Diament	Nov 4/10	1318 Wilton Ave

ICRF
Israel Cancer Research Fund
Your help will find a cure for cancer!
ICRF Tribute Cards leave a lasting impression
Phone: 416-487-5246
Sponsored by The Elegant Garage Sale

To place an unveiling notice, please call at least 15 DAYS prior to the date of the unveiling.

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
SHIVA MEALS
SEUDAT HAVRA'AH
(Traditional Meal After Funeral)
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

IVANSKER
MUTUAL BENEFIT SOCIETY
Mourns the loss of our dear President
MENDY SHUMAN ז"ל
A wonderful person
and leader of the Society
We pray that his memory be a blessing and a source of comfort to his wife Susan to his daughters Andrea and Toba and to everyone who knew him
We will miss him very much

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite
DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and pri
We do not pay any funeral home co for their recom
Our prices are th
We wish you Chag Sameach in Toronto's community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial
Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment.
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Coast to Coast

Kingston plans for the future

By JORDAN PRESS
Special to the CJN

KINGSTON, Ont. — When the youth of Kingston's Jewish community light a large chanukiyah in the historic square behind City Hall on Dec. 2, it will be more than a community event that celebrates a holiday.

It will be a symbol of how organizers are working toward getting more Jews involved in community life. The event will be free and it will be open to anyone who wants to participate – two ingredients that should help successfully entice non-affiliated Jews to become more active community members.

The Kingston Jewish Council is in the same position as many other small community groups. They are all trying to engage more Jews in community life, but have been planning for the future based on what they see, rather than hard data.

That has changed.

Last month, the council held a public meeting at which it hosted representatives from the United Israel Appeal Federations Canada (UIAFC) who released population and demographic projections for Kingston and the rest of Canada.

What the numbers showed was that Kingston Jewry has increased over the past 30 years, but that population growth is expected to slow down over the next 10 years, just as in the rest of Canada. Between now and 2021, Canada's Jewish population is projected to increase by 2.4 per cent – to 394,300 from an estimated 385,198 – while Kingston Jewry is projected to grow by nearly five per cent to a projected 1,317 from an estimated 1,256.

But within those numbers are unique situations for each community that make the projections helpful for community planners, especially for smaller communities who don't have the resources of the UIAFC.

The projections are being shared with UIAFC members, the results of two years of study. Community affiliates asked the UIAFC to help them plan for the future, and the projections are designed to do just that. The projections are based on the 2001 national census.

Like Canada, the population in Kingston is projected to get older, with more people in the over-65 bracket in 2021 than in 2001. The number of people under the age of 25 is also projected to drop. This aging population will affect how organizations such as the Kingston Jewish Council plan for their community's future.

The UIAFC also projects that more Jews will be living in poverty in Canada by 2021 – nearly 56,000 from about 53,000 – while the number of Jews earning more than $100,000 will also increase to about 36,000 from 34,000. Kingston is actually projected to be the wealthiest city per capita: the median income next year in Kingston is projected to reach almost $41,000, more than any other city listed in the UIAFC report.

Another factor that will influence planners: the projected increase in interfaith marriages. By 2021, approximately one in three Jews in Canada will be in an interfaith marriage with a total of 29,469 children, according to the UIA projections.

Planning for the future for communities such as Kingston begins right now. Having more inclusive events and a neutral meeting space are being looked at. The UIAFC recommended the community could simply change the posters for events to include pictures of interfaith and same-sex couples to attract a broader scope of Kingston Jews.

MP petitions government on Israeli MIAs

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Joe Volpe

Eglinton-Lawrence Liberal MP Joe Volpe last week tabled a petition urging the federal government to help secure the return of Israeli soldiers who were captured in the first and second Lebanon wars, as well as by groups such as Hezbollah and Hamas over the years.

The petition, presented Nov. 24 in House of Commons, contained "hundreds, if not thousands" of signatures, according to Volpe.

He told The CJN that he wants the government to "use all reasonable means" to help gain the freedom of seven Israeli MIAs: Yehuda Katz, Tzvi Feldman, Zachary Baumel, Ron Arad, Guy Hever, Majdy Halabi and Gilad Schalit.

Volpe presented the petition on behalf of a Toronto grassroots group calling itself Mothers for MIAs.

"They want to get these young boys home. It's an important matter to be settled if we're to bring any semblance of rationality or peace in the region," Volpe said, adding that the group spent a lot of time collecting signatures by visiting many local synagogues.

"I felt the least I could do was give [Mother for MIAs] a podium from which to voice their concerns."

The petition asks the government to consider using economic sanctions "and the breaking of ties with those organizations responsible for the abductions and the governments that support them, in order to bring about the safe and swift return of these men to their families."

Volpe also tabled a second, related petition that asks the government to "use all reasonable means" to ensure the return of the body of Eli Cohen, the Mossad agent who was tortured and then executed by Syria in 1965. His body was never returned to his family.

Volpe said he intends to "make public" the government's response to the petition once he receives it.

Gilad Schalit

Ron Arad

CJA drive tops $40M

Compiled by CJN Staff

MONTREAL — The 2010 Combined Jewish Appeal raised $200,000 more than last year, it was announced at the campaign's official closing Nov. 24.

"Once all pledges are accounted for, it is projected that $36.6 million will have been donated," Federation CJA president Jack Hasen said.

"As an expression of age-old Jewish values, the campaign's theme of 'for one another' inspired an enthusiastic response from the community and giving on a level not seen for several years."

In addition to the contributions to the mainline campaign, nearly $1 million in one-time donations and more than $2.8 million designated for local and Israel projects were also received, for a total of more than $40.4 million.

There were more than 18,000 donors to the campaign.

"The achievements of this campaign give us every reason to look to the future with cautious optimism," Hasen said. "While we have not fully recovered from the economic crisis of a year ago, we are definitely in a more positive position today."

Singles Events is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-391-1836

Deadline:
Wednesday, 4 p.m., 8 days preceding issue date.

Jewish Connections Inc.

A personalized introduction service for Professional individuals looking to meet quality people

For a complimentary consultation call me: 905-889-3900

Carole Linden

carole@jewishconnectionsinc.com
www.jewishconnectionsinc.com

Family

We believe that family is everything. That's why they're always welcome at Delmanor Northtown; and not just in your suite. Show them off in the internet lounge, teach them to putt on the putting green, or play piano or billiards in the lounge. There's even gardening in the potting room! The list is almost endless.

When you make Delmanor Northtown your home, there's no more household chores and lots of time for family so your family can enjoy Shabbat dinner in our gracious dining room. Of course, your suite has a kitchenette so you can still say "Ess a bisel eppis, tatelleh".

Discover this grand Tridel inspired retirement rental lifestyle with exceptional service. Come for a personal tour and lunch, or call to inquire about a free trial stay.

Act now to enjoy full hotel style service, including meals and limited time move in bonuses:
1 Bedroom rental suites from $ 3695
2 Bedroom rental suites from $ 4495

DELMANOR
Northtown

5351 Yonge, south of Finch • (416) 225-9146 • www.delmanor.com

TRIDEL

PAUL GIAMATTI

Barney's Version

ROSAMUND PIKE | MINNIE DRIVER | RACHELLE LEFEVRE | SCOTT SPEEDMAN | DUSTIN and HOFFMAN

The true story of a man's life depends on who tells it.

BASED ON MORDECAI RICHLER'S
GILLER PRIZE WINNING BEST SELLER

"The only experience more pleasurable than watching Paul Giamatti inhabit the deeply flawed soul of Barney Panofsky is watching him in a virtuoso duet with Dustin Hoffman."
- Lisa Schwarzbaum, ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

"Not since Richard Dreyfuss so capably inhabited the title role in 1974's "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz" has a Richler lead character been brought to life as effectively as Giamatti's irascible, rumpled Barney Panofsky."
- Michael Rechtshaffen, MONTREAL GAZETTE

SUBJECT TO CLASSIFICATION

Opens in Toronto and Montreal December 24
Everywhere January 14

Diab witness questions French evidence

Compiled by CJN Staff

An Ontario Superior Court judge declined to make an "instant decision" on an application by alleged terrorist Hassan Diab to stay his extradition proceedings. Instead, Judge Robert Maranger said he wouldn't rule until completion of the extradition hearing, the Ottawa Citizen reported.

Diab's extradition hearing continued last week, with Crown attorney Jeffrey Johnston jousting with defence witness Kent Roach over evidence produced by France that allegedly showed Diab had a key role in the 1980 Rue Copernic Synagogue bombing, which killed four people and wounded dozens of others.

In questioning Roach, a University of Toronto law professor considered a leading authority on anti-terrorism, Johnston suggested information provided by France from unknown intelligence sources had been corroborated by reliable evidence. It had been gathered according to French law and could be used as a starting point to gather evidence even if it does not meet Canadian legal standards, he said.

Ontario judge declines to make 'instant decision'

"I'm also aware of concerns that evidence derived from torture has... been used in French proceedings," Roach said.

"Just as it has been used in many other proceedings around the world," replied Johnston.

"That doesn't make it right," said Roach.

At one point, Roach conceded that unsourced intelligence can be used if it can be corroborated by other reliable sources, but he repeated that with Diab's liberty at stake, aspects of the French case are "dangerous."

Earlier he said he saw similarities between the Diab case and that of Maher Arar, the Ottawa man deported to Syria where he was tortured.

Roach was the first witness called after 12 days of hearings into the stay application. He said the French evidence relies on "unsourced, uncircumstanced" intelligence that has been manipulated to fit their changing theory of the case.

Roach, who helped advise the commission of inquiry into the Arar case, testified that aspects of the Diab case set off "alarm bells" for him, particularly reports that first suggested Diab entered France from Spain using his own passport and then saying he used a false passport.

"It would suggest to me the intelligence record is unreliable because it is malleable enough to fit any or both scenarios. Because it is not sourced, because it is not circumstanced, it is very difficult to go behind their suppositions and to challenge the intelligence," said Roach.

Roach labelled nearly every piece of intelligence in the French case against Diab as unsourced and uncircumstanced. That included the 1999 intelligence report that concluded Diab, using the alias Alexander Panadriyu, bought the motorcycle and built the bomb that was hidden in its saddlebags.

Sculpture donated to Montreal's JGH

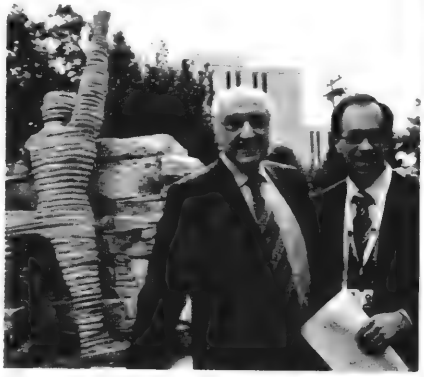
By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — All 20 tons of The Ascent have descended at the main entrance of the Jewish General Hospital's Lady Davis Institute for Medical Research to the delight and relief of its creator, dentist/sculptor Harry Rosen.

The three-metre stone sculpture of a climbing figure with one hand stretched skyward, set against a wall of precisely balanced layers of more stone, was donated to the JGH by Rosen, a well-known prosthodontist and professor emeritus at McGill University.

It took a team of architects (notably Gerry Soiferman and Ron Williams), engineers, truckers and other skilled and strong people volunteering their time over the past year to transport the sculpture from Rosen's country home in the Laurentians, to build the foundation and backdrop, and to retrofit the sculpture. Rosen acted as foreman throughout.

"It didn't cost the hospital one penny," he said at the dedication Oct. 4.



Harry Rosen, left, and Larry Sidel, vice-president and chief operating officer of the Jewish General Hospital Foundation, stand beside Rosen's massive The Ascent sculpture in front of the Lady Davis Institute.

The sculpture was inspired by the line from the Robert Browning poem, "Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?" Rosen and the hospital hope it will inspire the hundreds of researchers passing by it each day in their quest to alleviate illness. The installation is also close enough to the sidewalk that anyone can view it. The sculpture, which weighs about a ton by itself, was built over a couple of years by Rosen from boulders indigenous to the Laurentians, which he split by hand and then carved into plate-shaped rounds. From the feet up, he put together these segments into a human shape, mortaring each piece together. For the past two years, it has adorned his property near L'Esterel, next to another stone wall he had earlier constructed.

The new wall was built on-site from many tons more of rock Rosen bought from a quarry in Hemmingford, Que.

Rosen, 81, put in six months outdoors, mostly alone, getting this piece of public art to the point that it was both esthetically pleasing and physically safe.

The left leg of the figure, whose back is turned toward the viewer, is taking a step up, its left arm atop the wall, and the finger of the right hand appear to reach for the stars.

Transporting the sculpture involved welding it to the flatbed of a truck, the only way to secure it, and then breaking the weld. One leg did break, which had to be mended. The foundation required excavation by backhoe and the pouring of four truckloads of cement.

Some of the stones of the backdrop weighed two or three hundred pounds, and much of the placement was done by hand. The really time-consuming part, however, was getting the stones placed just right so that the wall was level and held together by gravity.

Rosen did much of that work himself, rearranging and grinding smaller pieces into wedges and shims. It was dirty work and he dressed the part for a workman.

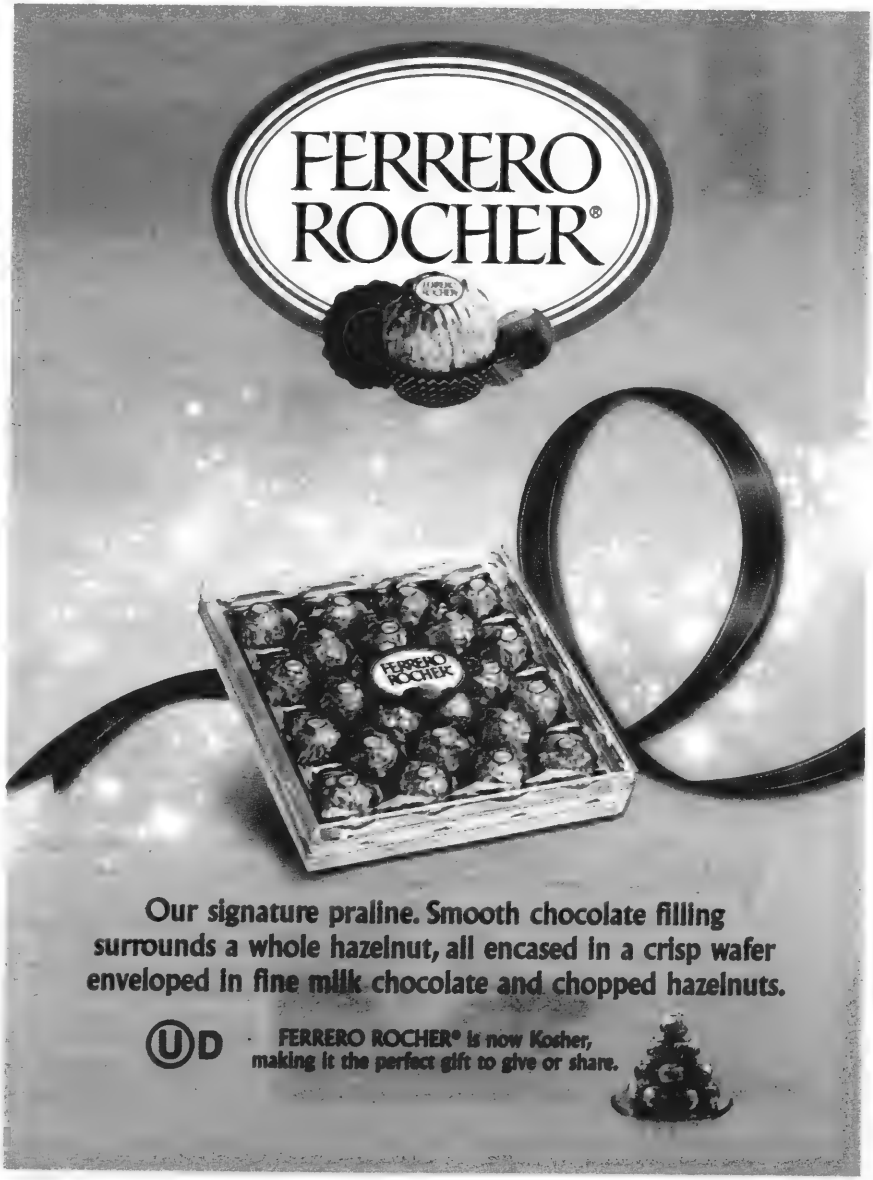
One winter's day, a man stopped and watched him for awhile. "Many people asked me questions as I worked, usually about the art or the philosophy behind it. But, he said, 'Tell me, who's your boss?' I said why? He said, 'You must have a terrible boss making an old man like you work so hard on such a cold day.'" Rosen, a strapping fellow, laughs at the memory.

Rosen's manual skills in small spaces restoring teeth have long been recognized, but it has only come to light in more recent years that he is also very good with his hands when it comes to much larger tableaux.

For decades, he harvested rocks up north, using his own handmade winches and pulleys, cut and ground them himself, and turned them into walls and terraces.

In more recent years, he has taken a more artistic bent, and he has created large-scale sculptures of human forms. Last year, he donated Little Hercules, a boy hoisting a barbell triumphantly over his head, to the Montreal Children's Hospital to inspire its young patients.

"I like to say that I may not have been able to get blood out of a stone, but I think I have breathed life into it," Rosen said.

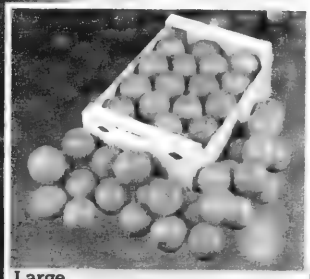


FERRERO ROCHER®
Our signature praline. Smooth chocolate filling surrounds a whole hazelnut, all encased in a crisp wafer enveloped in fine milk chocolate and chopped hazelnuts.
FERRERO ROCHER® is now Kosher, making it the perfect gift to give or share.

Sobeys is your Chanukah destination for delicious meals, easy entertaining & so much more.

Sobeys

Happy Chanukah



Large Clementines
$3.99 ea. without minimum purchase.
*Receive 1 box of clementines for $1.99 ea. for every $30 spent excluding this item, taxes, tobacco, pharmacy, lottery and gift cards. Price reduction will be made at checkout.
1.99 ea. with a $30 purchase*

Lazar
Cocktail Puffs
454 g
5.99

Strub's
Smoked Steelhead Salmon
Frozen, 200 g
5.99

Sufganiyot
(Jelly Filled Donuts)
Assorted Varieties, 50 g
.80

Jumbo Size Pomegranates
Product of USA
2/$4

Tzali's
Borekes
Assorted Varieties, 600 - 800 g
4.99

Elite
Gold Coins
Selected Varieties, 24 x 25 g
7.99

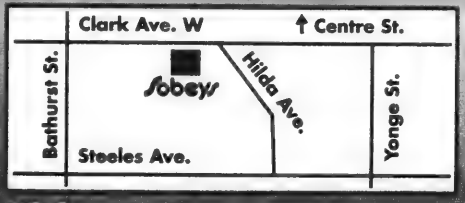
Carmel
Potato Pancake Mix
6 oz.
1.79

Chanukah Candles
Sorted Varieties, 44
.99

Kosher Market
Clark & Hilda

441 Clark Ave. West (at Hilda)
Store Hours: Mon-Wed, Sat, Sun 8am-10pm
Thurs 8am-11pm, Fri 7am-10pm
All Chanukah product is subject to availability, subject to change & while quantities last.
Prices effective Friday, December 3rd to Thursday, December 9th, 2010

We've made a commitment to carry the largest selection of kosher products in North America, for all of your Chanukah Needs.



Visit us at www.sobeys.com

Buying Israeli shoes best way to foil boycott: QIC

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — The Jewish community is rallying behind a Montreal shoe store owner who is the target of a campaign to boycott Israeli goods.

The Quebec-Israel Committee (QIC) is urging people to patronize the store, Le Marcheur at 4062 St. Denis St., which sells, among other brands, a line of shoes made in Israel called BeautiFeel.

The QIC has also offered pro bono legal counselling to the owner, Yves Archambault, but QIC research and communications director David Ouellette said Archambault has so far not requested that help. Archambault has also not indicated he will stop selling Israeli shoes. Efforts to reach him for comment on this story were unsuccessful.

The QIC is cautioning against any counter-demonstration or confrontation with those who protest outside the store, and is advising against even going there at the same time as the protesters.

"Confrontation would only serve to give the boycotters the attention they are desperate for, as well as damage the owner's interests," said Ouellette.

On Oct. 2, PAJU (Palestinian and Jewish Unity) began a series of picketing sessions in front of the store that has continued on most alternate Saturday afternoons. On Nov. 20, police came on the scene after a person opposed to the boycott action allegedly shoved someone taking photographs and then threw a punch in the direction of a cameraman. No charges were pressed.

The picketing, usually by only less than a dozen people, initially consisted of holding up a banner on the sidewalk outside the store's entrance urging solidarity with the Palestinians' campaign against Israeli "apartheid," and carrying signs denouncing Israel's "colonization" and "terrorism."

At the demand of police on Nov. 6, the protesters have since moved the placards off to the side so as not to obstruct passersby, and they've been confining themselves to mostly handing out flyers away from the store entrance.

PAJU is the same group that for years staged weekly vigils outside the Israeli consulate when it was downtown.

Ouellette terms the PAJU campaign against Le Marcheur "vicious blackmail and harassment," and said "we are looking into every option," including the legal route.

He conceded that the protesters are "very disciplined," do not interfere with those entering the store, and have the legal right to be where they are.

Before the picketing started, a "cease and desist" letter was sent to Archambault by PAJU, informing him that if he did not meet its demand to take the Israeli shoes off his shelves within seven days, the picketing would start.

PAJU president Bruce Katz, who signed and delivered the letter, said the action is being stepped up. Protests are now to be held on a weekly basis, at least through December.

The QMI Agency, Quebecor's news service, reported that Jafar Khadir, the father of Amir Khadir, the sole Québec solidaire member of the National Assembly, was among those at the first picket. The party has officially endorsed the anti-Israel boycott.

Jacob Kincler, president of the Israel-Canada Chamber of Commerce, who has been privately rallying support for Le Marcheur, thinks legal action might be taken against the protesters on the grounds that their actions may be damaging a business.

Ouellette reiterated that the so-called boycott, divestment and sanctions against Israel remains "extremely marginal" in Quebec.

Protester in front of Le Marcheur in Montreal

'Inappropriate' to compare Israel with Iran, Sudan: Radio-Canada

Compiled by CJN Staff

MONTREAL — Veteran Radio-Canada television news anchor Simon Durivage has expressed his regrets to those who complained that he appeared to equate Israel with Iran and Sudan.

Following a letter-writing campaign organized by the pro-Israel media monitoring group Honest Reporting Canada (HRC), the French-language public broadcaster offered an explanation of the context, while admitting that Durivage's comparison was "inappropriate."

On the Oct. 15 edition of the network's political talk show Le Match des élus, Durivage said: "Israel is a controversial country and is often even blamed by the United Nations. Is it not a bit dangerous to align ourselves to this point to a country whose policies are controversial and even condemned by the UN? I would ask the same question if Canada decided to represent Iran or Sudan somewhere in the world."

Durivage was interviewing Quebec Conservative MP Steven Blaney in the wake of Canada's failure to obtain a seat on the UN Security Council. He was referring to Canada's decision to represent Israel's interests in Venezuela after that country severed diplomatic relations with the Jewish state.

HRC executive director Mike Fegelman found the comment an "obscene equivalence between Israel, Iran and Sudan," calling the latter two countries "state sponsors of international terrorism" and, in Sudan's case, one that is complicit in genocide.

To read full story, please go to cjnews.com

The dollars and sense of simple divorces

Family Matters
by
John Syrtash
B.A. (Hon.), LL.B.
Counsel
Garfin Zeidenberg LLP
Family Lawyer & Mediator for 30 years

Question: 1. What is the average cost of an uncontested divorce in the Toronto area? 2. What is the best way to find a lawyer who could help me with the process?

Answer: It depends on the lawyer and what you mean buy "uncontested" divorce. If a spouse is making no claims against the other and there are either no dependent children or there is a written agreement in place dealing with child support, then the fees can burn $750–$1,200, plus disbursements (out of pocket costs). These disbursements include court fees, plus the costs of hiring a process server to deliver the Divorce application and similar expenses, all of which cost an additional amount of approximately $450.

Sometimes these disbursements are higher or lower. In a "friendly" divorce the other spouse will pick the Divorce Petition up at the lawyer's office to save on the expense of the process server. However, some estranged spouses cannot be found. If that happens the lawyer will have to obtain a special kind of Court order for "substituted service" and put ads in the newspapers to "notify" the other spouse of the Divorce application, all of which might cost an additional $800–$1,250, depending on the Lawyer, including disbursements.

You'll pay an additional $200-$300 if you've been previously divorced and can't find your old Divorce Judgment or if you were previously divorced in a non-English speaking country. The best way to find a lawyer is to ask your friends or family if they know a good family law lawyer; word of mouth is still the best source of referral. If that fails, call the Lawyer Referral Service of the Law Society of Upper Canada. For $6 the service will provide the name of a lawyer whose office is close to your home address and who will provide up to 30 minutes free consultation to help you determine your rights and options. You can access the service by calling 1-900-565-4577.

Finally, here are some cautionary notes about "uncontested divorces." Be careful about simply using Divorce Kits bought at local stores or paying uninsured paralegals who are not lawyers. You might pay less initially but without informed legal advice that could lead to much more expensive problems.

Let me give just two examples. If you owed money for property division by reason of marriage, you can lose that right within the earlier two years after divorce or six years after the date you separated from your spouse if you don't claim for it before the Courts during that time period. If you obtain an uncontested divorce without settling your property claims, you could allow the two years to drift by and then find out that you're prevented later from making a claim for money to which you are entitled.

Similarly, you cannot obtain an "uncontested divorce" if you have a dependent child and fail to provide the Court with an affidavit that recites the amount of child support paid by the non-custodial parent and proof as to how much that parent earns yearly. You don't necessarily need a separation agreement to complete such an affidavit. But then again, they said the Titanic was so seaworthy it didn't really need its full complement of lifeboats and lifejackets. The cost of separation agreement is a whole different matter (at least $750–$1,000 for a very simple "no brainer.")

On behalf of my family, and all of us at Garfin Zeidenberg, I wish you and your family a happy and healthy Chanukah.

Mr. Syrtash is Counsel to Garfin Zeidenberg LLP, Suite 800, 5255 Yonge Street (at Norton) just north of Mel Lastman Square, Civic Centre Subway station, Toronto, ON M5G 1E6. John Syrtash can be reached at (416) 642-5410, Cell (416) 886-0359. Visit www.freemychild.com; www.spousalsupport.com; www.garfinzeidenberg.com.

Neither Garfin Zeidenberg LLP nor John Syrtash is liable for any consequences arising from anyone's reliance on this material, which is presented as general information and not as a legal opinion.

Sponsored by the Community for Jewish Culture of B'Nai Brith Canada.

Coast to Coast

Report described impact of March of Living

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

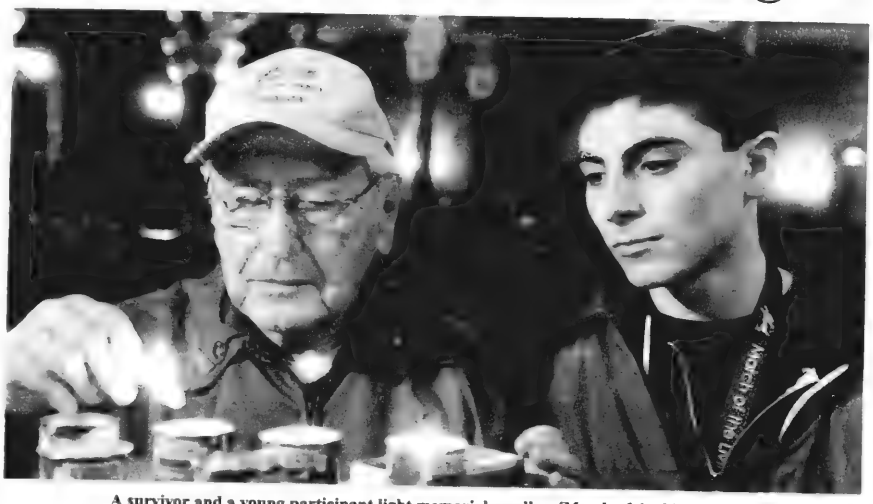
A study into the impact of the March of the Living shows that participants credited the program with enhancing their Jewish identity, making them feel more connected to Israel and increasing their commitment to human rights.

The March of the Living (MOL) Long-Term Study 2000-2008 also found that program alumni were most deeply affected by their visits to Nazi concentration camps, their interaction with Holocaust survivors and their visits to historical sites in Israel.

Released last week, the report, by InfoFeedback, indicated the Montreal firm had contacted more than 1,700 MOL participants. Replies in the online survey came from 231, most of them from the 2004 to 2008 trips.

The report came out shortly after the University of Toronto came under fire for approving a thesis, The Victimhood of the Powerful: White Jews, Zionism and the Racism of Hegemonic Holocaust Education, that criticized the March of the Living and the March of Remembrance and Hope, a related program that brings older students to Europe. The thesis author, Jenny Peto, claimed the programs were used "in ways that obscure Jewish privilege, deny Jewish racism and promote the interests of the Israeli nation-state."

The survey questioned program alumni on a wide range of attitudes and found that "the experience had a significant positive impact on MOL goals."



A survivor and a young participant light memorial candles. [March of the Living photo]

Ninety-one per cent "agreed that confronting antisemitism became even more important after the trip," while "in the area of commitment to human rights (fighting genocide and combating general racism), a very high average increase of 89 per cent was recorded since their participation in the March."

In addition, "87 per cent felt an increase in their feelings of tolerance for other groups after their experience of the MOL," the study reported.

"With regard to their sense of Jewish identity, 88 per cent of respondents agreed there was an increase in this feeling following the MOL." Sixty-one per cent felt it increased the importance of their Jewish faith, 72 per cent said it increased their desire to participate in Jewish organizations, 74 per cent "reported an increase in their desire to donate to Israel" and 87 per cent said it increased their desire to visit Israel.

The March of the Living is an international program that brings mostly high school students to Europe to visit Jewish communities and Nazi concentration camps before moving on to Israel. Toronto, with 300 participants expected in 2011, and Montreal, with around 250, generally boast the largest contingents when measured by city. Canada, with as many as 700 participants, is annually one of the biggest Diaspora participants, said Eli Rubenstein, national director of MOL. Last year, about 10,000 people from around the world took part in the march.

In Canada, MOL is sponsored by local federations including UJA Federation of Greater Toronto and Federation CJA in Montreal, as well as the United Israel Appeal.

The survey's findings indicate the MOL is reaching its goals, Rubenstein said. Young people feel more connected to the Jewish People and Israel and, at the same time, develop universal values of helping others and opposing racism, he said.

Previous surveys had examined the short-term implications of the MOL, but "this study shows the positive, long-term impact of the program, especially in Jewish identification, Jewish causes, ties to Israel, human rights and combating genocide," Rubenstein said.

"They come back better human beings, better Jews and more committed to fighting for human values."

Dale Boidman, national chair of MOL, said the hundreds of personal comments from participants nearly all "talked about being with survivors" and being in a Nazi death camp. "It's exceptionally impactful to stand at Majdanek with these huge chimneys from the ovens, with the city of Lublin all around," she said.

In April it's still wintery in Poland, and the "kids were cold, imagining what it was like there in the middle of winter, with little food, and how these people walked out alive and had the internal strength to go on and live a normal life.

"These people were heroes."

Commemorating Yom Hashoah in Poland and then "singing Hatikvah on Yom Ha'atzmaut [Israel Independence Day], with tears of joy, relief, commitment and understanding that at this point in our Jewish lives, we have somewhere to go, when we didn't before [makes] the impact of arriving in Israel so important," she said.

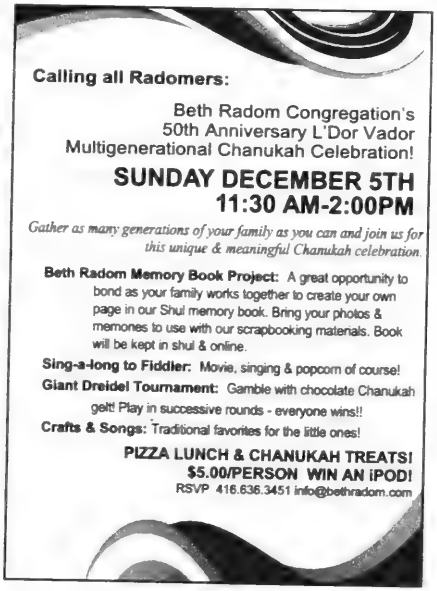
Anita Ekstein, a survivor who will be going on her 11th march next year, said the trip "strengthens Jewish identity. The youngsters empathize and understand others' suffering, get involved in human rights and other social causes and are connected to Israel.

"I know from experience how committed students are to learn the lessons of the Holocaust, [and] when they return dedicate themselves to making the world a better place, more aware and involved in social causes.

"Many have kept in touch with me over the years, and many have chosen helping professions, social workers, doctors, teachers. One is even teaching law in Gambia."

Ekstein, who served as MOL national chair for several years, said, "They realize how fortunate they are, with parents, siblings and free speech.

"I think that's a big awareness they take back with them."



Calling all Radomers:
Beth Radom Congregation's
50th Anniversary L'Dor Vador
Multigenerational Chanukah Celebration!
SUNDAY DECEMBER 5TH
11:30 AM-2:00PM
Gather as many generations of your family as you can and join us for this unique & meaningful Chanukah celebration.
Beth Radom Memory Book Project: A great opportunity to bond as your family works together to create your own page in our Shul memory book. Bring your photos & memories to use with our scrapbooking materials. Book will be kept in shul & online.
Sing-a-long to Fiddler: Movie, singing & popcorn of course!
Giant Dreidel Tournament: Gamble with chocolate Chanukah gelt! Play in successive rounds - everyone wins!!
Crafts & Songs: Traditional favorites for the little ones!
PIZZA LUNCH & CHANUKAH TREATS!
$5.00/PERSON WIN AN iPOD!
RSVP 416.636.3451 info@bethradom.com

Advocacy restructuring nearly done, Cummings says

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

The plan to restructure the way Jewish community advocacy is conducted in Canada is almost finalized, the chair of the country's pro-Israel umbrella group says.

Responding to a report in The CJN last week that aired concerns by Canadian Jewish Congress (CJC) about the restructuring process, Steven Cummings, the Montreal-based chair of the Canadian Council for Jewish and Israel Advocacy (CIJA), said CIJA believes the community would benefit from a "consolidation" of decision-making and communications.

Steven Cummings

The details of the national restructuring plan exist in a brief called the "Newco Document," which the CIJA reorganization committee has distributed to all its affiliated agencies, including Congress, the Canada-Israel Committee, the University Outreach Committee, the Quebec-Israel Committee and UIA Federations Canada (UIAFC).

Cummings said CIJA intends to ratify the Newco Document – which he referred to as the "road map" at its upcoming board meeting on Dec. 8, and then have the UIAFC board declare its support for the document at its board meeting on Dec. 12.

The second iteration of the document was sent out two weeks ago. It has not yet been made public, and The CJN was unable to obtain a copy.

Asked what is lacking in community advocacy that would necessitate a restructuring, Cummings said that it wasn't a matter of anything missing, but rather that "it's a matter of doing better."

He said the key issue is that the community speak with one voice. "We feel that the issues that are of most importance to the Jewish community really leach into each other. Whether they're issues around antisemitism, around anti-Israelism, difficulties on campuses… all of them are informed by the core values we have in the Jewish community around human rights and the dignity of all people.

"All of these things tie together. And we think addressing, communicating and advocating on these issues we're best able to do it as one body as opposed to a number of different bodies that, while tied together under the CIJA umbrella, continue to have independent boards."

To that end, Cummings said that one of the natural steps in the creation of a new community advocacy entity would be the dissolution of "a number of boards as they exist today" followed by their rebirth as various "regional councils" that would be formed as part of the new structure.

As reported in The CJN last week, David Schwartz, Congress' Pacific-region chair, said he was concerned that if his regional board were disbanded, he feared the loss of "many" of its current members who won't want to be part of a committee structure.

"Committees will lack the glue and succession planning that a regional board has," Schwartz said.

In response, Cummings said that he felt there was "no reason why those who are engaged in the Pacific region, or anywhere else in the country, would not find that they have as powerful a forum in which to engage in advocacy" while in partnership with a strong, national organization.

"This continues to be a complex process, but one in which we feel we have dealt with the most fundamental issues. Now it's a matter of how this will all work," he said.

Asked if the Newco Document will be made public, Cummings responded: "I really can't answer that question right now, as I would have to take guidance from the board and the reorganization committee. There will be a final document going out next week for the board meeting. It has had very wide distribution, but I don't expect it will be distributed to anyone else before the board meeting."

Cummings said that he hopes the Jewish community will look at this restructuring process and the eventual creation of a new, centralized advocacy agency as a positive step in the community's growth.

"We hope this structure would give opportunity to those who have a keen interest in advocacy and activism, a place in which they would be able to express themselves and be a part of. I believe that puts wind in one's sails. It makes the strategic decisions that much more important and credible.

"We are not looking to have an organization that is closed. We're looking to have an organization that is very open to the community."

FOCUS OPTICAL LABS
Tibor Klein, Ethan Ticktin and the staff wish all our friends and customers a Happy and Healthy Chanukah 26 years at 221 Wilmington Ave.
We'll remain part of Bathurst Manor Plaza even after re-development.
26th ANNIVERSARY SALE!
50% OFF FRAMES (up to $100.00) valid until 3/31/2011
416-630-6416

Rise of radical Islamism called threat to Mideast stability

Continued from page 3

Speaking a day before the 63rd anniversary of the 1947 United Nations Palestine partition plan, Aznar said his initiative has [opened] "a space" in which "reason" and "decency" prevail.

He noted that the initiative has enjoyed "remarkable success" in terms of international support.

Having already brought it to the United States, Britain, Brazil, Panama, Costa Rica, Argentina and Italy, he intends to bring it to Belgium, the Czech Republic, Poland and Spain.

"Our desire is to continue defending Israel, because, in that way, we think we're contributing to better defend the entire western world – something we find vital and urgent."

Aznar suggested that sharp critiques of Israel lack nuance.

"It's easy to denounce the harshness of Israel's military actions," he said, pointing out that Hezbollah and Hamas want to destroy Israel.

"It's easy to denounce the [security] fence that partially separates the West Bank from Israel," he said. Yet Israel's barrier has drastically reduced the number of terrorist attacks in Israel and allowed Israelis "to go out for pizza, to the movies, or send their children on the same school bus…"

"It's easy to condemn Israel and portray it as a new apartheid regime," he said. But Israeli Arabs sit in the Knesset and some hold "high-ranking positions in several state institutions."

Sharp critiques of Israel lack nuance says former Spanish PM

Israel is not only a nation enmeshed in conflict and wars, he added.

Characterizing Israel as "a land of opportunity" with a future, Aznar said it has been admitted into the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, has a thriving economy and enjoys diplomatic relations with many countries.

"Nonetheless, the automatic response to blame Israel for almost everything bad happening in the Middle East doesn't want to recede. It's quite the contrary."

Israel's prime minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, is "the new George W. Bush" in that he is blamed "for everything."

Aznar blasted Turkey, a NATO member and Israel's former ally, for having backed "aggression" by endorsing last May's flotilla.

"By contrast, very few remember the plight of Israeli soldier Gilad Schalit, who was abducted more than four years ago by the Hamas militia."

In closing, Aznar expressed outrage that Canada did not win a temporary seat on the United Nations Security Council.

"But you don't need to feel sorry. On the contrary, you must be proud of having principled leaders like Mr. [Stephen] Harper as prime minister."

He voiced hope that Harper would join his initiative.

HOLIDAY SALE
30 - 70% OFF
ON BRAND NAME MERCHANDISE
Calvin Klein · canterbury · Dickies · LUCKY BRAND JEANS · Ben Sherman · NIKE · Timberland · Billabong · ROXY · PUMA · PERRY ELLIS · bugatti · COTTON BEEL · JOSEPH ABBOUD · JACK & JONES
beatties
453 Eglinton Ave. West • Toronto
Monday - Friday 9:30-6:00 • Thursday 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-5:30 • Sunday-Closed 416-481-4459 • 1-800-510-9138
www.beattiesonline.com

Canada to boycott 'Durban III'

'Our government has lost faith in entire process'

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Canada will not participate in the "charade" of a 10th anniversary commemoration of the Durban "hate fest," Jason Kenney, minister of citizenship, immigration and multiculturalism, announced last week.

"Our government has lost faith in the entire tainted Durban process," Kenney said at a news conference announcing the decision. "Canada will not participate in the events to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the adoption of the Durban declaration and program of action on September 2011.

"Canada is clearly committed to the fight against racism, but the Durban process commemorates an agenda that we believe actually promotes racial division rather than fighting it," he stated.

As was the case when Canada was the first country to boycott the 2009 World Conference Against Racism, dubbed Durban II, Canada is the first country to announce it would withdraw from "Durban III."

Jason Kenney, minister of citizenship, immigration and multiculturalism

The governments of Australia, much of the European Union and Israel joined Canada in boycotting Durban II. The United States, which had attempted to modify the conference's agenda, pulled out shortly before it convened in Geneva.

Opposition leader Michael Ignatieff backed the government's position on Durban III.

"I unequivocally support the decision to boycott the Durban III conference, taking place in New York next September," Ignatieff stated.

"The first Durban conference, which the proposed Durban III conference seeks to commemorate, turned into a festival of racism against Israel and the Jewish people that Canada was right to condemn. Sadly, while a decade has passed, the Durban conferences remain a staging ground for antisemitic and anti-Israel statements. Canada should absolutely not participate in the Durban III conference or countenance in any way these hateful views.

"In light of this disturbing trend, the conferences cannot be seen as legitimate forums capable of facilitating honest discussions about racism.

"Combating both racism and antisemitism is a global responsibility, and as a steadfast defender of the principles of equality and dignity for all persons, Canada must not participate in Durban III," Ignatieff said.

Former senator Jerry Grafstein said he planned to take the boycott decision one step further by organizing a counter-conference in New York City to coincide with the Durban III event.

When governments and NGOs were convening in Geneva at Durban II, "I helped organized a counter-conference in New York at Fordham University," he said. "I'm going to try to reinstitute that.

"It's not good enough to say we're not going to go. That's good, but what's the alternative? A counter-conference," he said.

"We'll take the same agenda and bring speakers that would counter the obscene venom that flows out of the UN Human Rights Council [which is organizing Durban III].

"I would hope Jason Kenney would be a keynote speaker in New York. I will write to him. He's shown leadership on this."

Grafstein, who retired from the Senate earlier this year, said "we'll bring outstanding world figures" to the counter-conference.

The event at Fordham University brought together representatives from 40 organizations. "I'm again calling on American politicians and people from [the] NGO community and other communities and leading international figures," he said.

"The UN has done and continues to do some amazing things, but at the same time, it's been held captive by regressive blocs. That's nothing new," Grafstein said. Referring to the human rights abusing nations organizing Durban III, Grafstein said, "They're abusing democratic processes for undemocratic objectives."

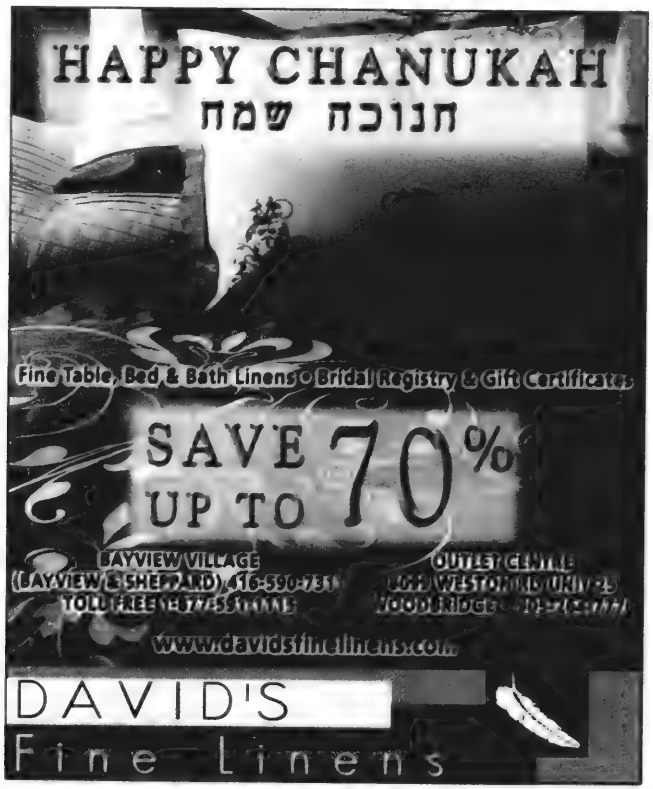
In his remarks, Kenney said "despite the fact that the Durban declaration and first followup have served to fuel bigotry, the General Assembly has now chosen to repeat and even augment the mistakes of the past."

He noted the original Durban conference in 2001, as well as NGO activities associated with it, "proved to be a dangerous platform for racism and particularly antisemitism," with the the Protocols of Zion circulated and portraits of Hitler on display.

Canadian Jewish Congress commended Kenney for announcing the boycott and Ignatieff for supporting it.

"This UN process is fundamentally flawed and by now beyond repair. All that can be expected are attempts to build on the poisonous record and accordingly the process must be condemned without reservation," Congress president Mark Freiman stated.

"We congratulate Minister Kenney on his unrelenting stand in the fight against antisemitism and all forms of hatred," added Congress CEO Bernie Farber.



Countries collaborate on tech development

Compiled by CJN Staff

Some 50 representatives from Canada and Israel met last week in Toronto to map future steps for both countries in technology innovation.

The National Research Council of Canada hosted the Canada-Israel Technology Innovation Summit 2010, the first of two summits that bring together leaders from industry, universities and the governments of both nations.

Tony Clement, minister of industry

Canada can gain much through increased collaboration with Israel's best minds, Industry Minister Tony Clement said. "The focus of both governments on tangible economic outcomes will help our countries on the path to full economic recovery."

Eli Opper, chief scientist of the Israeli Ministry of Industry, Trade and Labor, said that "by leveraging Israeli and Canadian strengths in the fields of water, renewable energy and neuroscience, our countries will create new opportunities for technological innovation.

"Through co-operation and collaboration, we can utilize the advantages both countries have in these fields, paving the way to technological breakthroughs that will improve not only our economies, but our societies as well," Opper said.

A dreidel, a menorah, some Chanukah gelt... Chanukah gifts you gave your children

Now that they're all grown up, give them something that will connect them to the community throughout the year

Give them their own subscription to The Canadian Jewish News

Offer now thro[ugh] holiday. The [per]fect gift [sub]scription! $10

To order, call 1-866-849-0864

The Canadian Jewish news

P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

New addresses only
$27.80* for 1 YR in PRINT
Quote Code: N10CHK
Canadian Delivery, New Address Only
*Expires Dec. 31st 2010

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$20.95*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑
*H.S.T INCLUDED	H.S.T. #R105201149
$135.00 CND	1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN	❑

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
Province_____ Postal Code_____
Telephone_____
Email_____
❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift
Subscriber No._____

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.
AMOUNT ENCLOSED $_____
CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑
VISA ❑ MasterCard ❑ American Express ❑
NUMBER_____
EXPIRY DATE_____

On Campus

Journalism students meet at GA

By JORDAN PRESS
Special to the CJN

Guest Voice

Uri Dromi's slow, measured tone lets you know that he really tries to practise what he preaches when it comes to Israel.

He's been talking about Israel for a while. The retired Israeli Air Force (IAF) colonel is a former chief education officer for the IAF and former chief information officer for the World Zionist Organization.

His calm tone accented his opening talk to about 30 young Jewish journalism students, including me, some of whom identify themselves as on-campus activists. We were part of the Do The Write Thing conference that ran concurrently with the General Assembly of the Jewish Federations of North America in New Orleans last month.

Pro-Israel activism, Dromi said, comes in many forms, although it has progressively moved toward what he called "the direct approach," which ends with people forcing their views on others in a progressively louder voice.

"I'm for the soft action, the indirect approach," he said.

That means talking and listening to everyone who has a view on Israel. Have Israelis tell their personal stories and ask questions of others, Dromi said.

No need to yell, he added.

I processed his words in my mind later that morning as I watched police and security haul five protesters out of a speech by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. One of the protesters yelled, "The occupation delegitimizes Israel." From behind me, someone replied that the protester's mouth delegitimizes free speech.

The message I heard during my three days at the general assembly was simple: criticizing Israeli policy does not cross a line, although one of my conference mates referred to such people as antisemitic. Criticizing Israel's right to exist – that crosses a line.

Then came the second part of the message: another line is crossed when we, as a community, can't talk. How we talk is even more important than what we talk about. Hearing this message, it was almost as if comedians Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert's Rally to Restore Sanity and or Fear, which took place at the end of October on the National Mall in Washington, D.C., had made its way into the hotel hallways of New Orleans.

"It's fine to disagree, but we should find a civil way to do it," said Gary Rosenblatt, editor and publisher of the Jewish Week in New York City.

Natan Sharansky, chair of the Jewish Agency for Israel, who quietly took the podium in the small room where our conference took place, was leery about silencing dissenting voices.

"We are not demanding one voice" for all Jews, he said. "Use the atmosphere of free dialogue."

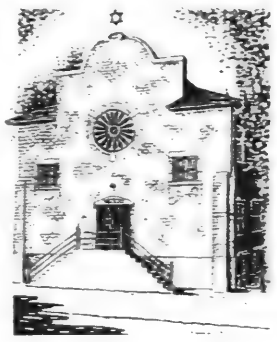
But shouting at the Israeli prime minister is not the way to foster that dialogue, Sharansky said. Such an act only serves to further entrench the creeping polarization in discussions about Israel.

There is room for dissenting viewpoints, was how Howard English, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto vice-president of communications, put it. The point is how we dialogue around them.

At the end of the conference, I bumped into Dromi one more time. I told him I didn't quite understand what he was talking about with his indirect approach until I saw the protesters at the Netanyahu address. Dromi smiled and shook my hand.

THE Junction Shul@100
CONGREGATION KNESSETH ISRAEL
CELEBRATING A CENTURY OF TRADITION

DO YOU REMEMBER THE JUNCTION SHUL?



CONGREGATION KNESSETH ISRAEL
CORNER MARIA AND SHPMAN STREETS
קאנגרעגאציע כנסת ישראל
TORONTO

Knesseth Israel Synagogue (The Junction Shul) is celebrating its 100th anniversary. We are looking for stories, photos and memorabilia of the shul and the Junction neighbourhood from days past, to include in our commemorative book. If you can help us please contact:

Lorne Miller
at mystories@rogers.com
or
Phone: (416) 226-1022 or Fax: (416) 226-5715

Thank You For Your Contributions.

CALLING ALL BRIDES & GROOMS

The CJN
wants you to share your story with our readers in our upcoming Bridal Supplement.

Tell us how you got engaged, talk about your wedding plans, or share your feelings on your wedding day.

Deadline for submission is Wed. Jan. 19

Send about 400 words plus a picture to:
cblackman@thecjn.ca

שיחה עם גידי קורן וחברים

המדריך למהפכה

דורון צברי הוא במאי סרטים ישראלי מהמצליחים ביותר שידעה ישראל, ובשנים האחרונות שלושה מסרטיו זכו בפרס האוסקר היישראלי . ועל כן יש משהו מאוד מרתק בזה שהאיש מוכן היה להקריב את קידומו, הקריירה שלו וגם את שלמות משפחתו למען מלחמה בשחיתות בענף שהוא קרוב אליו. וזה גם הנושא לסרטו המרתק "המדריך למהפכה" שראינו בתל אביב לפני שבועיים. במשך יותר מעשר שנים נלחם צברי בשחיתות העמוקה ברשות השידור עד שהביא לכינונו של חוק חדש- חוק רשות השידור. מאז קום המדינה התמנה יו"ר הרשות על ידי ראש הממשלה המכהן, ובמשך שנות כהונתו הוא דאג שלא לשכוח להראות לאדונו שהוא יודע על איזה צד מרוחה החמאה. צברי מראה את זה דרך כהונתו של יוסף בראל שמונה על ידי אריק שרון, ודאג לעשות לו מסיבות יום עצמאות עתירות תקציב, ולהוריד מן המסך כל דעה שיוצאת נגד ה"מנהיג". בראל פוטר מאוחר יותר בשל אי סדרים על ידי ממשלתו של אהוד אולמרט, האיש שגם הסכים להעביר בכנסת את חוק רשות השידור שיזם צברי.

בסרטו מתעד צברי את כל השלבים והתסכולים של דרכו הארוכה. בסופו של דבר עבר החוק, שקובע בין השאר שיו"ר רשות השידור יתמנה על ידי ועדה ממלכתית בראשות שופט.

זהו סרט על נכונותו של אזרח רגיל לנהל מלחמה נגד שחיתות, שלא על מנת לקבל פרס, ותוך לקיחת סיכונים אישיים גדולים. לאורך כל הסרט מלווה אותנו אימו של צברי ששואלת אותו מליון פעמים: "מה ייצא לך מזה? מלם מסמנים אותך כעושה צרות ולא תקבל שום עבודה."

בסוף הסרט רואים את צברי ואימו מוזמנים ללשכתו של אולמרט לחנוג את העברת החוק. אימו של צברי מתלוננת לאולמרט שבנה זרק את כל חייו למען מטרה שלא תביא לו שום דבר אישי. מספר לה אולמרט שגם בנו החליט ללמוד ספרות צרפתית שלא תביא לו כלום. אומרת האם לשר: תלוי כמה המשפחה יכולה לעזור לילד- לנו אין כלום. ועונה לה אולמרט במשפט חכם: רק בגלל שדורון קיבל הרבה אהבה בבית, הוא מסוגל להתמיד במשימה כל כך חשובה שלא על מנת לקבל פרס.

אינני בטוח שהסרט הזה יגיע הנה להקרנות מסחריות, כי הנושא ישראלי מידי- אבל אם יוצא לכם- אל תחמיצו!

תשע בסולם קורן

הרב עובדיה נגד אמסלם

חבר הכנסת אמסלם מש"ס מצ'ופס ומשמיע דעות מקוריות משלו, שאינן על פי קו המפלגה. ספציפית הוא סבור שחשוב שהחרדים יצאו לשוק העבודה. וכצפוי, לא עבר זמן רב ומנהיג ש"ס, הרב עובדיה, הודיע שהקריאה לתלמידי תורה ללכת לעבוד היא מחצפת ומנוגדת לדין תורה."אנחנו מאמינים בני מאמינים שהלומד תורה מקיים את העולם" אמר הרב. רמת העיוות של האנשים האלה כבר לא מזעזעת, היא פשוט מעוררת בחילה עמוקה. איך זה שתלמידי תורה בצפון אמריקה יוצאים לעבד! פשוט מאוד: הם לא תברי מפלגה שסוחטת את נשיא ארה"ב או ראש ממשלת קנדה, ועל כן אין להם ברירה.

ובארץ! גם לא עובדים, גם לא משרתים בצבא, וגם סוחטים מעבר לכל פרופרציה- בשבוע שעבר התפרסמה לראשונה בישראל, לפי חוק חדש, חלוקת מענקים ומלגות, וכצפוי- החרדים מקבלים יותר מהקצבות למוזיקה קלאסית, לתיאטראות ולנורמים רבים אחרים. לא פלא אם כן שהישראלי החילוני הופך לאנטי דתי, ואיננו מוכן לשמוע דבר וחצי דבר על מסורת, בית כנסת ואידישקייט. הפחיטות הזאת הרעילה לו את החוויה היהודית בצורה טוטאלית. אבל שישאר בינינו.

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Animator gets relief from 'solitary' work at improv classes

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

One of Alicia Eisen's passions involves working alone in a small studio curtained with black velvet. Her other passion has her up on stage every week creating plotlines and dialogue on the fly.

Eisen, 24, is an animator who takes improv classes at Second City in her spare time. Her passion for animation is something that started when she was very young.

"It was a really long process," she said of the road to becoming an animator. "I love to draw... I've been doing it my entire life. This led to me to going to a specialized art high school, where I was exposed to everything about art, every medium. It was just amazing for me. I met a lot of great people there, too, some [who were] interested in animation."

Animation, Eisen said, was not something she had considered as a career. Once she looked into it, though, she realized it was something she would love to do. From there, she put a portfolio together and began studying animation at Seneca College, where she graduated from in 2007.

"There's a lot to enjoy [about animation]," she said.

"I learned all kinds of animation while I was in school – hand drawing, stop motion, computer," she said. "With hand-drawn, you get to really develop drawing skills and you need to be accurate and fast.

"Stop motion [an animation technique to make a physically manipulated object appear to move on its own] is my favourite, what I work in mostly. I'm a very tactile person, I love to sculpt and work with my hands.

"I love the performance of [animation], expressing myself through that kind of performance."

Alicia Eisen

This love of performance is why Eisen started taking improv acting classes nearly two years ago.

"I actually started [at Second City] initially to help me get better at animating, because what sets apart really good animation is the acting in it. You can get in touch with your instincts better and trust them. Once I started doing it, I couldn't stop – it was so much fun.

"You meet a lot of really creative people, too. Some people have really boring jobs, and then they come out and they can be all crazy... It's really good because animating can be a really solitary experience. My last job... required [I] work in an individual studio surrounded by black velvet curtains. The only time to socialize was at lunch or if you saw someone on the way to the bathroom.

"Improv is a huge social, amazing thing I love being in."

Eisen's most recent job was working on Seasons 1 and 2 of the show Glenn Martin, DDS, which airs in Canada on CityTV.

Aside from being an animator, Eisen does freelance illustrating and visits schools talking about what it's like to be an animator. She also hosts workshops on everything from anatomy to stop-motion and hand-drawn animation, as well as memory sketching and painting.

"I really enjoy going to schools. When I was younger and in school, I remember an illustrator visited us. He was so awesome and really inspired me. He ended up being my life-drawing instructor in college," she said.

"I like to show kids what's possible."

Now that Eisen is no longer working on Glenn Martin, she is focusing on illustration and working on a music video, which is still in the pre-production stage.

"[I've] worked with very few breaks, and right now I have a nice bit of a bigger break. I really haven't gotten to do a lot of drawing in the past few years, but I love it!" she said.

"Now that I have a break, I'm working on my illustration portfolio... I go drawing every single day. I really want to illustrate for newspapers and magazines."

Eisen shares her drawings every day on her blog, www.frecklesfun.blogspot.com. Visit www.frecklesfunvisits.blogspot.com for information on her school visits and workshops. To get in touch with Eisen directly regarding illustration, animation, or to set up a school visit, e-mail freckles.animator@gmail.com.

Some of Eisen's illustrated creations

Jerusalem Restaurant
Wishes all our customers
a
Happy & Healthy Chanukah
955 Eglinton Ave. West 416-783-6494
4777 Leslie St. 416-490-7888

Hanna's Restaurant
Dine in / Take-Out / Catering
Two locations to serve you!
1101 Rutherford Rd.
905.889.4267
9301 Bathurst St.
905.918.0126
Happy Chanukah

PAN
Mediterranean Cuisine
"The taste of Greece at your doorstep"
Wishing you a heartefelt Chanukah Sameach
516 DANFORTH
416-466-8158
panonthedanforth.com

Dining Pleasures

Free Times Cafe
LATKES
TO GO FOR CHANUKAH
$12.95 dozen FREE Applesauce & Sour Cream
ALSO AVAILABLE AT ST. URBAIN BAGEL
895 EGLINTON WEST LOCATION ONLY
With purchase of 7 dozen latkes, get an additional dozen latkes FREE
AT FREE TIMES OR ST. URBAIN EGLINTON LOCATION ONLY
416 967-1078 FREE TIMES CAFÉ
320 COLLEGE ST.
– 2 BLOCKS WEST OF SPADINA – www.freetimescafe.com

Mr. GREEK
Mediterranean Grill
Specializing in Authentic Greek Cuisine
COME IN & EXPERIENCE OUR NEW MENU
• Chicken • Seafood • Salads • Lamb
• Pasta • Ribs • Plus Combos
9218 Yonge Street (at 16th Avenue)
905-709-9800
WE WISH ALL OUR CUSTOMERS
& FRIENDS A VERY HAPPY & HEALTHY CHANUKAH

RHAPSODY RESTAURANT
Specializing in Traditional Hungarian Cuisine
Cozy, Friendly atmosphere.
The BEST Schnitzel in town!
Live Music Fridays and Saturdays Nights
DISHES STARTING AT $15.95
Wishing all our customers a Happy & Healthy Chanukah
10152 Yonge St., Richmond Hill 905-884-0305
Visit www.rhapsodycuisine.com for coupons

Steve's Restaurant
since 1946
Serving the community for over 60 years
Family Restaurant
We are famous for our all day breakfast and fast take out!
3788 Bathurst St., Toronto
416.633.8812
Open 7am - 10pm 7 days a week
www.stevesrestaurant.ca
8100 Yonge St., Thornhill
905.889.9595
www.stevesnorth.ca
Happy & Healthy Chanukah

BÂTON ROUGE
RESTAURANT & BAR
TORONTO EATON CENTRE
Wishing You A Joyous Chanukah
George and Spiros Bozikis & Staff
Toronto Eaton Centre
216 Yonge Street
416-593-9667
www.batonrouge-eatoncentre.com
Reservation Recommended

The future of Greek Dining is Now.
HAPPY CHANUKAH ASTORIA
shish kebob house
390 Danforth Avenue at Chester subway • 416-463-2838
1970 Dundas St. East Unit 1, Mississauga • 905-615-1444 www.astoriashishkebobhouse.com

THE LOBSTER TRAP
RESTAURANT
Happy Chanukah to all our customers & friends
— Closed December 25 —
Re-Opening Sun., Dec. 26
The Lobster Trap Restaurant
The Original Lobster House
serving Torontonians for over 40 years
1962 Avenue Road • 416-787-3211
(5 blocks South of 401) www.lobstertrap.ca
ONE LOCATION ONLY
AVENUE RD. HWY. 401 YONGE ST. LAWRENCE OPEN FOR DINNER
From 5 pm
7 Days a Week
• Ample City Parking •

Dining Pleasures

TRATTORIA AMERICANA
Toni Bulloni
DINE-IN · · TAKE-OUT
HAPPY & HEALTHY CHANUKAH
TO ALL OUR CUSTOMERS & FRIENDS
Uptown
7117 Bathurst St., Thornhill
905.889.4141
Bloor/Yorkville
156 Cumberland St., Toronto
416.967.7676
Let us Host/Cater your Company Party.
Call us now to book for New Year's.
www.tonibulloni.com or www.dine.to/tonibulloni

Taste the difference You deserve the Best!!
Abruzzo Pizza
Take out, Dining, Delivery & Catering
Wishing all our customers a Happy & Healthy Chanukah
9010 Yonge St. Richmond Hill
905.881.8222 www.abruzzopizza.com

Flipper's Fish House
Wishes all their customers a Happy and Healthy Chanukah
2300 Lawrence Ave. E.
(at Kennedy) Scarborough
open 7 days a week
416-759-6671

Trapper's Restaurant
Call 416-482-6211
3479 Yonge St.
info@trappersrestaurant.ca
www.trappersrestaurant.ca
Celebrating over 25 Years in Business!
We'd like to thank our loyal patrons for their support!
- Available for your private event; Bar and Bat Mitzvahs, Corporate Events, Wedding Receptions
- Book your holiday and New Year's Eve party with us

Wishing You A Very Happy Chanukah

PANCER'S DELI Est.1957
CELEBRATING 53 YEARS!!
LET US CATER YOUR OFFICE OR HOME CHANUKAH PARTY
www.pancersdeli.com or www.toronto.com (under Top 10)
3856 Bathurst St. 416.633.1230

LLBO
La Traviata
RISTORANTE
Real Traditional Italian Cuisine
We Serve Fresh Pasta
Made by Chef Toni with our very special Signature Sauces!
Joe & Toni wish you a Happy & Healthy Chanukah.
www.latraviata.ca
852 Wilson Avenue 416.635.8891

Mezza Notte Trattoria
We would like to wish you a very Happy Chanukah!
Come in and enjoy Mezza Notte's delicious
PIZZAS, PASTAS & MORE!
Reminiscent of an authentic trattoria with wooden tables and Italian music, we invite you to share a taste of Italian culture at Mezza Notte.
CATERING AVAILABLE
Home delivery available from the Yonge/Finch location
11 Disera Drive (Bathurst/Centre) 905.707.0222
www.mezzanotte.ca
5304 Yonge Street (South of Finch) 416.222.2888
Call now to reserve for New Year's

Spice of Life

Chanukah the miracle of using the 'right' oil

By BEVERLY LEVITT
Special to The CJN

A few Chanukahs ago, prolific cookbook author Mollie Katzen politely "sautéed" latkes for her family in a desperate attempt to make them lower in fat

Low-fat latkes? Isn't that an oxymoron?

"They were downright depressing," she lamented. "Starchy, soggy and greasy! I remember latkes that were whisper thin and wildly crisp. I wanted to see pieces of dark golden brown potato, almost overcooked, and I wanted to taste fried potato and onion with a trace of salt."

She finally had to concede, "There's no way to get a potato pancake that's perfectly crisp unless you fry it. And if it's not crisp, what's the point?"

You can't blame Katzen for trying. After all, the chef and author has sold five million cookbooks, including Moosewood Cookbook (Ten Speed Press, 1977) from her groundbreaking restaurant, which introduced the concept that colourful, healthy dishes with fruits, vegetables and grains could also be delicious. In all of her eight books, rarely does she give instructions for frying Thinking back to her low-fat latke fiasco, she sighed.

"We don't eat latkes for their nutritional properties. They're a treat," she said. "Latkes are fun to make; they're delicious, but don't try to turn them into something they're not. Eat them, enjoy them; just don't gorge on them.

"It's not the fat in your diet that makes you fat," said Katzen. "A healthy diet is not about slashing fat from your diet; it's about replacing the bad fats with the good ones. It's important to know when to say yes to fat."

Because different fats begin to degrade at different temperatures, Katzen said, it's crucial to use oils that are refined for high heat such as avocado oil, almond oil, safflower oil and sunflower oil

"If I am sautéing vegetables, I use olive oil. But my favourite oil for frying at high temperatures, which is how you cook latkes, is safflower oil," said Katzen. The hotter the oil, the more likely the latkes will be light and crisp instead of heavy and soggy

"I never made latkes that were crisp enough until I discovered safflower oil," she said. "Because you can fry efficiently at a very high temperature, crisp doesn't begin to describe them. You can hear someone bite into one from two rooms away!"

MOLLIE'S ULTIMATE POTATO LATKES

Adapted from Mollie Katzen's Sunlight Café
(Hyperion, 2002)

For a delicious variation, replace up to half the potato with grated sweet potato. Potatoes may be peeled, partially peeled or left intact

The batter lasts for several days if kept in a tightly covered container in the refrigerator. Leftover potato pancakes can be reheated in an ungreased, preheated skillet over medium heat.

1 1/2 lb. potatoes (any kind)
1 medium onion
1/4 cup unbleached all-purpose flour or rice flour
1/2 to 1 tsp. salt (rounded measure)
2 large eggs, beaten
safflower oil for frying optional toppings: sour cream or thick yogurt, applesauce, fruit compote

Use a hand grater or the fine grating attachment of a food processor to grate the potato and onion together. Transfer the grated vegetables to a medium-sized bowl and sprinkle in the flour and salt. Add eggs and stir until thoroughly combined.

Place a large, deep skillet, preferably cast iron, over medium heat for about three minutes. Add enough oil to make a 1/8-in.-deep pool in the pan. Wait another minute or two to heat the oil. When the oil is hot enough to instantly sizzle a bread crumb, use a quarter-cup measure with a handle or a large spoon to scoop batter into the pan, going slowly so you don't splash hot oil. Spread each pancake out so it is very thin.

Fry the pancakes on each side for about seven or eight minutes, or until deep golden and crisp all over.

Line a platter with a triple thickness of paper towels. Remove the pancakes from the pan using a slotted metal spatula. Hold each over the pan for a moment to drain off any excess oil. Place pancakes in a single layer on the prepared platter for a few minutes before serving. There should be plenty of oil left in the pan to fry the remaining batter. If the oil smokes, spill it out and start over with new oil.

Serve hot or warm with sour cream or thick yogurt, applesauce or fruit compote. Makes 12 to 14 medium sized latkes

TUNISIAN TOMATO SOUP WITH CHICK PEAS AND LENTILS

Adapted from Mollie Katzen's Vegetable Heaven
(Hyperion 1997)

1 cup chickpeas, cooked until crisp tender
1 cup uncooked lentils, rinsed and picked over
1 cinnamon stick
2 tbsp. olive oil
4 cups minced onion
2 tbsp. minced garlic
2 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. turmeric
1 1/2 tsp. cumin seeds
2 tsp. ground cumin
2 or 3 bay leaves
6 cups chopped tomatoes, peeling and seeding optional freshly ground black pepper and cayenne to taste 3 tbsp. fresh lemon juice (or to taste)
optional toppings: yogurt, minced fresh parsley or mint, a few currants

Place cooked chickpeas and uncooked lentils in a pot with the cinnamon stick and about seven cups of water. Cook until chickpeas and lentils are perfectly tender but not mushy, about 30 minutes. Remove the cinnamon stick and drain the legumes, saving the water.

Heat the oil in a soup pot or Dutch oven. Add the onion, garlic, salt, turmeric, cumin seeds, ground cumin and bay leaves, and sauté over medium heat for 15 to 20 minutes or until onions are very soft.

Add six cups of the reserved cooking water from the lentils (supplement with fresh water if there's not enough) and the tomatoes, and bring to a boil. Lower the heat to a simmer; partially cover and cook for another 15 minutes. Fish out and discard the bay leaves.

Stir in the chickpeas and lentils; cook for about 5 minutes longer. Do not allow the legumes to become mushy. Season to taste with black pepper, cayenne and lemon juice.

Serve the soup hot. If desired, add a dollop of yogurt, a sprinkling of parsley or mint and pass a small bowl of currants Makes six servings

MIXED FRUIT COMPOTE

From Mollie Katzen's 'Sunlight Café' (Hyperion 2002)

2 lb. apples and pears, cut into 1 1/2-in. chunks (peeling is optional)
1 to 2 tbsp. lemon juice
a dash or two of salt (optional)
optional additions: dried fruit such as raisins, cranberries, apricots, cherries, pineapple (up to 1 cup); honey or pure maple syrup to taste; sweet spices such as cinnamon, cloves, allspice, ginger, cardamom or anise to taste.
optional toppings: yogurt, toasted walnuts

Place fruit in a heavy saucepan over low heat. Cover and cook slowly, checking in every five minutes or so to give it a stir. Add small amounts of water as needed.

After about 20 minutes, add the lemon juice, salt and dried fruit. Cover and cook for another 10 minutes or so, then taste. If desired, you can sweeten it, add a touch of spice or leave it plain. You can cook it even softer and mash it or keep it textured.

Serve at any temperature, plain or topped with yogurt and toasted nuts. Makes six servings.

KOSHER CITY
3468 Bathurst 416-782-6788 חנוכה שמח Specials valid to Dec 10/10 COR plus

UNGER'S FROZEN GEFILTE FISH 2 pack 7.99 900 g
HAOLAM CHEESE SLICES 3 lb / 108 slices 14.99
CHALLAH Large sweet fresh-baked THURS & FRI ONLY OUR BEST = YOUR BEST 1.99
GRYFE'S (KOSHER) BAGELS, EACH Plain, Whole Wheat, Sesame or Raisin ONLY AT KOSHER CITY PLUS .39
9" X 13" FOIL PANS 3/$1
LIEBER N.Y. CHANUKAH COINS Dairy or Parve 7.49 24 x 15 g
J & J WHIPPED CREAM CHEESE 8 oz. 3.99
DAVID'S PIZZAS (made by Gryfe's) Reg. or Whole Wheat 4.49 6-pack
CHAI FRESH BONELESS CHICKEN BREAST 5.99 lb.
CLOVER LEAF SOLID WHITE TUNA in water, 6.5 oz. 1.99
FRESCOTTI (BUTONI) PASTA SAUCE Asst varieties 3.49 25 oz.
HAOLAM STRING CHEESE 18-pc family pack 12.99

Happy Chanukah
Monica Weissmann | Investment Advisor
Call: 416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com

International

Israel & the Jewish World

At Macquarie, I can deliver more.
Monica Weissmann | Investment Advisor
Call: 416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com

PA report says Kotel not a Jewish holy site

The Israel Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian Authority report claiming the Western Wall is not a Jewish holy site and is, in fact, sacred to Muslims poses a serious question as to the Palestinian's desire to reach a peace deal, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said last Thursday.

The prime minister's rebuke came in the wake of a report released by a senior PA official last week that said the Western Wall has no religious significance to Jews and is a holy Muslim property.

Al-Mutawakil Taha, deputy minister of information in the western-backed Palestinian Authority that rules the West Bank, told the Associated Press that his five-page study published on a Palestinian government website reflected the official Palestinian position.

In a statement released by the Prime Minister's Office last Thursday, Netanyahu severely criticized the PA-sponsored study, saying that "denying the link binding the Jewish people and the Western Wall by the Palestinian information office is a travesty.

"When the Palestinian Authority denies the connection between the Jewish People and the Western Wall, it raises serious questions as to its intentions to reach a peace deal founded on coexistence and mutual recognition," the statement said, adding that the PA must cease its "distortion of historical facts and encourage a bridge to peace that would lead to a historical reconciliation between the two peoples."

The report released by the Palestinians last Wednesday disputes that the Western Wall was a retaining wall of the Temple compound, discarding centuries of documentation and archeology.

"This wall has never been a part of what is called the Jewish Temple," the report claimed. "However, it was Islamic tolerance which allowed the Jews to stand before it and cry over its loss."

The report concludes that since Jews have no claim to the area, it is holy Muslim territory and must be part of Palestinian Jerusalem.

The contention could further inflame tensions over the disputed city and draw heavy rebuke from Israeli and Jewish leaders.

Decades of archeology have shown that the Western Wall, the holiest place where Jews can pray, was a retaining wall of the compound where the two biblical Jewish Temples stood 20 centuries ago. The Al-Aqsa Mosque compound, Islam's third-holiest site, is built atop the ruins.

The latest claim about the Temples, echoing positions taken in the past by Palestinian leaders including the late Yasser Arafat, underlined the deeply held, conflicting beliefs that must be untangled if a peace accord is to be reached between Israel and the Palestinians.

Both sides say the clashing narratives are political. Israel captured east Jerusalem in the 1967 Six Day War and annexed it. Palestinians claim east Jerusalem, including the Old City, as the capital of their future state.

Taha said he wrote the report after Israeli officials on Sunday approved a five-year renovation plan for the Western Wall area. "Of course it's a political position," Taha told AP.

Israeli government spokesperson Mark Regev described the report as incitement by denying the historic Jewish connection to Jerusalem.

Einat Wilf, a legislator from the Israeli Labor party, a part of the governing coalition, said Palestinians are stupidly trying again and again to somehow create an alternative reality in which the Jewish people are strangers in this land.

Did you know that children's car seats have an expiry date?

Saviez-vous que les sièges d'auto pour enfant ont une date d'expiration ?

For Government of Canada health and safety guidelines that you need to know as a parent, visit HealthyCanadians.gc.ca/kids

Pour connaître, en tant que parent, les lignes directrices du gouvernement du Canada sur la santé et la sécurité, visitez canadiensensante.gc.ca/enfants

Government of Canada / Gouvernement du Canada

Canada

Lebanese PM seeks help from Iran with Hezbollah

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

TEHRAN — Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri arrived in Iran on Saturday seeking its help to prevent political tensions turning violent if a UN-backed tribunal indicts Hezbollah members for killing his father.

Western diplomats have said that the tribunal could indict members of Hezbollah, which is backed by Iran and Syria, by early next year for the 2005 bombing which killed former premier Rafik Hariri and 21 others.

Lebanese politicians fear the indictments could prompt confrontation and possible violence between the Shiite Hezbollah, which has denied any involvement in Hariri's killing, and allies of the Sunni prime minister.

Hariri was welcomed to Iran by Vice-President Mohammad Reza Rahimi, who vowed to deepen ties with Lebanon. "We should use all of our capacities to expand the ties… and to take giant steps in line with our interests," Rahimi said after a meeting with Hariri.

Hariri was expected to meet senior Iranian officials, including Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei and President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad during the three-day visit, Iranian television said.

Saad Hariri

Ahead of his first official visit to Iran, Hariri told Iran's state news agency that the Islamic state could play an important role in allaying tension in Lebanon.

"Iran plays an important role in the Middle East region… particularly in resolving crisis and maintaining stability in Lebanon," IRNA quoted Hariri as saying.

Ahmadinejad visited Lebanon in October, when he said Iran supported all Lebanese but highlighted the influence of Hezbollah by visiting its strongholds.

Lebanese officials hope a recent initiative by the leaders of Saudi Arabia and Syria, who back rival camps in Lebanon, will help prevent any escalation. Iran's endorsement of the Saudi-Syrian efforts is essential for their success.

"Hariri's visit… is a piece in the regional movement towards [accomplishing] the deal," Lebanese analyst Oussam Safa said, adding it will give Hariri direct access to Iran without having to go through Tehran's allies Hezbollah or Syria.

"It will help Hariri to get Iran's support in calming Hezbollah's reaction if the indictment is issued," he said.

Hezbollah's leader, Hassan Nasrallah, has urged all Lebanese to boycott the tribunal and vowed to block the arrest of any of his members. He has also called on Hariri to repudiate the tribunal, which he described as an "Israeli project."

Ghazanfar Roknabadi, Iran's ambassador to Beirut, said Hariri's visit was "historically significant" and would have positive results on Lebanon in the next few days, Iran's English language PressTV reported on Saturday.

"Iran backs unity among Lebanese political groups…. the visit will also be appreciated in Lebanon," said Roknabadi.

"The visit will expand ties between Iran and Lebanon and will surely strengthen the resistance movement against the Zionist regime," deputy Foreign Minister Reza Sheibani said the state-run Iran Daily newspaper reported.

WikiLeaks release not a problem, Netanyahu says

JTA

JERUSALEM — The secret documents released by WikiLeaks will not negatively affect Israel, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said.

Israeli leaders can feel comfortable with what has been revealed in the first batch of documents made public on Sunday because there is very little difference between what Israel said in private discussions with U.S. leaders and what it told its citizens.

The documents did show that what many Arab leaders said privately and what they said publicly, particularly on the subject of Iran, are significantly different. For example, many Arab leaders called on the United States, in some cases repeatedly, to attack Iran.

"More and more countries realize that Iran is the central threat, but the countries in the region have a gap because they publicly are attached to the Israeli-Arab conflict, but privately they realize that this narrative is not true. They realize that the central threat is from Iran, and now this has been revealed even though it was known," Netanyahu said Sunday in a speech before an editors' conference in Tel Aviv.

"It can eliminate the theory that Israel is the obstacle to peace and show that we have mutual interests," Netanyahu added.

The United States briefed several of its allies on the documents over the weekend. Israel had already been told last week that it could be mentioned in the release of classified U.S. documents.

The WikiLeaks website publishes classified documents from anonymous sources and leaks. It released about 250,000 secret diplomatic cables on Sunday. "Usually there is a gap between what is said in public and what is said in private, but regarding Israel, this gap is not large," Netanyahu said. "Regarding other countries, the gaps are extremely large."

Netanyahu said he was not told in advance the specifics of what was in the documents.

State Department legal adviser Harold Koh released a letter to WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange saying that the publication of the documents is illegal and demanding a halt to their publication.

The publication of the documents will "place at risk the lives of countless innocent individuals… place at risk ongoing military operations… [and] place at risk ongoing co-operation between countries," the letter reportedly said.

The letter called on WikiLeaks to return the documents to the United States and destroy any copies.

'True meaning of tikun olam'

Continued from page 1

Haiti; the Alyn pediatric and adolescent rehabilitation centre, which sent a delegation of physiotherapists to treat children and provide training to local medical health professionals, and Herzog Hospital, which offered post-trauma counselling and treatment.

IsraAID's operations in Haiti are typical of the organization's multi-faceted approach to providing assistance, its founder, Shachar Zahavi, said.

"IsraAID brings together Jewish and Israeli NGOs under one roof. The idea is to harvest all aspects of know-how in order to take a holistic approach," Zahavi said. "Our concept is to help our member organizations enhance their activities in developing countries by partnering with other member organizations."

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto has supported several IsraAID initiatives since 2004, financing work with the Sudanese refugees in Chad, the Somali refugees in Kenya, the tsunami victims in Southeast Asia, the typhoon victims in the Philippines and Burma, and earthquake victims in Peru.

"The Toronto federation is one of our main supporters," Zahavi said. "I am very happy about this. It's something that connects us to the Toronto Jewish community."

The cholera clinic also has volunteers from Toronto, with a handful of Toronto physicians joining their Israeli and Haitian colleagues at the clinic, on a rolling basis.

"Now that we have Canadians and Israelis working together in the field, under one Jewish umbrella, I'm even happier," Zahavi said. "This is something we always aspired to."

"We have a long-standing relationship with IsraAID because they do great work," Sokolsky said. "They are a very effective organization in getting relief to people."

Not only is IsraAID quick to respond to emergency situations, Sokolsky said, they are also expert strategists. If not for such strategizing, they would not have had the infrastructure in place at the clinic in time to respond to the onslaught of new cases. "Not only were they among the first on the ground in Haiti, but they are strategic. They think. They plan."

IsraAID also focuses on long-term sustainable solutions, Sokolsky added. "While other organizations have come and gone [since the earthquake], IsraAID organizations have been able to switch from immediate to long-term relief."

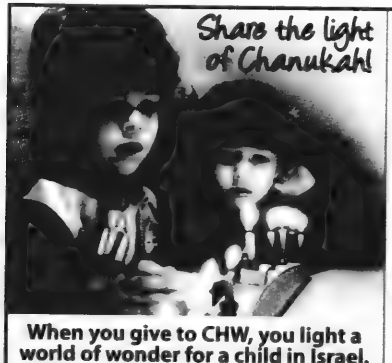
The cholera clinic is a good example. Although it's currently being manned by Israeli and Canadian medical personnel, the focus is on training Haitian nurses, physicians and community workers, in order to ensure that the clinic will continue to operate after the foreign volunteers return home.

The hope is that once the number of cholera cases has diminished, the clinic will be transformed into a non-emergency family medical clinic that will house medical personnel with different specialties, such as optometrists, gynecologists and dentists, to serve the population of Leogane and the surrounding communities.

Another key reason for the partnership between the federation and IsraAID is the positive image that IsraAID projects of Israel, Sokolsky said. "We like IsraAID, because it has the double impact of doing excellent work and providing a face for Israeli citizenry in foreign countries. It's important for people to get an accurate picture of the average Israeli, as the portrayal in the media is not always so accurate."

He pointed to another advantage in the partnership: it represents a new chapter in the philanthropic relationship between Israel and the Diaspora. "Here we are funding an NGO in Israel to do its work in communities outside of Israel. Instead of sending aid to Israel, we are partnering with Israelis to serve the entire world," Sokolsky said.

"IsraAID demonstrates the true meaning of tikun olam, creating a better world by saving so many lives through remarkable acts of kindness."



When you give to CHW, you light a world of wonder for a child in Israel.
Learn more at www.chw.ca or call 1.866.937.9431

CHW
Canadian Hadassah-WIZO (CHW) wishes all our members, volunteers and friends a very Happy Chanukah!
Thank you for your continued support of CHW's programs and projects for Children, Healthcare and Women in Israel and Canada.
Marla Dan, CHW National President
CHW National Officers
Alana Ianson, CHW Executive Director

Israel Briefs

Palestinians eyeing one state, poll finds

A majority of Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza view the two-state solution as a precursor to one Palestinian state, a new poll found. The poll, sponsored by the Israel Project, found in a series of questions to respondents that most of the Palestinians have not reconciled themselves to the long-term existence of the Jewish state. Although 23 per cent accept the statement that "Israel has a permanent right to exist as a homeland for the Jewish People," two-thirds chose the statement, "Over time Palestinians must work to get back all the land for a Palestinian state." Thirty per cent agreed with the statement that "the best goal is for a two-state solution that keep two states living side by side," while 60 per cent chose, "The real goal should be to start with two states but then move it to all being one Palestinian state." Some 854 Palestinians – 538 in the West Bank and 316 from Gaza – participated in face-to-face interviews from Oct. 4 to 15. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

New barrier along border with Egypt

Engineers fanned out along Israel's southern border last week to prepare the ground for the construction of the barrier and electronic fence. The nearly $375-million (US) project is being undertaken in order to prevent migrant workers from entering Israel, as well as to deter terrorists and drug smugglers. Large parts of the border between Israel and Egypt are demarcated with fencing. The new barrier will be constructed first along the main infiltration routes near Gaza and Eilat, and will include two layers of fencing, including barbed wire. Hundreds of illegal migrants from Africa enter Israel each week. Nearly 11,000 have entered Israel since January, according to Israel's Population and Immigration Authority. Most are searching for work, though some 200 asylum seekers have been granted refugee status in recent years. Dozens of migrants who paid smugglers thousands of dollars to help them cross the border from Egypt into Israel have been shot and killed by Egyptian soldiers.

Rabin's son presents plan

Yuval Rabin, the son of the late prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, has joined forces with businessman and social activist Koby Huberman in order to advocate for the Israeli Peace Initiative, or IPI, a response to the 2002 Arab Peace Initiative.

In an article published on the website bitterlemons.org, Rabin and Huberman propose that instead of responding to the Arab peace plan, the Israeli government should say "yes" by presenting a parallel proposal to end the conflict – the IPI. The two have spent several months promoting the IPI among political figures, academics and business people in Israel and, at the same time, tested the reaction of Palestinian and Arab figures to the principles of the initiative in an unofficial manner.

Iran accuses Israel

Iran has accused Israel of attacks on two of the country's nuclear scientists. One Iranian senior nuclear scientist was killed and another injured Monday in two separate attacks in Tehran. The government of Iran immediately blamed the CIA and the Mossad for the bombing attacks, which reportedly were carried out by men on motorcycles. Iranian state television blamed "Zionist agents," according to reports. Majid Shahriari, who was killed, and Fereydoon Abbasi Davani, who was injured in the attacks, were physics lecturers at Tehran's Shahid Beheshti University. The attacks took place near the university. The scientists were senior figures in Iran's nuclear program, according to reports. "The Zionist regime this time shed the blood of university professor Dr. Majid Shahriari to curb Iran's progress," the office of President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said in a statement posted on its website, according to AFP. Shahriari was reportedly working on a nuclear project for Iran's Atomic Energy Agency. The attacks come just days after Iran said its first nuclear plant was fully loaded with fuel rods and awaiting several tests before going online for the first time.

– JTA and Ha'aretz

Three charged in Auschwitz sign theft

JTA

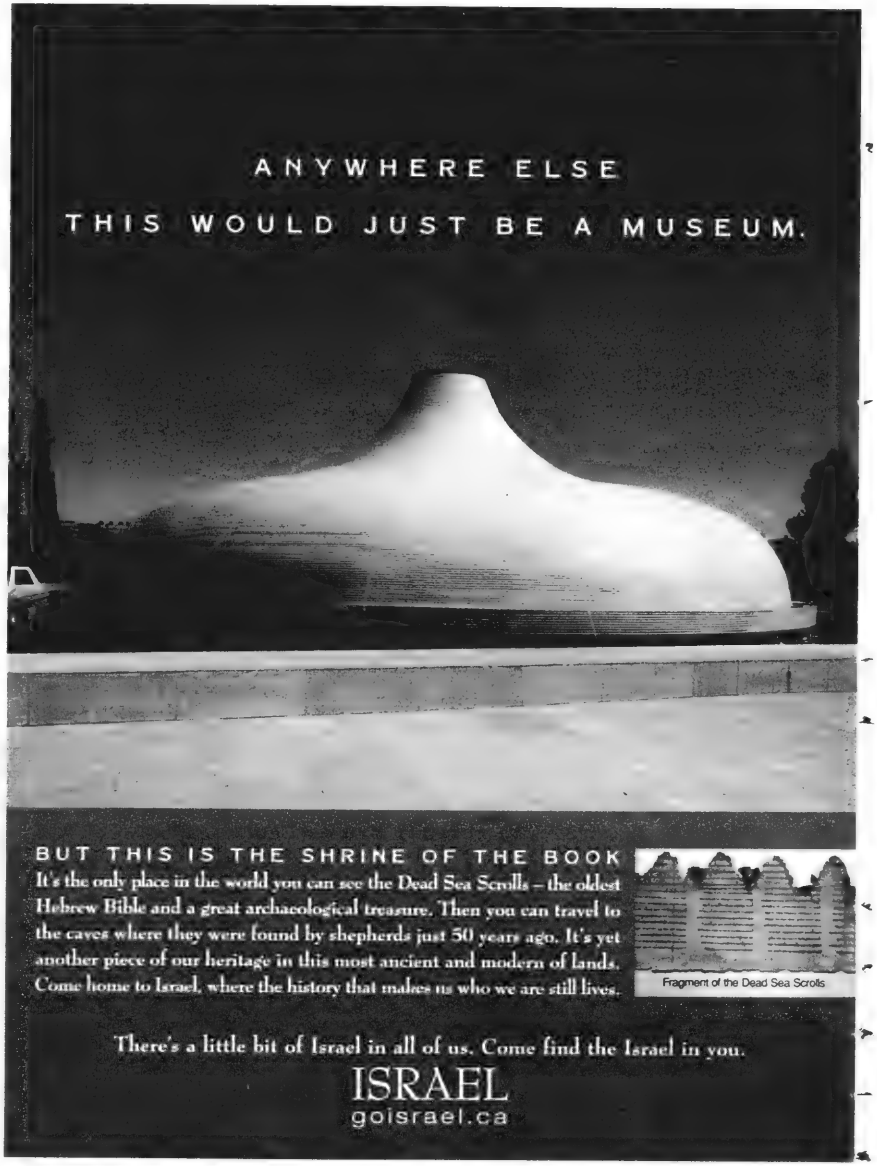
WARSAW – Polish prosecutors charged a Swedish man and two Polish men in the theft of the "Arbeit Macht Frei" sign from the front gate of Auschwitz.

The Swede, Anders Hogstrom, a neo-Nazi leader who allegedly organized the theft as a middleman between a neo-Nazi buyer and five Polish thieves, reportedly struck a plea bargain with Polish prosecutors on Thursday. Under the terms of the deal, Hogstrom will serve 32 months in jail in his native Sweden, the French news service AFP reported Thursday.

The iron "work makes you free" sign, measuring five metres across, was stolen on Dec. 18, 2009 and recovered across the country 72 hours later, cut into three pieces.

Hogstrom, who was arrested in February in Stockholm and extradited to Poland in April, founded the National Socialist Front, a Swedish neo-Nazi movement, in 1994. He could have faced 10 years in prison on the charges. It is not known whether the Polish court in Krakow will accept the terms of the plea bargain.

Three of the thieves have already been sentenced to two-and-a-half years in prison each.



ANYWHERE ELSE
THIS WOULD JUST BE A MUSEUM.
BUT THIS IS THE SHRINE OF THE BOOK
It's the only place in the world you can see the Dead Sea Scrolls – the oldest Hebrew Bible and a great archaeological treasure. Then you can travel to the caves where they were found by shepherds just 50 years ago. It's yet another piece of our heritage in this most ancient and modern of lands. Come home to Israel, where the history that makes us who we are still lives.
Fragment of the Dead Sea Scrolls
There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca

Program aims to keep 'failing' students in school

By JENNY HAZAN
CJN Israel Bureau

JERUSALEM — The Azrieli Institute for Educational Empowerment program in Jerusalem was launched last week.

Representatives of the Azrieli Foundation, the Jerusalem Foundation and the Municipality of Jerusalem gathered at the Jerusalem Cinemateque last Tuesday for the launch.

The empowerment program, already in operation in 14 other cities across Israel, aims to keep high-risk seventh, eighth and ninth graders in school. "This is such a wonderful program, and I am so pleased to partner with the Jerusalem Foundation [to bring it to Jerusalem]," said David Azrieli.

The Azrieli Foundation is contributing 60 per cent of the initial $1 million required to run the program in five Jerusalem-area schools for the next five years. The remaining 40 per cent is being covered jointly by the Jerusalem Foundation and the Municipality of Jerusalem.

The program takes a three-pronged approach: it offers students who have failed at least four subjects, and whose admission to high school is at risk, academic assistance in the core subjects of Hebrew, English and mathematics; social assistance to strengthen communication skills; professional guidance for parents, to teach them how to take a more proactive role in their children's education.

"We are trying not only to educate the kids to help them matriculate, but to catch them in time before they end up on the street," said Azrieli. "We catch them at a time of crisis in their lives, when they're failing in school and headed toward dropping out. This program is aimed at preventing them from dropping out and encouraging them to stay in school."

Nadim Shibam, director of the community and society projects department at the Jerusalem Foundation, said that "the program has a real chance of success because it targets the unique needs and problems of these children, including significant investment of extra hours for learning, coupling it with personal assistance for parents."

Over the last year, the Jerusalem Foundation has invested 12 million shekels ($3.3 million US) in educational projects in Jerusalem.

"[This program will give] these children the tools to successfully complete 12 years of schooling," Shibam said.

The program, which started in Be'er Sheva in 2004 and has assisted more than 1,700 students in schools in Carmiel, Eilat, Kiryat Malachi, Akko, Dimona, Ofakim and Maalot, has a proven record of success.

David Azrieli

The Azrieli Foundation's annual report for the 2008-09 academic year reported that from among 231 graduates last year, 172 (74.2 per cent) were referred to a full matriculation track and 19 (8.2 per cent) were referred to an advanced matriculation track. All students enrolled in the program improved their academic standing by an average of 20 grade points, with 96 per cent of them reporting that the program helped them with their studies. In addition, 70 per cent of participating students said they had more friends, and 92 per cent reported an increase in their parents' interest in their studies.

According to Meir Avitan, general manager of the Azrieli Foundation, more than 90 per cent of past program participants graduated high school and matriculated, and no program participants dropped out of school.

In Jerusalem, the program will assist 128 seventh- and eighth-grade students at the Greenberg Junior High School in Gilo; Rapaport Junior High and Ort Spanian in Gonen; Bet Hinuch in Katamon; Masorti in Talpiot.

The hope is to continue expanding the program in the future, both to additional schools in Jerusalem and to other cities in Israel.

The Azrieli Foundation also runs programs in architecture, Holocaust education and commemoration, scientific and medical research, developmental disabilities, and the arts.

"Education is foremost, not just to me but in Jewish life. [Jewish] kids hundreds of years ago knew how to read a Siddur and were educated while others were not," said Azrieli. "The effect that education has on people is enormous."

You can't see ISRAEL from a tour bus.
You've got to breathe it,
eat it,
hike it,
dance it,
sing it,
live it,
love it.

EXPERIENCE ISRAEL WITH YOUNG JUDAEA.

For more information on all of our programs, visit us at www.yjisrael.org or call 800.725.0612.

יהדות הצעיר
YOUNGJUDAEA

©2010 Hadassah, The Women's Zionist Organization of America, Inc. Hadassah and Young Judaea are registered trademarks of Hadassah, The Women's Zionist Organization of America, Inc.

Agreement allows NZ kosher slaughter of poultry

By RON KAMPEAS
JTA

SYDNEY, Australia – New Zealand's Jewish community has won an 11th-hour agreement from the government to allow the kosher slaughter of poultry.

Lawyers acting for the community were due to begin a legal battle on Nov. 29 against the government's controversial ban on shchitah in the High Court in Wellington.

The case was adjourned following an agreement Friday with Agriculture Minister David Carter, who in May rejected a recommendation that shchitah be exempt from the new animal welfare code. Under the new agreement, kosher slaughtering of poultry will be allowed, although negotiations regarding the kosher slaughtering of lamb are ongoing.

The code mandates that all commercially slaughtered animals must first be stunned, thus rendering shchitah illegal.

'Very relieved' by the development

A statement issued by the heads of the community on Friday afternoon stated: "Until those negotiations are concluded, or the matter is determined in court, the interim orders which were previously granted enabling the shchitah of lamb will continue."

New Zealand Jewish Council president Stephen Goodman said he was "very relieved" by the development.

"It is disappointing that it took legal action for the government to come to a negotiated solution," he said. "The whole process has been extremely stressful to the New Zealand Jewish community as well as costing over $NZ300,000 that could, and should, have been applied to reinforcing the community rather than arguing with our government over our right to live here."

Shchitah has been carried out in New Zealand since 1843. The island nation on the edge of the Diaspora is home to about 7,000 Jews.

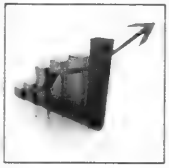
Winnipeg lawyer invests in Israeli real estate

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Winnipeg lawyer Howard Tennenhouse has been travelling to and from Israel for 31 years now, visiting relatives, seeing the sights and, more recently, dabbling in the real estate market.

Actually, it's a little more than dabbling as the 54-year-old attorney has compiled an impressive roster of properties he has bought and sold across the country. He's even contemplating turning it into a second career.

He recently sold one of the first units he acquired, a small apartment in Zichron Yaacov, just south of Haifa, for 425,000 shekels (US $116,000). In 2005, he paid $70,000 (all figures US) for it.



His first purchase, also in Zichron Yaacov, was his "dream home," a 120-square-metre "penthouse" with a view of the southern end of the Carmel Mountain range. He recently sold that one as well, and in the period from his first purchase to today, he's bought – and sold – seven or eight other Zichron properties, four more in Ashdod and a couple of properties in Eilat. He's also developing a "villa" (a semi-detached unit) in Ashkelon, a "tzimmer" (an upscale bed and breakfast) and a restaurant in Zichron Yaacov and a property in Atlit. One of his big projects is developing condominiums on a small irregularly shaped plot of land near the Old Port in Jaffa, Israel's hottest market, that cost him $1.2 million. And there are others.

In Winnipeg, he owns a 2,200-square-foot bungalow – that's it.

It took a while, but the real estate bug has bitten Tennenhouse in a big way. When he retires in three years, he plans on moving to Israel permanently and relying on real estate to keep him busy and provide an income.

So far, he's made quite a success of it. The real estate market in Israel has been booming since he got involved six years ago, Tennenhouse said.

When he first got into the market, he wasn't looking at making it a business. An ardent Zionist, he had dreamed of moving to the Holy Land and viewed Rishon as the ideal retirement venue – it was close to relatives who lived in Kibbutz Ma'anit, was alongside Highway 6 and the north south train line. After doing his due diligence, he travelled to Israel and purchased his first property with that in mind.

Later, to raise capital, he invited seven or eight partners – Jewish guys he knew in Winnipeg – to put their money into Zichron real estate. "They were interested not just in money – they all had money – but in owning a piece of property in Israel. They didn't do it for the cash, but they all made some money."

Eventually, he bought out his partners. On one of his trips to Israel, on the night before he was to fly home to Winnipeg, he came across an ad by a real estate agent in Ashdod. He called him and the two developed a rapport. On a subsequent trip, Tennenhouse purchased his first Ashdod property for $92,000, "just to test the waters." Today, it's worth $170,000, he said. He acquired a 2,200-square-foot penthouse for $275,000 four years ago. It's worth more than $500,000 today. Another of his properties earns $1,500 a month in rent from a cellular tower on top.

"Ashdod is red hot," Tennenhouse said. "It's developing as a city. It has a great beach, they're developing the infrastructure, Russian and Ethiopian immigrants are moving there and they need homes."

But isn't Ashdod close to Gaza, he's asked.

"What isn't close to Gaza?" Tennenhouse replied. "If it's not close to Gaza, then it's close to Lebanon. If it's not close to Lebanon, its next to the West Bank."

Ashkelon, even closer to Gaza, is likewise developing a strong real estate market, he said. He's building a semi-detached "flat" there, in effect riding the coattails of his real estate agent and friend, Roni Sharon, whose family is in the development business and is constructing the units.

In Israel, personal relationships are vital, Tennenhouse said. Not only do you have to know the market, you have to know the right people who in turn know other right people and are able to navigate the bureaucracy and obtain all necessary permits and financing.

After having a bad experience with one of the big name Israeli financial institutions, his lawyer connected him to the Bank of Jerusalem, which provided the funding for his forays into the market. In Israel, you're required to put down 30 per cent cash on residential properties and 40 per cent on commercial. "They didn't restrict me in getting new properties," he said.

All the properties are rented and that income pays the mortgages, he said. Ashdod is so hot, he added, "when a tenant leaves, I can rent it out within 24 hours."

Recently, Tennenhouse teamed with Annabelle Almagor to establish Habitat, a boutique real estate company. In addition to employing a number of agents involved in buying and selling properties, the company is marketing his Jaffa project. It's also involved in developing and marketing one particularly large deal, a $100-million luxury apartment project.

Almagor is well connected in Israel, he said. She once served as executive assistant to President Shimon Peres, her father was influential in the Labor party and security agencies, and she grew up knowing many prominent Israeli figures. Her father established a settlement in Sinai, where her brother was born – the first Jewish baby born there in 2,000 years.

Tennenhouse, who visits Israel three or four times a year but calls there every day or two, said the success of his law practice has given him the wherewithal to invest in Israeli real estate. A big part of his practice is representing First Nations clients who received compensation for the abuse they suffered in the residential schools scandal. His clients benefited from the $2.9 billion (Cdn) compensation fund set up for them and his fees have pretty much gone into real estate.

"The Natives have become the greatest Zionists in the world," he quipped.

As for himself, "Once I retire, [real estate] will be my income-producing vehicle and more importantly, I love it. It's fun," he said.

"It's fun to create something from nothing and to meet interesting people."

Housing market is cooling: ministry data

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

Data released by Israel's Finance Ministry suggests the country's housing market is cooling.

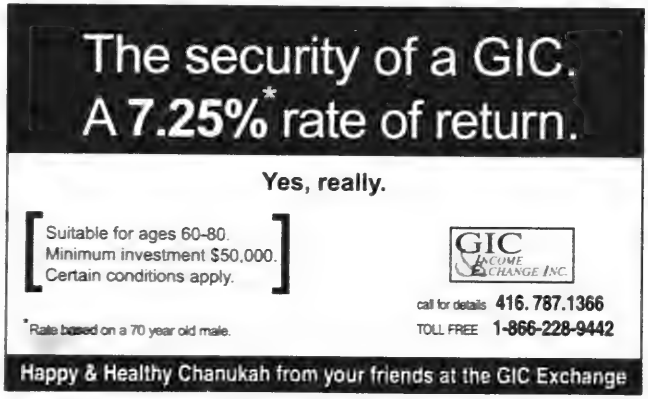
In the third quarter of 2010, which runs from July to September, the number of home sales and even prices dropped, the ministry said. The trend began earlier in the year, but the new data suggest that the process is gaining momentum.

Compared to the second quarter, housing sales fell two per cent. Compared to the third quarter of last year, however, the fall was a much more impressive 19 per cent. Nearly 23,000 homes were sold in the third quarter of 2010, the lowest figure for that quarter since 2006, according to the data.

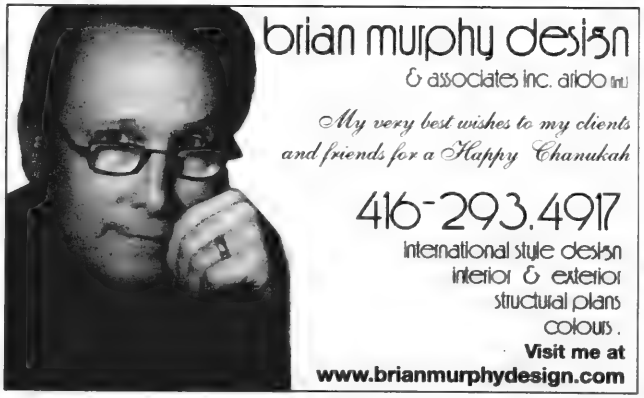
This year's figures already reflected a drop in demand for new homes, but for the first time in 2010 sales of existing homes are falling sharply, according to the third-quarter data. The fall comes as lenders are demanding stricter terms, while the average wage has declined compared to 2009.

The average price of new homes in the third quarter was off 2.9 per cent compared to the second, and followed a decline from the first quarter. The most recent three-month figures also reflect a slowdown for the fifth straight quarter in new-home sales. When compared to the third quarter of 2009, new-home sales tumbled 15.3 per cent, with the purchase of 5,300 new residences.

The Association of Contractors and Builders, however, disputes the Finance Ministry's new home-sale data for the third quarter, saying there has not been a steep decline.



The security of a GIC.
A 7.25%* rate of return.
Yes, really.
Suitable for ages 60-80.
Minimum investment $50,000.
Certain conditions apply.
*Rate based on a 70 year old male.
GIC Income Exchange Inc.
call for details 416.787.1366
TOLL FREE 1-866-228-9442
Happy & Healthy Chanukah from your friends at the GIC Exchange



CJN Profile

Camp counsellor is running on empathy

'Zak' Maresky enjoys working with kids with special needs

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Preconceptions abounded when Isaac "Zak" Benjamin Maresky first decided to enrol as a counsellor at the Hebrew Academy for Special Children (HASC) camp in upstate New York in 2008.

He got wind of the camp through the New York-based National Jewish Council for Disabilities (a.k.a. Yachad), which he was exposed to during after-school programming while attending Bnei Akiva Or Chaim High School in Toronto.

Maresky, who was 18 at the time, only knew that he wanted to help young, Jewish kids with special needs enjoy their summer. What he didn't know was the effect this experience would have on him.

"It seemed to me that most people I knew in high school who were involved helping kids with special needs in some way, their next step was always to move on to HASC. So I applied too," he said.

The non-profit camp, which each year hosts more than 300 children and adults with physical and developmental disabilities for a seven-week stay on its grounds in the Catskill Mountains, aims to provide its campers with a "sleep-away camp experience, just like many of their siblings and friends," its website says.

But the camp also acknowledges that it couldn't achieve this goal without the dedicated help of volunteers like Maresky, who spend 24 hours a day with their campers, bonding with them, creating enduring friendships and growing as individuals.

For Maresky, who has spent the last two summers at the camp, the impact on his perspective on life has been tangible. So much so, that he's entered the ING Miami Marathon to run its 42-kilometre course on Jan. 30, 2011, in an effort to raise money for HASC.

He's never run a marathon before. In fact, Maresky told The CJN that before this year, he'd only ever run about an eight-kilometre stretch, back when he would run during gym and cross-country at Or Chaim in Toronto.

Since enrolling in the marathon as part of a HASC contingent of runners, he's been jogging 15 to 20 kilometres a week as part of his training in the hope of completing the competition.

Maresky said running for HASC in Miami is "a cause that's worth everything. Those kids go there and flourish and grow."

So far, he's raised more than $2,000 in sponsorship money for his run and hopes to have a lot more for the camp before he laces up his running shoes for the upcoming marathon.

Zak Maresky, right in both pictures, with Jon, one of the people he's bonded with at camp.

Zak with Jon at one of the camp's many functions.

Maresky said he knew working at HASC was something he needed to do after growing up with a cousin who had cerebral palsy.

Though he never had to care for his cousin as he did for his campers at HASC, Maresky said he could now empathize better with his cousin's condition, and he understands that people with special needs are just as dynamic and full of life as anyone else.

"My campers were like me. They loved sports, running. The experience affected my attitude about people with disabilities. They're such great people, and it just makes you want to help them even more," he said.

After the marathon, Maresky said he plans to finish his degree in chemistry at York University and then move to Israel to go to law school and enrol in the IDF, where his two brothers are already serving.

In the future, he said he wants to continue supporting HASC and contributing to it in any way he can.

"Once I graduate and finish all my schooling, I'd like to become a serious donor. For now, I feel like I'm doing the most I can directly," Maresky said, adding that he just wants to "spread the word" about the camp to anyone that will listen or potentially donate to its cause.

Though Canadians may not have heard about HASC, it is a well-recognized institution in the States, he said.

"The camp and the people are so fantastic, I don't know what else to say."

For more information visit, http://www.hasc.net/marathon/my/isaacbm

PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT?

For those waiting for the last minute to do effective, year-end tax planning - it's here!

What are you waiting for? Better late than not at all!

Those born in 1939 must convert their Registered Funds to an income stream before the end of the year.
If you still have contribution room and do not have a younger spouse, now will be the last time to make further contributions for deductions this year!
You can even pre-pay contributions for future years if you will continue to have earned income!
There are new rules regarding the Pension Income Credit and Income Splitting that could save you taxes, but you must act now to create qualifying income before the end of this year!
Maximize your income while minimizing taxes for RRIFs and LIFs.
There are also very successful strategies for small business owners.

Let us take the confusion out of Financial Planning!

Happy Hanukkah! Enjoy it with your loved ones.

For a free consultation with no obligation, call (416) 221-0060

MUTUAL FUNDS PROVIDED BY GOLDSTEIN FINANCIAL INVESTMENTS INC

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
President

Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Michelle Goldstein Zaldin
Executive Vice President

Social Networking @ [illegible] for the :-) generation
YT

Health & Lifestyles

"YOU DIDN'T GET MY CHEQUE? IT'S IN THE MAIL, HONEST!"
Sound Familiar?
Michael Lebovic, Paralegal
25 Years in Debt Recovery (416) 784-3770 x 224
www.theydidntpay.com • theydidntpay@cclsinc.ca

Issue of being gay and Orthodox addressed

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

A panel held last year on being gay in the Orthodox community, organized by Yeshiva University and Wurzweiler School of Social Work, was a watershed moment, says Rabbi Nati Helfgot of Yeshivat Chovevei Torah in New York.

"A number of students spoke about their pain and the problem of wanting to be part of the Orthodox community but not fitting in," he said at a recent conference, Renewing our Spirit, sponsored by Torah in Motion. Also speaking was Rabbi Barry Freundel of Kesher Israel Synagogue in Washington D.C. The moderator was Elliott Malamet.

"Many of us were taken aback after the panel, however, because a number of prominent voices spoke out [in favour of] reparative therapy [which attempts to change the sexual orientation of a person from homosexual or bisexual to heterosexual]," Rabbi Helfgot said.

"This became presented as the official Orthodox voice. The reaction to the panel was so over the top that the real Orthodox response was to hide the issue. [Some of us] felt it was up to us to react. We felt that even though there are many issues, this is the issue we relate to right now."

The result, he said, was the Statement of Principles on the Place of Jews with a Homosexual Orientation in our Community.

Written mainly by Rabbi Helfgot with the help of other rabbis, educators and mental health professionals, the statement, released last July, "is a balance between Halachah and the desire to rid the community of the shaming of people.

"[We attempted to address] how we, as a community that is committed to the ideal of heterosexual marriage, can make space for those who want to be part of the community, yet feel alienated. The statement left it up to individual synagogues if they want to be inclusive," said Rabbi Helfgot.

The authors of the statement did not advocate reparative therapy, he said.

Rather, the statement affirms "the religious right of those with a homosexual orientation to reject therapeutic approaches they reasonably see as useless or dangerous."

Rabbi Freundel, who in 1986 wrote the article Homosexuality and Judaism in the Journal of Halachah and Contemporary Society, questioned whether the statement of principles was necessary if the Torah already commands sensitivity. "Is the Torah insufficient to engender values?"

Rabbi Helfgot agreed that the value of sensitivity is in the Torah, but he said that "somehow in Jewish history, certain things have been de-emphasized. We can't deny that while it is not acceptable to berate someone, it happens."

Rabbi Freundel said that he has no problem with gay couples belonging to his shul, as long as they don't openly announce their homosexuality.

"The shul should distinguish between private and public. Two women who are very public together got involved in our sisterhood. We asked them not to discuss homosexual issues in shul. It's no different than [asking them] not to talk about non-kosher food. Don't bring in something that is anti-halachic and advocate it."

Rabbi Helfgot said there is an issue of where to draw the line. "Does a person have to live a closeted life to be part of Orthodox life? They don't want to live a lie."

He said that we live in a world "where gays are out there, and we can't go back. We are inundated with sexual openness, and this statement doesn't change that.

"I believe that sexuality is a spectrum. There is a percentage of people who are not committed, but there are people who won't change. That is the reality of the world we live in."

FREE THE CHILDREN: In conjunction with Free the Children Organization, students at Leo Baeck Day School's south campus (in Holy Blossom Temple) silenced their voices to show solidarity with children around the world who live under oppression or in poverty. Teachers used Smart boards, cue cards and other techniques to make this a unique day for all. Here students display their messages of hope written on cutouts of children, symbolizing the connection.

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

"I love my eCJN!"
download yours @ www.cjnews.com
The Canadian Jewish news

This Chanukah, treat yourself to eight silent nights!
Oral Appliance Therapy is a proven alternative in appropriate cases*
416-224-9998
Wishing you a Healthy & Peaceful Chanukah
Les & Rona Priemer, Family & Staff
40 SHEPPARD AVE. W., SUITE 100
TORONTO, ONTARIO M2N 6K9
DR. LES PRIEMER
VISIT OUR NEW WEBSITE
dentalsnoringsolutions.ca
*The physician dealing with the condition of sleep disordered breathing takes the lead regarding the timing and placement of any necessary treatment.

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !
ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER
Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida
You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.
We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.
Call now for reservations
(954) 802 - 8100

U.S. could face a crisis if Israel attacks Iran's nuclear sites

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Five crises since World War II have drawn the United States deeper into the morass of Middle East politics. President Barack Obama currently faces the distinct possibility that a sixth crisis in the near future, in which Israel attacks Iran in a desperate attempt to cripple or decapitate its budding nuclear program, will further envelop the United States in the deadly vortex of Middle East animosities.

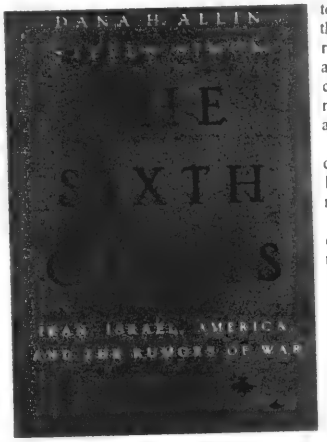
This unnerving scenario is the subject of a timely and incisive book, The Sixth Crisis: Iran, Israel, America, and the Rumors of War (Oxford University Press), by Dana H. Allin and Steven Simon, both of whom are specialists in U.S. foreign policy.

Long before Iran's nuclear ambitions became a topic of heated debate in Jerusalem and Washington, D.C., the United States was thrown into five crises whose lasting effects reshaped the Middle East.

They were as follows: the 1956 Suez War, the Six Day War in 1967, the Iranian revolution in 1979, Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in 1990 followed by the Gulf War in 1991, and the Al Qaeda terrorist attack on the United States in 2001, which triggered still ongoing wars and insurgencies in Afghanistan and Iraq.

As a new year beckons, the United States faces a sixth crisis. As the authors put it, "There is every reason to worry that, in the coming years or even months, a fearful Israel will conclude that it is cornered with no choice but to launch a preventive war aimed at crippling Tehran's nuclear infrastructure and thereby [remove], or at least forestall, what most Israelis consider a threat to the Jewish state's very existence."

The worst-case scenario, in which Israel attacks Iran, is not implausible, given what they describe as Iran's "annihilationist" agenda with respect to Israel. Living in the shadow of the Holocaust, Israel has twice acted militarily to derail its enemies' nuclear programs. In 1981, to international condemnation, Israel destroyed Iraq's Osirak reactor. And in 2007, without ever acknowledging it, Israel obliterated a nuclear facility under construction in Syria.



Allin and Simon blame Iran for sowing the seeds of this crisis-in-the-making. They argue that Iran's harsh and unrelenting rhetoric about Israel's illegitimacy and impermanence, as well as its unbridled support of Hezbollah and Hamas, is creating a full-blown "mood of panic" in Israel.

Iran has been consistently hostile to Israel since the Islamic revolution, but only in recent years has Israel expressed real concern.

For about the first two decades after the fall of Iran's pro-western Pahlavi monarchy, Israel was slow to recognize "the sea change" brought about by the overthrow of the shah, they say. Indeed, Israel secretly sold weapons to Iran in the 1980s.

Two events changed Israel's outlook on Iran drastically.

In 2002, an Iranian exile group disclosed that Iran was actively assembling a nuclear device. Subsequently, the United Nations' International Atomic Energy Agency confirmed that Iran was building an enrichment plant in Natanz and a heavy water factory in Arak.

The "crude posturing and incendiary rhetoric" of Iran's current president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, closed the case as far as Israel is concerned.

When these developments are factored into Israel's long-standing policy that a nuclear weapons capability in the region, other than its own, would pose an intolerable threat to its survival, one can perhaps understand why Israel might be tempted to deploy brute force against Iran's nuclear facilities.

Claiming that Israel is capable of carrying out a unilateral attack, Allin and Simon discuss three plausible routes Israeli aircraft might use.

Israel's decision to launch a raid on Iran would depend on several factors. The first would be its assessment of U.S. and international resolve to block Iran's pursuit of nuclear arms. Additional considerations would turn on two other issues. Would an attack buy time for Israel, given its high risks and costs? What would be its impact on Israel's key relationship with the United States?

Assuming that an Israeli attack would touch off a regional war, Allin and Simon conclude that it would be driven by Iran's "recklessness" and Israel's "fears."

Although they understand why Israel might be forced to resort to military means to stop Iran from acquiring a nuclear arsenal, they believe that force would not be materially useful and might even be counter-productive.

In the event of an attack, they observe, the United States would become embroiled in an Iranian retaliatory strike against Israel, which could be extremely serious in terms of casualties and property damage.

Iran would probably retaliate against American regional interests, particularly in Iraq and Afghanistan. Oil prices would rise, heightening concerns about energy supplies. Washington's outreach to the Muslim world, as spelled out by Obama in 2009 in a speech in Cairo, would be imperilled.

Iranians, even those opposed to Iran's theocratic regime, would rally around the flag for nationalistic reasons. Iran would redouble its efforts to weaponize its nuclear program and very likely succeed in resurrecting it, they claim.

Furthermore, progress toward resolving Israel's dispute with the Palestinians would be stopped dead in its tracks, especially if Israeli jets overflew Jordan and Saudi Arabia to reach targets in Iran.

Depending on the circumstances of an Israeli attack, Israel's ties with the United States could be frayed, especially because Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Obama differ over a crucial matter.

Netanyahu has argued that Israel can only make concessions to the Palestinians after the urgent problem posed by Iran's nuclear program is resolved. Obama has said that a resolution of Israel's conflict with the Palestinians is required to enlist Arab backing for a strategy of containing and pressuring Iran.

If war is to be avoided, the authors contend, the United States must adopt a systematic policy of containment vis-a-vis Iran, impose tougher sanctions on Iran and try to persuade the Iranian government to limit its nuclear program.

Meanwhile, Iran's "defiance" and Israel's "panic" are the "fuses" that could spark a destructive war in the Middle East. "The sixth crisis could shape our world for many years to come," Allin and Simon write ominously.

Their warning is not an idle one.

Children's tale The Tooth explores homelessness

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

Lawyer by day and children's book author by evening, Toronto's Avi Slodovnick has published another charmer, this one combining an issue familiar to kids – tooth decay – with a hard-to-ignore social issue.

The Tooth (Kane Miller Book Publishers, and originally titled The Cavity; the name change is a long story) tells the story of little Marissa, whose love of candy catches up with her. A visit to the dentist, undergone with minimal fuss, exposes the young girl to "columns of tall, grey buildings" casting great shadows, and "enormous" skyscrapers "that seem endlessly tall."

Avi Slodovnick

But it is not this potentially hostile world Marissa takes notice of. Rather, her attention is drawn to a grown man sitting on a grate on the sidewalk. Before him is an open shoe box with money inside. She is curious but her mother leads her away.

Even inside the dentist's office, Marissa peers out a window, unable to tear her eyes away from the man. She notices that most people walk right by him. "Others walk around him, like they were trying to avoid him," the story says.

Instead of the afflicted tooth getting filled, it is pulled (for reasons that advance the book's message). Outside, Marissa again spies the homeless man, and sees there is but little money in his shoe box. So she drops her tooth into the receptacle, believing, not unreasonably for a little girl, that it will pay off.

"Put it under your pillow tonight," she sagely advises the man. "And there will be money there tomorrow."

All the man needs is a pillow.

It's a poignant little tale that makes its point gently and without treacle.

"Originally, I wanted to write a story about the purity of a child's compassion," Slodovnick, the father of three boys," says. "At the same time, I had wanted to write a story about homelessness since I see a lot of it downtown and had observed first-hand the indifference many people show."

One time, Slodovnick saw a man walk past a homeless person, only to feed bread to pigeons.

"That image stuck with me. While many of us have an aversion to the homeless, what is probably required is a frankness that maybe only a child can muster. Eventually, for me, the themes of a child's compassion and homelessness merged naturally."

The Tooth "is intended to introduce children to a difficult topic that should be discussed with their parents or teacher," he says.

Slodovnick is co-author, with his brother-in-law, Jack Siemiatycki, of two previous children's books, the similarly themed The Hockey Card and The Baseball Card.

Illustrated by Manon Gauthier, The Tooth, geared for kids aged four to 12, is for sale in Canada through Indigo and other booksellers. It is also sold in French in Quebec, France and Belgium as La carie (the cavity).

Photo of Jordan Pettle, Julie Tepperman, Aaron Willis and chorus by Keith Barker

Theatre Passe Muraille in producing partnership with Convergence Theatre presents:

YICHUD (Seclusion)

MAY 21-29, 2011

COME CELEBRATE THE WEDDING OF THE YEAR!

"YICHUD (Seclusion) is a huge, impressive accomplishment... When theatre is done well, the result is glorious. YICHUD (Seclusion) is done very, very well. I recommend it, very, very highly."
— Lynn Slotkin, CBC, Here and Now

"... Even the air dances, it seems... under the musical direction of Aviva Chernick..."
— Toronto Sun

"...it has tremendous heart. This production is a don't miss."
— Classical 96.3 FM

LAST YEAR'S SMASH HIT BACK FOR A LIMITED RUN.

The perfect Hanukkah gift!
passemuraille.on.ca
416.504.7529

Written by Julie Tepperman
Co-directed by Aaron Willis and Richard Greenblatt
Featuring: Diane Flacks, Richard Greenblatt, Jordan Pettle, Michael Rubenfeld, Julie Tepperman, Aaron Willis
Set, lighting and costume design by Beth Kates, Musical Direction and original composition by Aviva Chernick

Polish heroine subject of U.S. documentary

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

American filmmaker Mary Skinner has made a wonderful documentary about the Polish humanitarian and heroine Irena Sendler, who was instrumental in saving more than 2,000 Jewish children during the Holocaust.

The movie, Irena Sendler: In the Name of Their Mothers, will be screened at Congregation Habonim on Sunday, Dec. 12 at 8 p.m. by the Polish-Jewish Heritage Foundation of Canada and the Young Polish Canadian Professionals Association.

Skinner will introduce her film and take questions after the screening.

The motion picture, the first of its kind on Sendler made outside Poland, recreates her mission of mercy and features interviews with her, several of the Jewish children she saved and two of Sendler's fellow workers.

Irena Sendler in old age

Like Jan Karski, the courageous Polish courier who told the world about conditions in the Warsaw Ghetto and the Nazi plan to exterminate the Jews of Poland, Sendler was an extraordinary person who risked life and limb to do good in a particularly dark period.

Sendler, a Catholic social worker, began to help Jews shortly after Germany invaded Poland in 1939. An employee of Warsaw's social welfare department, an organization administered by the Nazis, she helped Jews to Polonize their names so that they would be eligible for assistance.

After visiting the Warsaw Ghetto and witnessing the "hellish" conditions there, she formed a network to smuggle Jewish children out of the ghetto to convents and orphanages. She was assisted by Jewish police officers and tram drivers, among others.

Sendler continued with her work despite a decree by the Nazis in 1941 that helping Jews was punishable by death.

Sendler's determination was forged on the anvil of compassion. She was deeply affected by the liquidation of Janos Korczak's Jewish orphanage in Warsaw.

Animated by remarkable archival footage of wartime Warsaw, the film is supplemented by interviews with four of the Jewish children whose lives were saved by Sendler and her co-workers.

Once the children were removed from the ghetto, they were placed in safe houses and provided with a stable environment.

"We had to give them a lot of love," says Sendler, explaining that the children were often terrified and confused.

Having been rescued, the children were given fake identity papers and new names and baptismal certificates and taught how to recite Catholic prayers.

Not surprisingly, some Jewish parents were reluctant to hand over their children to Sendler, fearing for their safety.

At the end of 1942, when Sendler ran out of money, she turned to the Council to Aid Jews, known as Zegota. But after the 1943 Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, she could no longer help Jews, and this weighed on her conscience, she says.

She did, however, send the Jewish children in her care to more than 200 convents in rural Poland. Even there, children with obvious Jewish features were in danger because of German inspection visits.

Sendler was arrested and tortured by the Gestapo in 1943. Due to be executed, she was saved by the Polish underground at the very last moment.

Although she lived in hiding for the remainder of the German occupation, she continued her work, burying lists of Jewish children in jars so that they could be reunited with their parents after the war. Regrettably, only a very small proportion ever saw their parents again. They had been murdered in the Treblinka extermination camp.

During the Communist postwar era in Poland, Sendler was harassed by the Polish government, having been accused of maintaining relations with the non-Communist Polish government-in-exile in Britain.

Irena Sendler during World War II

Yet Sendler's heroics did not go unrecognized. In 1965, she was named a Righteous Gentile by Yad Vashem, one of some 6,000 Poles who were so honoured.

In the Name of Their Mothers pays tribute to Sendler and her brave band of decent Poles who, under the most difficult circumstances, rose to the occasion when they were most needed.

AIDA at Masada
June 2011
Masada, Dead Sea and Jerusalem
Opera Festival - June 2011
Dead Sea June 2 - 5, 2011
Including Verdi's AIDA and Messa da Requiem at Masada
Jerusalem Jun 3 - 7, 2011
Including Verdi's Opera Jerusalem & Church Concert in Jerusalem, AIDA at Masada
Alternative dates and length of packages are available. Space is limited.
Call Gloria Pelchovitz at New Wave Travel
416 - 928-3113 Ext. 238
or 1-800-463-1512
gloria@newwavetravel.net
Ont. Reg# 1337762

studio5040cabarets presents
Sharron's Holiday Party
Thursday, December 16
Doors open 7:00 p.m.
Show starts 8:00 p.m.
Sharron Matthews, Canada's own Bette Midler, invites you to her hysterical and cheeky celebration. With songs, stories, snacks, sing-a-longs and surprises...
Cabaret-style table seating, snacks, entertainment...
FUN for $25
Toronto Centre for the Arts
Studio Theatre
5040 Yonge Street, Toronto
TICKETS: 416-872-1111 or www.studio5040cabarets.com

Directed by Ari Weisberg
January 5 - 16, 2011
Hannah and Zvi are reunited after divorcing twenty years earlier. Raised in Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim, the couple ended their marriage when Zvi turned his back on Judaism and Hannah did not. Now the teenage children from their second marriages have become romantically involved, forcing Hannah and Zvi back into each other's lives.
PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

PIANIST SIMONE DINNERSTEIN TO PLAY BACH'S GOLDBERG VARIATIONS HERE

Known for her "intelligent and emotionally powerful performances," New York-based classical pianist Simone Dinnerstein has gained immense renown for her recording of Bach's Goldberg Variations: the CD appeared on the Best of 2007 lists of the New York Times, Los Angeles Times, New Yorker, iTunes and many others.

Dinnerstein performs the Goldberg Variations at the Royal Conservatory of Music's Koerner Hall, Sunday, Dec. 12, 3 p.m. $20 to $55. 416-408-0208, www.remusic.ca

• • •

Barda in Concert: Soprano Renee Barda performs classics of George Gershwin, Cole Porter, art songs and more, accompanied by pianist Dorothy Krizmanic, clarinettist Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri on the accordion, in a concert titled Life Begins Again. Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, Al Green Theatre, Saturday, Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

• • •

Chanukah Concert: The Ashkenaz Foundation and Annex Shul present Montreal-based Jewish hip-hop sensation SoCalled, performing Chanukah songs and music from his upcoming CD in a program called Hip Hop Hanukah.

SoCalled (a.k.a. Josh Dolgin) combines hip hop, rap and funk with Yiddish theatre tunes and old-school klezmer samples from 78 rpm records, spiced up with electric guitar, bass, horns and live folk musicians on traditional instruments. Attendees are encouraged to bring new unwrapped toys to the event to be given to sick children. Mod Club, 722 College St. at Crawford. Thursday, Dec. 2, 9:30 p.m.; doors open at 9 p.m. $20, $25 at the door. www.ashkenazfestival.com, 416-979-9901.

SoCalled

• • •

More Chanukah Celebrations

• The 10th annual Judy & David Chanukah Live Concert is at City Playhouse in Vaughan, Dec. 4 and 5. 905-882-SHOW.

• Active Seniors presents recording artist Aviva Chernick, who sings in English, Ladino, Hebrew and Yiddish, at a Chanukah Musical Celebration with latkes. Thursday, Dec. 9, 1:30 p.m. Reserve by Dec. 6, 416-924-6211, ext. 155.

• Friends of Yiddish and the Toronto Workmen's Circle present Come Light the Menorah, a Chanukah celebration featuring songs by Aron Gonshor of Montreal's Dora Wasserman Yiddish Theatre troupe. Workmen's Circle, 471 Lawrence Ave. W. Refreshments. $10, $5 for members of Workmen's Circle and Friends of Yiddish. Sunday, Dec. 12, 2 p.m. RSVP to Sandy, 416-458-1440 or 416-736-8073 by Dec. 8.

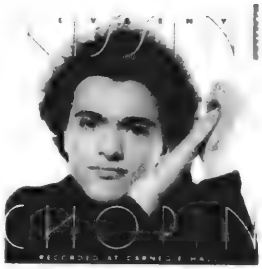
• • •

Film Events

• Toronto Jewish Film Society presents God Is Great... I Am Very Small, an "honest, unpredictable and sharp comedy of manners" starring Audrey Tatou. Guest speaker Shlomo Schwartzberg. $15, $10. Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre, Sunday, Dec. 5, 4 and 7:30 p.m.

• Film critic Adam Nayman discusses "Surfing the New Wave Cinema of Taiwan" in his next lecture on contemporary foreign-language cinema. Miles Nadal JCC, Monday, Dec. 6, 7 to 9 p.m. $12 drop-in fee, students $6.

• The Polish-Jewish Heritage Foundation presents the Toronto première of Irena Sendler: In the Name of Their Mothers, a film about the righteous Poles who rescued 2,500 Jewish children from Nazi-occupied Warsaw. The director, Mary Skinner, will be in attendance. Congregation Habonim, 5 Glen Park Ave., Sunday, Dec. 12, 8 p.m. Limited seating, come early.

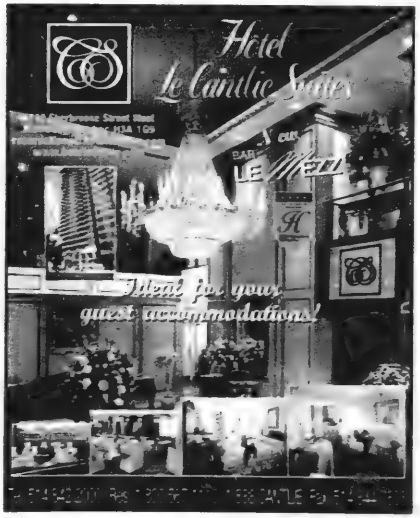


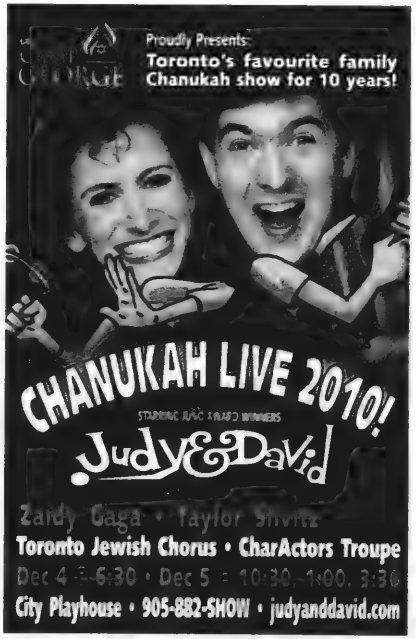
Evgeny Kissin

• • •

Quotable Quote: In a recent interview in the London Jewish Chronicle, Moscow-born classical pianist Evgeny Kissin explained why he has begun to speak out in support of Israel and against the sweeping anti-Israel hysteria that is becoming prevalent. He is nearly as gifted at rising to Israel's defence, it seems, as he is playing the piano.

Kissin, on fairness: "I always try to be objective, and for that reason I ask myself sometimes: what if the tables were reversed? What if the Jews had the whole of North Africa, the whole Arabian Peninsula, Palestine, Syria and Iraq – and the Arabs had nothing and wanted Palestine? And the only answer that comes naturally to my mind and seems fair to me is: in such a situation, it would have been the sacred duty of the whole world to give Palestine to the Arabs and to suppress any Jewish resistance ruthlessly."





Proudly Presents:
Toronto's favourite family Chanukah show for 10 years!
CHANUKAH LIVE 2010!
Judy & David
Toronto Jewish Chorus • CharActors Troupe
City Playhouse • 905-882-SHOW • judyanddavid.com

NEW FROM UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS

THE DEFINING DECADE

IDENTITY, POLITICS, AND THE CANADIAN JEWISH COMMUNITY

BY

HAROLD TROPER

'The Defining Decade amounts to an antidote for social pessimism, a reminder that sometimes long-overdue change can come astonishingly fast.'

Robert Fulford, National Post

9781442610460 / $35.00

available in better bookstores or visit www.utppublishing.com

UTP

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CARICATURIST
Man Cake Caricature Artist

CATERERS
Caterers Hall
Elite Fine Foods
Jewish Food Specialties
Mitzvah Extravaganza Food & Event Movers
Yummy

CONSULTANTS
A Touch of Class Event Planning & Design
Adler Klein Consulting & Associates
Mindspan Entertainment
Pro Shots
Toronto Home Show & Party Consultant
Up & Coming Events

DECOR
Bella's Fine Linens

INVITATIONS
Invitation Divas
Stationery Plus Gift Emporium

KETUBOT
Ketubot.com

KIDS PARTY PLACES
Wet 'n' Wild Animal Programs

MUSIC
Ben Jamin Music Entertainment
Hot Jazz
Joe Star Band
Lenny Simon Holiday Band, The
Mike Freedman Band, The North Hampshire Klezmer Troupe
One More Time

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP
Dynamic Events and Marketing

VIDEOS
Abi Productions
Beautiful Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Affairs
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Adath Israel Congregation
Asian Legend
The Avenue
Baycrest Hospital's Services
Bayview Golf and Country Club
Beverly Manor
Beth Tzedec Congregation Beth Am Synagogue
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
Copper Creek Golf Club
Crowne Asian Cuisine
Estates of Sunnybrook, The Fyne
Grand Fresh Grill & Wine Bar
Granite Club
Hard Rock Cafe, The
Hazelton Manor
Hotel, Dr. Ron
Joe's Lounge Factory
Jucy Strike Lanes & Lounge
Park Hyatt Toronto
Pickle Barrel Banquet Halls
Playtime Bowl
Rain Spa & Salon
Ritz
Toni Bulloni
Yamato
Warehouse Event Venue, The

...Israel's Judaica

HENNA
...the Mud Henna

Jinja Ninja Custom Cookies
MonChef.ca
Regina's Fine Foods
Summer Fresh Salads Inc

PLANNING A PARTY?
Want A Little Help?
The CJN Party Planner Online Directory will give you easy access to all our Party Advertisers' websites.
Go to WWW.CJNEWS.COM
click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Sensation!
Be different in the best! CJN Party Planner ... 647-796-1680

Arts & Travel

Yann Martel defends fiction in Holocaust lit

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — The Holocaust is not only an appropriate subject for fiction, but a necessary one if the world is to remember this catastrophic event over the long term, Canadian author Yann Martel argued in a keynote address in Montreal.

Martel, whose latest novel, Beatrice & Virgil, deals obliquely with the Holocaust, believes that historical depiction has its limits, and only art can get at the truth and spirit. If the art is bad, if it trivializes or exploits the subject, it will soon be forgotten, he added.

Survivors and their descendants don't need to turn to literature to understand the Holocaust, but others do – today and into the future, he said. To rely solely on the facts of this period has its weaknesses because it limits readership and invites revisionists to pounce on any discrepancy, said Martel. A well-written work of fiction, on the other hand, can convey feeling and meaning.

"I think there is a danger in not allowing imagination to deal with the Holocaust. Great novels are still read and speak to us hundreds of years afterward," he said.

Martel, 47, whose first major novel, Life of Pi, won the prestigious Man Book Prize in 2002, now lives in Saskatoon after moving from Montreal. His first exposure to the Holocaust was while attending a British school in the early 1970s in Paris, where his father served as a diplomat.

While the young Martel could grasp World War II, he found the Holocaust "perplexing and puzzling".

"In a war you are fighting an evil enemy. In the Holocaust, they were killing their best friends. German Jews were completely integrated… why this inexplicable hatred?"

He found that what novels of the Holocaust did exist were really autobiographical or biographical, rather than truly imagined.

A book related to the Holocaust, he admits, was not the most logical follow-up to his surprise winning of the Booker, and he struggled for years before Beatrice & Virgil was published in the spring by Knopf Canada.

Yann Martel

This is an allegorical work in an unconventional style. The title characters are animals, named for the guides to heaven and hell in Dante's 14th-century The Divine Comedy.

"It's a literary device that freed me from historical realism," he explained. "Allegory can go straight to the heart of something, unencumbered by the weight of history."

Martel did, however, avoid writing as if he was a witness to the Holocaust, using instead literary references and other links to get there.

Some have objected to his novel. Although the Canadian reviews were quite positive and the book sold well, Beatrice & Virgil received some scathing notices in the United States, notably in the New York Times.

"I was astonished. [The New York Times] said I trivialized the Holocaust, that you can't use the tools of literature in reference to the Holocaust. Most of the critics [who did not like the book] were not Jewish writers. This surprised me."

Martel said he has not received any direct comment from a Holocaust survivor on Beatrice & Virgil. The book has been translated into French, German, Italian and is coming out soon in Hebrew in Israel.

"Art is a dialogue. It's not a final thing. It's what one person thinks. Can bad art do damage? I say no… You have to trust that, overall, art will transmit something."

But he added, if anyone "hates" the book, he'd like to hear from them.

Folk honours for klezmer act

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

Toronto's klezmer sextet Beyond the Pale picked up two honours at the Canadian Folk Music Awards held in Winnipeg on Nov. 20.

The group, which had four nominations, won best instrumental group and the "pushing the boundaries" awards, both for their third album Postcards.

"It's very gratifying to be recognized for our work, and in categories that so perfectly represent the essence of our musical approach," Eric Stein, the band's leader and mandolin player, said.

"It's also thrilling to be in a position to help raise the profile of contemporary Jewish roots music by being recognized in such a mainstream context."

The band also won an award for best instrumental group in 2005 for their previous album Consensus.

Beyond the Pale also features Bret Higgins, Martin Van de Ven, Milos Popovic, Bodgan Djukic and Aleksandar Gajic.

Beyond the Pale

Arts & Travel

Courtroom musical encourages audience to think

By DAVID SILVERBERG
Special to The CJN

Parade is a Tony Award-winning musical about a Jewish man fighting to absolve himself of a crime.

It's the true story of Leo Frank, a young Jewish manager of an Atlanta factory in 1913 who is accused of raping and murdering a young black girl. Frank is the target of a lynch mob that forces division between white and black, Jewish and Christian.

The trial and conviction form the nucleus of Parade, a powerful story director Joel Greenberg is excited to tell audiences at the show's Canadian premiere this month at Berkeley Street Theatre Upstairs in Toronto.

"Not many musicals include a great story and raise uncomfortable issues," Greenberg says. His Studio 180 Theatre and another theatre group, Acting Up Stage Company, are co-producing Parade, which won Tony Awards for best book and score after it debuted in 1998.

Greenberg says the story will take the audience by surprise because a city is gripped with fear and stirred into a frenzy to rid themselves of a Jewish man they believe committed a heinous murder. "It's potent stuff," he adds.

Playing the pivotal role is Michael Therriault, a Canadian stage veteran. He calls Parade "a unique musical that encourages you to think ... it's sort of an whodunit that's also emotionally engaging."

As tense as Leo Frank's trial becomes in Parade, Therriault says the beauty of the musical is Leo's relationship with his wife, played by Tracy Michailidis, which is "complicated because she tries to change her mind about how she views Leo [after he's accused of murder]."

Michael Therriault

Greenberg says Jewish audiences will especially relate to the themes bubbling beneath the surface of Parade. "They will have a more visceral response to the story since they're culturally connected to Leo," he says.

The Toronto production of Parade has a cast of 15 who will play the musical's 40 roles. It's also being set in the intimate Berkeley Street Theatre, a long stretch from the Broadway theatre where Parade first debuted.

Therriault saw the 1990s production, starring Canadian Brent Carver as Leo Frank, and he says he appreciates the different personality a smaller theatre offers to its patrons.

"Audiences get more bang for their buck in this kind of theatre. They walk away remembering what they saw," he says.

Greenberg echoes Therriault's sentiment. "This isn't a toe-tapping theatre. Our hope is that the performance becomes a starting point for conversation, so people will think about Parade well after leaving the theatre."

Parade runs from Dec. 30 to Jan. 22, 2011 (opening night Jan.3). For tickets, visit www.canadianstage.com or call 416-368-3110.

Israeli sitcom wins International Emmy

JTA

Ramzor, an Israeli sitcom about three longtime friends and their romantic relationships, won the International Emmy Award for best comedy. The Emmy was awarded Nov. 21 in New York at an International Academy of Television Arts and Sciences awards ceremony.

Ramzor, which means traffic light in Hebrew, defeated entries from Thailand, Mexico and Britain. It was selected as a finalist by a panel of 700 judges from 50 countries.

Earlier this year, the American Fox network bought the rights to the show, which is being called Mixed Signals and is scheduled to air starting in February. The American version will be written by Bob Fischer, who wrote the TV series Married with Children and the film Wedding Crashers.

• • •

Israelis voted off same-sex partners on Dancing with the Stars

The end for television sportscaster Gili Shem Tov and professional dancer Dorit Milman came on the third week of this season, the Israeli reality show's fifth on the air.

Shem Tov is a lesbian married to a woman with whom she has a son. Milman,who is not a lesbian, was not aware that she had a female partner until Shem Tov walked into the studio for their first meeting.

The Israeli Dancing with the Stars was the first of 35 versions broadcast in countries around the world to have same-sex partners.

SUBSCRIBE TO The Canadian Jewish news

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

The Royal Conservatory
The finest instrument is the mind
Simone Dinnerstein
SUN. DEC. 12, 2010 3:00PM KOERNER HALL
Hear Dinnerstein's interpretation of Bach's Goldberg Variations on Koerner Hall's incredible Hamburg Steinway piano.
"personality, verve, and thoughtfulness" - The Washington Post
"An utterly distinctive voice in the forest of Bach interpretation, Ms. Dinnerstein brings her own pianistic expressivity to the Goldberg Variations." - The New York Times
TICKETS ON SALE NOW! rcmusic.ca 416.408.0208
TELUS
Invesco Trimark
OCAF

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

STRATHALLAN WOOD
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lrdr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — BRING AN OFFER!
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq. ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem @ $1,299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE — CLASSIC 3 BDRM
Attn builders & renovators! 2 storey home on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

* * *

GLEN PARK CONDO
Dream model penthouse unit, Brian Gluckstein designed, all the bells & whistles. Wraparound terrace, gourmet kitchen, 2 bdrms, den, exquisite finishes, $845,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

SOLD FOR 98% OF ASKING PRICE
BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712. (416) 787-1712

3000 BATHURST CONDO
Newly renovated & decorated thruout. 2 + 1 bdrms, 2 baths, approx 1,500 sq ft, W exposure, generous entertaining area, gleaming parquet flrs, brand new appls. Shows a 10+. Avail immed. $399,900 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 COVINGTON CONDOS
FOR SALE: Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes thruout. 2 pkg, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

FOR RENT — NEW LISTING! Bright, sunny 2 bdrm, 2 baths, open concept, w/o to open balcony. Shows well. ONLY $1,650 / MONTH — ACT NOW! Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

Michelle Kahn
BROKER

416 930.0399
michellekahn.realtor@gmail.com
www.michellekahnsellshomes.com

TOP PRODUCER, CHAIRMAN'S CLUB AWARD WINNER

HARVEY KALLES REAL ESTATE LTD. BROKERAGE

Profit from My 25 Years of Real Estate Experience

May the Festival of Lights be a Beacon showering blessings of Shalom, not as a Vision but as a Reality.
– CHANUKAH SAMEACH –

AS LOW AS 2% TOTAL MLS COMMISSION*
FREE LAWYER'S FEE
Doris Ender, Broker
Sutton Group Admiral Realty Inc., Brokerage
TOP PRODUCER 416.739.7200
*When representing both buyer & seller Some conditions apply
Not intended to solicit properties already listed for sale.

BATHURST / YORK DOWNS — 33 DANBY AVE.
B-E-S-T value in all of North York guaranteed for this fabulous 50 x 120 ft south lot. Close to Earl Bales Park, two synagogues, Downsview subway station. Prime demand location with excellent schools & plazas. Million dollar plus homes in the area. Build your dream home. ONLY $465,000.

BRUCYNE SUD Hons. B.A.
Sales Representative
Top Producer, Chairman's Club

BRUCYNE SUD

Chag Sameach
Wishing all my clients, family and friends a Happy & Healthy Chanukah

HARVEY KALLES

416.441.2888
x 339
bsud@trebnet.com

Paul Winston
Senior Vice-President
along with the staff of HOMELIFE/CIMERMAN Real Estate Ltd., Brokerage 416.226.9770
www.homelifecimermanorth.com
WISH EVERYONE A JOYOUS CHANUKAH!

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

Forest Hill
REAL ESTATE INC. - BROKERAGE

416-488-2875 Forest Hill Village | 416-785-1500 Central | 416-226-1987 Bayview

CENTRAL PROPERTIES

227 HILLHURST BLVD! ALEXANDRA WOOD AREA!
$1,999,000! Spectacular 5+ SOLD Exec Res! Mn Fam+Lib+2Pce! Nanny Ste! Fab 50x136'! Move Right In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

UPPER FOREST HILL VILLAGE $1,590,000
Totally Renovated w/3 St SOLD ddition. 4+1 Bdrms, 5 Bths 5 Car Pkg. Loaded w/Upgrades. F. Sversky 416-488-2875

ARMOUR HEIGHTS-AMAZING CURB APPEAL-MOVE RIGHT IN
Beautifully Renovated 3Bdrms-2 St on Magnificent 40x140.75' Professionally Landscaped Fenced Lot. Quality Finishes! $759,000 Patti Pollock* 416-226-1987

80 UPPER CANADA DRIVE! $719,000!
Yonge N/York Mills! Gorg'us 1.5St 3+2Br 4Bth Res Nestled On An Amazing Landscaped 60x150'! Call Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

2 NEPTUNE DRIVE SENIORS LEASEHOLD CONDOMINIUM
$179,900 Spacious 2 Bedroom with Parking & Locker. Eat-In Kitchen Fabulous Lifestyle & Amenities. Heddy Blaug 416-226-1987

BAYVIEW PROPERTIES

201 WILLOWDALE AVENUE! NOW $669,000!
Just N/Sheppard! Impeccable 1.5St 3+1Br 3Bth W/Legal Nanny Ste! Fab 44x90.49' W/Much New Dev't! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

EAST PROPERTIES

258 WESTVIEW BLVD! $635,000!
St Clair/O'Connor! Topham Park Area! Gorg'us 4+1Br 4Bth W/Nanny Ste! Fab 35x120'! Move Right In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

NEW PRICE – FABULOUS FOREST HILL RENO $469,000
2+1 Bdrm, 2 Storey, 1900 sq ft, New Kit w/Granite Hrdwd Flrs, 2 Bths, 1Pkg Near Subway, Shops, Prks. S. Merrick* 416-488-2875

CONDOMINIUM PROPERTIES

258 WESTVIEW BLVD! $635,000!
St Clair/O'Connor! Topham Park Area! Gorg'us 4+1Br 4Bth W/Nanny Ste! Fab 35x120'! Move Right In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

1ST AD! 664 PHARMACY AVENUE! JUST N/ST CLAIR!
$479,000! Live+Work@Home! Fab 2St 3+1Br 3Bth! Det Grge Currently Used As Studio W/Loft! 40x125'! Sandon Schwazrtzben 416-226-1987

RENTAL PROPERTIES

CEDARVALE RENTAL $850/MO. LOWER LEVEL SUITE
Lovely 1 Bdrm Apt, 1 Bth, Ensuite Laundry, Utilities Included. Private Entrance. Steps to TTC. F. Sversky 416-488-2875

Broker * Sales Representative
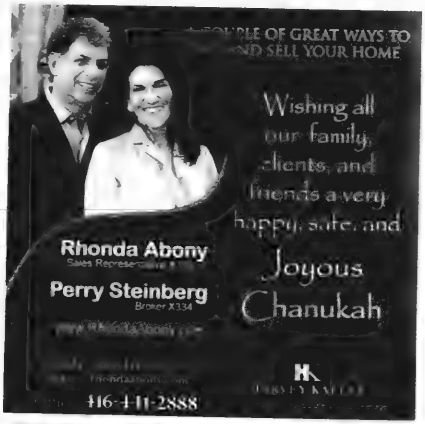
www.foresthill.com



ALAN NEWTON REAL ESTATE LTD., BROKERAGE

Best wishes for a very Happy Hannukah
from
TED WAXMAN SALES REPRESENTATIVE
MARK WAXMAN ASSOCIATE BROKER
Tel: 905-764-7200

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

Slavens & Associates

www.SlavensRealEstate.com
416.483.4337

Our team of Associates wish all of our relatives, friends & clients a Healthy & Happy Chanukah!

FINE PROPERTIES

FOREST HILL – $3,349,000
Beautiful elegant custom home w/quality luxurious finishes. 2 yrs new w/sensational kitchen & butler's pantry, open to family rm. Unique master retreat w/his & hers dressing rms. & ensuites. Mahogany panelled library on 2nd flr. L/Vl boasts heated flrs., rec. rm., exercise rm & guest suite. Elevator to all floors Richard Sherman

LOWER VILLAGE
Stunning 4 bdrm., 5 bath residence in the heart of Forest Hill. Totally renovated with all the bells & whistles & only the finest finishes!! Move in soon. Darren Slavens /*Daniel Pusti

AVENUE RD/ST. CLAIR – $1,650,000
Unbelievable investment opportunity in one of Toronto's finest neighbourhoods. Triplex on SOLD lot in prime Deer Park. Can be converted to single family residential. *Andrew Roher /Darren Slavens

BATHURST / FLAMINGO – $1,399,000
Beautifully appointed 4 bdrm., 6 bath home features grand foyer, large principal rms., main flr family rm. & office. Eat-in kitchen w/ walk-out to large deck overlooking inground pool. Fin. L/Vl with wetbar & gym. 3 car garage. *Corinne Pencer

BRIAR HILL AVE. – $1,395,000
Rarely available 50 ft. front Upper Forest Hill home with main flr. family room addition on SOLD south-facing lot. Double garage. *Erica Binder/Richard Sherman

CASA LOMA – $1,189,000
Stunning townhome in highly sought after location features a gourmet eat-in kitchen and gorgeous 2nd flr. family rm. Large master bdrm. w/spa-like ensuite. Rooftop terrace w/absolutely breathtaking views. Darren Slavens/*Marlene Federman

Salesperson* Broker*

COLLEGE PARK 2 – $979,000
Ultra luxurious 2 bdrm., 3 bath penthouse located in prestigious bldg. Floor to ceiling windows, hardwood flrs. throughout, marble foyer, one of a kind magnificent kitchen. Spectacular, unobstructed west view of downtown & lake. Parking & locker incl. Steps to fabulous dining, shopping, theatres. *Corinne Pencer

UPPER FOREST HILL – $619,000
Brick bungalow on large lot (33 x 136 ft.) on quiet mature street in desirable neighbourhood SOLD to all amenities including great schools, parks and transportation. Fantastic opportunity to build new or renovate to suit. *Donna Taylor / * Linda Rose

YONGE / SUMMERHILL – $579,000
Appealing corner suite w/2 bdrms., 2 baths & 2 parking spaces. Recently updated. Large SOLD rms., ensuite laundry, marble floors in foyer & bathrms. Fireplace. Spacious locker. Building boasts great amenities. Don Wagman

CLARK / NEW WESTMINSTER – $544,900
Upgraded home in wonderful Thornhill neighbourhood. Huge family rm. w/fireplace. Professionally SOLD lvl. w/custom built-ins & nanny quarters. Attached 2 car garage. Steps to parks, schools, community centre, TTC & more. *Sam Stemer

YONGE / CLARK – $409,000
Gorgeous, fully reno'd condo townhome in lovely gated community. Large master w/hardwood flrs., walk-in closet, cathedral ceiling & skylight. Finished lower level. Parking. 24 hr. gate house sec. Steps to schools, park, shops, restaurants & more. *Corinne Pencer

BAYVIEW / 401 – $299,900
Lovely split 2 bdrm. plan in a 36 unit Boutique bldg. Master features 4pce ensuite w/soaker tub & separate shower. Eat-in kitchen overlooks bright living/dining rm. area w/walk-out to balcony. Parking. Emily Naretto

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

marilynmerrick
AOCA, MIRM

saulmmerrick
LLB., QC

Sales Representatives
"Special Diamond Award Winners"

Forest Hill Real Estate Inc. • Brokerage

Wishing our family, clients & friends a very Happy and Healthy Chanukah

416-488-2875
mmerrick@trebnet.com
samerrick@trebnet.com
www.MerrickRealEstateTeam.com

ESSIE SHER
Sales Representative

Wishing You Peace, Health & Happiness this Chanukah

416-782-8882
Cell 416-464-5261

Re/Max Realtron Realty Inc. Brokerage
Independently owned & operated

To all my Clients, Family and Friends:
Wishing every happiness at Hanukkah and a year filled with many blessings!

PAULINE GOLD
Century 21 Heritage Group Ltd.
905-764-7111
416-917-7701 cell

PRUE AVENUE
Prime Location

Huge custom built home. Approx 6,000 sq ft plus finished bsmnt, wide hallways, vaulted ceilings. Many upgrades & features, too many to mention. $1,395,000. To view or more info, please call

Harvey Frankel, Sales Rep.
Royal LePage Signature Rlty
416-443-0300
www.TorontoHomeMarketers.com

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373

THORNHILL
4 bdr, 4 bth, fam rm, w/o to yard, liv & din combo SOLD kit, fin lower lvl, dble gar, many extras!

WILMINGTON/FINCH
3 bdr, 2 bths, L-shaped liv & din, updated kit, fin bsmt, dble drive, gar.

416-633-7373

RE/MAX®

Realtron Realty Inc.
Brokerage

Our warmest wishes to all our relatives, friends & clients for a Happy Hannukah.

WILLOWDALE	THORNHILL	RICHMOND HILL
416-222-8600	905-764-6000	905-764-8688
BATHURST	MARKHAM	SCARBOROUGH
416-782-8882	905-470-9800	416-289-3333

www.realtronhomes.com

ROYAL LEPAGE
PARTNERS REALTY

Service at it's finest, always!

STEVEN GREEN
Sales Representative

PLATINUM AWARD WINNER
416-229-4454

Happy Chanukah to all my clients, relatives & friends.
Wishing all of you a very happy & healthy holiday and a year filled with much mazel & naches.
FROM MY FAMILY TO YOURS

SELLING IN YOUR NEIGHBOURHOOD
Jeff Tabachnick
Broker

905.764.6000
www.scratchtabach.com

RE/MAX

Wishing all my clients, friends and relatives a Happy and Healthy Chanukah

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

Happy Chanukah

449 Walmer Rd. Suite 604

Superbly appointed 1300'', 2 bed / 2 bath lux suite. Enjoy rich herringbone flrs, beautiful bthrms & a gorgeous "Cameo" kit. "Schonbek" crystal chandeliers illuminate the suite, while flr-to-ceiling windows welcome in soft SW sunlight. Perfect for those downsizing or in need of a pied-à-terre. Suite comes complete w/ 1 prkng, 1 locker and a Juliette balc... 2nd prkng spot avail. $589,000. *Measurements as per builder. www.449walmer-604.com

Freddie Green
Sage Real Estate Ltd., Brokerage
W. 416.483.8000 C. 416-788-3696
Freddie@LoveMyToronto.com www.LoveMyToronto.com www.SageRealEstate.ca

sage REAL ESTATE

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

2 NEPTUNE DRIVE -Life Lease-CONDO
Residence for Active Independent Seniors
Great Programs and Activities to Enjoy
Very Spacious 1 Bedroom Suite Facing Courtyard @ $179,000
Large Kitchen. Ensuite Laundry. Parking. Locker
www.rpt.ca/neptune815
For More Information contact
Amelia Ipp, Carol Shapiro & Shami Zimmerman
Sales Representatives
Royal LePage Partners Realty Brokerage
416-229-4454

LAWRENCE & BATHURST
• 8 COVINGTON ROAD •
[illegible]
KAREN G. ANTHONY, B.A.
Sales Representative
Award of Excellence, Diamond Award of Merit
416-489-2121
www.karenanthony.com
Royal LePage Real Estate Services Limited
Johnston & Daniel Division, Brokerage

A 2 bdr. co-op apt. Person selling is also a stylist offering FREE haircuts. Call 416-782-8451

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Beau., spacious 2 br. + 2 bths. Crysta Towers on 8 Covington Call Helen 416-256-7754

Bath/Steeles - PRIMROSE 2 - 2 br 2 bth., sol., indry., pkg., A/C. Jan. 1. $1625 416-410-3311.

87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

SUMMA PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
Professional Property Management & Consulting
With over 25 years experience our superior service includes managing multi-unit Residential/Commercial and Industrial properties. We also offer specialized services to manage and rent individual condominium investments. At Summa, we get "TOP MARKS" for Management, Consulting and Renting!
647-341-7990
www.summapm.com
propman@summapm.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

SO. FLORIDA CONDOS - PRICES REDUCED 30-50%
Aqualina-Beach Club-Coronado-Hamptons-Hemispheres- Hidden Bay-Jade-LaMer LaPerla-Mystic Pt-Oceana-Ocean-Oceanview-Ocean Palms-Olympus-Parker-Pinnacle Quadoman-Renaissance-Residences-Turnberry-Summit-Trump-Wave ...and others.
Personalized service. Canadian references provided.
Jerry Saviov, Licensed Realtor Optimar Int'l Realty (Sunny Isles, FL)
Direct (954)540-5232
e-mail: jas2468@gmail.com www.jerrysaviov.com

Sunrise Lakes - Sunrise, Florida
55+, large and bright, well-maintained condo for only $35,900 U.S. Lovely golf and water views.
Call Mimi at 954-557-5239
Realtor/Associate, Keyes Real Estate
(English, Spanish, Hebrew, French)

MIAMI BEACH - MIMOSA CONDO For Sale by Owner, great Ocean View $235K on Low Floor 305-895-3000.

MIAMI BEACH CARRIAGE CLUB Large 2/2, Ocean View, Low Floor David - Kotler Rlty 305-895-3000.

WILLIAMS ISLAND CONDO Magnificent 3 Beds. & 3 Baths. 3,000 square feet Marble Floors $699K Furnished 305-895-3000.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23

100 Arlen House East. 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. Call 301-907-0842.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

West Palm Beach. Beautiful 1 bdrm., 1 1/2 bth., fully furn'd., AC. 55+, exercise equipment, pool, close to Shul. Call betwn. 9am - 6pm. 347-828-7888.

Florida, Deerfield Beach, Century Village Tilford N. One Bedroom. 1 1/2 bathrooms. Ground floor. Available January 9, 2011 514-594-3965

Century Village, Boca Raton. Seasonal-reasonable rent. Two bedrooms, 1 1/2 bathrooms. New appliances. 1-561-302-5933, 1-561-852-7356.

Arlen House East. 2 bed., 2 bth., For season from Dec.1 - Mar 31. $1800/mo. USD. 416-256-0862.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON X-Large Studio Furnished Oceanfront, Pool, Spa, Beach $2,000/Month 305-895-3000.

Delray Bch., 2 bdr., 2 bth. condo, util. incl., comp fum. avail. immed. $1500/mo. US. 905-882-4206 or 416-616-5720, ask for Simon.

Hallandale, Parker Dorado. One bedroom. 1 bathroom. Seasonal rental 514-726-9274.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

36-Holes of Championship Golf, 21-Competitive Har-Tru Tennis Courts & the Florida Sunshine You'll Love...
...An elegant atmosphere boasting an unparalleled lifestyle!

- Prime Delray Beach, Florida Location
- State-Of-The-Art Fitness Center
- Magnificent Clubhouse & Fine Dining
- 8-Sparkling Swimming Pools
- 24-Hour Gated & Manned Security
- Annual/Seasonal Rentals & Sales

Gleneagles is centrally located less than 30-minutes from the West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale International Airports. All ages are welcome. Homes and condominiums offered from the low $100,000's to over $500,000 USD.

www.GleneaglesFlorida.com • Tel: 561.819.5397

Ben G. Schachter,
Licensed Real Estate Broker

GLENEAGLES COUNTRY CLUB REAL ESTATE, LLC

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN
Real estate broker - Realtor®

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717
LONDONO

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4509
O: 305.428.8401
ECR

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

PREMIUM ADDRESS IN FOREST HILL
355 St. Clair Ave. W./Tower Hill West
Luxuriously renovated 1 and 2 bedroom suites with 2 full bathrooms. Stainless Steel appliances, balconies with spectacular views and concierge service. Walking distance to Forest Hill Village Shops, St. Clair subway station and Loblaws. Utilities included.
Call us today to book your personal tour!
416.961-0024
www.caprent.com

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar.
Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting.
6 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 / 416-631-0388

Beau., spacious 2 br. + 2 bths. Crystal Towers on 8 Covington. Call Helen 416-256-7754.

82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT

For male in condo-safe Bath./Steeles/Shepp., shared kit., liv. rm. & den, incl. util.,cable, indry. & priv. wshrm. Near TTC, No smking./ pets. Call 416-522-8147.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Delray Beach, Gleneagles Country Club
2 + 3 br. condos starting at $3500/mo. 3 mo. min. Beautiful facilities - dining rm., great golf, tennis & social. CC lifestyle.
Call Doody Caplan at 561-702-3744 Realty Assoc. Luxury Partners
Happy Chanukah

Surfside/Bal Harbor, lovely 1 br. shopping, shul & transp. kosher kit. Dec. - Jan. 1. 416-939-0816.

Century Village, Deerfield. One Bedroom, 1.5 bathrooms, corner unit with central air. 514-240-3829.

Delray-KP, 2/2, 55+, Country club living, bright & breezy, golf view, all new tropical design, nr. bch. 3 mos. min. $1350/mo. Call 561-272-1859.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 See photos: www.hallandale.webs.com

SOUTH FLORIDA REAL ESTATE
Fort Lauderdale/Pompano to Boca Raton Starting at $50,000
3 Mo Rentals from $1600
Call Wieder Realty, Inc.
954-978-8300
or 1-888-979-9788
www.Palm-Aire.com

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Del Ray Beach, Kings Pt., 1 bed., 1.5 bth., 1st flr., convenient to transp. & shops. Avail. immed. Florence: 215-620-0308 or 215-698-1298.

155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE

HABITAT REAL ESTATE - ISRAEL
Habitat Real Estate is situated in Zichron Yaakov. Our expertise is in luxury homes and apartments and commercial properties.
Habitat was established by Annabelle Almagor from Israel and Howard Tennenhouse from Canada. Ms. Almagor is an experienced realtor and former assistant to Presidents Ezer Weizman and Shimon Peres. Mr. Tennenhouse is a Canadian lawyer who invests in the acquisition and development of real estate in Israel.
We provide personalized service to meet your needs as a home buyer or investor.
For further information contact us at:
Israel: Tel: (972) 4-6397376 or (972) 52-8883962 Fax: (972) 4-6397372
habitatisrael@gmail.com
Canada: (204) 988 4930 or (204) 355-7771 htenn@mts.net

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

KETUBAH.COM
F/T Asst. Customer Service Manager at upbeat, online company downtown. Excellent English and read/write Hebrew. Resume & cover letter to: careers@ketubah.com

Recent retirees for customer service work. Bathurst/Finch PM201@rogers.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Personal support lady - 14 yrs. exper. for elderly at home + cleaning. Days/nights. Refs. 416-240-1513.

Lady seeks work in homes, apts., offices, days only, refs., exper. 416-827-1059.

Experienced cleaning lady will clean your home. Please call Vicky at 905-671-0124.

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Jewish lady with car, experience & refs. available to take care of elderly. L/in or l/out, f/t or p/t. Naomi @ 647-773-3095.

Loving caregiver (PSW) for seniors/children; homes or hospitals. 10 yrs. exper. 647-856-7360.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042

Reliable, hard working and experienced caregivers available. Please call 416-546-5380

257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE

Exper. caregiver seeks job. Exp in Jewish community. Refs. avail. Call Fareeda at 416-837-2179

P&W seeks overnight job. 10 pm - 7 am, 5 yrs. exper., has own car. Please call 647-409- 6956.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

2 brothers, handsome & estab., 50'ish, looking to date 2 sisters of friends, 35-45 for fun & friendship. CJN Box # 5308

300 ARTICLES FOR SALE

Audio: Harmon Kardon HK550VXI stereo receiver $85. HD400 CD player $75. Jonathan 416-576-6057.

Sofa & loveseat, ivory brocade, pine harvest table & 4 chairs, very good cond. Call 416-250-8365.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

SERVICE DIRECTORY

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca

milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

GLATT KOSHER CENTRE
Take-out & Catering
Happy Channukah
Order your Latkes Today!
905 - 597 - 7571

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile, water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

Kitchens, Bathrooms, Closet Org. Doors, Trim, Carpentry, Drywall. Hadyman, Jobs, Electric, Plumbing, Flooring S&H 416-450-8578 Sol.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

Memories fade. Slides, home movies, and videos collect dust. We're "Specialists" in DVD transfers and Preserving Memories. Fred; 416-229-6000; frednelson@madisonvideo.tv

472 RETIREMENT HOME

Ahavath Achim Retirement Home. The home with a Neshama. Planned activities, 24 hr. supervision. For information contact Joseph Sahar, office 416-398-5486 or 905-660-4831.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bathurst Upholstery. Reupholstering sofas, chairs. Low prices 416-781-1995, 905-886-3148.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash.

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION SWAP EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
90 COTTAGE FOR SALE
92 COTTAGE FOR RENT
95 COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
97 COTTAGE WANTED
120 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
121 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT OF TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT OF COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES EXCH. SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY
345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
WINTER IN ISRAEL
FROM $650 + tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this

ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

Israeli-born Badat has the pride of a Lion

By BEN FISHER
Special to The CJN

Alon Badat's Israeli roots are made abundantly clear on the soccer pitch.

As a freshman forward on the newly crowned CIS champion York University Lions, Badat has showcased the aggressive style and hard-nosed work ethic he developed while playing professionally for Maccabi Netanya.

Spending his formative years exposed to the intense, rigid demands of a soccer hotbed like Israel certainly didn't hurt the development of the 20-year-old athlete.

"In Israel, you are pretty much living the game," says Badat. "You are practising basically every day, and there's a constant need to focus and work hard."

That strong work ethic has gotten Badat to where he is today: runner-up as CIS rookie of the year and a significant contributor to the York Lions, a team that recently earned its second national title in the past three years.

At the CIS championships, played at the University of Toronto, Badat collected two points in three playoff elimination game victories, including an assist on team-leading scorer Adrian Pena's championship-winning goal against the UBC Thunderbirds.

Even after having played professionally in Israel, the meaning of the Lions' victory wasn't lost on Badat, a finance major at York.

"Since the start of the season, we had one goal in mind," said Badat. "Thanks to [York head coach Carmine Isacco] and a great group of guys working hard all year, we were able to realize that goal."

There it is again – that emphasis on working hard. Fortunately for Badat, it comes easily for an athlete with his level of passion for the sport.

It was that passion that inspired him at age 17 to return to his birthplace Israel to play for Maccabi, a club that competes in the top tier of the Israeli league.

It was that passion that convinced him to sit out a year in order to comply with CIS rules about former professional players before returning to play for the Lions.

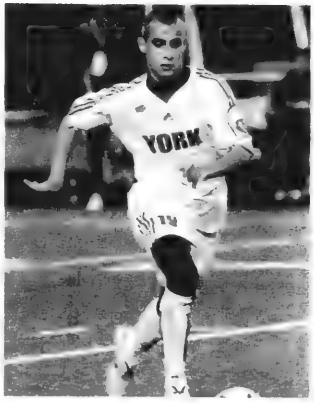
And it's that passion that will see him continue to play the sport for as long as he can at as high a level as possible.

Badat's love of the "beautiful game" is perhaps trumped only by his devotion to family and sense of connection with Israel.

A driven, talented athlete with strong family values and a proud tie to his Israeli roots, he said it's been a struggle for him to choose between his homeland and his Thornhill-based parents, brother and sister.

"I feel that Israel is my true home and where I belong, and I hope to return at some point," Badat said. "But family is my main priority, and staying near them is very important to me."

Already in his young life, he's moved to Canada at age 10, returned to Israel at 17 and then came back last year to play with the Thornhill Soccer Club for one season before joining the York men's team.



Alon Badat

ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

Beach volleyball player Sam Schachter, left, was voted junior athlete of the year at the Canadian Sport Awards recently. Schachter teamed up with Garrett May to capture the under-21 world beach volleyball championships in Turkey earlier this year. Past winners of the junior athlete of the year award include hockey player Eric Lindros, boxers Lennox Lewis and Shawn O'Sullivan, and swimmer Alex Baumann. The Canadian Sport Awards are presented annually by the charitable True Sport Foundation and are given to the country's top amateur athletes. Winners are chosen by an independent jury. Presenting the award to Schachter is Victor Lachance, executive director of True Sport Foundation.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____
CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.

AIRPORT mazda OF TORONTO
"We don't call ourselves #1, our customers do!"
HAPPY CHANUKAH
MITCH CADESKY
General Sales Manager
415 Rexdale Blvd, Etobicoke, ON M9W 6P8
Tel: 416-745-0001 Fax 416-745-8596 Parts: 416-745-1978
Email: mitch@airportmazda.ca www.airportmazda.ca

Heritage Toronto marks site of first Mount Sinai

Compiled by CJN Staff

Heritage Toronto's Jewish Heritage Initiative commemorated the site of the first Mount Sinai Hospital Nov. 17 with a plaque that tells the story of the hospital's humble beginnings.

The purchase of the building at 100 Yorkville Ave. in 1922 was the realization of a 10-year dream by the Ezras Noshem Society for a hospital to provide medical services to Toronto's then-burgeoning Jewish immigrant community and a place for Jewish doctors and interns to practise.

"We are extremely honoured to be recognized by Heritage Toronto for our history of providing care for the community. Our history is rich with vision, determination and concern for the well-being of the community. It characterized our beginnings and still drives us today to provide the best possible care for patients," said Joseph Mapa, Mount Sinai's president and CEO.

Mount Sinai is the fifth organization to be recognized by Heritage Toronto's Jewish Heritage Initiative which began in 2006.

Much has changed about the hospital since it first opened in 1923 as the Hebrew Maternity and Convalescent Hospital. The name was changed to Mount Sinai Hospital, and it moved to University Avenue in 1953. It has also grown from 30 to 472 beds and become one of North America's leading medical, teaching and research institutions.

Mount Sinai has also developed a worldwide reputation for excellence in genetic research, women's and infants' health, surgical oncology, gastrointestinal diseases, diabetes, general psychiatry, critical care and cardiology.

Pictured, with the Heritage Toronto plaque from left, are Susan Horvath, president of the Mount Sinai Hospital Foundation; Mount Sinai president and CEO Joseph Mapa; Brian Gluckstein, chair of the Mount Sinai Hospital Founders Society; foundation board co-chairs Michael Bregman and Robert Rubinoff, and Eric Slavens, chair of the Jewish Heritage Initiative.

LOW FAT CAULIFLOWER LATKES

2 eggs + 2 egg whites
1 small onion, peeled
1 head cauliflower, steamed, cut into florettes
2 tbls flour
salt & pepper to taste
non-stick cooking spray
2 tbls olive oil, for frying

In a food processor, chop onion; add eggs until well mixed. Add cauliflower pieces, flour & seasonings and process until finely chopped, do not over process. Spray fry pan with non-stick cooking spray. Put on medium heat. Wait until hot and drop batter by tablespoonfuls into pan. Fry 4-5 min. until firm (or they will break apart), cooked through and browned on both sides.

YIELD: 16 servings. TIP: With each new batch, spray pan with non stick cooking spray. VARIATION: Substitute and/or combine with spinach or broccoli.

The Caplan Family extends best wishes for a Happy & Healthy Chanukah

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

A Family Business for over 60 Years

About Life

Dear Ella,

I lost my husband more than three years ago. We were happily married for 44 years, and had two children and five grandchildren. I never imagined I would be enjoying my family alone at the age of 64.

In many respects I still feel like a young woman. I'm healthy, I take care of myself and am financially secure, but the thought of dating like one of my granddaughters is terrifying. It's not so much meeting men or talking to them that scares me. It's the intimacy part I'm not sure I can handle. In fact, I'm not even sure I want to. I do however, miss having male companionship, a connection to someone. How do I go about getting to the latter without participating in the former?

It's a New World

Dear It's a New World

Intimacy has many meanings. It can mean friendship, love, romance or sex. It's completely up to you which one of these options you choose and in which combination. You're in the driver's seat of your life. You control the destination and the speed. Of course, you must take your passenger's feelings into account, but at the end of the day, you're in control.

People can enjoy intimacy of any kind at any age. You are only limited by your mind and physical restrictions. When it comes to intimacy, think of the three "Ts".

Time. There's no need to rush. Allow yourself all the time you need to feel comfortable with every step of the process. This should be an enjoyable journey, not a stressful one.

Trust. You and your partner need to build a foundation of trust before you can move forward. With the development of trust, insecurities begin to melt. Trust must be earned and can't be rushed.

Talk. Communication throughout your relationship is key. Without this last ingredient , the rest falls apart. All three of these elements have to be fulfilled for any relationship, old or new, to work successfully.

People are social beings. They're not meant to be alone, and you're no exception. Don't give in to your fears when you have so much at stake.

You deserve to have a life of your own outside of your children and grandchildren.

Readers may submit their questions to Ella at The CJN, e-mail: ella@cjnews.com. But Ella is not a professional counsellor. She brings to the questions passed by readers her unique brand of earthy wisdom. Her advice is not a replacement for medical, legal or any other advice. For serious problems, consult a professional.

Life is a verb

Life Coach Corner

By JUDY SIBLIN-LIBRACH

You have a huge task – writing thank-you notes or completing a big project, or something that seems overwhelming at first. How do you tackle it, break it down into little parts and make it happen? So, of course you could write 10 thank-you notes a day and you will be done within a few weeks.

Or you could make an agreement with yourself to walk for 30 minutes a day, five days a week, and who knows, before long you could be running a marathon.

But what if you have a dream, and it seems so large and looming, you don't know where to begin? Start by taking some action, and then momentum will come and movement will start to happen. As British prime minister Benjamin Disraeli once said: "Action may not always bring happiness, but there is no happiness without action."

In the inspirational book Life Is a Verb, Patti Digh gives her readers 37 days to wake up, be mindful and live intentionally. So she came up with a commitment to ask herself this question every morning: "What would I be doing today if I only had 37 days to live?"

What she realized from giving herself this challenge is similar to what Steve Jobs (who gave the famous Stanford University commencement address "How to Live Before You Die") once said: "Your time is limited, so don't waste it living someone else's life."

It is often so easy for that to happen, especially when that someone is your child or your children and you can easily get swept away by their passions and purpose. So make sure to carve out your own dreams and take your own action for your own dreams and goals.

There's a lovely bit in Life Is a Verb, in which Digh suggests taking "action challenges." What are these? Well, as she puts it, "these are designed as quick, immediate reinforcements of the story preceding them. They are 10-minute writing exercises for which you'll need a few pieces of simple equipment: a notebook, a pen you enjoy holding – or a computer with the screen turned off – and a timer with a bell. I recommend buying an 89 cent notebook for these exercises. You'll also want an inexpensive egg timer with a bell so you don't have to interrupt your flow of thought by looking at a watch or clock. And I can't imagine living life without a big wad of three-by-five-inch index cards for capturing ideas, so pick up a pack of those, too."

The free-writing session with a time limit forces you to produce. At the end, circle what Digh calls the "hot spot," the word or phrase that stands out for you. Then she suggests you set the timer for another three minutes and write about that hot spot.

Digh also talks about the six practices for intentional living. They are: 1) Intensity and how to say "yes"; 2) Inclusion: be generous; 3) Integrity: to speak up; 4) Intimacy: to love more; 5) Intuition: trust yourself, and 6) Intention: to slow down. And finally there is a wonderful section on how to "become you."

The book is full of colorful drawings and photographs that are so inviting. And it is all summed up by: "Life is a verb. Say yes. Be generous. Speak up. Love more. Trust yourself. Slow down."

What will you do with the next 37 days? As novelist George Eliot wrote: "It's never too late to be what you might have been."

Judy Siblin-Librach is an Adler-trained coach. Website: www.findingyourbliss.com; e-mail: judyelle@ican.net.

The investment with the greatest return is the one you give away.

There's never been a better time to invest in the future of health care. You can donate publicly listed securities to Mount Sinai Hospital before the end of 2010 without incurring any capital gains tax, which can provide an advantage at tax time. As always, your donations support world-class, compassionate patient care and research discoveries on the frontiers of medical science. So don't delay. Visit supportsinai.ca or call 416-586-8203 to find out how you can make a donation of securities today.

MOUNT SINAI HOSPITAL
Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Health Complex
Bright Minds. Big Hearts. The Best Medicine.

Chanukah Greetings

The Canadian Jewish news

Section B

[Flash90 photo]

Spinning through the natural sequence of events

It happens sometimes that scholars explain at length what children understand instinctively.

The dreidel is a case in point.

Sydney B. Hoenig, the noted historian and essayist, has insightfully written that the dreidel "recalls the 'turnover' of events when Judah the Maccabee's few forces vanquished and toppled the many in Antiochus' army. The natural sequence of events was overturned: the strong were spun into the hands of the weak, as enunciated in the Al Hanissim prayer of Chanukah."

Yet, the two laughing youngsters in the photo above, happy and carefree in their guileless delight, know through their fingers that the little top spinning on the table dreis and dreis (spins and spins, round and round) until it collapses, spent of motion, ready to be scooped up again to be spun and dreied once more.

And so they do.

They pick up the dreidel and spin it again. And again.

And as the picture shows, they chuckle and chortle as they do because in their innocent oblivion, the "turnover" of events – the spinning of the top – is fun.

We, on the other hand, the adults in their lives, understand the turnover of events differently, less like our young children and more like the scholars.

It's a serious matter.

Jewish history is, in some sense, a running billboard for the perpetual spinning of the top. In spite of that, or more accurately, because of that, we know that "overturning the natural sequence of events" is never assured.

We celebrate miracles, but we don't rely on miracles.

We try to "coax" them out of their Mysterious Source by involving ourselves in the affairs of man, by trying to influence the flow of human history, by standing up for the values that underpin our way of life, by affirming our steadfast commitment to the sanctity of all human life that is, after all, the ultimate reason for believing in miracles and for trying to help bring them to pass.

For the Jewish People, it has always been the few against the many, the seemingly weak against the seemingly strong.

That is how our peoplehood began.

That has been its hallmark ever since.

Our characteristic unwillingness to submit to overwhelming odds, has been – and is – the dreidel of Jewish history, the little hermeneutical device that our children spin for their amusement and that we spin as a reminder that the very continued existence of the Jewish people can be seen as a constant overturning of the natural sequence of events.

One of the songs our children sing on Chanukah is an uncomplicated two-stanza poem of repetitive, simple lyrics and even simpler message. Very often, two children hold hands and act out the lyrics as they sing the song, spinning smoothly to the instruction of the words. Some sing the poem with just a hint of a minor key sadness as they fall down at the end of the second stanza.

"Come spin with me
I'm a Chanukah dreidel
I spin and I spin
All around

Come spin with me
I'm a Chanukah dreidel
I spin and I spin
And fall down."

We spin too, each day, each generation, dedicated to making our world a very good place in which to watch our children sing, dance and perform.

But we have always risen from the fall, thus overturning the sordid expectations of our enemies and fulfilling, perhaps, the high expectations of God Above.

Happy Chanukah. Chag Urim Samayach. The editor

Happy Chanukah

Chanukah in the Forest

By YEHUDA ELBERG
as told to GILAH LANGNER

About five years ago, I had the pleasure of spending many hours interviewing my uncle, the late Yiddish writer Yehuda Elberg, about his life history. Every year since, on Chanukah, I recall the story that he told about his experience in a Polish forest during the Second World War. – GL

After the Warsaw Ghetto was liquidated, I and a few other people who had escaped went to a big, dense forest in eastern Poland to look for Jewish partisans. We tried to sabotage the rails that were taking food and ammunition to the Eastern Front. Night after night freight trains passed. If we could take apart the rails, or take apart the screws, there would be an accident and the munitions or food wouldn't be delivered. We did manage to derail several trains, and one of them blew up because it was loaded with ammunition.

Yehuda Elberg

After that the Germans were really mad and felt the need to liquidate us. We were like a little bug in the eye of an elephant, driving the Germans crazy. They couldn't find us easily; it was a big forest. They brought down an entire division of soldiers to comb the forest to get us. It was winter then, and the Germans could track us through our footsteps in the snow. We were a small group, and we realized that if we stayed together and they caught one, they would catch us all. It was a very dangerous situation and for the first time I was very scared.

We decided to separate, and we divided whatever food we had among us and the ammunition as well. We reminded ourselves to keep a bullet for ourselves. And then we divided the matches. This was a big thing, although it sounds funny, but a match was a treasure. We could always go in the field and dig out potatoes or even steal some, but the matches were our only means of cooking the food. So we divided our small supply of matches, and I got six of them.

One of the iconic photos of the final expulsion of the Jews from Warsaw.

And then we separated.

That night was a very dark night. The darkness was the kind where you felt you could touch it. You could close your fist and the darkness would remain inside it. If I tried to move, I fell over stones or bushes, or I bumped into a tree. I walked a little and then I sat down to rest. I was alone. I couldn't leave the forest because I knew it was surrounded by soldiers, not to mention the soldiers who were inside the forest looking for us.

I was alone, completely alone – and it felt like I was drowning in the darkness. I stretched my legs by crawling around a bit but I had pains and itching all over. I was starting to feel sorry for myself, and this was a dangerous thing because it takes away your energy. It was December, in deep winter, and I tried to think what was going on in the world. I decided it must be Chanukah, and a wave of nostalgia came over me thinking about being home on Chanukah with the children and candles and Chanukah gelt. In Poland, the Jews would light their candles in the windows or in an open door because of the mitzvah of pirsumei nisah – to spread word of the miracle of Chanukah.

Tears started to run down my face thinking of this, and because it was so cold, the tears were sharp and freezing. But as I thought about Chanukah candles in the Jewish home, it stopped being a sad thought. I started to imagine that stars were coming out in the sky. You know how some stars are not visible until the night gets darker. I thought: up there in the sky it is also Chanukah, they're lighting the candles! I thought: there are Jews all over the world, and in every Jewish home there are now Chanukah candles burning. If only I could light some too. I put my hand in the pocket of my jacket and touched the matches. I thought, I have matches but where could I get candles!

But then I realized that I didn't need candles – the matches could be my candles.

I lit one match. And then another, and another. I lit all six matches, and I made the blessing, lehadlik ner shel Chanukah, and said a Shehechayanu. And suddenly the loneliness melted away. I felt that I could see all the candles being lit all over the world and that I wasn't alone.

I think that this saved my life. I had no matches left to make a fire and this was a great loss, but lighting the matches saved me from despair. This was a Chanukah I would remember all my life.

Yehuda Elberg was a Yiddish novelist, essayist, community organizer, and businessman. He established the Writers' Union and Dos Naye Lebn, the first Jewish newspaper in Poland after the war, and was the author of numerous novels, chassidic tales, short stories, and dramas in Yiddish and Hebrew. His novel Oifn Shpitz fun a Mast (On the Tip of a Mast, translated in English as Ship of the Hunted) won the Manger Prize for literature, as did The Empire of Kalman the Cripple. He won the Prime Minister's Award in Israel for Yiddish Literature in 1985. He lived in Montreal from 1956 until his death in 2003.

Gilah Langner is a Washington-based rabbi, educator, and chaplain. A full interview with Yehuda Elberg appeared in the 2005-6 issue of Kerem (www.kerem.org).

CHANUKAH GREETINGS
Reitmans
(CANADA) LIMITED
Reitmans
Designed for real life
ADDITION ELLE
RW&CO.
penningtons cassis
thyme
SMART SET

Happy Chanukah

FIRST CHANUKAH IN ISRAEL

A family of immigrants from Ethiopia celebrated their first Chanukah in Israel last year at the absorption centre in Mevasseret Zion, outside Jerusalem. A traditional Ethiopian house, a gojo, was [illegible] on the premises. (Flash90 photo)

This Chanukah Give Yourself the Gift of Israel

Ask about our Gift Certificates!

with 8 MIRACULOUS DEALS

Please contact your travel agent or EL AL

416·967·4222
1·800·361·6174
www.elal.com

AIR +5 NIGHTS AT THE INBAL starting at $1515*

WINTER SPECIAL starting at $696*

MATMID SPECIAL
$560* + 249 points

BUSINESS CLASS SPECIAL starting at $3398*

FREE UPGRADE TO BUSINESS CLASS
Fly twice before March 31

FREE RETURN FLIGHT TO EILAT with flights to Tel Aviv

20% MORE MATMID POINTS
when transferring Diners Club points

FLY FROM TORONTO TO Budapest, Cairo, Hong Kong, Mumbai, Beijing & Johannesburg VIA TEL AVIV

*Tax and fuel not included. Some restrictions apply. Subject to availability

Women bond during jeep expedition in Israel

By RENA GODFREY

Somewhere in the Israeli Negev Desert, it's 2 a.m. and I am cocooned in a damp quick-dry towel, desperately trying to fall asleep in my jeep, despite the howling sound of animals nearby.

I feel like howling, too. I'm at my wit's end after listening to my teammate snore like a freight train for hours, in the confines of our tent. I'm shivering. My stomach is in knots as if it's my first day of junior high school. The other women on the trip are already bonding and having fun, little cliques are starting to surface. I feel left out despite my overly friendly and probably overdone efforts.

Most of all, I don't think I can make it through Desert Queen, a weeklong women's jeep expedition in the Israeli desert. I manage to get cell reception and call my hubby crying, hoping he will magically helicopter me out of this mess I've gotten myself into. I finally calm down when my 17-year-old daughter gets on the phone and assures me that I will indeed survive.

In my sleep-deprived delirium, I replay the soft-spoken words of Yifat Yeger, concept manager of the Desert Queen (DQ) jeep expedition, in my mind. She spoke to the 35 eager participants seated on pillows in the middle of Ben Shemen Forest only a few days ago on orientation day.

"On this journey, you will do things you have never done before. You will face many challenges and prove to yourself what you can be." Yeger is a full-time psychotherapist, which would explain the carefully planned series of physical activities intermingled with ingenious ice-breakers and bonding exercises, all beautifully orchestrated into our very full days of jeep driving, or "jeeping" as my new Israeli friends would say."Okay," I said out loud to the rising sun, "I can do this."

I started to think of all the firsts I had experienced on the first day of Desert Queen. I drove a jeep for the first time in my life, negotiated treacherous cliffs and rocks for what seemed like hundreds of kilometres, slid down sand dunes, and shmeared my body with blobs of henna at my first henna party. Yes, I was having a great time, I just needed to let go. In fact, "letting go" and "freedom" were themes incorporated into our daily activities from the very first day.

Desert Queen 2009, a division of Geographical Tours, officially kicked off its second year running in Israel, in partnership with the Jewish Agency, at the Erez Crossing Border into Gaza, where Israeli soldier Gilad Schalit was kidnapped in 2006. His parents, Aviva and Noam Schalit, were present along with the Israeli media, which captured our send-off, as we released white balloons of hope in the air for Gilad's safe return. We then drove away in a convoy of 10 jeeps, in teams of three and four participants, to begin our incredible journey. On this day, and the days that followed, we never knew what the itinerary would be until the very last minute,

Climbing a rock formation in the Negev forcing participants to let go and free themselves of always being in the driver's seat.

On the second day, after a well-deserved night's rest, I felt like a new woman. I started to relax and enjoy the exquisite landscape around me and befriended some of the most amazing women I have ever come across. My physical limits were put to the test, and the more I pushed myself, the more rewarding my days became. In addition to mastering the art of peeing outside, I boogied whenever the moment grabbed me to Abba's Dancing Queen, hiked in some incredible wadis and rappelled 80 feet down the Ramon Crater. The days were full, and so were our tummies. Oh glorious food!

There was a fantastic group of women and men who whisked ahead of us throughout the day to prepare a celebration of Israeli cuisine fit for a queen. One night, in the dark, we stopped our jeeps and saw lanterns, which led us up to a Nebetian fortress. There, we discovered a beautiful display of yummy yogurt fruit parfaits and this was only a snack. The team's creativity and humorous antics never ceased to amaze us all. Every day we dined under the sun and stars on tables with colourful linens, eating skewers of grilled chicken, beef and fish, hearty beef stews, aromatic and nutrient rich vegetable soups, a multitude of perfectly chopped Israeli salads, and always a healthy dose of hummus.

Continued on page B5

A Very Happy Chanukah

Faigie & Rubin Zimmerman and Family

Wishing all of our clients, colleagues and friends a happy Hanukkah.

RSM Richter

CHAI KOSHER POULTRY

115 Saulter Street South
Toronto, Ontario M4M 3K8
416-462-1313 Fax 416-462-1758
1-800-561-8132

We wish all our relatives, customers & friends a festive Chanukah.

Chuck Weinberg & family

Ask for our products at your favorite store
A Product of Quality. . .A Respect for Tradition
Ontario's only strictly Kosher (COR 218) Poultry Processor
Federally Inspected
Kosher For Passover Year Round

Browns

wishes all their customers and friends
a very happy and healthy

Chanukah

Montreal - Quebec City - Ottawa - Toronto - Winnipeg
Calgary - Edmonton - Vancouver - Chicago

We experienced the golden sun rising over the Negev

Continued from page B4

As I settled into my newfound DQ groove, I became smitten with the participants who ranged in age from 20 to 60. These beautiful queens who captured my heart were a mixed group of mothers, students from abroad, a few middle-aged Americans, and me, the token Canadian. They left behind their families, friends and jobs, in search of a break from their busy lives and the opportunity to meet other women. There was no shortage of accolades for this unique women's expedition, which also takes place in exotic destinations outside Israel.

Laurie, a pediatric nurse from Pennsylvania, was certain that the valuable experiences gained would not have happened if she hadn't signed up for DQ. "This has been a 'growing' experience for me, and it has helped me to look at some fundamental points in my life and what I need to work on," she said.

For Yana, an entrepreneur who splits her time between Germany and Israel, DQ was about "liberty, freedom and friendship" and the ability to "laugh like a child again."

For Israelis Hana, Merav and Etty, jeep driving and meeting women from abroad was the attraction.

Our expert Israeli guide, Vered, was our fearless leader who carefully directed us up steep hikes through wadis, along the way filling our expanding minds with historical and ecological anecdotes. Together, we built a fence in a nature reserve, and also cycled one morning at 4 a.m. in total darkness.

Toward the end of our ride, we climbed to a peak, to experience the golden sun rising over the Negev, splattering the sky with pinks and purples. In the near distance, we saw a bountiful breakfast luxuriously displayed under a canopy only befitting 35 queens.

The surprises continued and one evening we jumped into our jeeps, followed the lead car for only a few kilometres, jumped out, and were handed lit torches. After we walked down a path surrounded by sand dunes, we were met by two camels that had just delivered our delicious Bedouin prepared dinner of roasted chicken, salads and homemade pita.

Navigating the terrain

A campsite of our tents. [Rena Godfrey photos]

My most memorable evening by far was our last night in the desert. A storm was brewing. Gusts of wind threw our tents from side to side, and sand poured into my sleeping bag, into my mouth and eyes. It started to rain, and I buried myself in my sleeping bag, hoping I could weather the storm. The DQ team worked swiftly through the night to make sure our tents were safely secured, but for some reason, mine was not. Lucky for me, Vered, grabbed me and my belongings and rescued me to her sturdy tent. I couldn't help but think back to the beginning of the trip, and how alone I felt. Although I was still sleeping in a tent, I now felt completely at home.

The next morning, happy and heavily dusted, we ventured out of the majestic desert for the last time. We had truly entered civilization and welcomed the use of a real toilet at an army base, where women soldiers taught male soldiers to drive tanks.

A few hours later, we pulled into the Royal Tulip Hotel in Eilat, for a luxurious final night. That night, I drifted off to sleep with a huge grin on my face, thinking about Yeger's closing remarks: "What did you learn from this journey?" A question I am still in the process of answering.

For certain, I haven't experienced this delicious tingling feeling of being myself – my old self – pre-responsibilities, pre-children, for a very long time. What a privilege to be able to pause, learn, and then move on to a new journey.

For more information about Desert Queen, visit www.malka-net.co.il.

Rena Godfrey is a freelance writer based in Toronto.

Happy Chanukah
A time for celebration
Deloitte extends its warmest and best wishes during this holiday season
Deloitte.
© Deloitte & Touche LLP and affiliated entities.

Russia then and now

By WENDY EISEN

The 1917 Russian Revolution ended centuries of Czarist rule and transformed Russia into a socialist republic based on Marxist-Leninist ideology. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR) established a new order of alleged equality in which the people worked for the state and all democratic institutions were suppressed.

Communism may have worked well for industrial and technological advances in the USSR, but it did not work well for most of the people. The single-party government denied its population basic rights and freedoms. Soviet citizens lived in peace if they toed the party line, but were oppressed if they did not.

Under the Communist regime, religion was replaced by atheism as a fundamental ideological goal of the state. Religious property was expropriated and believers were harassed. Those who wished to practise their religion and cultural traditions were forced to do so in secrecy.

Within two generations, most Jews had become assimilated, but their Jewishness never disappeared. The letter "J" for "Jude" was stamped in their internal passports.

Antisemitism was not a new phenomenon in Russia. Jews had been scapegoats during Czarist times. Blamed for society's ills and economic miseries, they were banished from major Russian cities to the Pale of Settlement, a confined area that included present-day Lithuania, Belarus, Poland, Moldova and Ukraine. There they were easy targets for government-sanctioned pogroms as thousands of Jews were massacred and Jewish shops and synagogues destroyed.

Under Soviet leader Joseph Stalin, life for Jews was no better. Hebrew and Yiddish publications were banned, synagogues were converted into storehouses, and Jewish schools and organizations were shut down. Antisemitism peaked with the murder, in 1952, of 26 prominent Yiddish writers and poets.

During those dark days for Soviet Jewry, the chassidic Chabad Lubavitch movement worked clandestinely, teaching Orthodoxy to Jews in large cities and small towns across the Soviet Union, with the goal of helping them retain their roots.

Israel's victory in the 1967 Six Day War inspired a handful of assimilated Soviet Jews to apply to emigrate to their historic homeland. Upon applying for exit visas, these newly emerging Zionists lost their jobs, were denounced as traitors and became victims of a vicious antisemitic campaign.

Soviet refusal to grant visas strengthened Jewish resolve, and the community of Refuseniks, as they were dubbed, began to grow in size and determination. These few hundred heroic Jews, who dared to defy the world's most powerful totalitarian regime, were under constant surveillance by the KGB, and arrests were made at the slightest provocation. Jews in the free world took up the struggle, using their freedom to speak out for those whose voices were silenced.

* * *

The Soviets' attempt to suppress the Jewish movement by jamming free-world radio programs and cutting telephone lines made travel to the USSR an effective means to obtain names of Jews who requested invitations from Israel and names of those whose applications for exit visas had been denied.

In December 1978, a friend and I visited with Refuseniks in Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev. Many were renowned academicians, privileged members of the Soviet elite, who were living in limbo, wasting the most valuable years of their professional careers. While we sat together in their cramped apartments, the tears in our eyes met the tears in theirs as they relayed details of harassment and arrests. The feeling was of gloom and despair, particularly for those who had been refused for years on end.

The KGB disrupts a demonstration by Jews in Moscow in 1988.

Soviet Jewish immigration to Israel ebbed and flowed with the ebb and flow of U.S.-USSR relations. The Jackson-Vanick Amendment, passed in the U.S. Congress in 1974, linked trade credits with emigration and was largely responsible for keeping the emigration door ajar.

In April 1988, I returned to the USSR with a small group of prominent Canadians. Despite the fact that "Glasnost" and "Perestroika" (openness and restructuring) brought optimism, some Jews whom I had met a decade earlier were still waiting to leave. For others, anguish was mounting as threats of compulsory army service for their sons threatened to delay their emigration for many more years.

A demonstration took place outside Moscow's Lenin Library. Within minutes, two KGB officers arrived on the scene and broke it up. So much for Glasnost!

Cries of "let my people go" were heard across the ocean as quiet diplomacy between the Soviet and free-world governments took place behind the scenes. Freedom was getting closer.

This grassroots movement played no small part in placing the issue of human rights on the world agenda, and along with economic devastation and political unrest resulted ultimately, in the collapse of the Soviet Union. On Dec. 25, 1991, the red flag bearing the hammer and sickle, which had flown atop the Kremlin for 70 years, was lowered for the last time.

With the parting of the Iron Curtain, Jews were free to leave the country of their birth. Emigration figures escalated steadily, and during the next decade more than1.5 million Jews left the former Soviet Union, with one million settling in Israel.

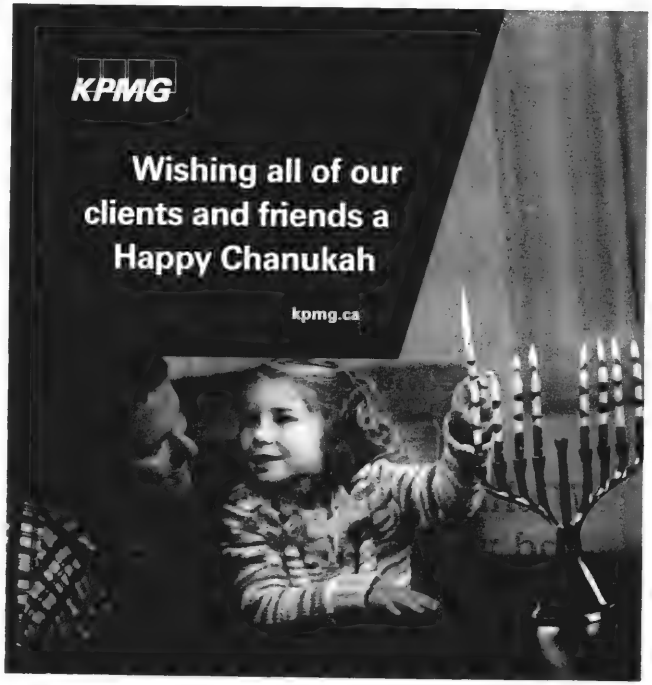
"Operation Exodus" became the focus of the United Jewish Appeal's annual fundraising campaign, to help cover the cost of bringing Soviet Jews to Israel and absorbing them into Israeli society.

* * *

Twenty years have passed. Totalitarianism has been replaced by a free-market economy. Dark, drab clothing has given way to vibrant, stylish fashions, and in public places, citizens engage in animated discussions, in direct contrast to the sombreness of the past.

Continued on page B7

HAPPY CHANUKAH
Wishing you and your family a
חנוכה שמח
MADE IN ISRAEL
• Prairie Dog, 960 Eglinton Avenue West 416-782-4596
• The Naot Store, 5891 Leslie Street (Pickle Barrel Plaza) 416-496-9116
• The Naot Store, 1102 Centre Street West, Thornhill 905-597-7191
www.naot.ca
NAOT
FOOTWEAR • SOLEMATES INC.



Jews have options today to stay or to leave

Continued from page B6

I was among 40 participants who returned recently as part of a UJA Federation of Greater Toronto mission to the former Soviet Union, to mark the 20th anniversary of Operation Exodus. The spectacular sites in Russia's two largest cities paled in comparison to the miracle of the resurgence of Jewish life.

Today, there is a vibrant Jewish presence in St Petersburg and Moscow, home to 100,000 and 300,000 Jews respectively. The Jewish Agency for Israel and the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee work together to revitalize Jewish life. Their activity, aimed at strengthening Jewish identity, is repeated in dozens of Russian cities.

Dilapidated synagogues have been restored and new ones have been built, offering choices of traditional rabbinic Orthodoxy, Reform Judaism and chassidic Lubavitch worship. Authentic Russian cuisine may be found in a number of kosher restaurants, and Jewish community centres feature state-of-the-art kindergartens as well as educational and cultural programming for young people and middle generation adults. A network of social services provides care for the impoverished and the elderly.

Israeli emissaries continue to inspire, connect with and empower Jewish youth. Teenagers are elated with their newly found Judaism. They attend Jewish summer and winter camps, youth programs and leadership training. Thousands have visited Israel on Birthright trips, and many have spent a year studying in Israeli high schools. Israel-oriented programs and Hebrew classes encourage aliyah to Israel, particularly among the young.

There is a familial role reversal in Russia today: children are teaching Jewish traditions and customs to their parents.

Many Jewish leaders choose to remain in Russia. They have created organizations that meet Jewish needs, similar to those in the West. Privatization has provided opportunities for Jewish entrepreneurs to achieve financial success. Their philanthropy has contributed to the construction of many Jewish institutions and synagogues, one of which is the new Holocaust Memorial Synagogue, located in an area west of Moscow.

Russian Jews have options today: to stay or to leave. In 2009 and by the end of 2010, 14,000 Russian Jews will have immigrated to Israel, 34 per cent of whom are under the age of 25. With antisemitism proliferating around the globe, problems could escalate in Russia and emigration will increase once more.

Among the memorable moments in the Soviet Jewry campaign was one that occurred in Brussels, in 1976, at the Second World Conference on Soviet Jewry. There, former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir asked rhetorically: "What is it that antisemites can't forgive us? What is the greatest of our faults? We refuse to disappear. No matter how strong, brutal or ruthless the powers against us might be, here we are! Millions of bodies have been broken, buried alive and burned to death, but never was anyone able to break the spirit of the Jewish people."

Natan Sharansky, the most celebrated Jewish prisoner, who became the symbol of the Soviet Jewry movement, demonstrated this unbreakable spirit during his 3,255 days of incarceration in Soviet prisons and labour camps. His passion for Zionism triumphed over any attempt to repress it.

Sharansky, whose initial journey from the USSR to Israel took 13 years, flew from Israel for one day to join our group in Moscow. Currently serving as Israel's chairman of the Jewish Agency for Israel, Sharansky spearheads the effort to reinforce the bonds between the Jews of Russia and the State of Israel.

On Nov. 4, the Israeli government hosted a moving ceremony in the Knesset to honour the Refuseniks and activists from around the world, applauding the glorious achievement that changed the course of modern Jewish history.

Wendy Eisen is the author of Count Us In — The Struggle to Free Soviet Jews.

Kindergarten children celebrate Sukkot at the Jewish Cultural Centre in Moscow in October 2010.

The letters on the dreidle stand for "ness gadol haya sham – a great miracle happened there," but those of us who are part of the Na'amat family are responsible for creating small miracles every day.

This holiday season, we ask you to play a part in fulfilling the wish of a child, teen, or woman in Israel who is desperate for their small miracle to come true. Please give with your heart and help better their lives.

Wishing you a joyous and warm Chanukah.

Enhancing the lives of women and children in Canada and Israel since 1925

Na'amat Canada Toll Free: 1.888.278.0792 E-Mail: naamat@total.net Web: www.naamat.com

At the Knesset, a candle for the Russian Jews

By SUE FISHKOFF
JTA

It was December 1982, and my kibbutz ulpan had just been invited to light the Chanukah menorah for the Israeli Knesset. The Israeli army was deep in the heart of Lebanon, the Cold War was raging, talks with the PLO were years away, and Israel was feeling both isolated and feisty. Freedom from oppression was the theme for that year's holiday, and my six-month work-study ulpan program had been chosen for this annual honour because we had so many students from countries where Jews were being oppressed.

There was an 18-year-old, Ahuva, from Aleppo, whose jaw had been broken by Syrian border guards when she was caught during her first escape attempt. She made it out the second time – on foot.

There was 19-year-old Daoud, now David, and his twin brother, Ofer, who grew up Muslim in Beirut and only learned they were Jewish that summer, when their Israeli-born mother revealed her heritage, divorced her Lebanese husband and dragged the twins to Israel as its army poured across their border.

We had the three French boys in the class: Charlie from Morocco; Michel representing Tunisia; and Didier, whose parents were Algerian.

There was a student from Iran who fled after the fall of the shah three years earlier. Another student claimed Egyptian ancestry – good enough for the Knesset – and one young man from Glasgow also would light a candle, presumably in the name of Scottish independence.

I might argue that the student from Paris who refused in class to use the Hebrew word "olah," or "ascend" to describe her move to Israel, on the grounds that any departure from Paris could only be a descent, also was living under oppression. She just didn't know it.

The only thing we were missing was a student from the Soviet Union. The Iron Curtain had shut tight in 1980, few new immigrants were arriving and we were some years away from the great exodus of the early 1990s. Not a single Boris or Natasha to add to the mix.

Then I let slip that I spoke Russian. And my grandparents were from Ukraine – sure, they arrived in 1906 and 1912, but our ulpan teacher was eager to seize upon any connection, however tangential, to clinch that Knesset deal.

> 'I thought back to my first trip to the USSR'

She renamed me Sonia Pitchkopf and instructed me to prepare a short speech to deliver, in Russian-accented Hebrew, as I lit my candle.

After the laughter died down in class, I realized the enormity of what I had signed on for. This was no Purimspiel. This was the Parliament of the Jewish state, and here I was, tasked with pulling a fast one over on men and women, some of whom certainly spoke Russian, or at least were capable of sniffing out a ruse of this magnitude.

As I began writing my speech, I thought back to my first trip to the USSR. My Russian class from Cornell University landed in Leningrad on Dec. 31, 1975, and as so often happened with Jewish visitors from the West in those years, I found myself in a Jewish apartment within hours of my arrival, plucked out of the crowd by a young Jewish member of the Komsomol group sent to greet us.

The table was spread with a lavish repast – mushrooms in cream sauce, pickled vegetables, carrot salad, all kinds of smoked fish. I learned later how long the family had scrimped to put together that holiday meal. People crowded around me, eager to ask questions about America. Was there really so much street crime? What did people think of the pullout from Vietnam? Had I ever been to Israel? I had stars in my eyes, so excited was I to be in the forbidden land of Cossacks and Bolsheviks, the centre of such rapt attention.

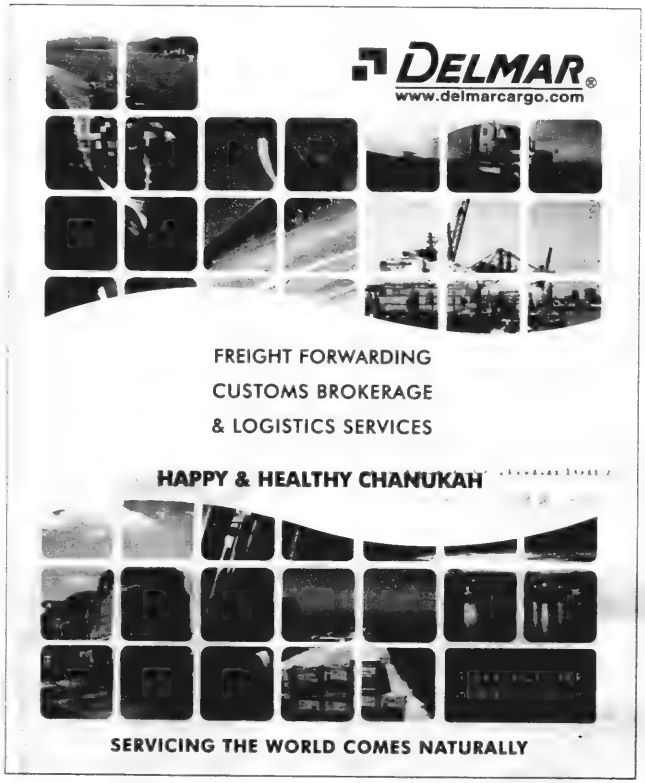
Then two young men dragged out a book and thrust it into my lap. It was an English-language edition of the Encyclopedia Judaica they had opened to the page on Chanukah. One of them pointed to a drawing of the nine-branched Chanukiyah and asked me to explain its use.

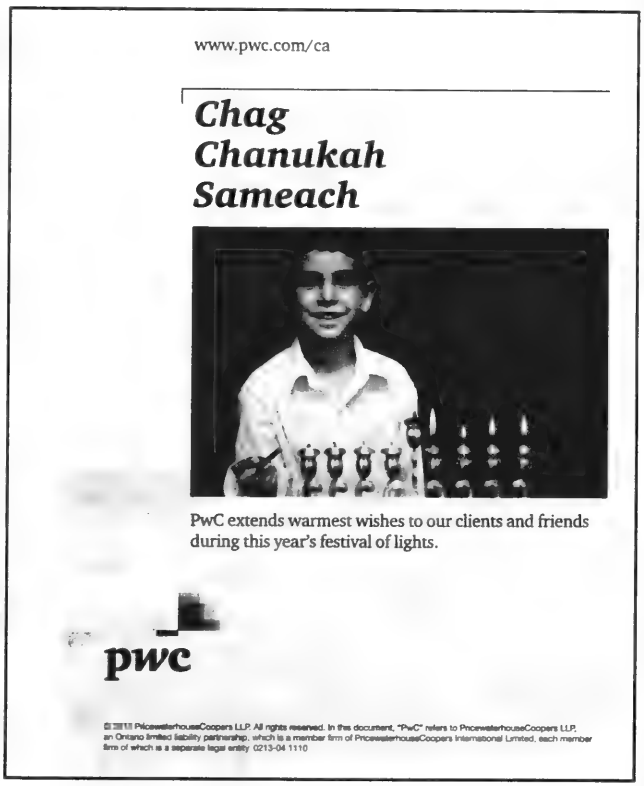
Thinking he was joking, I smiled. These were university educated people. This was the 20th century. He had to be pulling my leg.

He wasn't. And I'll always remember my shock and sadness as I realized it. So here I was, on my Israeli kibbutz, purporting to masquerade as people whose pain and isolation were so very real? I couldn't do it. I wouldn't.

My ulpan lit the Chanukah candles that year on the floor of the Knesset building in Jerusalem. And when my turn came, I was Sue Fishkoff, not Sonia Pitchkopf. And I lit in the name of my own grandparents, free in America, and in the name of the five young men I had met that night in Leningrad.

Two of them already were living in New Jersey. The others were still in Leningrad, now St. Petersburg, as late as 1996, the last time I visited them. And my ulpan friends called me Pitchkopf for the rest of the year.





www.pwc.com/ca
Chag
Chanukah
Sameach
PwC extends warmest wishes to our clients and friends during this year's festival of lights.
pwc
© 2010 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. All rights reserved. In this document, "PwC" refers to PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, an Ontario limited liability partnership, which is a member firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers International Limited, each member firm of which is a separate legal entity. 0213-04 1110

Happy Chanukah

Finns show solidarity with Israel

Supporters of Israel in Finland recently took to the streets to show their solidarity with the Jewish state. The inscription on the T-shirt is "I too wait for Gilad," referring to Gilad Schalit, the Israeli soldier who was captured by Hamas in a cross-border raid in 2006. The writing on the poster being held by one of the supporters is the traditional rallying cry of the Jewish People: Am Yisrael Chai. The people of Israel lives!

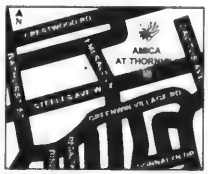
Wishing everyone a warm and Happy Chanukah

~ Holiday Social ~

Wednesday, December 8th, 2010 - 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm

Join us for our Holiday Social, and enjoy an afternoon of festive entertainment and warm refreshments.

Amica at Thornhill
A Wellness & Vitality™ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West
Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400



10-1636

- Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
- All Inclusive - Full Service Fine Dining
- Wellness & Vitality™ Programs
- Amica VITALIS™ Assisted Living Suites & Services

www.amica.ca

AMICA

A Russian winter and the Festival of Lights

By CURT LEVIANT
Special to The CJN

It was deep into the bitter Russian winter of 1843. My great-great-grandfather, Chaim Leviant, then a youngster of 15, was driving his grandfather Moshe's horse-drawn sleigh along the snow-covered roads not far from Kariukovke. This shtetl in Ukraine was noted for its sugar factory owned by the well-known Jewish millionaire and philanthropist, Brodsky.

In another hour or so the first light of Chanukah would be kindled at the house of Chaim's grandparents, where the entire family was gathered to sing songs, play dreidel and eat Grandmother Dobbe's crispy potato latkes.

The snow had finally stopped. The late afternoon sky was clear. The roads, the roofs, the trees were white. The fields were endless sheets of white. All was silent, except for the music of the little bells in the horse's harness; the snow so deep that even the falling of the horse's hooves made no sound.

Young Chaim drove carefully. He knew that during the winter, drivers had to follow three crucial rules: dress warmly, never leave the path – and never ever fall asleep. Yes, he had heard of faithful horses who brought sleeping drivers home. But he also knew the tales of tragic accidents – a slumbering driver could fall from his perch, land in the snow, and not be seen again until the spring thaw.

At the behest of his grandfather, Chaim had just delivered a goose, dried beans, flour, oil and potatoes to a poor Jewish family in a neighbouring shtetl. Grandfather Moshe was a wealthy man who supplied the sugar factory with beets. He owned his house, but he leased the land on which he grew the beets, for Jews were forbidden to own land in Russia.

Curt Leviant

Despite the bearskin great-coat and blanket on his feet, Chaim was cold. To counter the chill in his bones, he thought of the Chanukah lights and of his grandmother's latkes. He began to sing, "I'll soon be home to celebrate" to the tune of Maoz Tsur.

Chaim held the reins as the sleigh glided along. Suddenly, he glimpsed something on the edge of a snowdrift. Could that be a fur hat? "Whoa!" Chaim shouted, tugging at the reins. The horse stopped. Yes, a fur hat. The youngster jumped off the wagon. He picked up the hat – but his heart nearly stopped at the fright of what he saw beneath it – a gloved hand. "My God!" Chaim cried. He quickly began to dig in the snow with his hands, until he saw what he saw: a boy of about 12 or 13, wearing the fine clothes of the gentry.

Chaim put his ear to the boy's chest and nose; he was stunned but breathing. As he lifted the lad into the sleigh, Chaim surmised what had happened. A snoozing coachman, very likely drunk, had dropped the reins and the unrestrained horses had set off in a gallop. Then – a rut in the road, and the lad must have tumbled out into a snowbank while the sleigh sped on.

Chaim patted the boy's face. He rubbed his hands and chest. He took off his own bearskin coat and wrapped the boy in it, then placed some blankets around his feet. Over his own shoulders Chaim draped another blanket like a tallit.

"Can you hear me? Can you hear me?" Chaim asked. But the boy's eyes remained closed. When the sleigh began to move, however, Chaim heard a faint moan.

"Father, father," the boy whimpered.

"You're safe," Chaim said. "Who is your father? What is your name? Tell me."

The boy answered slowly. "Arkady… Ivanovich… Goluptsin. I fell off our coach."

"Ivan Goluptsin? Our provincial governor?"

"My father…"

Following the boy's instructions, my great-great-grandfather Chaim made his way to the Goluptsin winter mansion. He knew he was late for Chanukah lights; he had passed the turn-off for Kariukovke long ago.

A servant opened the door, took one look and shouted, "He's here. Master, he's here." Arkady's mother and the governor rushed into the warm, brightly lit entranceway. They saw a tall boy supporting their son, who was wrapped in a huge bearskin coat they did not recognize.

Arkady was laid on a sofa, and his mother began rubbing his face and hands, while two servants removed the bearskin and the boy's leather boots. Another attendant came with two glasses of hot tea on a silver tray, for the boy and for Chaim.

"He saved me, Mama. He found me. He saved me, Papa."

"We've sent messengers to all the police stations," said the governor. "And that idiot of a coachman still hasn't come back… Who are you, my boy?"

Continued on page B11

DEL PROPERTY MANAGEMENT INC.
Wishes all our clients, staff and friends a very happy Chanukah

The partners of Starkman, Salsberg & Feldberg
Chartered Accountants
Lorne Cappell Barry Feldberg Martin Togman
Wish all their clients and friends a peaceful, happy Chanukah
1600 Steeles Avenue West, Suite 316
Concord, Ontario L4K 4M2
Telephone: 905-669-9900 Fax: 905-669-9901
e-mail: ssf-ca@starkmansalsbergfeldberg.com

Bruno's Fine Foods
HAPPY CHANUKAH
to all our customers & friends
2055 Avenue Road 416-481-5560
9665 Bayview Ave. 905-737-4280 • 1560 Yonge St. 416-923-1311
4335 Bloor W. 416-626-9876 • 4242 Dundas W. 416-234-1106
www.brunosfinefoods.com

We wish everyone in the Community A Happy Chanukah
Chag Sameach
Baycrest Enriching Care Enhancing Knowledge Enlightening Minds

Kaydental
Dr. Stephen M. Kay
General, Family and Cosmetic Dentistry
Dr. Melvyn A. Kay
Specialist in Dentistry for Children and People with Special Needs
738 Sheppard Ave East
Suite 201, Toronto ON
M2K 1C4
Bessarion Subway Station,
Free Parking
416-223-2151
Emergencies Welcome
kaydental.ca
"Happy Chanukah"
to our Patients, Friends and Family.

Blaney McMurtry extends best wishes to clients and friends for a happy and healthy Chanukah.
Blaney McMurtry
For more information

The coin is worth far more than its weight in gold

Continued from page B10

"I am Chaim Leviant from Kariukovke."

"Oh, yes, where Brodsky has his sugar plant. I know Brodsky well. Do you know who I am?"

"Your son told me."

"How old are you? Sixteen?"

"Actually, I'm 15."

"You are tall for your age, Chaim, and so grown up, too." The governor put his hand on his heart. "Thank you, thank you for saving my son's life. Come with me, please."

Governor Goluptsin put his arm around Chaim's shoulders and led him into a spacious dining room. A large, glittering chandelier lit with many candles hung over a long mahogany table. "Why are you hesitating, my boy? Come with me."

"Sir, if you don't mind... I... I am late. Our entire family is waiting at my grandfather's house, ready to celebrate our holiday, Chanukah. I should have been there an hour ago, and they must be worried."

"I can understand that worry, Chaim," Goluptsin said. "We ourselves..." and he broke off, holding back tears. He motioned to Chaim. "It will only be a moment."

My great-great-grandfather Chaim followed the governor of the entire Kiev district into his office. An oil portrait of the czar hung behind Goluptsin's gleaming desk. "Please sit down."

The governor opened a drawer a placed a purse on the desk.

"I know it is your holiday and it is your custom to give coins to the children." He smiled.

"This I learned from Brodksy. Chaim, how many grandchildren does your grandfather have?"

Chaim began counting to himself. Yakov, Israel-Noah, Mendl, Tanya, Rachel, Rivka, Dvora and Boris. And Zvama and Kalman, Lazar and Isak, Shmayke and Hillel and... until he reached 18, including himself.

The governor counted out 18 of the large, heavy, five-ruble gold coins and spread them on the desk. The coins glittered in the light. Chaim knew that an average worker's wages were a ruble a month.

"Sir," Chaim said, "please don't think me ungrateful, but I don't want to be rewarded for the mitzvah of saving a life. The Talmud teaches us that when someone saves one life it is as if he has saved an entire world. This alone is my reward."

Governor Goluptsin looked at Chaim. "Hmm. I see... Well, then, is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes," said my great-great-grandfather Chaim, and the prompt response must have surprised the governor. "As you know, sir, Jews are not allowed to own land in Russia, except under rare and very special circumstances. You said you know Brodsky. Our family does business with him. They have always wanted to buy land to cultivate more sugar beets and plant more crops. With this land we could provide jobs for many people in the area."

"So how can I help?"

"Could you get my family permission to buy a tract of land outside Kariukovke?"

For a moment the governor was silent. Chaim thought that surely he would say it was out of his hands. Then Goluptsin's face brightened.

"Chaim, you have my word. Come back in three days. I shall contact the Imperial Bank in Kiev and the documents will be prepared... And thank you again for good deed." Then the governor smiled. "And don't forget your bearskin greatcoat."

• • •

When he arrived at his grandfather's house, Chaim saw no Chanukah lights in the window. But a dozen faces were pressed to the glass and a few people stood outside. Now, for the second time in an hour, Chaim heard the cry, "He's here... he's here."

Inside, the warm house was filled with the aroma of potato latkes. His mother and father kissed and embraced him, and he felt himself hugged from all sides. At that moment Chaim knew what a dreidel felt like, being spun and turned in every direction. And then he quickly told his story.

"Now we can light the first light," said the beaming Grandfather Moshe. "We waited and we worried, but we didn't want to light the first candle without you."

Then Grandmother Dobbe came in with a large platter of latkes, saying, "Right after the blessings we eat."

The menorah was lit, and the shamash candle and the first flame glowed in the house. After the songs were sung, Grandfather Moshe gave Chanukah gelt to all the children. As they sat on the floor playing dreidel for walnuts, Moshe called my great-great-grandfather Chaim into his study.

"You refused the governor, but you won't refuse me, eh?" Moshe said, smiling. Then he pulled a coin from his pocket. "This five-ruble gold piece is for you. When the time comes, give it to your first-born son and tell him to pass it to his son, along with this story."

And this is the coin, whose worth is far more than its weight in gold, that we keep next to our menorah during the eight days of Chanukah.

Like a legend, it sheds its own special light.

Curt Leviant's most recent novel is A Novel of Klass.

happy chanukah

Join us as we host our special Chanukah parties. Enjoy entertainment, refreshments and tours of our residences.

Forest Hill Place • Sun, Dec 5 • 2-4pm

Pine Villa • Sun, Dec 5 • 2-4pm

Terrace Gardens • Wed, Dec 8 • 4:30-6:30pm

Call us for more information about our Winter Stays and our Referral Fee Program!

revera

RSVP today to reserve your spot!

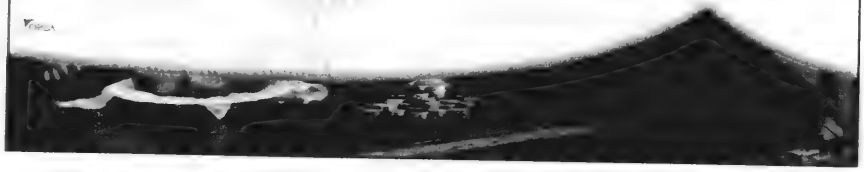
Forest Hill Place Retirement Residence
416-785-1511
645 Castlefield Ave

Pine Villa Retirement Residence
416-787-5626
1035 Eglinton Ave W

Terrace Gardens Retirement Residence
416-789-7670
3705 Bathurst St

reveraliving.com

Revera: Canadian owned since 1961 with over 200 locations.



Happy Chanukah

Discoveries during a visit to Berlin...

By RUTH LADOVSKY

Visiting Berlin was something that I had thought about for a number of years. What sparked my interest was meeting two Israeli couples just after they had spent four days in Berlin. When I asked them what they thought of Berlin, their response in unison was, Mashehu Mashehu! (really something)

As I often do, I set about to prepare myself for this exciting city. I wanted to explore not just the city's past, but its vibrant present. On a visit to the German National Tourist Board's Toronto office, a young Berliner suggested that I first explore Berlin from the water by taking a boat tour on the Spree River (pronounced Shpree). Great Idea! The trip allowed me an excellent overview of the many architectural masterpieces along the river, with a wonderful explanation and interesting history. The water trip took me from West Berlin to East Berlin, past so many of the landmarks that I knew that I would be visiting later – the cupola of the Reichstag building; the Friedrichstrasse Station, which first opened in 1882 and served as an intersection between East and West Berlin from 1960 to 1990; the magnificent Museum Island with its impressive collection of museums. The Berlin Cathedral and the television tower came in to view, and always visible was the gilded dome of the Oranienburgerstrasse shul.

Berlin is home to many outstanding museums and very famous landmarks. There are numerous cultural centres and memorials and so many places of interest, but what made Berlin so memorable for me was the time that I spent exploring different neighbourhoods.

One such neighbourhood is Prenzlauer Berg. Here I could identify many of the landmarks that I had read about in a novel called The Book of Clouds, by Chloe Aridjist. From the Senefelderplatz station of the Ubahn, I walked north to the Friedhof (cemetery) Schonhauser Allee, which should be on every Jewish visitor's itinerary. This cemetery has existed since 1827, and you can see by the dates on many of the headstones, that prior to the war, the Jews of Berlin were not only great in number, but lived long lives. Many important Berliners – entrepreneurs, scholars and artists, including Max Liebermann, are buried there. The cemetery is covered in ivy and moss, and all around, the tall trees were filled with singing birds. It's a place of peace and beauty and memory.

After the cemetery I visited the Rykestrasse Synagogue... the oldest synagogue still in use in Berlin, built in 1902-1904. It has been restored and with 2,000 seats it is today, the largest synagogue in Germany.

The mosaic jewel tones surrounding the bimah create a magical universe all of their own.

Late in the afternoon I decided that it was time to enjoy one of the cafes in the area, and once again, Chloe's book led me right to the south end of Rykestrasse, where I saw the Wasserturm (the watertower) and across from the Wasserturm is Pasternaks restaurant .....a perfect spot for an outdoor meal.

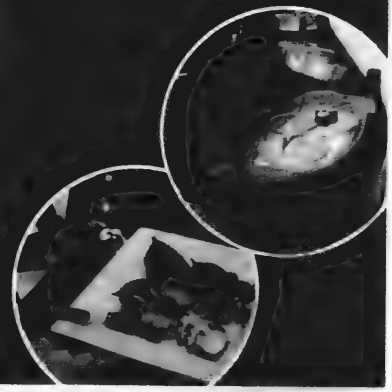
From there, another long walk took me to the East Side Gallery....it's a stretch of the Berlin Wall that has survived to become the world's longest open-air gallery. Painted on the wall are artworks by 118 artists from 21 countries. It's quite far east, so on the return I took the SBahn and listened with pleasure to the recorded announcer's voice calling out the stations.

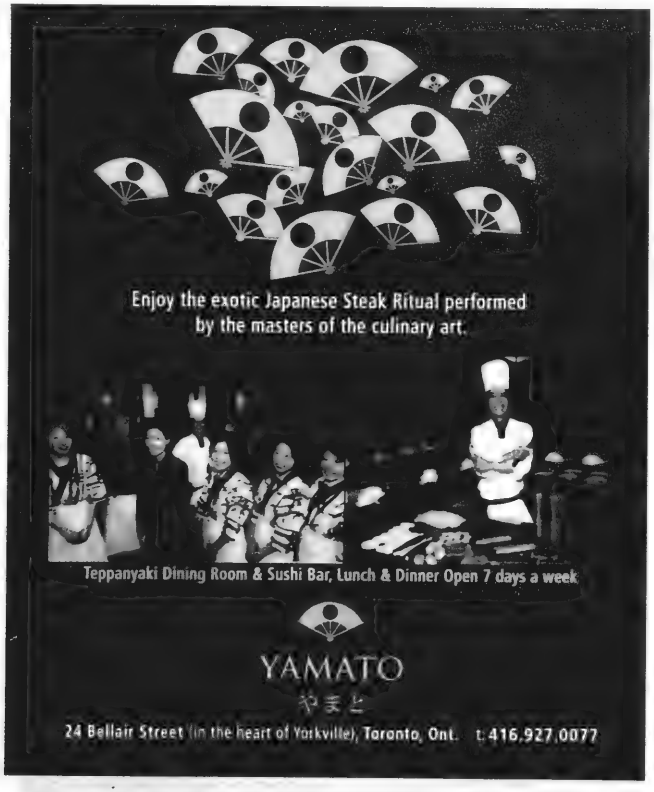
The magnificient dome of the Rykestrasse Synagogue

The author at the East Side Gallery

Continued on page B13

FUNÉ
100 Simcoe Street
Toronto, Ont. M5H 3L2
416.599.3868
HAPPY CHANUKAH
"Where" Magazine reader's choice
Where to Dine
2010
WTD Best
Japanese Restaurant
Toronto's largest floating Sushi Bar in the heart of the Theatre District.
The distinctive bar has a moat with bamboo boats carrying cargoes of sushi.
Menu offers finest teriyaki steak & seafood, charcoal-broiled chicken, salmon, tempura, noodles, sushi, sashimi and much more.





Enjoy the exotic Japanese Steak Ritual performed by the masters of the culinary art.
Teppanyaki Dining Room & Sushi Bar, Lunch & Dinner Open 7 days a week
YAMATO
やまと
24 Bellair Street (in the heart of Yorkville), Toronto, Ont. t: 416.927.0077

... synagogues, coffee houses and a cemetery

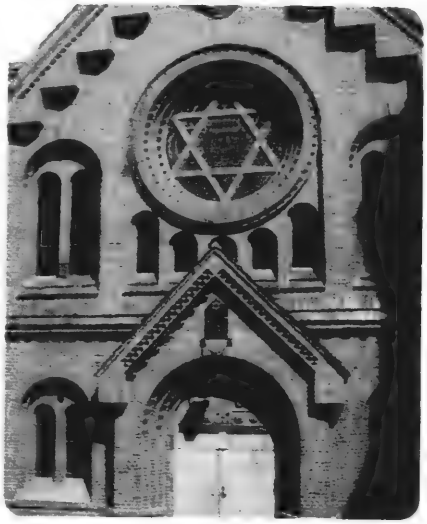
Continued from page B12

Unter Den Linden is a main east-west thoroughfare through the city of Berlin. It earned its name from the rows of linden trees that were first planted more than 3 1/2 centuries ago. On a Sunday, I particularly enjoyed the Boxhagener flea market, just off of Unter den Linden.

Early morning walks in Tiergarten park, as Berliners cycle by to work, and similarly, early walks through the city, allow you a different perspective without the crowds of tourists. While enjoying Pariser Platz and the landmark Brandenburg Gate, I peeked past the front doors of Frank Gehry's pale sandstone Dz-Bank Building to catch a glimpse inside of one of Gehry's trademark fish....a huge whale reminiscent of the waterfront fish he designed for Barcelona's Olympic games.

I travelled by train to Wannsee, and on the return, I took the time to stop at Track 17 in Grunwald. Being an independent traveller allows you time to linger over documents in the Wannsee Conference centre, without feeling a need to move on until you're ready.

In Berlin, there are treasures to be found off courtyards not usually visible from the main streets. One of those treasures is the Pestalozzistrasse Synagogue in Charlottenburg. The Shabbat morning service allowed me a connection to the Jewish community now living in Berlin. I felt a rush of emotions as Romanian-born Cantor Izhak Shaffer came out on to the bimah wearing his regal style chazanut hat and gown.....it has been a long time since I have seen a cantor on a regular Shabbat morning wearing clerical robes. The Pestalozzistrasse shul is a gorgeous synagogue...built 1911-12, with a nice size minyan of regular shul goers. An e-mail from their director told me that their service is 'liberal / conservative', meaning that women and men sit separately and women cannot have an aliyah. An organist accompanies the chazzan and conducts a mixed choir of eight, whose beautiful voices filled the hall from above the bimah.



Pestalozzistrasse Synagogue in Charlottenburg

As if that weren't enough, one of the men who had an aliyah was a former opera singer from Russia....his Borchu soared like an aria! Inside the aron kodesh, the Torahs were magnificently dressed in highly polished silver breast plates and crowns.

At the end of the service, there was a full sit down kiddush lunch....open faced smoked salmon sandwiches and cream cheese , egg and herring and warm conversation. Two Israeli women tourists were also at my table over lunch and the conversation easily moved from Hebrew to English to include all.

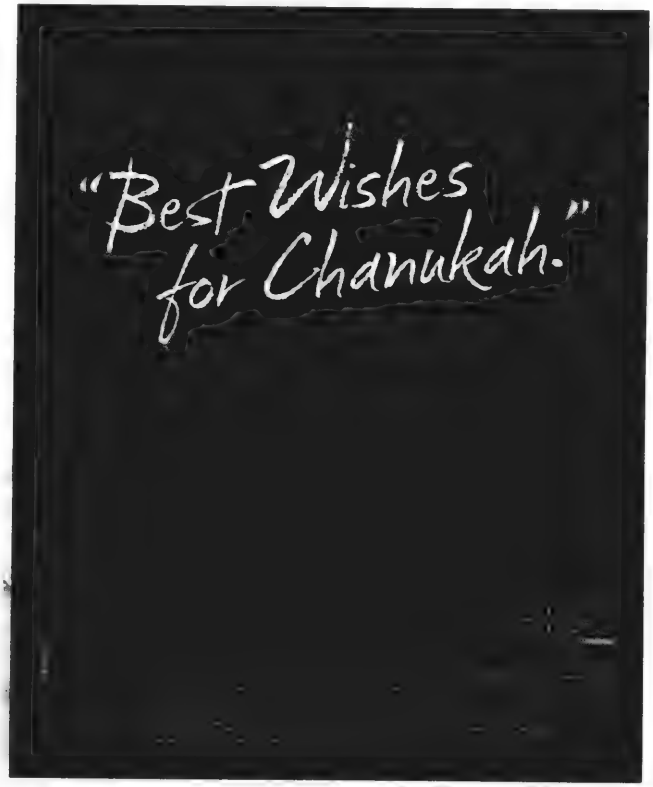
Another treasure off a courtyard in the Mitte district is the museum of Otto Weidt's Workshop for the Blind. In this small shop that made brushes, Otto was able to hide and save many families. Not far from this museum, are the sculptures on Rosenstrasse.....a memorial of the Rosenstrasse protest where Aryan women were successful in securing the release of their Jewish husbands.

While visiting the Berlin Jewish Community Centre, I was introduced to two shlichim....representatives for the Keren Hayesod for Germany and for all of Europe. In speaking with both of them, we discovered that we had a connection. One of them had been a classmate with some kibbutz friends of mine. The other man told me that he had visited Toronto in 1986 (24 years ago) as a Beit Halochem vet..... Miki and his group had been a guest of my father!

When he said....."I remember you, and I remember your father," I have to agree that this trip to Berlin was Mashehu, Mashehu!

Ruth Ladovsky lives in Toronto and is a seasoned traveller and hiker.

HAZELTON PLACE
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
HAPPY CHANUKAH!
WISHING YOU AND YOURS
THE BEST OF THE SEASON
Please Join Us For A Cocktail Party During This Festive Time
TUESDAY DEC 14TH 6:00 PM- 7:30 PM
Refreshments, Hor D'Oeuvres and Live Entertainment. Please RSVP (416) 928-0111
(416) 928-0111
111 Avenue Road, Toronto
www.hazeltonplace.ca
Monthly rates starting at only $3195 including 3 meals a day, recreational programs, housekeeping and 24 hour emergency nursing response.
Diversicare CHCA
Entertainment provided by: Harpist & Singer - Dianne Parke-Jones



Happy Chanukah

A tale of two monuments

By LAURENCE WEINBAUM

In 1938, following a meeting with Adolf Hitler, Poland's ambassador to Germany, Jozef Lipski, reported to his minister back home that the fuhrer had spoken of solving the Jewish problem in Poland and central Europe through mass emigration. "I told him," wrote the Polish diplomat, "that if he finds such a solution favourable we will erect him a beautiful monument in Warsaw."

A short time later, Hitler and his countrymen solved the Jewish problem in Poland, not through mass emigration but through mass murder. To be sure, there were not a few Poles who saw the Final Solution as the only beneficial aspect of an otherwise horrific occupation that ravaged their country – even as other Poles, though far fewer in number, and at risk of their lives, sought to rescue their Jewish neighbours from certain death. Through it all, Poles had fought the Germans ferociously from the first day of the war to the last and paid an enormous price in blood and property.

After the war, and groaning under a hated regime imposed by Moscow, Poles did not build a monument to Hitler, yet many were satisfied that the Jews had disappeared from the landscape. Indeed, in successive years they did their part to ensure that the remaining Jewish remnant was successively diminished, through acts of antisemitism at the grassroots level and also in the corridors of power.

Over time, the memory of Jews was consigned to oblivion, excised from public consciousness and kept out of the history books – even as Poles slept in Jewish houses, ate off Jewish china, played Chopin on Jewish pianos, and rocked their babies in Jewish cribs.

Last October, a group of Jewish intellectuals and activists was invited to Warsaw to take part in a conference organized by the Polish Ministry of Foreign Affairs devoted to public diplomacy and Polish-Jewish relations.

Continued on page B15

The artist's rendition of the museum being built in Warsaw that will be dedicated to Jewish history in Poland.

905-731-4440
The Batner Bookstore
BOOKS FOR EVERYONE
We wish all our customers a Happy Chanukah www.batnerbookstore.com
email: info@batnerbookstore.com
180 Steeles Ave. West
Steeles Square Plaza

HAPPY CHANUKAH
Colorful candles burning bright
Latkes delicious every night
Come and celebrate with us
The festival of Lights
Please join us for, Latkes, Dreidels & more at our first annual Chanukah Party
Wednesday, December 8, 2010
from 2:30pm to 4:30pm
Mickey Lewin will be performing your favorite Chanukah tunes!
Please RSVP at 905-738-0905 as space is limited!
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON FOUR ELMS
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
Call today to book your personal tour and complimentary lunch!
Chartwell

Tridel wishes you
a Happy Chanukah!
tridel.com

Happy Chanukah

Today antisemitism is considered boorish and shameful

Continued from page B14

The exchange of ideas was free and frank and the Polish hosts could not have been more hospitable, nor more sensitive to Jewish concerns. There is no doubt that in the 20 years that have elapsed since the collapse of Communism, a new Poland has emerged one in which the preservation of Jewish memory is considered a national priority, and is expressed in innumerable and often unexpected and moving ways.

Beyond the memory of the ever-present dead Jews, there are also live ones. In fact, one would be hard pressed today to find another Jewish community of its size as vibrant as that which exists in Poland. Stanislaw Krajewski, who did so much to revitalize the Jewish life, asserts, these are Polish-Polish Jews (as opposed to Polish Jews living outside Poland) and are deeply rooted in the culture and country of their birth.

To be sure, as in the rest of the world, antisemitism has not disappeared. Just days after the end of the conference, an act of verbal violence, in which one professor at the Maria Curie Skladowska University labelled another "You Jewess!" was the talk of Lublin.

Yet the very fact that such an incident was front-page news, and that some of the students reacted forcefully says much about the new ambiance in Poland. Another example is the one-woman campaign against a bookshop in a Warsaw church basement purveying anti-Jewish screeds. Largely thanks to the indefatigable efforts of Zuzanna Radzik, a modern-day Polish heroine who began her struggle in 2001 when she was but 18 years old, the Antyk bookshop was finally and unceremoniously ejected from the church premises.

The monument to the Warsaw Ghetto uprising by Natan Rapoport.

Today, despite the existence in certain quarters of negative views about Jews, antisemitism is considered boorish and even shameful – at least in polite society. Moreover, no other post-Communist society has even come close to confronting its own culpability (whether through acts of commission or omission) and many of those countries bear considerably greater responsibility for Jewish suffering than Poland does. Today, whatever its shortcomings – including its failure to conclusively deal with the issue of Holocaust-era Jewish property – it is Poland that is Israel's staunchest friend in Europe.

Paradoxically, until very recently, it was widely believed that Poland's entry into the European Union would, as the scholar Joanna Michlic claimed in her recent book on anti-Jewish prejudice, strengthen the civil and pluralistic model and reduce antisemitism. A case can be made that positive developments in Poland have taken place despite what is going on in the EU and not because of it. Certainly, where relations with the Jewish state are concerned, the western European paradigm is not one that we would want to see replicated in Poland or anywhere else for that matter.

On the last day of the conference, we were taken to see the site of the magnificent new museum of Polish Jewry that is under construction in Muranow – the vast housing estate that arose on the ground where the ghetto once stood, the place in which the most dramatic act in the history of the Jews of Warsaw was played out. The strikingly modern edifice, the work of two little known Finnish architects, has largely been financed by the government of Poland and the city of Warsaw – and faces the emblematic 1948 ghetto monument built by Natan Rapoport. Presumably, most of the visitors to the new museum, and certainly the school children, will know nothing about a very different monument that had once been contemplated.

Laurence Weinbaum is the chief editor of the Israel Journal of Foreign Affairs and was a guest of the Polish Foreign Ministry.

DUFFLET PASTRIES

DUFFLET

EAT MORE CAKE

Downtown
787 Queen St W
retail@dufflet.com
Uptown
2638 Yonge St
retail2@dufflet.com
Beach
1917 Queen St E
retail3@dufflet.com

Toronto, Canada

Happy Chanukah

Online Orders
www.dufflet.com

The Sacks Partnership

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS
"Developers of Creative Solutions"

Wishing
all our clients and friends
a Happy Chanukah

23 Lesmill Road, Suite 418
Toronto, Ontario
M3B 3P6
Telephone: 416-444-1500 / Facsimile: 416-444-2121
email: info@sackspartnership.com

MILLER BERNSTEIN GREENWOOD LLP
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS

We would like to wish our clients and friends
A Happy Chanukah

Howard Kornblum
Jeremy Shanfield
Richard Shapero
Murray Klein
Ron Kobric
Clive Cohen
Fred Birnbaum
Sheldon Greenwood
Mayeer Pearl

5000 Yonge St., Suite 1801
Toronto, ON M2N 7E9
Phone 416.482.7050
Fax 416.482.9526
mbgllp.com

SF Partnership, LLP

Chartered Accountants

Wishing our Clients,
Staff and Friends
A Happy & Healthy Chanukah

4950 Yonge Street, 4th Floor
Toronto, ON M2N 6K1
T: 416.250.1212 F: 416.250.1225
www.sfgroup.ca

A member of KS International

Happy Chanukah

Roman Jewish community is alive and vibrant

By DAVID MEILACH

In the year 1555, the Italian Inquisition and Catholic Counter-Reformation engulfed the community of the Roman Jews. Pope Paul IV issued a papal law or canon titled Cum nimis absurdum. ("As it is completely absurd and improper in the utmost that the Jews, who through their own fault were condemned by God to eternal slavery which they deserve.")

With this, the ghetto of Rome was born. Jews were compelled to live in seclusion, humiliation and despair in an enclosed area of the rione (district) Sant'Angelo along the banks of the often overflowing Tiber River.

Approximately 4,000 people were held captive within four small city blocks – locked in at night, allowed out only during the day. On leaving the ghetto, male Jews wore a distinctive yellow pointed hat (the sciamanno) while the women wore a blue scarf, the visual sign of the prostitute. The Roman Jews were allowed to practise only unskilled vocations: they were ragmen, secondhand dealers, fishmongers and pawnbrokers.

The ghetto had five gates. One gate was at the Portico d'Ottavio on the Via Portico d'Ottavio, which today is the main street of the Jewish quarter. A second gate was opposite the Santa Maria della Pieta church, on whose facade is inscribed a quote from Isaiah 65:2-3 which out of context takes on an antisemitic vigour. ("I have stretched my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, that walk in a way that is not good, after their own thoughts; a people that continually provokes my wrath.") The remaining gates were on the Via della Fiumara and at the Piazza Guidea.

A side street in the old Roman ghetto area

Surrounding the ghetto, churches were erected, often assimilating part of the ghetto wall within their structure. Compulsory church attendance led some Jews to fill their ears with wax in order to block out the proselytizing sermons. The ghetto was not struck down until Italian unification in 1870.

The history of the Jews of Rome is unusual and thus intriguing in other respects. Descendants of the first Jews to arrive in Rome in 161 BCE still survive. Judah Maccabee sent delegations to Rome to secure trading rights, and some stayed. Roman sources state that Jews were present at the funeral of Julius Caesar, a friend of the Jewish population.

When Emperor Vespasian and his son Titus laid waste to Jerusalem in 70 CE, both slaves and the booty from the Temple were transported to Rome. The Temple artifacts paid for the construction of the Roman Coliseum. Arguably, the Roman Jewish community is the oldest in Europe.

Although there was an influx of Sephardi Jews from Andalusia to Italy following the advent of the Spanish Inquisition and the expulsion of 1492, the descendants of the original Roman Jews claim to be neither Sephardi nor Ashkenazi. The order of their synagogue liturgy and music has noticeable variations (nusach Italki).

Continued on page B17

The famous relief on the Arch of Titus in the Roman Forum showing the transportation of the Temple artifacts to Rome.

Happy Chanukah

A great city

The pedestrian zone in the present Jewish quarter of Rome

Continued from page B16

The Great Synagogue of Rome (home of the Italian chief rabbi), completed in 1904, overlooks the current Jewish quarter. Here, in 1986, Pope John Paul II made his historic visit.

A distinct Roman-Jewish dialect arose where Hebrew words were given an Italian twist. To eat became akhlare, to steal became gannaviare and the word for goodness became tovezza.

The Roman-Jewish community did not suffer Nazism as others did. On Oct. 16, 1943, 2,000 out of 13,000 Roman Jews were transported to camps. Roughly 80 per cent of Italian Jews survived the war. It is with pride that the older Roman Christian population speak of their ability to thwart the deportations.

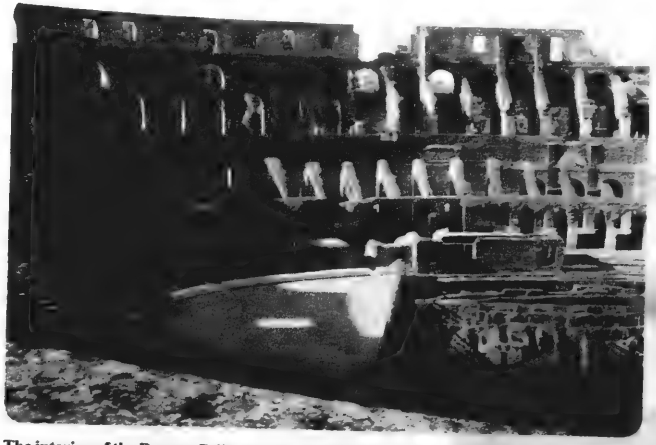
Today, the Roman-Jewish community is alive and vibrant. There are 15,000 Jews living in Rome (Communita Ebraica di Roma) with 13 active synagogues, including a Libyan synagogue for the Jews who arrived after the Six Day War.

Only a small remnant of the original ghetto wall remains, yet the Jewish quarter houses kosher bakeries, Judaica shops and restaurants serving famous Jewish specialties such as fried artichokes (carciufi alla giudia) and fried codfish. The Jewish Museum housed within the Great Synagogue displays artifacts of Roman Jewish life through the past 20 centuries.

Rome itself is a great city of the world, fascinating for historians, art and architecture enthusiasts, food and wine connoisseurs and, of course, shoppers.

Visit www.italytravelista.com/jewishrome.

David Meilach is a freelance writer.



The interior of the Roman Coliseum, which was paid for from the booty of the Jerusalem Temple, destroyed in 70 CE and where many Jewish slaves met their deaths.

A Happy, Healthy Chanukah

from the gang at
Five Six Nine Danforth Avenue

And speaking of Chanukah, just a reminder... no other street holds a candle to ours!

KORRY'S

569 Danforth Avenue • 416-463-1115 • www.korrys.com

AJS

Chanukah Greetings
from the
Association of Jewish Seniors

Keeping Jewish Seniors informed and enriched through EDUCATION • ADVOCACY • NETWORKING
Learning never ends ...

For more information call 416-635-2860
or email ajs@circleofcare.com

Affiliated with circle of care
It's good to be home

Wishing You a Happy and Healthy Chanukah

Jordan B. Zale
Vice President, Investment Advisor
(905) 762-2345
jordan.zale@cibc.ca

CIBC Wood Gundy

CIBC Wood Gundy is a division of CIBC World Markets Inc., a subsidiary of CIBC and Member CIPF.

TES
The Employment Solution
40 Holly Street, Suite 500
Toronto, Ont. M4S 3C3
tes.net

Frank & Judy Wilson
Ray & Rosalie Moscoe and Families

Wish all our families, friends & clients a very happy and joyous Chanukah

20 Jewish cantors walk into a church – it's no joke

By RUTH ELLEN GRUBER
JTA

Can Jewish sacred music sung in a Roman Catholic basilica help relations between Christians and Jews?

For the Reform movement's American Conference of Cantors, the answer is a resounding yes.

Twenty Reform cantors from across the United States travelled to Rome this month for just that purpose, performing a unique concert of Jewish prayers and sacred texts at the Basilica of Santa Maria degli Angeli e dei Martiri, a cavernous church adapted by Michelangelo from the ancient Baths of Diocletian.

"We are here as spiritual emissaries, not political emissaries," said the president of the cantors conference, Susan Caro of the Wilshire Boulevard Temple in Los Angeles. "We recognize the power of music to transform as well as reach across cultural and religious lines."

The concert, titled "To God's Ears," was organized by the New York-based Interreligious Information Center in cooperation with Cardinal William Keeler, the emeritus archbishop of Baltimore, who is the basilica's cardinal priest.

"Presenting music of the synagogue in churches in order to reach the laity could develop into something very, very worthwhile in interfaith relations," said the Interreligious Information Center's executive director, Gunther Lawrence.

Lawrence said several cathedrals in the United States and Britain already had expressed interest in similar concerts.

The Nov. 16 performance featured a range of prayers and texts set to both traditional melodies and music by composers dating from the Renaissance to the present day.

Basilica of Santa Maria degli Angeli e dei Martiri

In welcoming remarks, Monsignor Renzo Giuliano, the regular priest of the basilica, introduced the 90-minute concert as a journey into the "profundity of the liturgy," saying it was "very important to be here together and praising our God."

The cantors, about half of them women, hail from California, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Arizona and Texas.

Dressed in black, but each wearing a sometimes colourful tallit, they sang in a vaulted side chapel against the backdrop of a crucifix, flickering candles and a wall-sized painting of the Madonna and child.

Before each piece, a cantor stepped forward to describe the selection, explain its place in the Jewish religious service and provide information about the musical setting.

"Our goal was to educate people in Jewish culture and Jewish synagogue culture," said Cantor Roslyn Barak of Temple Emanu-el in San Francisco, who helped co-ordinate the event. "We feel that through music you can heal, make friends, touch people, reach out."

U.S. ambassador to the Vatican Miguel Humberto Diaz called the initiative "a wonderful opportunity.

"Any kind of art, especially music, is a way to bring people together for the sake of the common good," he told JTA.

Diaz and the Rev. Norbert Hoffman, the secretary of the Vatican's commission on religious relations with the Jews, were among the few dignitaries in attendance.

Highlights of the concert included an arrangement of the Adon Olam prayer by the Renaissance Italian-Jewish composer Salamone Rossi, and a stirring rendition of Sim Shalom by the Berlin-born 20th-century composer Max Janowski, which featured Barak as soloist.

The concert also included the world premiere of Mah Ashiv Ladoshem-Quid Retribuam Domino, a setting of Psalm 116 with words in Hebrew and in Latin, by Cantor Erik Contzius of Temple Israel in New Rochelle, N.Y. Contzius, a member of the American Conference of Cantors, did not take part in the concert.

Jewish secular artists have performed on a number of occasions at Vatican events, but traditional cantors probably would not perform in a church. Longtime observers of Jewish-Catholic relations said it was likely that the concert marked the first time a cantorial group had performed such a concert in a Roman church.

"Italian traditional cantors would not, as far as I know, perform in a church, and I know of no instance when this ever happened in the past," the Italian-Jewish musicologist Francesco Spagnolo, curator of collections at the Magnes Museum in Berkeley, Calif., told JTA.

The concert was the centrepiece of four days of meetings in Rome organized by the Interreligious Information Center for the cantors and more than two dozen accompanying family members and other members of their congregations.

The group met with seminarians at the Vatican's Pontifical North American College and attended Pope Benedict XVI's weekly public audience. They also toured Rome's ancient Jewish ghetto and met with Rome's chief rabbi, Riccardo Di Segni.

That meeting also was a form of religious dialogue.

Italy's Jewish community is Orthodox, and although there are a few small Reform congregations in the country, the Reform denomination is not recognized by the Italian Jewish communal organization. Di Segni did not attend the concert.

Cantor Claire Franco of Port Washington, N.Y., one of the co-ordinators of the concert, said Di Segni had been gracious to the group and answered its questions.

"But he was clear that there are boundaries that they won't cross," she said. "We are Reform cantors and we are very proud of this. That's who we are – and half of us are women."

Several cantors noted that interreligious matters were part of their hands-on experience as Reform cantors, as many members of their congregations were intermarried.

Franco noted that she was the child of a Christian father and Jewish mother.

"I grew up as one of the few Jews in a small town in Florida," she said. "I knew what being a minority was, what it meant to have to explain who we are. So I am committed to teaching community."

To watch a video of the cantor's concert, visit bit.ly/bbvAfg.

What's the difference between homemade chicken soup and store bought? Your grandmother can tell you. She knows that in cooking, as in life, you can settle for mediocre or you can put in extra effort and enjoy the best. At Kensington Place, we get it! We use the freshest ingredients and offer two menu selections plus five alternative dishes at each meal. All our delicious entrees are made from scratch and prepared under the supervision of the Kashruth Council COR. Come taste the difference at Kensington Place. Don't settle for less.

For a full list of our free events, visit www.thekensingtonplace.com

(416) 636-9555
www.thekensingtonplace.com
866 Sheppard Ave. West

Kensington Place

TORONTO'S FINEST KOSHER RETIREMENT RESIDENCE .com

Happy Chanukah

Ve'ahavta shines at volunteering in Israel

By JENNY HAZAN
CJN Israel Bureau

Toronto-based Ve'ahavta, a non-profit humanitarian and relief organization dedicated to assisting the needy both locally and in 15 countries around the world, was singled out for its work at the first ever Leadership Development Through Service Study Tour in Israel this week.

The tour, held by Masa (Journey) Israel, the Jewish Agency for Israel's flagship hub for more than 200 long-term (five months-plus) Israel experience programs, brought together representatives from 18 different North American volunteer organizations to learn about volunteer and social activism opportunities in Israel to include in their program rosters; share best practices in the fields of volunteering, leadership development and community service; and help Masa integrate leadership development into its programs in Israel.

"We chose to invite organizations that have the most experience in leadership development and service," said Avi Rubel, 38, North American director of Masa. "Ve'ahavta has a lot of experience in empowering young people to get involved in [volunteer] service."

Kirill Zaretsky, 33, director of development at Ve'ahavta, was proud to participate. "We have 15 years of experience inspiring young people to change the world and we're happy to share our perspective on how to inspire youth to become leaders in their communities and build a connection to Israel," said Zaretsky.

"Canadians tend to be very quiet and modest about our volunteerism, though there is a natural tikkun olam both inside and outside the [Jewish] community. This is something unique. We should stand up and be proud of what we do in the volunteer world."

The lone Canadian organization to participate in the meet-up, Ve'ahavta was joined by Teach for America, Peace Corps, City Year, the American Jewish World Service, the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, and Hillel, to name a few. "This [tour] is a revolutionary concept, both for Israel and for the NGO world as a whole," said Zaretsky. "It's the first time an organization has brought so many volunteer professionals from North America together to roundtable on how to engage youth, and how to create leaders through the service industry."

> 'We want Israel to be a place where more and more young people feel they can be of service'

In addition to bringing the NGO representatives together to compare notes, the meet-up aimed to encourage the non-profit leaders to include Masa programs on their volunteer opportunity rosters, and thereby increase the number of Jewish youth participating in meaningful community service in Israel, one of the Jewish Agency's new primary mandates.

"We want Israel to be a place where more and more young people feel they can be of service and have a connection here," said Rubel. "Birthright Israel opened the door for so many young Jews to get a taste of this country, and now that they've gotten a taste we want them to come back for a longer, deeper, more meaningful experience."

The group visited several Masa volunteer program sites, including the Ashelim student village, one of 11 run by the Ayalim Association, which connects volunteers to kids and at-risk youth in communities in the Negev and Galilee; the Yahel Social Change Project, which connects volunteers with opportunities in the Ethiopian community in Gadera; and the Tikkun Olam Project, a volunteer organization focused on coexistence projects in Jaffa.

"It [the tour] really opened my eyes to what's going on in Israel. I'm amazed by the number of NGOs here. I'm amazed at the culture of volunteerism in Israel, and at the commitment to Israel expressed by volunteers participating in the programs. I am also inspired by the partnerships between the volunteer organizations and the Jewish Agency, and how [this partnership] enhances the projects themselves and supports the volunteers," said Zaretsky.

Ve'ahavta, which has sent volunteers to Israel and established funds, such as the Support Israel Fund, created at the end of 2008 to purchase much needed emergency medical equipment for the Soroka Hospital in Be'er Sheva, then under heavy rocket attack from Hamas in the Gaza Strip, intends to expand its Israel volunteer program.

"We have always been committed to Israel and now we're here to increase it, and commit more of our economic and volunteer resources to Israel," said Zaretsky. "Part of the secret to [the success] of our tikkun olam work is in giving people opportunities, connecting them to really good projects and organizations that are making real changes in the world."

Wishing Our Members & Friends a Joyous Chanukah

GRANITE CLUB
2350 Bayview Avenue www.graniteclub.com

HAPPY CHANUKAH!
FROM THE PARTNERS
AND STAFF OF BDO

Assurance | Accounting | Taxation | Advisory Services www.bdo.ca

BDO

New lower prices every day...
Bath n' Bedtime
...where the white sale never ends
Wishing Our Customers & Friends
חנוכה שמח
Lawrence Plaza (Lawrence & Bathurst) 416-781-8600

BSO Beauty Supply OUTLET
Wishing all of our customers & their families A HAPPY CHANUKAH
494 Lawrence Avenue West
(Lawrence Plaza)
416.782.1511
10 Eglinton Avenue East
(NE corner, Eglinton & Yonge)
416.482.6464
99 Balsam Street, Collingwood
705.444.0071

Fuller Landau LLP
Chartered Accountants & Business Advisors
Best Wishes for a Happy Hannukah
151 Bloor Street West, 12th Floor, Toronto
(416) 645-6500
www.fullerlandau.com
Helping business owners increase their net worth

FOREST HILL PROSTHODONTISTS
DR. HAROLD A. BERENSTEIN
DR. YOAV FINER
& Staff
SPECIALISTS IN PROSTHODONTICS
INCLUDING CROWNS, VENEERS
IMPLANT AND COSMETIC DENTISTRY wish all their patients
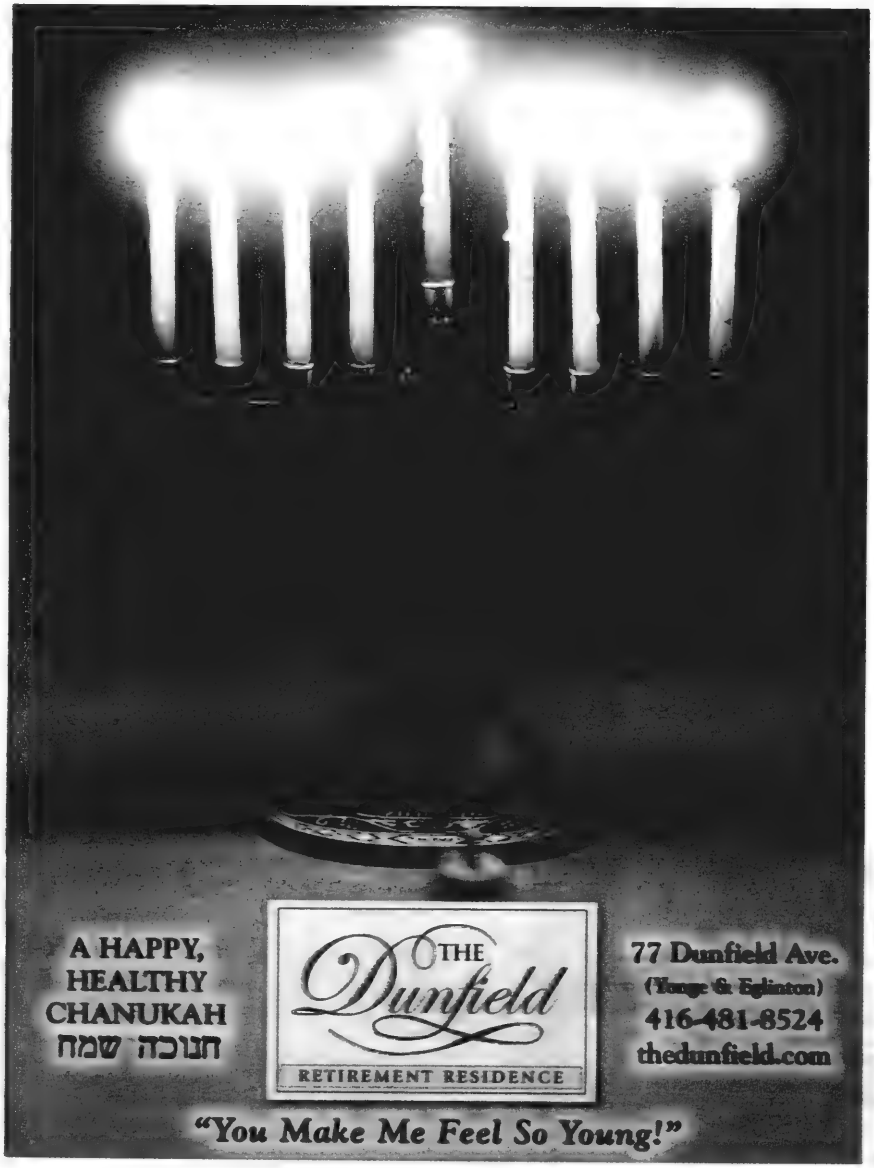
A HEALTHY & PEACEFUL CHANUKAH
Your Smile Solution
www.foresthillprostho.com



Showing mettle with the pedal

More than 100 cyclists – 60 from North America and 50 disabled Israeli veterans – recently took part in Courage in Motion, a five-day cycle-a-thon in northern Israel. The cycle-a-thon supports Beit Halochem, the Israeli organization that cares for disabled soldiers of the Israel Defence Forces. Cyclists chose one of two routes for their charitable pedalling: one over 300 kilometres and the other more than 500 kilometres. The group raised in excess of $350,000 (Cdn) for the Beit Halochem Centres in Israel. At the end of the five-day marathon, the 60 North American cyclists donated $15,000 for the purchase of three tandem bicycles.

One of the participating disabled veterans, Edov Toren, wrote the following letter about the annual event.

"This was my third year participating in Courage in Motion. It is a heartwarming special experience for everyone and a unique opportunity to discover what Israel and its people are about.

"The spirit of the people who come from abroad to cycle with the Beit Halochem members is more than inspiring. While Courage in Motion provides significant funds to Beit Halochem, it is about more than fundraising, it is about love.

"When I cycle with Courage in Motion, my love for sports, Israeli history and the beauty of the land develops a new meaning. As we cycled through the Golan Heights, I thought of the bitter battlefield it has been, in contrast to the peaceful and beautiful place it is now, a land of advanced agricultural settlements, wineries and cycling paradise!

"At night when we sat on the balcony of our hotel in Tzfat, looking east I could see the army base where my 20-year-old son, Tal, is serving as a tank commander. To the west I could see the shore line and border of Israel. That is how small this country is. But it is the only country we have!

"Israel is our country and vital to our existence as a people. Courage in Motion is about saying thank you for your sacrifices to those heroes who have been injured, ensuring that our country continues to be here for us.

"I want to thank everybody from abroad who came to Israel to 'just do it' and express their love and support by cycling with us. I encourage everybody to join us in 2011 and experience this unique and special opportunity."

Above is a photo of the Courage in Motion participants. [Beit Halochem photo]

There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca
AIRPORT EXPRESS AEROPORT
Jerusalem

SEE ISRAEL, THEN HOP ON THE BUS

The Israel Government Tourist Office recently launched a new advertising campaign in Toronto. A luxury six-wheel bus that ferries travellers between Toronto's Pearson International Airport and several high-end hotels downtown has become a display ad for the State of Israel. One side of the bus shows images of Jerusalem, the other of Tel Aviv. "The exposure [for Israel] will be enormous," Oded Groman, head of the Israeli tourist office in Toronto, told The CJN.

Joe MIHEVC

"Happy Chanukah to all my friends in the Jewish Community"

www.joemihevc.com

Best Wishes for a Happy Chanukah

Hon. Carolyn Bennett, PC, MP, MD

1650 Yonge Street, Toronto
Tel: 416-952-3990
Fax: 416-952-3995
E-mail: bennec.a@parl.gc.ca
www.carolynbennettmp.ca

David Zimmer, MPP
Willowdale

Wishing you a Peaceful and Joyous Chanukah

Community Office:
Newtonbrook Plaza, 3-5801 Yonge St.
North York, ON M2M 3T9
Tel: 416-733-7878
Email: dzimmer.mpp.co@liberal.ola.org www.davidzimmer.ca

Chag Sameach!

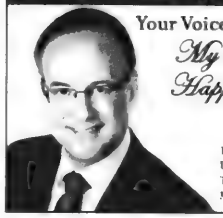
Wishing you and those you love a very Happy Hannukah and all the best of health and happiness in 2011!

Karen Mock

Federal Liberal Candidate for Thornhill

905-597-7564
www.karenmock.ca karen@karenmock.ca

Rob Oliphant, M.P.



Your Voice for Don Valley West

My best wishes for a Happy and Healthy Chanukah

1 Leaside Park Drive
Unit #1 (t) 416 467 7275
Toronto ON (f) 416 467 8550
M4H 1R1 (e) roliphant@on.aibn.com

COUNCILLOR DAVID SHINER

Ward 24 – Willowdale

Happy Chanukah greetings for the celebration of the Festival of Lights for the year 5771 to all of the residents of Ward 24 – Willowdale, the City of Toronto and surrounding communities

Wishing you a Chanukah bright with celebration

Ken Dryden
M.P., York Centre

Constituency Office:
1030 Sheppard Ave. W.
Unit 3A

Phone:
416-638-3700

Israeli international development agency serves the global village

By ABIGAIL KLEIN LEICHMAN
Israel 21c

Haim Divon was just eight years old in 1958, when Israel launched MASHAV, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs' Agency for International Development Cooperation.

If as a child he had contemplated such matters, he might have found it curious, even audacious, that Israeli leaders already felt prepared to share their know-how with the rest of the developing world. At the time, his Jerusalem family was still experiencing food shortages and austerity rationing that would not end until 1960.

But as deputy director-general of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the current head of MASHAV, it makes perfect sense to him.

"I heard [first Israeli Prime Minister David] Ben-Gurion talking about our moral obligation to share with others at a time when we had no food and had to absorb more people than our actual population," Divon recounts. "He was a pragmatist but also a philosopher. That is where I come from."

Putting Israel's own creative solutions at the disposal of developing nations, MASHAV took on the same weighty objectives that the United Nations more recently formalized as its priority development goals: poverty alleviation; food security; sustainable development; empowerment of women; child and maternal health; social equity; environmental sustainability; and upgraded public health and education systems.

Since 1958, MASHAV professionals have trained some 200,000 participants from approximately 140 countries in Israel and abroad, and developed dozens of demonstration projects worldwide in fields of Israeli expertise.

Divon, a 35-year career diplomat, took the helm at MASHAV in 1995. He brought with him experience from postings in Bombay, Ethiopia and Sri Lanka.

"It was more than eye-opening to see what was happening out there," he says. "What hits you is the real meaning of poverty and human suffering. In the Western Hemisphere we live in a bubble, and we don't grasp the real challenges of this global village of ours, which is getting smaller."

An attorney by training, Divon had long been excited by the idea of diplomacy. "We had no TV as kids, but our parents subscribed to National Geographic magazine, and I lived off it," he recalls. In addition, many of his physician father's patients were in Israel's Foreign Service sector, and the young Divon relished hearing about the exotic places they had visited.

Haim Divon

"What a way to serve the country!" he remembers thinking. "I love people and communication, and I feel that I can bring a different face of Israel wherever we go. You have to know the people to know the country."

After serving as Israel's ambassador to Canada, Divon returned to MASHAV in 2005. He is now steering the agency in a new direction, orienting its staff to find out exactly what each country needs from Israel rather than continuing with a blanket educational approach.

Up until around the year 2000, he explains, MASHAV would offer similar projects such as drip irrigation year after year, and people from many countries were invited to come and learn. This approach was not without positive outcomes, particularly in the area of general goodwill.

Divon explains: "Many people, when they come to Israel, are affected by CNN and BBC headlines, and their families don't want them to come here. Often we receive them at the airport, and they are shocked that the airport is so nice. Then they leave the airport, and they are shocked to see that we have real highways. At some point, they say, 'Wait a minute! This doesn't fit with what we thought.' On top of that, there are friendly people here who provide solutions for them. They leave as enthusiastic and huge admirers of Israel."

But Divon began wondering what participants did with their newfound knowledge when they returned home. Did they make real inroads in agronomy, animal husbandry, emergency preparedness and education? Or did they simply go back to sitting in a government office cubicle with little more to show for the experience than personal admiration for the Jewish state?

Continued on page B23

Happy Chanukah

'In spite of our difficulties, we are able to move forward'

Continued from page B22

If the goal was to be "active change" rather than "attitude change," MASHAV's mode of operation needed dramatic overhauling.

"If you look back 50 years, so much money was poured into so many countries and where are the results? We realized that participants in our programs have to be agents of change, and there have to be goals," Divon continues. "We had to change. And most of the big aid agencies overseas, such as the UN, adopted the same new approach."

Today, MASHAV is a demand-driven agency. "We ask, 'What are the needs of your country?' and then we assess how we can help. They have a macro picture of how we can fit our strengths to their needs. By co-ordinating better with our partner countries and with third parties, we have a better chance to succeed."

Because his own life has followed Israel's trajectory from poverty to plenty, Divon keenly appreciates what it takes for a nation to succeed: "I didn't know what a mango or an avocado was when I was a kid. I ate a mango for the first time when I was posted in India. And now, one of our programs is helping India improve their mango crops."

Foreign agencies such as US-AID lent Israel assistance along the way, and Divon believes that Israel is obligated to return the favour – even if it still has its own struggles. "Americans didn't say, 'We have our own homeless, so we can't afford to assist others.'"

Beyond practical solutions, he adds, Israel also strives to convey the spirit that continues to see it through rough times. "All the experts who come to Israel divide the question in two: 'What are your approaches and technologies?' and 'Where does your spirit come from?' In spite of our difficulties, we were able to move ahead, and so can they."

A visiting Indian government minister recently composed a poem in homage to his host country, Divon says, adding, "I'm proud that small Israel is a place others want to learn from because they see tangible results."

Divon met his New York-born wife, Linda, when she came to the Hebrew University on a one-year exchange program in 1969. "The one year turned into 40," Divon says with a smile.

The Divons live in the Jerusalem bedroom community of Mevasseret Zion. But because of their frequent and broad travels, he refers to his family, which includes three grown children, as "citizens of the world."

Linda has been involved in projects wherever they go, such as a Canadian "peace camp" for Israeli and Palestinian children that grew out of their youngest daughter's vision. This power couple belongs to a line-dancing club and also enjoys ballroom dancing. "For me, the best way to unwind is with aerobics," Divon says.

He truly needs his energy. Divon also is the CEO of a government company, Igud, which provides MASHAV with a platform to run extension centres in Israel and to recruit Israeli experts who form its permanent nucleus. And he personally oversees the development of tailor-made programs for specific countries.

One of the newest projects is helping Kisumu, Kenya's third-largest city, to establish a strategic planning unit to empower periphery cities. After an Israeli MASHAV affiliate devised a concept that was enthusiastically endorsed by Kenyan officials and the international donor community, the Kisumu mayor arranged to come to Israel for a study tour. Bringing change agents to Israel remains a key part of the strategy.

"We have a nursery project in Ethiopia, so we brought the head agronomist here to see what we are doing in biotech and irrigation – anything related to his nursery's needs," says Divon. "He learned how to develop a state-of-the-art nursery to grow the highest-quality mangoes and avocados for export."

Continued on page B24

On behalf of the Mayor and Council of Richmond Hill

Happy Chanukah!

RICHMOND HILL INCORPORATED 1872

Richmond Hill
RichmondHill.ca

Happy Hanukkah!

From Members of the Ontario Liberal Caucus

Frustrated by lack of media recognition for agency

Continued from page B23

Ethiopia's rural farmers are the backbone of the national economy. "so they must boost their quality and diversity for local consumption, and exports must meet certain standards. We can show them how. We must be linked to development programs at the country level so we can support and enhance them with whatever we're good at."

Medicine is another area Israel is "good at." Adding to a long string of medical missions in many countries, MASHAV recently facilitated the creation of neonatal and intensive care units at hospitals in Ghana and Kenya and will be establishing an ICU at a hospital in Haiti's capital city. This summer, it hosted a contingent of educators from Moscow. "You had to see their enthusiasm. They were full of appreciation," says Divon.

However grateful recipients of MASHAV aid may be, however, Divon is frustrated by the lack of media recognition for his agency's far-reaching work. Conflict, he observes, makes for more attractive news than does co-operation.

"Imagine how people would look up to Israel if every activity in every country we are involved in would get front-page headlines," he says. "In the developing world, they appreciate our help. When there is a natural disaster, we quickly mobilize and send experts, and their doors are open. We have good approaches to alleviate suffering. But Israel is still perceived as a country of receivers."

A recent case in point is MASHAV's aid mission to the city of Sange in the Democratic Republic of Congo. Following a July 2 fuel tanker explosion, resulting in the deaths of more than 250 people and injuries to almost 200, MASHAV dispatched a delegation of six doctors from Sheba Medical Center with medical equipment – before any other country responded.

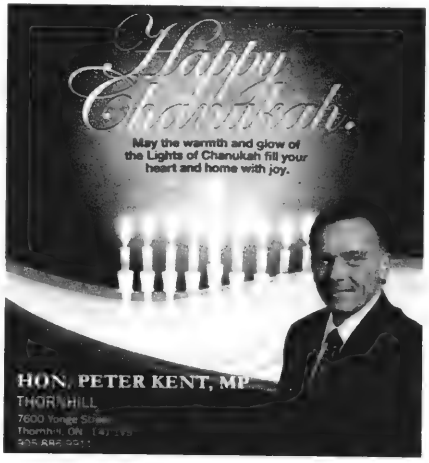
The result of such efforts gives Israel accessibility for future projects, notes Divon. "The road is open to other possibilities that every ambassador is looking for." Yet even these high-profile achievements have little effect on negative attitudes toward Israel, including at the UN, he points out.

Divon's many aspirations for MASHAV are not easy to achieve on a total budget of about $20 million – an amount the Minister for Foreign Affairs would like to triple. Demands for Israeli know-how continue to grow, especially now that Israel is a member of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development.

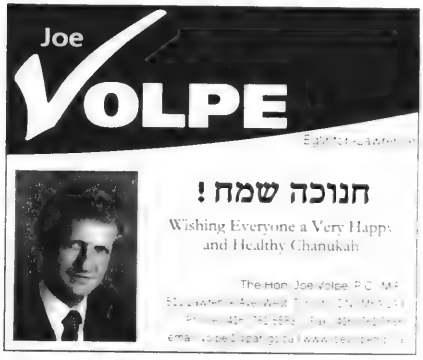
"We're putting our emphasis on human capacity building rather than infrastructure, because we believe that is the best and most effective investment," Divon says.

MASHAV sent a delegation of Israeli ophthalmologists to Georgia to help people suffering from eye diseases. [MASHAV photo]

As the Member for Provincial Parliament for Thornhill I want to extend my wishes to you and your family for a Chag Sameach and Happy Chanukah!
חג שמח!
Peter Shurman, MPP - Thornhill
Constituency Office:
7368 Yonge Street
Suite 203
Thornhill, ON
L4J 8H9
T (905) 731-8462
F (905) 731-2984
peter.shurmanco@pc.ola.org
www.petershurman.com



Happy Chanukah.
May the warmth and glow of the Lights of Chanukah fill your heart and home with joy.
HON. PETER KENT, MP
THORNHILL



Markham Mayor Frank Scarpitti and Members of Council wish you and your family a happy and healthy Chanukah
Mayor Frank Scarpitti
Deputy Mayor Jack Heath
Regional Councillor Jim Jones
Regional Councillor Gordon Landon
Regional Councillor Joe Li
Ward 1 Councillor Valerie Burke
Ward 2 Councillor Howard Shore
Ward 3 Councillor Don Hamilton
Ward 4 Councillor Carolina Moretti
Ward 5 Councillor Colin Campbell
Ward 6 Councillor Alan Ho
Ward 7 Councillor Logan Kanapathi
Ward 8 Councillor Alex Chiu www.markham.ca
MARKHAM

Peres pays a visit

Israeli President Shimon Peres last week travelled to the village of Peki'in in the northern Galilee where he visited with its Druze inhabitants. In these photos, we see Peres enjoying a coffee and speaking with village elders. [Israel Sun photos]

Fight desertification – feed the world

By ABIGAIL KLEIN LEICHMAN
Israel21c

"Desertification" may sound like a course to end a sumptuous meal. But with just one "s," it refers to fertile land becoming dry desert. Many factors contribute to the problem, such as soil erosion, climate change and groundwater mismanagement. Israel, which is 97 per cent dry land, was one of the first countries to begin to address this crisis.

"Desertification remains the orphan of global environmental problems on our planet," declared Ben-Gurion University (BGU) of the Negev professor Alon Tal, a desert ecologist at the university's Jacob Blaustein Institutes of Desert Research and founder of the Arava Institute for Environmental Studies.

Tal organized the annual International Conference on Drylands, Deserts and Desertification, held Nov. 8 to11 at BGU's Sde Boker campus in co-operation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). More than 500 government officials and academics from 50 countries, including Palestinian and Jordanian delegates, took part.

He said he was heartened by the response. Despite major conventions on desertification signed at Rio de Janeiro in the 1990s, many western countries still treat the issue as a low priority, he says. The perception started to change four years ago, when the UN and the World Bank re-emphasized that desertification, a problem that affects more than 200 million people, is a major cause of global poverty and hunger.

"We believe that by bringing a diverse group of academics, professionals and policy-makers together to confront the myriad critical issues of desertification, the BGU conference can serve as a meaningful catalyst for cooperative and collaborative projects in the future at the global level," said Tal, a North Carolina native who moved to Israel 30 years ago.

A successful agricultural project of date farming in the Arava desert.

Israel is one of the few countries that has successfully restored marginal lands and is recognized worldwide as a leader in protecting its dry lands from further deterioration. The Negev desert is smaller than it was in 1948, and parts of it having been transformed into a fertile breadbasket.

Forests thrive in places where trees never took root before and salt- and drought-resistant plants flourish, innovated by Israeli scientists. Commercial fishponds dot the desert, and algae grow abundantly for use in pharmaceuticals and health foods.

"The goal has to be to take the disadvantages of the desert and turn them into advantages," Tal said. Algae actually grow faster in dry regions, and the desert is the perfect setting for solar and wind power. Sun and open spaces are also attractive to eco-tourists.

Water management is a crucial part of controlling desertification. About half the water used for agriculture cycles through 240 reservoirs built by the Jewish National Fund, another key player in desertification efforts and education. Israel reuses about 74 per cent of its waste water. Spain, the second most efficient country in waste-water recycling, reuses only 20 per cent.

Continued on page B27

BAGEL PLUS
Bakery, Restaurant & Catering
Wish all their customers, family & friends a Very Happy Chanukah
Taste our delicious Suvganiot!
634 Sheppard Avenue West 416-635-9988

Deblins Linens
The linen superstore
Israeli linens at everyday low prices...
...that's our "spin" on linen buying!
חנוכה שמח
39 Orfus Road at Dufferin • 7979 Weston Road at Hwy. 7
Mississauga Home & Design Centre

MORTON'S
THE LEGEND • THE STEAKHOUSE
4 AVENUE ROAD, TORONTO • 416-925-0648
www.mortons.com
HAPPY CHANUKAH
TO ALL OUR GUESTS & FRIENDS from Peter and Yitz

Hairafter Salon & Spa
Winners of the combined Hairstyling World Championship
644 Finch Ave. East (East of Bayview) 416-221-6658
The staff of Hairafter wishes a Happy Chanukah to all!

HARKEL
office furniture ltd
We wish our family, clients & friends a very Healthy and Joyful Channukah.
1743 Creditstone Road Vaughan, ON
tel: 905.417.5335 fax: 905.417.4202
www.harkeloffice.com
Experience That Talks — Solutions That Work

WISHING ALL OF OUR CLIENTS AND FRIENDS A HAPPY CHANUKAH
Added experience. Added clarity. Added value.
Miller Thomson LLP
www.millerthomson.com
Miller Thomson
lawyers avocats

HAPPY CHANUKAH
to our valued customers & friends
CONCORD FOOD CENTRE
SHOP & COMPARE... Quality Speaks For Itself!

1117 Castlefield Ave • Toronto, ON • M6B 1E8
t: 416.789.4179 • f: 416.789.4170
info@castleautocollision.com • www.castleautocollision.com
To all our clients & friends, Best Wishes for a Joyous Chanukah
CASTLE
AUTO COLLISION & MECHANICAL SERVICE

'We have to make the world a better place'

Continued from page B26

"As the world becomes more urbanized, sewage is both a problem and an opportunity," said Tal, who co-authored a model for an agreement on environmental co-operation between Israel and the Palestinian Authority. "We made huge mistakes and had the humility to learn from them. Now we have standards that can help other countries recycle their sewage."

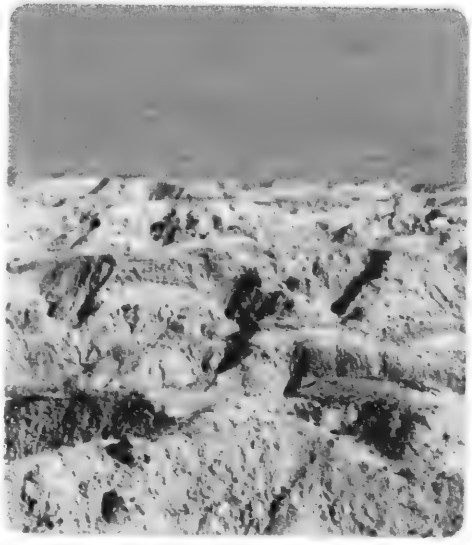
Tal gives much of the credit for all these accomplishments to Uriel Safriel, a professor of ecology at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and the world's leading authority on desertification.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs chose Safriel and Tal, among other experts, to represent Israel at previous UN conventions on desertification. "The other representatives have learned to respect Israel. Even the Arab countries in this forum are co-operative and there is lots of formal discussion," Tal said.

Attendees to the conference this year heard presentations about the public health aspects of desertification, sustainable building in desert environments, remote sensing to assess how flora are responding to anti-desertification attempts, grazing and the Bedouin community, the future of the Dead Sea, environmental education and dry-land agriculture, and soil and water restoration.

Tal said the UN expects developed nations to provide assistance to developing nations, which is an ideal shared by MASHAV, the Foreign Ministry's agency for international development, which works with ecologists and forestry experts from several countries, particularly in Africa.

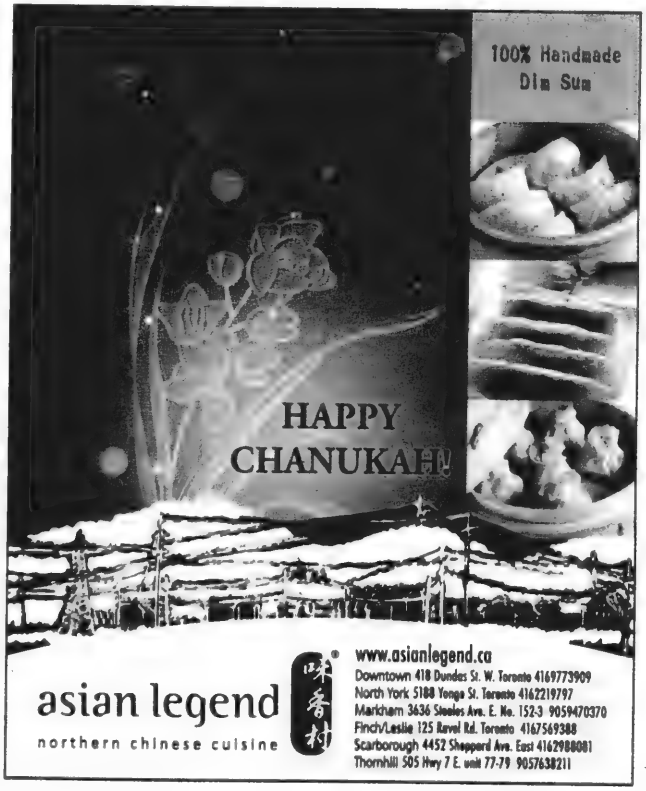
"If you do nothing about desertification, people will starve and die," Tal said. "So there is a need for Israel's status as a leader in this field to be expanded into public policy. We have to dig into our pockets to make the world a better place."



The harsh Arava desert near Eilat

EXTENDICARE BAYVIEW
550 Cummer Avenue at Bayview • 416.226.1331
Wishing our residents and their families a Happy and Healthy Chanukah
EXTENDICARE

We wish all our customers a Happy & Healthy Chanukah!
From the Partners, Management & Staff of The Pickle Barrel Restaurants
The Pickle Barrel
www.picklebarrel.ca
info@picklebarrel.on.ca
Catering 416.493.4333
Pickle Barrel Grand



100% Handmade
Dim Sum
HAPPY
CHANUKAH!
asian legend
northern chinese cuisine
www.asianlegend.ca
Downtown 418 Dundas St. W. Toronto 4169773909
North York 5188 Yonge St. Toronto 4162219797
Markham 3636 Steeles Ave. E. No. 152-3 9059470370
Finch/Leslie 125 Ravel Rd. Toronto 4167569388
Scarborough 4452 Sheppard Ave. East 4162988081
Thornhill 505 Hwy 7 E. unit 77-79 9057638211

Rabbi Steinsaltz brings entire Talmud to the masses

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

The perpetually sleep deprived scholar sits slouched in a large chair, a pipe to his lips, his long white beard curled into knots, strands of hair poking out from beneath his black skullcap. Lacking a rabbi's traditional booming voice, he speaks so softly one often has to lean in closer to hear his insights.

But Rabbi Adin Steinsaltz's message resonates clearly to the far corners of the Jewish world. The 73-year-old rabbinical scholar has just completed a monumental 45-year project hailed in Jewish scholarly circles as a breakthrough of biblical proportions – the most comprehensive translation and commentary of the Talmud, with its 63 basic sections and nearly 6,000 pages.

The Talmud is the central text of mainstream Judaism, detailing rabbinical discussions over the centuries pertaining to Jewish law, ethics, philosophy, customs and history. But because of its complexity, obscurity and the fact that much of it is written in the ancient Aramaic language, the rarified text has for centuries remained beyond the scope of comprehension of all but a select group of scholarly Jews.

Rabbi Steinsaltz coins his quest to educate Jews, Let my People Know, a play on Moses' passage from Genesis: Let my people go. Now, thanks to his 45-volume series, anyone with a command of Hebrew can study the sacred text.

"I do believe that this knowledge is not just knowledge of history, it is knowledge of ourselves, it is our own picture," Rabbi Steinsaltz told Associated Press at his modest Jerusalem office. "Talmud is a book that has no real parallel ... it is a constant search for truth, for absolute truth."

Rabbi Steinsaltz has spent the majority of his life doing just that. For 4 1/2 decades, for as long as 16 hours a day, he laboured over the ancient texts, translating them from the Aramaic into modern Hebrew – and parts into English, Spanish, French, and Russian as well.

More importantly, he added his own explanations of phrases, terms and concepts, as well as listing the rulings of Jewish law derived from the text.

There have been other, partial translations into English and other languages, but none are as comprehensive or have as extensive a commentary.

"I have opened the gate – you please enter. I cannot do it for you, and I am not trying to do it for you," he explained.

Shalom Rosenberg, a professor emeritus of Jewish thought at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, said Rabbi Steinsaltz was upholding the legacy of Shlomo Yitzhaki, the famed medieval French rabbi known by his acronym Rashi, who authored the first comprehensive commentary on the Talmud more than 900 years ago.

Rashi did the first revolution, turning it into a book you could read. Now Rabbi Steinsaltz has opened it up even to people who didn't go to Yeshiva (religious seminaries), he said.

Rabbi Adin Steinsaltz

Still, he said, Rabbi Steinsaltz's Talmud is like giving someone a map to the jungle – but there is still a way to go before understanding the jungle, he said.

The project has not been without its detractors. Over the years, some haredi scholars criticized Rabbi Steinsaltz – even boycotted him – saying Talmud study should be reserved for rabbinical experts.

Jewish historian Menachem Friedman said Rabbi Steinsaltz's work takes away the rabbis' monopoly over knowledge of the Talmud.

They perceive the popularization of the Talmud as too bold a move, with too much chutzpah, he said.

Rabbi Steinsaltz, whose three children have adopted the Hebraized surname Even-Israel, was born in Israel to secular parents but became observant in his teens, when he entered seminary schools and learned Aramaic.

After studying physics and chemistry at Hebrew University, he became a math teacher and at the age of 24, according to his website, the youngest school principal in Israel's history. Three years later, in 1965, he began working on what he called his hobby – the translation of the Talmud. The effort earned him the 1988 Israel Prize – the nation's highest civilian honour.

Over the years, he has established a network of schools in Israel and the former Soviet Union, and he has written more than 60 books on subjects ranging from zoology to theology.

The completion of Rabbi Steinsaltz' herculean feat was marked Nov. 7 with the Global Day of Jewish learning.

The six-continent event kicked off with a live broadcast of Rabbi Steinsaltz completing the final words of the translation.

Manfred Uhlmann
Senior Sales Executive
Direct: 905-886-2000 x7850
Cell: 416-464-3327
Email: muhlmann@royfoss.com

Ray Mendell
Senior Sales Executive
Direct: 905-886-2000 x290
Cell: 416-432-7418
Email: rmendell@royfoss.com

Happy & Healthy Chanukah
to our family, friends and customers

With over 50 years of retail experience, Manfred and Ray invite their many customers, future customers and friends to come in for coffee and a test drive to experience GM's quality line of products.

ROYFOSS.com
7200 Yonge St., just above Steeles 905-886-2000

Happy Chanukah

Where is Anwar Sadat when Israel needs him?

By AKIVA ELDAR
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

A great wind all at once blew
The bold bells of peace all rang out
Egypt's Sadat into Israel then flew
Can we say it's no dream, without doubt?

These thrilling words were written on November 22, 1977, by the rough hands of none other than foreign minister Moshe Dayan.

The day after the Egyptian president's visit to Jerusalem, Dayan entrusted the limerick to his close adviser Elyakim Rubinstein. The latter, who was to become a Supreme Court justice, tells in his 1992 book Paths of Peace (in Hebrew), that although he has had many exciting experiences in his life, the moment the door of Anwar Sadat's plane opened at Ben-Gurion International Airport, "I will always remember with an unparallelled thrill."

Thirty-three years after Sadat captured the hearts of Israelis with his "No more war" speech in the Knesset, and his visit to Yad Vashem, they have closed again behind walls of hatred, fear and prejudice.

In an article in the newly published book Barriers to Peace in the Israeli-Palestinian Conflict (edited by Yaakov Bar Siman-Tov and published by the Jerusalem Institute for Israel Studies), Neta Oren, Eran Haperin and Daniel Bar-Tal present research revealing that some 80 per cent of Israeli Jews believe Arabs are dishonest, do not consider human life valuable and force Israel into war despite its desire for peace.

Ten years after the outbreak of the second intifadah and the rise of current Defence Minister Ehud Barak's claim that there is "no partner," only 44 per cent of Israeli Jews believe that most Palestinians want peace, as opposed to 64 per cent in 1999.

The fear of "concessions to the Arabs" is not the province of a handful of radicals whose passion for their ancestors' tombs has driven them to extremism. Israel has gone back to having a majority of people who view peace as a dangerous trap that the Arabs and their partners on the left are laying at the feet of weak politicians. Seventy-one per cent believe that the Arabs' ultimate goal is to annihilate Israel. There is no Israeli leader, not even on the horizon, who has the power to force this large group to "give up territories to the Arabs."

Sadat used to say that "two-thirds of the Arab-Israeli conflict is psychology." Indeed, one visit of the Arab leader in Israel's capital pushed aside 30 years of hatred, fear and suspicion. Four years after thousands of their sons were killed or injured in a cruel war with Egypt, Israelis wiped away a tear at the sight of the Egyptian president shaking the hand of their prime minister. Six months after the political upheaval that brought Likud to power, another upheaval took place in the way the Israeli public perceived the Arab enemy and the feelings of that enemy about Israel. The vast majority of Israelis, including most Likud members, supported the evacuation of settlements from the Yamit region, a return to the international border on the southern front and even recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinians.

> 'What would happen if President Hosni Mubarak, Jordanian King Abdullah and Saudi King Abdullah, together with Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas, laid a wreath at Yad Vashem?'

In July 2009, Bahrain's crown prince wrote an article in the Washington Post called "Arabs Need to Talk to the Israelis." In it, Shaikh Salman ibn Hamad ibn Isa Al Khalifa criticized the Arab leadership for not being wise enough to show the Israelis the advantages of the Arab League peace initiative of March 2002. "An Israeli might be forgiven for thinking that every Muslim voice is raised in hatred," he wrote, ending with: "We must do more, now, to achieve peace."

The prince's call remained a voice crying in the Arab wilderness (he himself rejected this writer's proposal to be interviewed by Ha'aretz).

The Arab leadership insists on treating dialogue with Israeli society as part of "normalization" – the "fruits of peace" that the Israelis will get to taste only after they pledge to withdraw from all the territories.

In his book, Rubinstein revealed as baseless the claim that Sadat came to Jerusalem in November 1977 only after he received a promise that he would get back all of Sinai. Sadat understood that the war-weary Israelis would not make do with peace. They want to be made love to.

Indeed, what would happen if President Hosni Mubarak, Jordanian King Abdullah and Saudi King Abdullah, together with Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas, laid a wreath at Yad Vashem, and promised from the Knesset rostrum, "No more war?"

That would be much easier for them than what Israel is being asked to do: evacuate tens of thousands of people from the settlements and divide Jerusalem.

TORONTO PREP SCHOOL

The Toronto Prep School is an independent, co-educational, university preparatory school for discerning students and parents

We are accepting applications for the February 2011 and September 2011 semesters for Grades 7 to 12

250 Davisville Avenue #200, Toronto
416.545.1020
www.torontoprepschool.com
www.tpshome.wikispaces.com

Contact Fouli Tsimikalis, Director of Admissions at ftsimikalis@torontoprepschool.com

Principal: Steve Tsimikalis

Let us help your child achieve

The Toronto Prep School education experience includes:

- a semestered, university preparatory curriculum
- a MacBook Pro laptop with educational software
- GoodLife Fitness membership
- an extended after school study program
- Saturday Club study program
- maximum class size of 16 students
- extra-curricular clubs and athletic program
- a dedicated, passionate and experienced faculty

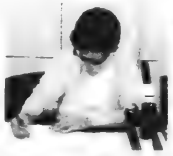
Consider our program if you are interested in an academically rigorous and structured environment dedicated to challenging and nurturing your child



The open racism of the future state of Palestine

By SHMUEL TRIGANO

During a meeting with the Egyptian press in Cairo at the beginning of August, Mahmoud Abbas, president of the Palestinian Authority and the man on whom the United States and Europe have placed all of their hopes for peace, revealed what was at the back of his mind with regard to the Jews and the nature of the regime he plans to set up in the future state of Palestine.

Shmuel Trigano

The official demands of the Palestinians for a settlement are known. Israel's agreement in advance to withdraw to the borders of 1967, a freeze on construction in the territories including Jerusalem, the division of that city, including the Old City, which must become part of the Palestinian Authority, the solution of the problem of the "refugees" in conformance with Arab demands and Resolution 194 of the UN General Assembly.

When considering the possibility that a third force, such as NATO, could be given the responsibility of overseeing the implementation of the planned agreement, Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas imposed a condition: that there should not be a single Jewish soldier nor any Israeli: "I am ready to accept a third party which supervises the implementation of the agreement, NATO forces for example, but I will not accept the presence of Jews in these forces or a [single] Israeli on the Land of Palestine," Abbas said.

Is such a demand tainted with antisemitism? It should not come as a shock if we remember that Abbas defended his doctoral thesis, which was based on Holocaust denial, at a school for political indoctrination in the Soviet Union.

Some may see a polemical and ideological expression in the term "racist," but Abbas' demand with regard to NATO leaves no doubt in this respect. What does it really mean when he demands that the European states, members of NATO, exclude their Jewish citizens from the ranks of their forces?

Palestinians march on behalf of Jerusalem.

Can one imagine such a situation and the juridical mechanisms that these states would have to activate in order to separate the Jews from their citizens? As it happens, Abbas does not help them by defining the criteria of who is a Jew: religious law, ethnic origins, the father, the mother, the grandfather?

It is all the more remarkable that Saudi Arabia, during the Gulf War in 1990-1992, permitted American Jewish soldiers to serve with the American forces on its territory, a land which, according to the Qur'an, is sacred and should not shelter any non-Muslim. In all of these cases, it is not a question of Israelis, but of Jews, and one knows that the Arabs, in their immense majority do not make a distinction. "Yahoud" (Jew), in this region, designates without hesitation "The Israeli." What Abbas says about Jews he says about Israelis, as we have seen, and he demands that the Europeans, so attentive to his wishes, accept his conditions.

The refusal to recognize Israel, the Jewish state

There is a perfect coherence between this demand to the West and the refusal to recognize Israel as a Jewish state, which Abbas or Saeb Erekat, his "minister" of foreign affairs, has articulated on many occasions.

The two positions with regard to NATO and the refusal to recognize the Jewish state as such share the same antisemitism. The thinking behind this refusal, currently repeated as a leitmotif, has not been sufficiently analyzed.

We can immediately dismiss the most current explanation that a state does not have to recognize the "religion" of another state. This is a stalling tactic, which the PLO used numerous times in the past, especially in the Palestinian National Charter, as we shall see below. To be specific, "Jew" here means a "nation," not a "religion." It is with that intention that UN Resolution 181-II of November 1947, uses the expression "Jewish state" 23 times when it advocates the creation of "two states in Palestine, a Jewish one and an Arab one." (See especially Article 3 of the resolution.)

In order to understand what this refusal means and why it is not motivated by nationalistic but rather by racist intentions, we shall have to consider it in the context of collateral evidence.

If one examines its link to the demand for the return of the "refugees" of 1948, the picture is clear. Under the weight of some five million individuals defined as refugees, Israel would automatically become a country with an Arab and Islamic majority, a binational state where the Jews would be a minority, while Palestine would become uniquely Arab. Not one Jew, not even under the flag of NATO or the United Nations, would be allowed to be in Palestine, but five million Arabs would join the million Israeli Arabs already residing in the State of Israel and openly rebel against the notion of a Jewish (national) state.

Continued on page B31

To All
Our Family & Friends
Best Wishes For
A Happy Chanukah

Saul & Toby Feldberg and Family

totalprint

Happy Hannukah to our Clients and Friends

Kraft Berger LLP
Chartered Accountants
3160 Steeles Avenue East, Suite 300
Markham, Ontario L3R 3Y2

Paul Cohen
Harry March ז"ל (1953-2005)
David Yabrov
Jerry Dykopf
Bradley King
Elias Benaim
Howard Bergman
Jeff Westreich
Alan Silverman
Jay Feingold

Tel 905-475-2222 Fax 905-475-9360
Toll Free 1 (888) 563-6868

Happy Chanukah

Jews would be 'respected'

Continued from page B30

The Palestinian Authority is building a racist regime based on the principle of establishing an apartheid between a Palestine untainted by Jewish blood and a mixed State of Israel where the Jews would become a minority.

In its refusal to recognize a Jewish state, there is, in fact, more than a rejection and denial of Jewish history and identity. One may well understand that this improper and exorbitant demand serves as a politically correct fig leaf for its fundamental refusal to recognize the State of Israel. On this point, the PLO abandoned its bluff of a "secular and democratic Palestine," which it had promoted in the decade between 1980 and 1990, except that the Palestinians now demand that this formula be imposed on Israel as they would like it to be, while Palestine proper would be purely Arab.

State-sanctioned racism and segregation

Palestine proper would indeed be Arab and Islamic. That is written explicitly in the draft constitution of the planned state. "This constitution is based on the will of Palestinian-Arab people" (Article 1); "the Palestinian people are a part of the Arab and Islamic nation" (Article 2); "sovereignty belongs to the Palestinian Arab people" (Article 10); "the legal character of the Arab-Palestinian people will be embodied by the state" (Article 13); "Islam will be the official religion of the state" (Article 6).

We can verify this last principle (the Islamic quality of the state) in the light of the use of rhetorical obfuscation (Article 6) to which the drafters of this constitution resort when they give the appearance of making space for non-Muslims: "Islam will be the official religion of the state. The monotheistic religions will be respected."

Who are these odd "monotheists," and what about the Hindus, the Confucians, the Baha'is, etc. – forbidden to live in Palestine – if not a politically correct version of the old dhimmi status imposed on non-Muslims by the Qur'anic law? In practice, this article would apply only to Christians, because as they have stated, there should be no more Jews in the State of Palestine.

This strange "monotheistic" statute permits us to understand by deduction the Palestinian Authority's vision of the state of Israel – that is to say of Jewish Israelis.

In Palestine, the Jews theoretically would not be citizens, because they are neither "Arabs" (the key to Palestinian nationality according to articles 10 and 13), nor "Muslims," (key to the Palestinian national law according to article 6). Although they would be "respected," they would fall outside of national sovereignty, the exclusive privilege of the Arabs (Article 10) – Christian or Muslim – but with a restriction.

Since the law would conform to Islamic law, Christian Arabs could only be second-class citizens, subjected to the status which Qur'anic law imposes on them, a status that excludes them from the general law that applies to the Muslims, a status granted, however, as a privilege.

As they are not subject to the rules of (Islamic) national law with regard to their personal status, they will be permitted to act autonomously within the framework of their law and religious tribunals.

This was already the case before the colonial era, before Islam lost all power over non-Muslims. This is indeed what the Palestinian constitution provides for in its Article 7: "the principles of Islamic sharia are the first source of legislation.

Continued on page B32

The late PLO leader, Yasser Arafat, emphasizes a point in a speech in Ramallah.

WE WOULD LIKE TO WISH OUR CLIENTS AND FRIENDS A HAPPY AND PEACEFUL CHANUKAH

CHASSON GREENGLASS & DESSAU LLP
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS

1210 SHEPPARD AVENUE EAST, SUITE 212
TORONTO, ONTARIO
TEL: (416) 925-8808

MARTIN CHASSON JERRY GREENGLASS ALAN DESSAU
JEFFREY DESSAU MARLA CHASSON SONE

Light, warmth, love, guidance.

Wishing you and your family all the best things in life. Chanukah Sameach!

Roy M. Zakka The Zakka Team* Senior Vice President Investment Advisor
416 512 3660 roy.zakka@macquarie.com www.royzakka.com
Macquarie Private Wealth

*The Zakka Team is part of Macquarie Private Wealth Inc., a member of the Canadian Investor Protection Fund and IIROC

Sterling Silver development corporation

Wishing all of our clients and friends a Happy Chanukah

STERLING KARAMAR PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

53 The Links Road, Toronto, ON M2P 1T7 • 416-256-4434

OUR PARTNERS AND STAFF WISH OUR CLIENTS AND FRIENDS A HAPPY, HEALTHY CHANUKAH

SEGAL
Adding to your success.

SEGAL LLP
Chartered Accountants
Phone. 416 391 4499
www.segallp.com
2005 Sheppard Ave. E., Ste. 500
Toronto, ON M2J 5B4

Larry Citrullo • Michael Daren • Michael Dennis • Elliott Kosher • A. Harold Garfinkle
John Iliffe • Dan Natale • Leslie Nevsky • Robbie Rotin • Stanley Segal
Gerald Sanders • Andrew Shalit • Errol B. Wolff

Original PLO Charter 'nullified' the Balfour Declaration

Continued from page B31

The legislative power will determine the law of personal status under the authority of the monotheistic religions in conformity with their religions, with due respect to the clauses of the constitution and the preservation of unity, of the stability and progress of the Palestinian [Muslim] people."

The problem, however, is twofold: sharia will not apply to monotheistic non-Muslims only when their "personal" status is at stake but also in their quality as citizens. It will indeed govern the citizenry as the law of the state (Article 6). Non-Muslims will be subject to its rulings as citizens and not only as monotheistic believers.

How does the "monotheistic" statute reveal the vision the Palestinian Authority has with regard to what the State of Israel should be, which it does not want to recognize as "Jewish"? Would it recognize the "monotheist" character of the Israelis but not the Jewish character of their state? Would not the term, "Jewish," designate a "monotheist"?

Palestinians protest the "Judaization" of Jerusalem

Understanding of the status of the dhimmi could help us to grasp this apparent contradiction that contains a nasty trick for those who do not understand the categories of Muslim culture. The status of the dhimmi, one must know, is not personal but applies to collectivities, to the "nations" politically subjected to Islamic power since the "Conquest."

It is necessary to explain the theological basis of the collective condition of the dhimmi. According to the Qur'anic vision, there were different "umma" (peoples) in history, each one rising to the call of a prophet (Moses, Jesus, etc.), until the advent of the final "umma," which rose to the call of Islam.

The basis of an umma is thus a "religion." In this sense, the Palestinian leaders cannot recognize the right of a Jewish state (and in fact any state that would not be Islamic) that would entail the self-determination and sovereignty of a collectivity whose only possible status under Islam is that of dhimmi. This would be an affront to the Islamic umma.

A Jewish state thus constitutes essentially a scandal. The two terms, "state," and "Jewish" therefore constitute, as theological-political matter, an impossible alloy. The Jews cannot have a state. They are not a people of political standing, because there can only be The Umma. The Jews can neither be free nor sovereign.

An unclear 'nationalism'

This classical Islamic perspective was much more evident in the '60s and '70s when the PLO did not resort to double talk to such a sophisticated degree, even if it already made use of western concepts (religion and state) to express Islamic notions.

Indeed, what does one read in the PLO charter in its first version (1964)? "The Balfour Declaration, the Mandate for Palestine and everything which derives from them are declared null and void. The claims of the Jews to historical and religious links with Palestine are incompatible with the historical facts and the true concept of what a nation consists of. Judaism, being a religion, does not constitute an independent nationality. In the same matter, the Jews do not constitute a unique nation with its own identity. They are citizens of the states to which they belong" (Article 20).

This is a strange remark for a culture that confuses the political and the religious… It does not prevent the PLO, in the same text, from insisting on the exclusive Arab character of Palestine: "Palestine is the homeland of the Arab Palestinian people. It is an indivisible part of the Arab homeland, and the Palestinian people is a part of the Arab nation (Article 1)"… "Arab unity and the liberation of Palestine constitute two complementary goals" (Article 13). "The people of Palestine play the role of the vanguard in the realization of this sacred objective." Here, the term, Arab nation, really designates the umma.

We discover in this remark the extent to which the strictly Palestinian "national" framework is current. (The second version of the charter was published in 1968.)

"The Palestinian people believe in Arab unity. In order for them to contribute to the realization of this objective, it is necessary, however, at this stage of the struggle to safeguard the Palestinian identity and develop its consciousness of this identity" (Article 12). This is so because of Article 1, which says: "Palestine is the home of the Arab Palestinian people. It is an indivisible part of the Arab homeland, and the Palestinian people is an integral part of the Arab nation."

Continued on page B33

BAKERY garden
Happy Chanukah
Thank you for your patronage
BAYVIEW VILLAGE
TORONTO, ONTARIO
416-226-9494
Open 7 Days

Canadian Council of Conservative Synagogues
Building Community
The Canadian Council of Conservative Synagogues on behalf of its member shuls, wishes the entire community a joyous Chanukah
Adath Israel Congregation, Toronto
Beth Sholom Synagogue, Toronto
Beth Torah Congregation, Toronto
B'nai Shalom Congregation of Halton-Peel, Oakville
Congregation Beth Shalom, Ottawa
Congregation Shaar Shalom, Chomedy
www.canadianccs.ca

Discount
Car and Truck Rentals
Best Wishes for a Happy Chanukah
To our friends and customers in the Jewish community from the Discount family.

'Why should one believe myth of Abbas' moderation?

Children in Gaza figuratively spill blood from the Mavi Marmara flotilla on the Israeli flag.
[Flash90 and Israel Sun photos]

Continued from page B32

Actually, despite the "nationalistic" formulation of this clause, the term, Arab nation, is defined in conjunction with other words such as the Islamic umma. Palestine belongs to the umma, which cannot renounce any part of Islamic land.

It is noteworthy that in their constitutional documents, the Muslim Brotherhood write the same thing about Jews/Israelis, although in a more extreme manner, as does Hamas.

Let the reader judge.

With regard to the dhimmis, the Hamas charter declares that "the Islamic Resistance Movement... is guided by Islamic tolerance when it deals with the faithful of other religions. It does not oppose them except when they are hostile. Under the banner of Islam, the faithful of the three religions – Islam, Christianity, and Judaism – can coexist peacefully. But this peace is not possible except under the banner of Islam."

With regard to the nature of the Palestinian country, Hamas takes the view that: "the Movement of Islamic Resistance believes that Palestine is an Islamic Waqf [religious patrimony] consecrated for [the future] generations of Muslims until the Last Judgment. Not a single parcel of this can be divested or abandoned to others. (Article 11).

PLO charter: an antecedent of this old-new racism

The charter of the PLO is more explicit with regard to the racist motives beneath such an apparently nationalistic statement and it finds expression with regard to all the Jews outside the State of Israel. It states in Article 23: "The need of security and of peace, as well as that of justice and law, require of all states that they consider Zionism as an illegitimate movement, that they declare its existence illegal, that they forbid its activities, so that the friendly relations between peoples can be preserved, and that the loyalty of citizens to their respective countries may be preserved."

What does this canned expression, "loyalty of citizens toward their respective countries," describe other than the Jews of the world – essentially of the western countries – whom the PLO charter singles out for suspicion and for the vindictiveness of their respective states implying that they are not faithful and could stand up for Israel against the interest of their respective states: that they are in fact Israelis, that is to say, more crudely, "The Jews."

They are depicted precisely with the classic traits of anti-semitism: the Jewish conspiracy.

Article 22 of the charter thus traces the borders of this "anti-Zionist" antisemitism. "Zionism is a political movement bound organically to an international imperialism and hostile to all action for liberation and every progressive movement in the world. The Zionist by his nature is racist and fanatical, aggressive, expansionist, colonial in his objectives, and fascist in his methods.

"Israel is the instrument of the Zionist movement and the geographical base of world imperialism, strategically placed in the midst of the Arab homeland to combat the hopes for liberation, unity and progress of the Arab nation. Israel is a constant source of threats to the peace of the Middle East and in the whole world. Because the liberation of Palestine will destroy Zionism and the imperialist presence and will contribute to the establishment of the peace in the Middle East, the Palestinian people demands the aid of all the progressive forces [that are] oriented toward peace, and enjoins them, without distinguishing between their affiliation and creed, to offer their aid and support to the Palestinian people in its struggle for the liberation of its homeland."

Zionism is another word for the classic "Jewish Conspiracy."

International and Israeli passivity

There has been no European or American reaction to condemn Abbas' odious remarks in Egypt. Could it be that the world knows very well what to expect from the "moderate" Palestinians?

But if this is the real reason for this astounding silence, why should one believe in the Palestinian desire for peace and the myth of Abbas' moderation? No reaction of protest emanated from European and American Jewish institutions.

No reaction was forthcoming from the Israeli government. Where are the idealistic souls of the European JStreet, JCall, to castigate this "moral mistake" and this openly bellicose declaration?

This silence creates the impression of the indulgence of the public regarding the Palestinian and Arab-Islamic demands and their lack of interest with respect to the impasse into which they want to throw Israel and the whole Jewish world.

Shmuel Trigano is a professor at Paris University in sociology of politics). Among his recent publications in English is The Democratic Ideal and the Shoah, the unthought in political modernity. SUNY Press, 2009.

TZ TRUSTER ZWEIG LLP
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS

Best wishes to our clients and friends for a Happy Hannukah

500 Highway 7 E, Suite 200
Richmond Hill, Ontario L4B 1J1
Tel: 416-222-5555 Fax: 905-707-1322

heart of nails

Heart of Nails Wishes everyone a very Happy Chanukah!

We are pleased to introduce our new Technician Nicole.

Please present this ad and receive $10.00 OFF any service with Nicole.

3405 Bathurst St. Ste. 200 ❤ 416.787.6900

ROYAL LIGHTING
Best Wishes
To All Our Valued Customers,
Friends & Relatives for a
Happy & Healthy Chanukah
1549 Avenue Road
(North of Lawrence)
416-782-1129
www.royallighting.com

look hair studio

Wishes clients and friends a Happy Chanukah

1818/1820 Bayview Ave.
Mezzanine Lv, Toronto
(2 blocks North of Eglinton) FREE Parking
Open Tuesdays-Sundays 416-322-5665

Happy Chanukah to all my clients & friends

Haskell Beale

Please come visit me and pursue your passion for luxury

Lexus on the Park located at
1075 Leslie St. (Leslie & Eglinton)
(formerly THE INN ON THE PARK site)

LEXUS
On the Park

"PROUD TO BE OF SERVICE TO THE HEART OF TORONTO" 416-391-8814
E-mail: haskell@lexusonthepark.ca
www.lexusonthepark.ca

DR. RICK KOCHMAN would like to wish all my Patients and Friends a Happy & Festive Chanukah
3555 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 206, Willowdale 416-491-5625

Uptown Spa
Wishes all our customers and friends a Happy Chanukah now open Sundays
416-449-4044
www.uptownspa.ca

ALCAN
EXCLUSIVE AGENT FOR ALCAN FOIL PRODUCTS
Best wishes for a Happy Chanukah

TRIPLAST
ARCHITECTURAL KITCHENS
Freda
Paula
Alan & Bethany, Brooke and Andi
Sheldon & Susan, Samantha and Sydney
Wish all their clients, relatives and friends a Happy Chanukah

Howard Ipp and Barry Rapps of
UNITED MESSENGERS LTD.
Rush Couriers
Extend their Best Wishes to their clients and friends for a
Happy Chanukah
270 Drumlin Circle
Concord, Ontario L4K 3E2 905-738-6447
www.unitedmessengers.com
email: rapps@unitedmessengers.com

Wishing our Clients, Staff and Friends
A Very Happy & Healthy Chanukah
LIPTON
Chartered Accountants
Suite 600, 245 Fairview Mall Drive
Toronto, Ontario, Canada M2J 4T1
Tel.: 416-496-2900 Fax: 416-496-0559
www.liptonca.com
Member of Jeffreys Henry International

TONI+ PLUS
DESIGNER FASHIONS SIZES 14-22
Best Wishes for a Happy Chanukah
The Bay Queens St. • 416-861-4966
Bayview Village • 416-512-3341
Sherway Gardens • 416-622-0784

We wish our relatives, friends, and clients a Happy and Healthy Chanukah
BRIEF ROTFARB WYNBERG CAPPE
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS
BRIEF & ASSOCIATES LIMITED
TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY
3845 Bathurst Street
Suite 402
Toronto, Ontario
Canada M3H 3N2
Telephone: 416-635-9080
Internet: www.brwc.com

Enrico
BEAUTY SALON
CATHY and her staff wish all their clients
A HAPPY CHANUKAH
468 Eglinton Ave. W.
416-482-8055

Happy Chanukah

Antisemitism on the rise in Venezuela

By NATASHA MOZGOVAYA and SHLOMO PAPIRBLAT
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

"I am not even horrified anymore when I see swastikas and antisemitic slogans such as 'Hitler didn't finish the job' on walls near my synagogue," says a former Israeli who lives in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela.

"This is an influence that trickles down from the top – from the government – against the Jews. I know that Chavez is exerting efforts not to appear antisemitic to the outside world, and that he welcomed the leaders of the Jewish community, but I haven't heard of him ever punishing someone for antisemitic writings or remarks."

She would rather her name not be mentioned. "This gets translated and immediately appears on various Internet sites. I don't need trouble," she says. "A few years ago, it was heaven here. Who could have believed that it would turn into such a burdensome place?"

She isn't the only one who feels this way. According to data from the Venezuelan Confederation of Israelite Associations, the number of Jews in Venezuela sharply decreased in the 10 years President Hugo Chavez has been in power.

In 2000, there were some 18,000 Jews listed, and today the number stands at a little less than 9,000. The outward flow of people increased in the last two years, when more than 5,000 Jews left the country, in particular to Miami in the United States.

"This antisemitism worries us all, and it must be immediately stopped," David Bitan, vice-president of the Jewish community in Venezuela, said recently. "We aren't saying that it is government policy, but the government does have the power to stop this phenomenon."

Huber, a Jew from Europe, immigrated to Venezuela in the 1980s and assimilated in the Jewish community. He built a successful business and is very satisfied with his job. Nevertheless, he says that he would pick up and leave tomorrow if he was able to afford it.

"My older children are studying abroad. I sent them far away from here," he says. "Caracas is an extremely dangerous place. Crime is a daily occurrence, people get murdered over nothing, and all the honest people live under heavy security. Our situation is frightening, since if you ask anyone here they would tell you that the Jews are always rich, so we are a double target."

According to Huber, there is official antisemitism in Venezuela. "I think it is a combination of dark Catholic beliefs," he says. "It's the fearless embrace of senior government officials with people such as [Iranian President Mahmoud] Ahmadinejad – who are vocal Israel-haters – and also partially the government's attempt to distract the people's attention from everyday troubles.

"There's inflation? Missing products in stores? No employment opportunities? As always, the newspapers can write that the Jews are smuggling the wealth to the United States, that the Jews here are double agents, that the Protocols of the Elders of Zion already proved that there is a worldwide Jewish connection – this time against Chavez – since he is a stark opponent of the Israeli occupation. Every time the television shows the Israel Defence Forces bombing Gaza, they tell me at my job: 'Why are you guys murdering those poor people? You act toward them just like Nazis.' That is what they see and hear in the media."

Hannah Rosenthal, the U.S. special envoy for the battle against antisemitism, was the first senior U.S. diplomat in years to receive a visa for Venezuela.

Rosenthal recently visited the country and tried to convey the concerns of the Jewish community to government officials and the national council. Depite her plans, she was unable to meet Chavez and his foreign minister, as the two were in Iran at the time of her visit.

She added that the foreign ministry official who handles Middle East affairs and antisemitism seemed very concerned when she told her about her impressions from the visit.

"When Chavez cut ties with Israel, he was applauded everywhere. As of right now this isn't necessarily the general public sentiment, but the feeling is that we are treading on the edge. A few swastikas here, an attack on a Jew there – and it is always defined as a criminal act and not an antisemitic one," Rosenthal said.

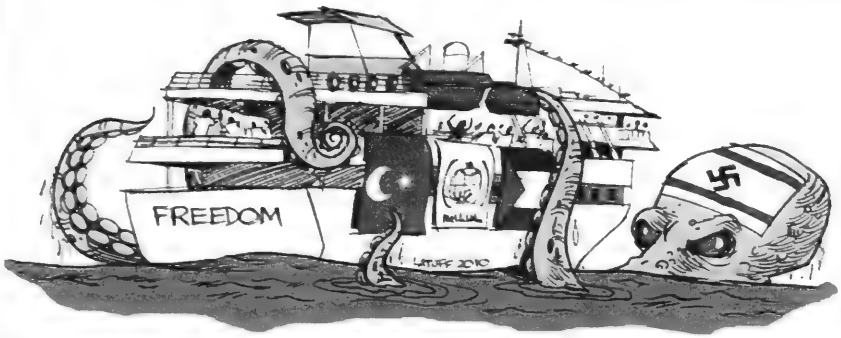
Rosenthal spoke about a meeting that took place early October between members of the Jewish community and Chavez.

Continued on page B35

Venezuelans protest against 'terrorist' Israel

Happy Chanukah

Young people have said they intend to leave



An anti-Israel political cartoon that was published in Venezuela after the Mavi Marmara flotilla incident last May. [Photos courtesy of ADL]

Continued from page B34

"Some of [the members] refused to go because they didn't want to give him any credibility, but others went there to meet Chavez face to face and express their concern about government-sponsored depiction of Jews in the media and degrading comments made by the president. Despite this opportunity to speak to him, nobody believes there has been a change."

According to Rosenthal, Chavez thanked the Jewish representatives for the meeting, but did not guarantee that he would make an effort to change things.

Rosenthal said the Jews in Venezuela don't feel hatred on the streets. "Intimidation, vile statements that were made about Jewish bankers – it all comes from Chavez. They don't feel it from neighbours or the people they know."

She added that "the Jewish community said that whenever there is activity in the Middle East, additional antisemitism would echo that."

Many people feel that the increase in crime has turned Venezuela into a dangerous place, she said.

"The young people I have met – in Jewish school, Catholic and other Christian denominations at the University – all said they intended to leave Venezuela. It has to do with the danger they feel living in Caracas, which is where most Jews live.

"It's so dangerous to be on the street. They all have someone in the family or the extended family or close friends who have been murdered, kidnapped. Everybody has been mugged. Many of the businesses have been expropriated. They don't see a future for themselves in Venezuela, and that was very painful to see," Rosenthal said.

Beyond expressing her support for the Jewish community, Rosenthal said all she can do is to raise the world's awareness of the situation. She also guaranteed that she would inform U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton of the situation.

L F Warehouse Optical
Wishes You a Bright and Happy Chanukah
30%-50% off everday,
Downtown style at Warehouse prices.
LF Warehouse
DESIGNER EYEWEAR
STATE-OF-THE-ART LAB ON PREMISES AT SUNRISE LOCATION
COME VISIT OUR 3 GREAT LOCATIONS
731 Sunrise Avenue, Toronto, ON 416-752-4433
1450 Centre Street, Concord, ON 905-731-3007
Our New Location at... 2782 Dufferin St • 416-782-3007 is NOW OPEN!!

HOFFER ADLER LLP
BARRISTERS & SOLICITORS • TRADE-MARK AGENTS
Our Warmest Wishes for a Happy Chanukah
From your Commercial Franchising and Civil Litigation Boutique Law Firm. www.hofferadler.com

IMPERIAL
COFFEE AND SERVICES INC
Coffee • Vending • Water Systems
Best wishes for a happy Chanukah to all our customers and friends www.imperialcoffee.com (416) 638-7404

MACDONALD SAGER MANIS LLP
"Lawyers who speak your language"
Happy Chanukah to all our Clients and Friends
Macdonald Sager Manis LLP
150 York Street, Ste. 800
Toronto, ON. M5H 3S5
www.msmlaw.ca

The Partners and Staff of
Rosenberg Smith & PARTNERS LLP
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS & BUSINESS ADVISORS
wish their clients and friends a
HAPPY CHANUKAH
Solutions for today - Strategies for tomorrow
2000 STEELES AVENUE WEST
SUITE 200
CONCORD, ONTARIO L4K 3E9
PHONE: 416-798-4997
FAX: 905-660-3064
EMAIL: rsp@rsp.ca
www.rsp.ca

Wishing all a Joyous Chanukah
Specializing in Access Control, Video, Security, Monitoring and Remote Access Management
Your Property... Monitored, Managed and SECURE
416 445-8274
INTO-ELECTRONICS INC.
25 Scarsdale Rd., Unit 11
Toronto, ON M3B 2R2
www.247into.com
INTO
"Building Electronic Solutions"

Timing, noodging advance new push for Jonathan Pollard

By RON KAMPEAS
JTA

A combination of timing, diplomatic considerations and, above all, good old-fashioned noodging has culminated in the biggest push in years to free Jonathan Pollard.

Insiders associated with the push, which resulted last week in a congressional letter to President Barack Obama asking for clemency for the American Jew convicted in 1987 of spying for Israel, say the main factor was one man: David Nyer, an Orthodox activist from Monsey, N.Y. Nyer, working under the auspices of the National Council of Young Israel and the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, repeatedly called dozens of congressional offices and pressed Jewish groups asking for a leader to take on the case of Pollard, the former U.S. Navy analyst who has spent 25 years in prison as part of a life sentence – the longest sentence for spying for an ally.

Congressional staffers described Nyer as "relentless," and he eventually struck gold: Democratic Rep. Barney Frank, who chairs the U.S. House of Representatives Banking Committee, agreed to sign on. That prompted a total of 39 signatures all from Democrats – to the letter sent to Obama.

Getting Frank was a coup, one congressional insider said, not only because he has a leadership position, but because his pronounced liberalism in other arenas adds credibility to an effort that has been identified in recent years with the Israeli and pro-Israel right.

Frank took up the cause because he long has believed that Pollard's life sentence was disproportionate to the crime, his spokesman said. "It is something he feels strongly about," Harry Gural told JTA.

Jonathan Pollard

Launching the initiative at a Capitol Hill news conference Nov. 18, Frank listed two factors that made the matter timely: Pollard's 25 years in prison as of Sunday, and the parlous state of the Israeli-Palestinian peace process.

"The justification of this is the humanitarian one and the notion that the American justice system should be a fair one," Frank said. "We believe that clemency after 25 years for the offences of Jonathan Pollard would do that.

"My own hope is that if the president would do this, it would contribute to the political climate within the democracy of Israel and would enhance the peace process."

Frank alluded to Obama's low popularity in Israel where, fairly or not, the president has been saddled with a reputation as cool to Israeli interests.

"There are clearly people in Israel who are concerned about the nature of the American-Israeli relationship," Frank said. "An affirmation of that relationship would go forward" to alleviating such concern.

Frank was joined at the news conference by reps. Steve Rothman and Bill Pascrell, both of New Jersey, and Anthony Weiner of New York.

Continued on page B37

STARR Celeste-Falconer
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS
Happy & Healthy Chanukah
to all our clients, relatives and friends
2 Lansing Square Suite 701
Toronto Ontario M2J 4P8
www.starrceleste-falconer.ca
Tel 416-494-8300 Fax 416-494-6676

Dear-Born Baby
Est. 1979
Toronto's Best Baby Store!
Nursery Furniture, Strollers, High Chairs, Car Seats, Bedding, and so much more
Happy Chanukah
From your friends at Dear-Born Baby
10 Doncaster Avenue Thornhill 905.881.3334
info@dear-bornbaby.com

Chanukah Sameach
Heartfelt wishes for a Happy & Healthy Chanukah from Dr. Howard Winston and the CHSM Staff
CHSM
THE CENTRE FOR HEALTH & SPORTS MEDICINE
2790 Bathurst at Glencairn 416.789.2476 • www.chsm.net

SHOPPERS DRUG MART
WE'VE MOVED!
visit our new location at
1115 Lodestar Rd. (Allen Rd./Rimrock)
416.633.8778
*Cosmetics dept. *Full Grocery dept.
*Photo center *KOSHER section
Happy Chanukah to all our Customers
SPECIAL CHANUKAH EVENT
COSMETIC MAKEOVERS!
Thursday, December 2nd
12 noon - 6 pm.
Call now to book an app't.

ActiveLite
Mobility Systems Inc.
2300 John St - Unit 3, Thornhill ON L3T 6G7
HOME HEALTH CARE
חג אורים שמח
נאיר לכם פנים כל השנים
Bryan and Sharon Krikst מיכאלין ושרון קריקסט
Toll free 1-866-404-2080 www.activelite.com

CARRVILLE
Family Dentistry
Dr. Sheldon Rotman,
Dr. Brad Templeman and Staff wish all their patients, friends and relatives a Happy and Healthy Chanukah
361 Carrville Rd. 905.886.3222

Hennick, Herman, LLP
Chartered Accountants
Licensed Public Accountants
Happy Chanukah to our Clients and Friends
Darryl Hennick
Hugh Herman
Roomana Anjarwalla
Shirley Sumsion
Lawrence Weingarten
Ted Cash
York Corporate Centre
100 York Blvd, Suite 510
Richmond Hill, ON L4B 1J8
T 416-494-2606 T 905-707-8816
www.hhm-llp.ca

ברוך אתה ה' אלוקינו מלך העולם
אשר קדשנו במצותיו
וצונו להדליק נר של חנוכה
LINDEN & ASSOCIATES
BARRISTERS AND SOLICITORS
Justin Linden
Thomas McKinlay
Jonathan Ng
Jeremy Dunn
Paul Starkman, Counsel
Royal Bank Plaza, 200 Bay Street,
North Tower, Suite 2010
Toronto Ontario M5J 2J1
T. 416 861.9338
F. 416. 861.9973
jlinden@lindenlex.com
www.lindenlex.com

'It is always the right time to do the just thing'

Continued from page B36

Pascrell met with Pollard in 1998 at Butner, the federal facility in North Carolina where he is imprisoned. Another initiator of the letter was Rep. Edolphus Towns of New York.

The letter's emphasis is on what it says is the disproportionate length of Pollard's sentence.

"We believe that there has been a great disparity from the standpoint of justice between the amount of time Mr. Pollard has served and the time that has been served – or not served at all – by many others who were found guilty of similar activity on behalf of nations that, like Israel, are not adversarial to us," the letter says. "It is indisputable in our view that the nearly 25 years that Mr. Pollard has served stands as a sufficient time from the standpoint of either punishment or deterrence."

It also emphasizes that Pollard is guilty.

"Such an exercise of the clemency power would not in any way imply doubt about his guilt, nor cast any aspersions on the process by which he was convicted," the letter says.

The absence of Republicans on the letter was striking.

Frank said he had reached out to Republicans and had delayed sending the letter until after the elections in order not to make it a political issue. Speaking on background, Jewish organizational officials – some of them allied with the most conservative groups – confirmed that was the case. Pro-Israel figures in some cases called the Republicans and said not signing would stain otherwise spotless pro-Israel records, but it didn't help.

Two congressional Republicans known to have been on Nyer's call list did not return calls from JTA seeking comment.

Nyer said he had secured the endorsement of conservative figures known for their closeness to the party, including Gary Bauer, the president of American Values, and John Hagee, the founder of Christians United for Israel. Hagee had reached out to Republicans, Nyer said, but to no avail.

Among the Jewish groups backing the effort were the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, the National Council of Young Israel, B'nai B'rith International, the Religious Action Center of the Reform movement, the Zionist Organization of America, Agudath Israel of America and the Rabbinical Council of America. Other mainstream groups stayed out – a signal of how sensitive the matter of a Jew spying for Israel remains.

One official at a pro-Israel organization said the multitude of groups backing the initiative shows how much the American Jewish community has moved on from the anxieties that beset its reactions to the revelations in 1985 that Israel had run a spy in Washington. Now, the official said, Pollard's proponents are more vocal and more numerous.

Pollard's backers in Israel are aware of the change and are encouraging activists like Nyer to mount an active offence.

Nyer, at Frank's news conference, sounded nonplussed by his own achievement.

"I came across scores of ordinary Americans in the country, as well as prominent figures, who have joined the calls for Jonathan's release," he said.

Beyond the congressional letter, the 25th anniversary of Pollard's incarceration has spawned a number of Op-Eds calling for Pollard's release, including one in the Washington Post recently by his father, Morris Pollard.

IS POLLARD BEING PUNISHED FOR HELPING ISRAEL AGAINST SADC
U.S. GOVERNMENT DISPENSES REVENGE NOT JUSTICE TO JONATHAN POLLARD

Americans demostrate on behalf of Jonathan Pollard

Rabbi David Saperstein, who directs the Religious Action Center, said Frank weighted the matter properly: The justice of the matter was key, but the timing of the peace process helped.

"It is always the right time to do the just thing in the face of the disproportionate sentence," Saperstein said. "If it has an ancillary benefit, if this is the way to move the process along, I'm all in favor of it – but it should be done on its own merits."

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has favoured such a release since he first proposed it during his first term, at the Wye River negotiations in 1998. President Bill Clinton reportedly was ready to agree but was rebuffed by top intelligence officials. The CIA director at the time, George Tenet, said he would quit if Clinton agreed, and the president backed down.

Netanyahu is again prime minister, and negotiations again are fraught. Netanyahu is negotiating with the White House over concessions for freezing settlement building as a means to draw Palestinians back to direct talks.

Meanwhile, the reasons for the U.S. intelligence community's strong stance against Pollard remain unknown.

"Anyone who knows isn't talking, and anyone who is talking doesn't know," Weiner said.

But two figures involved in the prosecution now have come forward to say Pollard has served enough time.

Lawrence Korb, an assistant secretary of defence in 1987, said in a letter that his boss, the late Caspar Weinberger, had a "visceral dislike for Israel" and that played a role in his pressing the judge to ignore the plea bargain Pollard had worked out with prosecutors.

The other Reagan administration official recommending clemency is Abraham Sofaer, who helped investigate the breadth of the secrets Pollard stole for the Israelis.

Madeline's
Brides • Bridesmaids • Mothers • Prom • Graduation • Bar Mitzvah
Wishing our Customers & Friends a Happy & Healthy Chanukah
1798 Avenue Road • 416.789.4890

CHANUKAH SAMEACH
From Your Friends
MARKHAM STOUFFVILLE HOSPITAL
EXPANSION CAMPAIGN
We're growing. Together.
905.472.7059 www.msh.on.ca

MANDEL WHOLESALE FOODS
TEL: 905 669 1150
EMAIL: sales@mandelsales.com
Best wishes for a joyous Chanukah to our relatives and friends and the people of Israel.
KEVIN & NICOLE MANDEL and FAMILY

GCSE
Green • Chencinski • Starkman • Eles LLP
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS
Extends best wishes to our Clients and Friends for a Happy Chanukah
4950 Yonge Street, Suite 1906, Toronto, Ontario M2N 6K1
416-512-6000

The Cooper and Schwarz families of Cooper's Iron & Metal Inc
130 Commissioners St. / Toronto Canada M5A 1A8
Phone: 416-461-0733 Fax: 416-461-0755 extend their best wishes to clients and friends for a Happy and Healthy Hannukah dominion rug since 1947

a carpet adventure
Best Wishes for a Happy Chanukah
We can supply and install anywhere in Canada and the U.S.
3420 Yonge Street (1 mile South of 401)
Tel: 416-485-9488

FR Fogler, Rubinoff LLP
95 Wellington Street West, Suite 1200
Toronto-Dominion Centre
Toronto, ON M5J 2Z9
Tel. 416.864.9700 Fax: 416.941.8852
www.foglers.com
We extend best wishes to all our clients & friends for a happy, healthy, and peaceful Chanukah.
Fogler, Rubinoff LLP is a full service business law firm providing legal services and advice to established and emerging businesses and individuals.

Montefiore was 'one of the first global celebrities'

By SHALOM GOLDMAN
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

In her introduction to this extensive and engaging biography of Sir Moses Montefiore (1784-1885), (Belknap, Harvard) Abigail Green notes that her subject's life "reminds us that Jewish history is never simply about the Jews, but always about their relationship with the rest of society." The observation could serve as the epigram of Green's work, as it regularly reminds us that Moses Montefiore's remarkable life is both a Jewish story and an international one, even if today, Montefiore, if he is remembered at all, is remembered almost exclusively in Jewish circles.

One hundred and twenty five years after his death in 1885 (at age 100), Moses Montefiore's name has been memorialized in a wide range of places: in Jerusalem's Yemin Moshe neighbourhood, where the windmill he erected in the 1850s still stands; in the Bronx, where the city hospital named for him still operates; and in Montefiore, Kan., a spot on old maps that commemorates a Jewish agricultural colony founded there in the 1880s.

Born into an Italian Sephardi family of wealth and prestige, Montefiore moved to London as a young man. But it was Jerusalem, to which Montefiore made seven pilgrimages during his long lifetime, that was at the centre of his concerns. Among the many delightful details that Green enlists to illustrate his occupation with the welfare of the city's Jews is that "his comfortable four-poster bed at Ramsgate was adorned with a perpetual reminder of his love for Zion, the Hebrew inscription from Psalm 137, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem."

Through family connections, Montefiore became one of the few Jewish brokers on the London Stock Exchange, where he invested some of his own considerable inheritance. This was in 1803, when the British financial system was at the height of its power, and when vast fortunes could be made through investment and trade. There were 700 stockbrokers operating on the exchange, but only 12 places were allotted to Jewish brokers. In 1812 Montefiore married Judith Barent-Cohen, whose father was also very wealthy. As Green notes: "Marriage in such circles was always about money and connections." Through this marriage, Montefiore was to make his most important business connections, connections that would make him one of the richest men in England.

Sir Moses spent the first half of his life making a vast fortune and the second half dispensing it widely and wisely. He was assisted by his two closest companions, his wife, who is deserving of a biography of her own, and his secretary assistant Louis Loewe, also a dynamic figure who, like Barent-Cohen, should have been given a larger role in Green's narrative. Judith's sister was married to Nathan Rothschild, another of Europe's richest men. Within a few years of their first meeting, Montefiore, then in his early 30s, was acting as Rothschild's stockbroker.

Green calls Montefiore "one of the first truly global celebrities ... In an age when the global public sphere first became a reality, his centennial birthday celebrations captured the imagination of the world." A biography was commissioned in honour of the event. This was Lucien Wolf's authorized, and somewhat hagiographical, work, Sir Moses Montefiore: A Centennial Biography (London, 1884). All subsequent biographies were handicapped by restricted access to whatever remains of the Montefiore papers.

Through family connections, Abigail Green, a lecturer in history at Brasenose College, Oxford, has to some extent overcome the problem of restricted family papers. As she notes in the preface's opening sentence, she was born into the Montefiore family, "and with a different family background I would have not written this book."

But Green, like Montefiore's previous biographers, still had to confront the strangest and greatest obstacle to creating a complete picture of Montefiore's life and work – the deliberate destruction of his vast, personal archive by his nephew and heir, Sir Joseph Sebag-Montefiore. Why he did this has not been explained. Green speculates that "the existence of guilty secrets may possibly explain the burning of Montefiore's diaries, but they cannot excuse the wanton destruction of his entire archive." Green does not immediately suggest what those guilty secrets might be, though later in the book we learn that Moses Montefiore may have had an illegitimate child with one of the family servants. He kept the child's existence a secret from his friends and family, though he provided for the boy and his mother.

This biography is quite extensive. Perhaps to a fault. Green herself admits in the preface that when she embarked on a full biography based on archival materials, she "did not fully appreciate the scale of the challenge." The thoroughness of her research is both remarkable and commendable, but at 423 pages plus notes and bibliography, this is a hefty tome. It could have been shorter, and if it had been, more people would be likely to read it all the way through.

Historians of Zionism and the Yishuv, who have long been interested in Montefiore's visits to Jerusalem and his charitable efforts on behalf of the Jews of the Land of Israel, are divided about how to interpret and situate those activities.

Was Sir Moses a Zionist, or perhaps a precursor of Zionism? When he celebrated his 100th birthday, the Hovevei Zion movement (eastern European groups that organized non-political immigration to Palestine starting in the 1880s) tried to claim him as one of their own, but one gathers that was out of the hope that he would contribute to the cause and not out of ideological identification. In his 1919 work History of Zionism 1600-1918, Nahum Sokolow made the case for Montefiore as a Zionist, but Sokolow's project is all-inclusive, and anyone who played a part in the conversation on the return of the Jews to Zion was by his definition a Zionist.

Continued on page B39

Happy Chanukah
HAKIM OPTICAL
Give the Joy of good vision
2 PAIR $199
HAKIM DESIGNER EYEGLASSES
Our Gift to You!
Receive a complimentary $50 Gift Card.
Over 150 Discount Outlets... 110 One Hour In-Store Labs

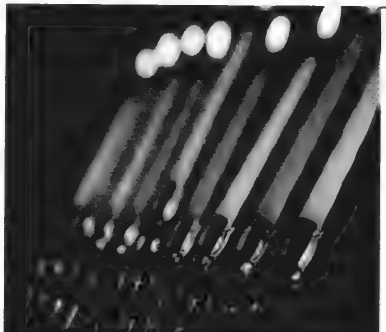
Best Wishes For A Happy Chanukah!

SC Stern Cohen

Chartered Accountants
Business Advisors
Business Valuations

T. 416.967.5100
www.sterncohen.com

Guidance at every turn



Happy Chanukah
to all our Friends and Clients.

PAISLEY PMI MANOR
INSURANCE GROUP
Home • Auto • Business • Life

www.paisleymanor.com
416-510-1177

A classical Jewish philanthropist

Continued from page B38

During their 1839 visit to Jerusalem, Montefiore and his wife took a lively interest in the fledgling plans for Jewish involvement in agricultural enterprises. Sir Moses confided to his diary that he was enthused by his survey of fertile areas in Palestine and that he intended to negotiate a lease with Muhammad Ali (the ruler of Egypt and Sudan, whose domain extended to the Land of Israel) for land use in a number of villages. He speculates about the amounts of land he might need and what would constitute desirable financial terms for a lease, and then hopes that "This grant obtained, I shall, please heaven, on my return to England, form a company for the cultivation of the land and the encouragement to our brethren in Europe to return to Palestine ... By degrees I hope to induce the return of thousands of our brethren to the Land of Israel – I am sure they would be happy in the enjoyment of the observance of our holy religion, in a manner which is impossible in Europe."

Portrait of Sir Moses Montefiore

Green notes that "this famously prophetic diary entry has led generations of Zionists to claim Montefiore as their own." But she herself is not convinced, for even in this diary entry, "the language of nationalism is strikingly absent." At the time of the Montefiore centennial celebration, Zionist activists seem to have understood that "Hasar Moshe" could not be counted upon for help in the same way that "Hanadiv" (Edmond de Rothschild) could. They understood, in Green's words, that Baron de Rothschild "had already done more for Jewish agricultural settlements in the Holy Land than Montefiore had achieved in a lifetime."

Baron de Rothschild (1845-1934) was actively involved in establishing long-term settlement projects in Eretz Israel. In the 1880s he gave financial support to agricultural colonies on the verge of collapse and was known by many as the "father of the Yishuv." Hanadiv was quoted as saying his work for the Yishuv was "not merely philanthropy, but something entirely different." Today , we might call it sustainability.

Montefiore, in contrast, was more of a classical Jewish philanthropist, who saw his contributions as tzedakah. The many projects that he supported in the Land of Israel were more in the realm of charitable support than part of an effort to create a sustainable and self-supporting Jewish presence in the Land.

Green understands Montefiore's ideas on Jewish settlement in Palestine as "the product of his dual identity as a religious Jew and a successful London businessman." She also situates Montefiore's advocacy for persecuted Jews in a context not articulated by his earlier biographers, that of 19th-century British universal humanitarianism. For Montefiore, along with the French Jewish-rights advocate Adolphe Cremieux and other crusaders, sought to "universalize the Jewish cause . Indeed, the ability of British and French Jewish leaders to persuade their governments to intervene in the Jewish question testified to the importance of liberal and humanitarian groups within the wider body politic."

Montefiore's best known and most enduring effort in this regard was the Holy Land Relief Fund, which he and British Chief Rabbi Nathan Adler established in 1854. This fund "changed the face of international Jewish philanthropy forever." It did so by appealing, successfully, to Christians of various denominations – Anglicans, Methodists, Evangelicals and Catholics – as well as to Jews. Its fundraising efforts presaged much more recent efforts by American Christian Zionists on behalf of the State of Israel. One of the English newspapers of the day reminded its readers that during the Irish famine, "when the poor Irish were perishing with want, the Rothschilds and the Montefiores sent princely subscriptions in their assistance." Christians, therefore, should be equally generous in return.

When Moses Montefiore reached the age of 100 in 1884 it was a national event. "No one could remember the last time a private individual had attracted such an overwhelming display of affection," writes Abigail Green.

Shalom Goldman is professor of Hebrew and Middle Eqstern studies at Emory University, in Atlanta. His book Zeal for Zion: Christians, Jews, and the Idea of the Promised Land was published earlier this year by University of North Carolina Press.

Marcello Tarantino
CLOTHING FOR MEN
HAPPY CHANUKAH
17 HAZELTON AVENUE (416) 925-2464

SALON Matté
3852 Bathurst St.
15% OFF
on all KERASTASE products for the month of December
416.398.5228
Wishes all their customers a Happy & Healthy Chanukah
Open 7 days a week

Cheryl, Sam & Tommy from the CENTRE STREET DELI
Wish all their friends & customers a Happy & Healthy Chanukah
905 - 731-8037
Open 7 days a week - 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.
1136 CENTRE STREET
(between Bathurst and Dufferin)
Please visit us at www.centrestreetdeli.com

The Medicine Shoppe®
The Pharmacy That's All About Your Health™
Wishes all their customers a Happy Chanukah
Safwat Khair 4256 Bathurst St. 416-398-9898

Happy & Joyous Chanukah
From the partners and staff at
HARRIS & Partners
Chartered Accountants
Premier
A recognized leader in the accounting and insolvency field, offering financial services and professional advice to entrepreneurial business in Southern Ontario
Harris & Partners, LLP, Chartered Accountants
Harris & Partners Inc., Trustee in Bankruptcy
8920 Woodbine Ave., Suite 300, Markham, On L3R 9W9
Tel.: 905-477-0363 / 905-479-5712
www.harrisandpartners.com

BEST WISHES FOR A HAPPY CHANUKAH
חנוכה שמח
SGGG LLP CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS
45 ST. CLAIR AVE. WEST, SUITE 200
TORONTO, ONTARIO M4V 1K6
Tel: 416-967-3444
Fax: 416-967-3945
email: sggg@sggg.com
website: www.sggg.com

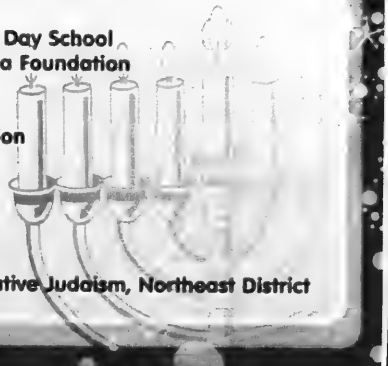
STARKMANS
SURGICAL SUPPLY
Health Care DEPOT
Starkman's would like to wish all of our family, friends and customers Happy Chanukah
1243 Bathurst Street
416-534-8411
Free parking (at Davenport Road)
Open daily 9am-6pm Thursdays 9am-8pm and Sundays noon-5pm

זה היום עשה ה' נגילה ונשמחה בו

Jewish Community Organizations, Synagogues and Schools join our brothers and sisters in Israel in wishing the community a Happy Chanukah. We pray for peace with security and honour.

Photo by Chayim Alevsky

Aliyah Center of the Jewish Agency for Israel
Beit Halochem Canada, Aid to Disabled Veterans of Israel
Beit Rayim Synagogue
Bernard Betel Centre
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
Beth Torah Congregation
Bialik Hebrew Day School
Canadian Council of Conservative Synagogues
Canadian Friends of Bar Ilan University
Canadian Friends of Hebrew University
Canadian Friends of Yad Sarah
Canadian Hadassah-WIZO Toronto Centre (CHW)
Canadian Jewish Congress, Ontario Region
Canadian Magen David Adom for Israel
Canadian Technion Society
Circle of Care
Congregation B'nai Torah
Congregation Darchei Noam
DANI- Developing and Nurturing Independence
First Narayever Congregation
JIAS (Jewish Immigrant Aid Services), Toronto
Jewish National Fund of Toronto
Jewish Vocational Service
Jews for Judaism
Jewish Women International of Canada
Kehillat Shaarei Torah
Leo Baeck Day School
Lodzer Centre Congregation
MERCAZ- Canada & Canadian Foundation For Masorti Judaism
Na'amat Canada
Netivot HaTorah Day School
One Family Fund
ORT Toronto/ORT Canada
Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School
Reena, Batay Reena and Reena Foundation
Robbins Hebrew Academy
Shaar Shalom Synagogue
Shaarei Shomayim Congregation
Shaarei Tefillah Congregation
State of Israel Bonds
Temple Har Zion
The Pride of Israel Synagogue
The Toronto Heschel School
United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism, Northeast District



Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

44 Pages | Thursday, December 9, 2010 | 2 Tevet, 5771 | $1.25

MIRVISH
2010–2011
SEASON
SUBSCRIBE NOW
MIRVISH.COM

This Week

National

Beth Tzedec leaves Conservative group. Page 15

Chinese immigrant has a fascination with Judaism. Page 12

Business

Natural gas and oil field found in Israel. Page 33

Arts & Travel

Soprano picks up where she left off 30 years ago. Page 35

On cjnews.com

A little change went a long way in 2010.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 16
Yiddish Corner 20
According to Reports 20
Family Moments 25
What's New 26
Obituaries & Notices 28
On Campus 28
Israel & the Jewish World 29
Business 33
Arts & Travel 34
Books & Authors 38
Classified 40

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40006894
Publications Mail Registration #09894

Fire rages in all directions last week in the Carmel forest near Haifa. At left, an Israeli firefighter extinguishes a house on fire in Yamin Ord, near Haifa. The fire was the worst in Israel's history. It killed 42 people and destroyed some 50,000 dunams of land, forcing more than 17,000 people to evacuate their homes. Please see related stories on pages 4, 8, 9, 21 and 30. [Flash90 photos]

Fire in Carmel forest kills 42

BY ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff reporter

Relief efforts by the Canadian Jewish community and government were quickly up and running in the wake of Israel's worst-ever forest fire last week.

The fire, which erupted Thursday and torched a huge swath of natural forest on Mount Carmel, was finally contained on Sunday after firefighters spent 77 hours battling the blaze with firefighting forces that included 35 waterbombing aircraft, 24 of them provided by foreign countries, including Canada.

According to Israel's Foreign Ministry, 42 people died in the fire, and nearly 50 square kilometres of forest and 250 homes were lost. The fire also caused over $2 billion NIS ($555 million Cdn) in damage, according to Israeli government estimates.

Many of the major Canadian Jewish community institutions, including the Jewish National Fund (JNF) of Canada, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto and Toronto-based humanitarian relief organization Ve'ahavta, quickly set up online donation pages and phone lines to help fight the fire and aid those affected in Israel.

As of The CJN's deadline, the three organizations had raised nearly $200,000 nationally – $100,000 of which was contributed by a single donor for JNF to put toward the purchase of an additional fire truck for the organization's fleet in Israel.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper extended Canada's support and condolences to the victims of the fire after receiving a phone call from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu late last week.

A spokesperson for Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada told The CJN that the department "is working rapidly to identify Canadian assistance that could be provided to Israel" as soon as possible.

Continued on page 30

Vayigash
Candlelighting: 4:22
Havdalah: 5:28
Greater Toronto Area

Dor
or 416-932
d
Access

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(U)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 016
PO BOX 972 STATION F 811
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Rick Hansen teams with Hebrew U for spinal cord research – please see page 30

The News in Brief

Canada

Neo-Nazi Acquitted

VANCOUVER — A man labelled by a Federal Court judge as "a neo-Nazi" and "virulently anti-Jewish" was acquitted of contempt charges on a technicality last week. The court ruled that former University of Saskatchewan math lecturer Terry Tremaine could not be in contempt of a court order since he was not informed that the court had registered a decision of the Canadian Human Rights Commission that ordered him to stop posting hate messages on the Internet. In 2007, after receiving a complaint from Ottawa activist Richard Warman, a commission tribunal fined Tremaine $4,000 and ordered him to stop posting hate on the web

World

Dreidel Record

NEW YORK — Yeshiva University students and others broke the Guinness world record for most dreidels spun simultaneously. Some 618 students, alumni, faculty, staff, neighbours and friends of Yeshiva U topped the record Dec. 1 at "Dreidel-Palooza," an event organized by Students Helping Students, a student-run group that raises money for undergraduate scholarships. The previous record of 541 was set in 2005 at Temple Emanuel in Cherry Hill, N.J.

YU Schools Grant

NEW YORK — The Avi Chai Foundation has given a $1.6 million grant to Yeshiva University to help Jewish day schools improve their financial situations. The grant will go to the YU Institute for University-School Partnership to support its efforts in helping 30 day schools in five Jewish communities figure out long-term financial strategies, as well as offering three-year matches for funds that each school brings in from local donors and Jewish federations. If successful in the five yet-to-be-named areas, Avi Chai and YU plan to expand the project to up to 200 schools in 30 communities.

Parents Pick Mates

NEW YORK — A new Jewish online dating site lets parents search for their children's mate. TheJMom.com, launched Dec. 1, allows parents to contact other parents for information and set up casual dates. "Moms have been setting up their children for centuries," said site co-founder Danielle Weisberg. "TheJMom.com puts parents behind the keyboard and lets them do the clicking and the matching." The site was the brainchild of Weisberg and her brother, Brad, who conceived of it after their mother asked Brad to see his online dating profile and spent hours searching a matchmaking site to find him a woman.

'Rabbi' Convicted

JERUSALEM — A self-proclaimed rabbi who counselled followers to commit child abuse was convicted Dec. 1 in Jerusalem of abusing several children who lived with him. Elior Chen was convicted of abusing the eight children of the woman he lived with, a follower whose husband had given her over to the charismatic leader. Chen fled Israel for Canada and then Brazil in 2008, and was extradited back to Israel several months later, after he counselled his followers to severely beat and burn the children to rid them of the devil. Some were forced to drink alcohol and turpentine until they vomited, and to eat their own feces. Some of the abuses led to serious and life-threatening injuries. One child has been in a persistent vegetative state since suffering abuse at the hands of Chen.

DePaul Orders Return of Sabra Hummus

CHICAGO — DePaul University in Chicago has asked its food service to reinstate the sale of Sabra hummus.

The sale of Sabra hummus had been suspended last month after a request by a pro-Palestinian student group, even though the request didn't go through DePaul's internal Fair Business Practices Committee, as is customary.

Students for Justice in Palestine objected to the fact that Sabra is half-owned by the Strauss Group, which has publicly supported Israeli troops and provides care packages and sports equipment to Israeli soldiers.

Its request led to objections from Jewish students and discussions between Chicago's Jewish federation and DePaul's top leaders, who indicated the appropriate university processes weren't followed, JUF News reported.

The request will now go to the Fair Business Practices Committee, which will examine the complaint and make recommendations to the university president.

The reinstatement followed a vote last week by students at Princeton University on whether to ask Princeton's dining services to provide an alternative brand of hummus to Sabra. Voting on the referendum, placed on last week's United Student Government ballot by the Princeton Committee on Palestine, concluded Dec. 1.

The national effort to ban Sabra hummus is part of the boycott, divestment and sanctions movement.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite | DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel
www.steelesmemorial.com
•Current Listing of Funerals
•Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
•Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
•Kaddish Texts
•Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
•Jewish Holiday Dates
905-881-6003
Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

Janet Shiner BEd MBA
In-Home Financial Services
Trusted Financial Organization For Seniors Right In Your Own Home
Bill Paying, Tax Organization, Checkbook Balances
Serving Clients In North Toronto
Call 647-822-0048
www.inhomefinancialservices.com

The Canadian Jewish news
Vol. XL, No. 48 (1,977)*
Gary Laforet, General Manager
Mordechai Ben-Dat, Editor
Vera Gillman, Advertising & Assistant General Manager
Carol Jamieson, Controller
Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor
Joseph Serge, Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor
Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Shen Shefa, Laura Stricker, Staff Reporters
G. Gall, J. Gerber, B. Gladstone, M. Gordon, N. Joseph, Rabbi J. Kelman, M. Lockshin, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosensweig, L. Speisman, L. Weinberg, Columnists
Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak, Canadian Correspondents
Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau
Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter, Copy Editors
Ella Burakowski, Assistant Advertising Manager
Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Fried, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig, Sales Representatives, Toronto
Doris Perez, Office Manager
Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak, Office Staff, Toronto
David Collin, Promotions Manager, Circulation
Brian Stoneman, Composing Room Manager
Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky, Production Staff
Donald Carr, Steven Cummings, Michael Goldbloom, Igor Korenzvit, Julia Koschitzky, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Directors
George A. Cohon, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman, Honourary Directors
Ray D. Wolfe, Founding President (1971-1990)
CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.
CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010
SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition: $20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign: $135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.
Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4
Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894
*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.
Canada

The Canadian Jewish news
How To Reach Us
Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: 416-932-5095 Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 416-391-0949
E-mail: thecjn@gmail.com
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

FRIENDS OF
SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER
FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
416-864-9735
www.fswc.ca
DIRECT ACTION NOW

National

Greater Toronto Area

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how
to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Missionary group builds new facility in Toronto

Jews for Judaism Toronto's director of education Rabbi Michael Skobac, left, and Julius Ciss, the organization's executive director.

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Julius Ciss calls them "Hebrew Christians."

Ciss, executive director of the Toronto chapter of Jews for Judaism, is referring to Christian missionary groups that have made it a specialized practice within the evangelical community to target unaffiliated or "assimilated" Jews who are searching for a deeper spiritual connection to the world.

Of particular concern to Jews in the Toronto area, Ciss said, is a group called Chosen People Ministries (CPM), a rival to the Jews for Jesus organization. This group, he said, uses quasi-Jewish propaganda to great effect to lure susceptible Jews away from even a nominal connection to their Jewish roots and toward the acceptance of "Messiah Yeshua" – a.k.a. Jesus.

CPM recently announced that it's nearing the final stages of building its new Toronto Messianic Centre and national headquarters on Bridgeland Avenue, just west of Yorkdale Mall. For the past 15 years, it had operated out of a small house on Sheppard Avenue, between Yonge and Bathurst streets.

Ciss said the group has refined its pitch to Jews over the years, creating spaces where the Gospel is preached in a Jewish cultural atmosphere that makes it easier for Jews to believe they're staying true to their roots while they're being taught that they can only be saved by accepting Jesus.

Jews for Judaism's primary mission is to prevent groups such as CPM from recruiting Jews.

A reformed Jew for Jesus member himself – he said he spent several years in the organization before realizing he'd made a "horrible" mistake – Ciss said the methods used by the various missionary groups are specifically designed to break down psychological barriers that many Jews have erected against Christian proselytizing.

"These are basically churches operating under the guise of a Jewish patina," Ciss said. "Their presentations can be very deceptive to an assimilated Jew who is looking for spiritual alternatives."

For instance, one of the ways missionaries get Jews to attend services is instead of holding them on Sundays like other churches, they will instead "ask you to visit their 'synagogue' on Shabbat. And that has a totally different, Jewish ring to it."

Instead of referring to the New Testament, the missionaries refer to the "Brit ha'Hadashah" – the Hebrew translation for the name of the Christian Bible – and instead of asking Jews to accept Jesus as their lord and saviour, they instead ask them to accept "Yeshua ha'Mashiach," he said.

Continued on page 15

Celebrate the Magic
$250 FREE
In Dining and Attractions Passes
WATERPARK
HOTEL WATERPARK PACKAGES FROM $159
Come celebrate Chanukah with a Splash!
Book your Hotel Waterpark Package and receive $250 FREE in dining and attraction passes
Hotel Waterpark Package offers:
• Accommodations at Sheraton on the Falls, Crowne Plaza Fallsview, Skyline Inn or Hampton Inn by Hilton at the Falls
• 4 two day passes to Fallsview Indoor Waterpark
FALLS AVENUE
חנוכה שמח
Sheraton on the Falls
CROWNE PLAZA
Skyline Inn
866.596.5234 • fallsviewwaterpark.com/cjnews

Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto

Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto extend condolences to the family of Sydney Greenstein ז"ל

Beloved husband, father, brother, grandfather and great-grandfather.
Member of the Associated Board of Governors.

His devotion to Jewish education at Associated will always be remembered.

המקום ינחם אתכם בתוך שאר אבלי ציון וירושלים

Sally Zigler, President — Sheldon Carr, Chairman of the Board

Benjamin Group

Through the generations ...a sacred trust

30 YEARS OF DEDICATED SERVICE

"A generation of service."
Michael Benjamin

Larry Scheinman

Larry, the Benjamin and Levitt families as well as the staff at Benjamin's want to thank you for your thirty years of dedicated service to Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel and the Toronto Jewish community. We wish you the very best for a long and well deserved retirement.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto
416-663-9060
www.thebenjamingroup.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Greater Toronto Area

Can a phoenix arise?

From the editor's desk...

The image we are most used to seeing is of Israelis, with the inspiring blue and white Star of David patches on their arms, travelling far and wide to assist other countries through dark hours of natural disaster and national emergency.

Last week the image was inverted.

The natural calamity occurred in Israel. Starting midday Thursday, fire raged for 77 hours through the Carmel forest near Haifa, killing 42 people, displacing thousands, threatening thousands more, destroying 50,000 dunams of forest and burning down millions of trees.

Israel's firefighting resources were insufficient for the emergency. According to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu sought help from friendly countries. The ministry was in contact with almost all European countries and with Middle Eastern states seeking assistance in extinguishing the blaze.

The response was immediate.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper said that Canada would do everything possible to help Israel with this emergency and was prepared to offer any assistance required, including firefighting aircraft and personnel. Canada dispatched four water-bombers to combat the blaze.

The prime minister also expressed condolences to the families of the people who perished in fire.

British Prime Minister David Cameron – whose unfolding Mideast policy may not be all that friendly to Israel – called Netanyahu on Friday afternoon to extend condolences and sympathies for the lives lost in the fire. He also dispatched two helicopters based in Cyprus.

U.S. President Barack Obama spoke with Netanyahu early in the crisis. He sent the Boeing 747 supertanker, "Evergreen," to release its cargo of more than 40 tons of fire-extinguishing material.

Before the Evergreen arrived into Israeli airspace, Russia sent an Ilyushin-76 cargo plane Saturday to help in the fight against the fire. The plane jettisoned some 42,000 litres of water at one time over the burning forest.

Australia's Prime Minister Julia Gillard spoke directly to Netanyahu to "confirm Australia's assistance and convey her condolences, and those of the people of Australia, to the people of Israel at this difficult time," according to a statement.

Perhaps most surprising was the response by Turkey. Turkey sent two airplanes and crew to assist in the battle against the Carmel blaze.

Prime Minister Netanyahu personally thanked Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan for his aid. Erdogan said Sunday that Turkey still demands an apology for the May raid on the ship the Mavi Marmara, which was part of a flotilla that aimed to break Israel's blockage of Gaza, and that Israel pay damages to the families of those killed and wounded. Nevertheless, Netanyahu said he hoped the gesture of assistance by Turkey "will serve as an opening to improve relations between Israel and Turkey."

The Palestinian Authority also sent firefighters. Bethlehem Civil Defence Chief Ibrahim Ayish told Palestinian news agency Ma'an that it was good to work alongside the Israeli teams."

Ha'aretz reported that PA firefighters arrived at nine in the morning on Sunday. "We were received respectfully. After all, we're dealing with a humanitarian issue which knows no borders," Ayish said.

When asked by Israel Radio how they felt about fighting a fire in Israel, the Palestinians responded that it was partly a humanitarian work, partly their job as firefighters, and that they believe Israel would help in the same way should the Palestinians ever find themselves in a similar situation.

Greece, Cyprus, Great Britain, Turkey, Russia, France, Italy, Bulgaria, Jordan, the United States, Spain, Azerbaijan, Switzerland, Canada, Jordan, Egypt and the Palestinian Authority helped Israel.

From the command centre at Haifa University, Netanyahu said the following on Saturday: "I have spoken with approximately 30 heads of state and government, presidents and prime ministers in the past three days. I must tell you that their mobilization, the warmth of their remarks, their willingness, the desire to help immediately, sometimes even before we have managed to request it, must warm the heart of all Israelis...

"We have also witnessed displays of admiration and assistance from Egypt, from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, from Jordanian King Abdullah, and from Palestinian Authority [President Mahmoud Abbas], who volunteered to send three firefighters. I think that these things are very important.

"I had a very good and warm talk with him. I expressed appreciation both for this step and for his solidarity in conveying his condolences, as others have also done, and I told him that we're in the same neighbourhood. The fire is once here and once there. We are, in effect, creating a regional network. After we purchase the planes, the planes will join a regional network that I believe we can establish here for the benefit of all of our peoples."

What sort of phoenix will arise from the ashes of the Carmel forest fire? Perhaps one that will carry the branch of peace among neighbours in its beak?

– MBD

Dry Bones
THE FAMILY OF NATIONS CAN DISPLAY ITS COMPASSION AND SHARED HUMANITY
BUT OFTEN, WHAT IT TAKES TO SEE THIS ARE
MASSIVE EARTHQUAKES, FLOODS, VOLCANOS, TSUNAMIS OR TERRIBLE OUT-OF-CONTROL FOREST FIRES
www.DryBonesBlog.com

See JN

Prime Minister Stephen Harper lights the shamash last week at a ceremony in Ottawa. With him are, from left, Rabbi Chaim Mendelsohn of Chabad Centrepointe in Ottawa and Rabbi Menachem Matusof of Chabad Lubavitch of Alberta.

[Jason Ransom photo]

Greater Toronto Area

Beth Tzedec leaves Conservative shul group

Infrastructure offered by CCCS not seen as necessary

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Beth Tzedec Congregation is citing budgetary reasons for leaving the Canadian Council of Conservative Synagogues (CCCS), a breakaway group it helped form in 2008.

The shul was among four Toronto congregations that were the group's original constituents. Three of them – Beth Tzedec, Adath Israel Congregation and Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue – had recently left the United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism (USCJ), the umbrella for Conservative congregations in North America. Beth Sholom Synagogue had not been affiliated.

Norman Kahn

The group had grown to eight – now seven – Canadian congregations, and held its second annual convention in June.

In October, it launched its Congregational High School with additional funding from UJA Federation of Greater Toronto. The school is an outgrowth of Adath Israel's congregational high school program. A second location was started at Beth Tzedec, which will henceforth be unaffiliated.

In a letter to congregants dated Nov. 5, Beth Tzedec president Norman Kahn said the shul's board of governors decided at its Nov. 2 meeting to withdraw from the CCCS after weighing the benefits of membership against the cost.

The synagogue will save "a substantial amount of money… at a time when we have no choice but to control all expenses, as we continue to spend where we must on infrastructure and growth," he wrote in the letter, which is downloadable on the shul's website.

In a phone interview, Kahn told The CJN that Beth Tzedec, "like other congregations throughout North America, has suffered because of the economic downturn."

Although membership levels have remained "more or less" steady – the shul has close to 2,700 member families – membership dues haven't risen significantly, and costs continue to rise, he said. As well, Beth Tzedec's 55-year-old building requires "constant maintenance and repairs."

"There's a crunch there," Kahn said, adding that the board has looked at other expenditures as well, restructuring its afternoon school, for example, "to reduce costs and make a program that would be more appealing" by adding home study and online study and reducing in-class time.

Kahn said board members – and others at the synagogue who have offered input – don't believe they need the infrastructure offered by the CCCS.

The shul remains committed to collaborating with other Conservative synagogues on educational and youth programming, Kahn wrote in his letter.

"We cannot see the value in continuing to fund the infrastructure of CCCS, or in relying on its paid employees to facilitate programming, conversations and collaborations among Conservative leaders and synagogue professionals which we are already managing successfully on our own," he wrote.

Among Beth Tzedec's youth programs is a Paper Clips trip to Whitwell, Tenn., planned for February. It's open to teens from other synagogues.

The high school program, considered the CCCS' flagship youth program, offers a Jewish heritage trip to New York in the spring. It is also open to teens who are not in the program.

CCCS president Eric Gossin said Beth Tzedec's decision came as a surprise, and a disappointment. "It caught us a bit off guard."

Financially, it means the the organization is losing one of its largest contributors, if not the largest, said Gossin.

The amount Beth Tzedec paid for CCCS membership "was not that different" from the amount it paid in USCJ dues, Kahn said. Although the membership fee typically assessed by the USCJ for a shul Beth Tzedec's size was significantly higher than what the shul paid to the CCCS, the amount it actually paid the USCJ had been reduced after negotiations, he explained.

The CCCS is now looking at its own financial structure and mission statement, and its national youth director is winding down her duties.

Gossin said that Beth Tzedec is still "absolutely" part of the CCCS high school program. "We're not going to hurt the kids, first of all… We're trying to build the community, and make everyone feel welcome."

He believes the two-year-old organization is still suffering growing pains. "We don't have a long history."

Following a regular monthly meeting of representatives of all seven congregations – as well as Beth Tzedec representatives – last Thursday night, Gossin told The CJN that "everybody is still embracing the organization and the notion of continuing on."

He said that the CCCS is "not trying to replicate USCJ. We want to be something that's uniquely Canadian."

Eating well made easy

Rose Reisman's Personal Gourmet frozen entrées delivered to your door.

Grilled basa with a maple soy glaze & edamame salad

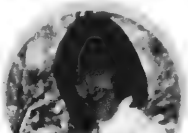
Delicious, calorie controlled, gourmet entrées are frozen in vacuum sealed packaging to retain maximum freshness.

Your choice for just $7.95*

Buy 7 single entrées and receive the 8th at no charge

Choose from a variety of delicious entrées including:

- ✓ Salmon teriyaki with orange couscous
- ✓ Tilapia with miso glaze and brown rice
- ✓ Salmon stuffed with ricotta served with Israeli couscous
- ✓ New York steak served with mashed potatoes
- ✓ Moroccan chicken kebobs with five-grain rice
- ✓ Chicken stir-fry over jasmine rice
- ✓ Vegetable lasagna
- ✓ Cannelloni with mushrooms and cheese



ROSE REISMAN'S personal GOURMET

*Single entrée only. $60 minimum order (pre-tax) required. Plus delivery charge.

personalgourmet.ca/frozen 416.721.0560

Jewish feminists look back and ahead

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Twenty years ago, Francine Zuckerman's film Half the Kingdom explored Jewish feminism, a project with roots in a 1983 conference on the role of women in Judaism.

The topic was considered very controversial at the time, recalled Rabbi Elyse Goldstein at a recent 20th anniversary event.

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein

But she derives hope from the fact that baby namings for Jewish girls – an innovation shown in the movie – have become "normative," and from other changes in recent years.

Rabbi Goldstein, director of Kolel, the Adult Centre for Liberal Jewish Learning, was part of a panel discussion celebrating the film's 20th year and putting it in context 10 years after the last anniversary event.

The Nov. 30 program, a sold-out evening organized by Kolel at the Bloor Cinema, was titled "Half The Kingdom: the next generation."

Along with Rabbi Goldstein, panelists who appeared in the film with her included journalist Michele Landsberg, University of Ottawa professor Naomi Goldenberg, and Concordia University associate professor Norma Joseph, who is also a CJN columnist.

Representing the younger generation were novelist Alison Pick, Rabba Sara Hurwitz, an Orthodox religious leader who made headlines when she was ordained last year by Rabbi Avi Weiss, and Rabbi Miriam Margles of the Danforth Jewish Circle, who co-founded an organization in the United States that brings together Jewish leaders and Palestinians.

Zuckerman also spoke, and actor Marilyn Lightstone moderated the panel.

Alice Shalvi, who won the prestigious Israel Prize for her work in advancing women's rights, said in a video from Israel that the Orthodox rabbinic establishment there still shows no indication of becoming more open, lenient or tolerant.

However, she added, there are more opportunities for women to practise their Judaism. A former president of the Masorti movement's Schechter Institute – a departure from her Orthodox background – Shalvi said it has been extremely gratifying to be accepted as both religious and feminist.

Likewise, Joseph recalled the anger she expressed in the film at being told there was no such thing as an Orthodox feminist. "I'm no longer an oxymoron," she said.

Goldenberg, an atheist, recalled a scene of women praying at the Kotel. "Even though I'm a Jewish secularist, the power of that wall is so important."

But she denounced the "sexism enforced by male violence" at the Kotel, referring to shouting and even chair-throwing by haredi men.

As well, she said, a scene that showed Women in Black "standing up for justice for non-Jews [Palestinians]" moved her. "I haven't seen that in a long time, and that used to be a tremendous part of secular Judaism.

"How did it happen that Jewishness got reduced to being religious?" Goldenberg replied to an audience member who said there has been a "killing off" of the secular community.

Joseph clarified that secular Jews "had to do Jewish… you couldn't just declare it."

Landsberg lamented the loss of dynamism that was evident in the film. At that time, she said, "You could be a self-respecting strong feminist, and still have a rightful, prideful place within the Jewish community. I feel that's diminished tremendously."

She said she was disheartened by the "extent of patriarchal sexism" in Israel as well as the path that Canadian Jewry has taken in terms of self-definition.

"It used to be a point of pride that Jews argued and debated," Landsberg said. "Now we're not allowed to question. Everything has hardened. Wherever on the spectrum you stand, there's anger and animosity towards Jews who don't have the same view."

Rabbi Goldstein took a more positive view, recalling her first position in Toronto as assistant rabbi at Holy Blossom Temple in 1983. "It was exhilarating and excruciating, and unbelievably lonely. I was an exotic specimen, and people would come to Holy Blossom to see me – not to hear me, not to learn from me, but to see me."

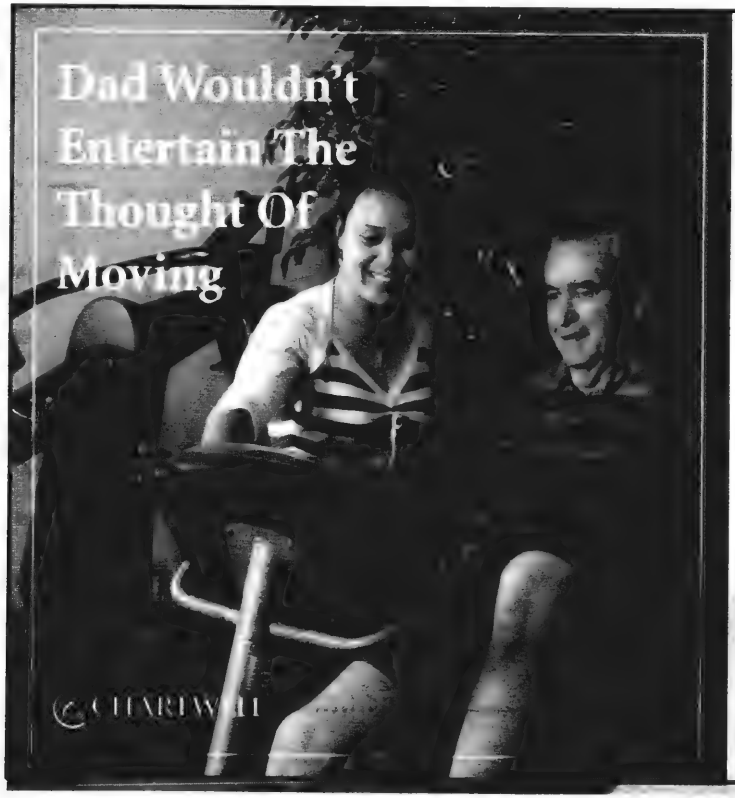
Among unexpected milestones in the past decade, Rabbi Goldstein was elected the first woman president of the Toronto Board of Rabbis and was involved in organizing an all-female cantors' concert. As well, she noted, a female rabbi was hired to teach rabbinics at the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto.

She also mentioned the Toronto Partnership Minyan, an Orthodox group that gives women Torah honours, including aliyot.

"So, honestly, I feel more optimistic than I felt 10 years ago," she said.

Rabbi Margles expressed gratitude to the women who appeared in the movie, and to their generation.

She expressed concern, however, that advances have been in one direction only, and that qualities associated with women, such as emotional intelligence, spiritual attunement and empathy, are dismissed as "touchy-feely."



Now he's entertained and on the move

Let us assist you in approaching the sensitive subject of moving. We can walk you and your parent through the positive aspects of living at a Chartwell residence.

Our objective in working with you is to ensure the very best outcome for your parent. In the end, if that means recommending an alternative, we will.

SHERRY & SHORTBREAD SOCIAL
Wednesday, December 15 • 3-4 pm

Warm up the winter with our entertainment and homemade shortbread.

Chartwell
CLASSIC
CONSTANTIA
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
784 Centre St., Thornhill, ON • 905-771-1013

SUMMIT VIEW

Don't miss your only chance to own in the heart of the original THORNHILL WOODS

PREVIEW OPENING

Semi-Towns and Attached Singles from the $490's

SALES OFFICE HOURS
Mon. - Thurs. 1pm-8pm
Sat., Sun. & Hol. 11am-6pm
Fridays Closed

www.summitviewhomes.com

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

The fire

More than three days after it began, the raging fire in the picturesque hills and forests of the Carmel range south and east of Haifa was brought, finally, under control. Firefighters fought the flames for some 77 hours before they could proclaim that the inferno was at last contained.

The words "fought the flames" are entirely inadequate to convey the unique fury of fire that is a unpredictable, ubiquitous, blazing hell in which men and women struggled day and night to save life and forest.

The fire killed 42 people, one of whom, 32-year-old Rabbi Uriel Malka, had recently been the principal of Ohr HaTorah Day School in Winnipeg. Most of the lives lost belonged to prison guards and prison guard cadets rushing through the heart of the inferno to a nearby prison to evacuate the prisoners there. Most of the guards and cadets were burned alive when the bus in which they were travelling was engulfed in flames on the first day of the fire. Rabbi Malka, training to be a prison chaplin, was among the ill-fated bus of rescuers. Two firefighters who rushed to rescue the guards and a 16-year-old volunteer also were killed.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu praised the "divine heroism" of the men and women who fought to defend life. But then we have always known that courage, self-sacrifice and heroism have never been in short supply in Israel.

The fire also destroyed nearly 50,000 dunams of land in the Carmel region and demolished or severely damaged some 250 homes. It was the worst forest fire in Israel's young history. And it appears, sadly, that human error and negligence may have been the cause.

In addition to the men and women and soldiers of the Israel Defence Forces fighting the fire on the ground, 35 airplanes flew innumerable sorties in the sky to douse the flames with water and flame retardant. Of those 35 aircraft, 24 were from other countries. Israel received aid from countries as near as Egypt, Jordan, Turkey, Cyprus, Greece and Bulgaria and as far away as Britain, France, Canada, the United States and Russia.

Firefighters from the Palestinian Authority also joined the fight to subdue the fire.

The flames are now doused. The Carmel forest in large part is now ash, cinder, brittle dead branch. The country, the people, are mourning the dead.

But the forest will be replanted and rebuilt and the life-sustaining ecosystem that was lost will eventually be restored.

This is one of the monuments – perhaps the most everlasting – that must be erected to the memories of the brave men and women who lost their lives trying to save others from harm's way.

All of us will have a role to play in helping build this monument. May the memories of the 42 be for blessing.

25 years ago in The CJN

The World Jewish Congress launched a global campaign for "formal recognition" of Israel by the Vatican. WJC president Edgar Bronfman urged Jewish leaders in 70 countries to raise the subject of diplomatic recognition of Israel at every meeting they have with the Pope or Vatican representatives.

Dry Bones
HALEK REVELATIONS
ARAB LEADERS WERE PLEADING WITH AMERICA TO STOP THE THREAT FROM IRAN
WHILE OBAMA WAS ACTING AS IF WHAT WORRIED THEM MOST WAS THE "PALESTINIAN PROBLEM"!
SO?
SO EITHER HE DIDN'T BELIEVE THE CABLES SENT BY U.S. DIPLOMATS OR HE NEVER BOTHERED TO READ THEM UNTIL NOW!
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Teicm, Nelson Wiseman.

Community restructuring and Congress

For years, the only organization that has been truly the voice not only of the community but also of those, like ourselves, who survived the Nazi inferno, is the Canadian Jewish Congress. Whether it was advocating with the Claims Conference for Holocaust survivor benefits or lobbying the federal government to have Nazi war criminals exposed and denaturalized, we knew that we could count on CJC.

We join CJC lay leaders Barbara Bank and David Schwartz in expressing our deep concern about the centralizing of Jewish advocacy agencies ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan," Nov. 25). We implore the restructuring committee to understand that the name Canadian Jewish Congress brings honour to Canadian Jewry, and its loss would be a profound mistake. As Holocaust survivors, we want to support the invigorated efforts of our leadership in its plans to help make Jewish advocacy the best it can be. Let us do so by ensuring the viability of CJC, a name the community and Canada trusts.

Nathan Leipciger and Sidney Zoltak
Co-Presidents
Canadian Jewish Holocaust Survivors

* * *

The work of Canadian Jewish Congress on issues of human rights, justice and public affairs advocacy over these many years is well-known and highly regarded, not only by the Jewish community but by the larger Canadian community. The structure of CJC links its activities to local communities, large and small. Therefore, I am deeply disturbed by the possibility that CJC is being overlooked by the restructuring process. Instead of being considered as the ideal structure to unite the multiplicity of national boards and agencies, the article implies the reverse ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan," Nov. 25). The restructuring committee should consider the history of the activities of CJC and focus on ensuring that a stronger and more unified CJC continue to serve our community.

Herb Rosenfeld
Past President Toronto Jewish Congress (now UJA Federation of Greater Toronto) and Past Chairman National Budgeting Conference (now UIA Federations)

* * *

How sad it is to learn that the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy (CIJA) "is seeking to centralize control of the host of Jewish advocacy agencies it administers" ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan," Nov. 25). It was only six years ago that CIJA took control of the advocacy file in the Canadian Jewish community, and now it wants absolute control by creating a "single Jewish public affairs organization encompassing the national and regional level." The creation of CIJA was a very costly procedure, and now the community is being asked to spend more funds to undo this unwarranted reorganization. Before the advent of CIJA, Canadian Jewish Congress was the address to which all Jewish advocacy matters were sent, including advocacy for Israel in Canada. Through a campaign of budget-cutting and then outright power politics, the role of CJC has been diminished, and what was once an admired and respected democratic organization is being phased out of existence. CJC was and still should be the single organization for advocacy in Canada.

Manuel Shacter
Montreal

* * *

It is profoundly disturbing that the proposed restructuring of Jewish community advocacy could result in the disappearance of Canadian Jewish Congress ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan," Nov. 25). Canadian Jewish Congress is committed to fighting antisemitism and discrimination, and to fighting for human rights and social justice. CJC has partnered with Kulanu Toronto for two years to oppose the anti-Israel rhetoric of the hateful group Queers Against Israel Apartheid (QuAIA) at Toronto's Pride Parade. Congress supported Kulanu Toronto every step of the way, both behind the scenes and through their visible presence in the parade. If CJC is disbanded, who will Kulanu Toronto turn to next year when QuAIA returns to spread its anti-Israel invective? The CJC has been Kulanu Toronto's link to the Canadian Jewish community. We trust the CJC, as do many others.

Justine Apple
Executive Director, Kulanu Toronto

* * *

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1629

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

B'nai Brith maintains its own voice

While Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy chair Steven Cummings is entitled to expect agencies funded by the federations and under CIJA's direction to speak with one voice, it should be noted that B'nai Brith Canada continues to maintain its own voice, and that this is a healthy factor in Jewish community life ("Advocacy restructuring nearly done, Cummings says," Dec. 2). In fact, B'nai Brith Canada and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto made an agreement some years back that mutually recognized the validity of both these major segments of the Canadian Jewish advocacy world speaking out for the community on key issues. In a vibrant and engaged community such as ours, collaboration and diversity of approach need not be mutually exclusive.

Frank Dimant
CEO, B'nai Brith Canada

For more letters, see cjnews.com.

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Netanyahu thanks international community for aid

By BARAK RAVID
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu recently spoke on the phone with Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan for the first time since taking office more than a year and a half ago.

Erdogan expressed his sorrow in light of the heavy losses caused by the massive fires in the Carmel, and said Turkey is ready to continue to help Israel overcome the fires.

Netanyahu thanked Erdogan for his words, saying, "We very much appreciate your help, and I am sure that this incident will offer an opportunity for improved relations between our two countries."

Turkey sent Israel at least two firefighting aircraft to help control the huge brushfire that has been raging through northern Israel since last Thursday. Its aircraft were among the first to arrive, owing in part to its close geographic proximity, relative to the European countries that also sent firefighting aircraft.

Other countries sending aid, which arrived in Israel later, included Cyprus, Egypt, Jordan, France, the United Kingdom, Croatia, Russia, Spain and Romania. Overall, more than 20 firefighting planes were expected to arrive in Israel, with New York's fire department also agreeing to send a firefighting airplane.

In conversation with reporters, Netanyahu said he watched as the planes entered the fire and smoke, and "I really appreciate how many states stepped up to help us.

"I spoke with Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin and President [Dmitry] Medvedev, and I thanked them and the Russian nation for immediately answering our call and the significant help that Russia has put on the line to fight the fires in the Carmel," Netanyahu said.

"The international answer to our call was outstanding, and the willingness to send help was also impressive, and it should bring comfort to all citizens of Israel. It demonstrates that there is affection for, and identification with Israel from all corners."

He added that the aid from Turkey is a "very commendable step. I know that Erdogan decided on it personally. Israel will find the proper way to express its appreciation for the Turkish efforts."

Turkey's offer came at a time when its relations with Israel, which have deteriorated in recent years, reached a low point last May when nine Turkish citizens were killed as Israeli naval commandos boarded a Gaza-bound aid flotilla.

U.S. President Barack Obama last Thursday night offered condolences to the families of the victims of the massive brushfire, pledging American aid to help fight the blaze.

"I want [to offer] our deepest condolences to the families and loved ones of all those who died as a result of the terrible forest fire in northern Israel," Obama told the Jewish community at a Chanukah candlelighting ceremony at the White House.

"As rescuers and firefighters continue in their work, the United States is acting to help our Israeli friends respond to the disaster," he said.

Obama told reception guests, among them Israeli Ambassador Michael Oren, that planning had begun to send assistance to Israel.

"A short while ago, our ambassador in Tel Aviv, Jim Cunningham… launched an effort to identify the firefighting assistance we have available and provide it to Israel as quickly as possible," he said.

He added: "Of course, that's what friends do for each other."

The fire broke out mid-day on Thursday, and by the evening had swept down the slopes of the Carmel plateau toward Haifa, leaving 42 dead and more than 13,000 residents displaced. By the early hours of Friday, the blaze was still not under control.

The burned-out shell of the bus in which prison guards travelling to evacuate prison inmates died in the fire in the Carmel plateau.

* * *

As of Friday morning, mass evacuations continued across northern Israel as dry, easterly winds fanned the massive brushfire toward Haifa.

More than 17,000 residents, including 600 prison inmates, were evacuated as the blaze raged out of control, destroying hundreds of acres of pine forest before sweeping down the slopes of the Carmel plateau toward Israel's third-largest city.

By mid-evening Thursday, fire chiefs had admitted publicly that they had lost control of the fire, believed to have started in an illegal landfill site.

As the flames neared the city limits, residents of Denya, an affluent district of Haifa – a busy port city and the north's economic heartland – were moved to safety.

On Friday morning, the fire had swept its way to the coastal highway, forcing police to close one of Israel's busiest roads between Zichron Yaakov and Haifa.

Forty people were killed when a bus carrying prison service trainees to assist in the evacuation was engulfed by fire after a falling tree blocked its path. Two firefighters and a policeman were among the dead. At least two more fire crew were reported missing, and the Haifa district police chief was among the injured.

Across the region, traffic crawled to a standstill, with black smoke and flames visible for miles around.

The blaze broke out and spread rapidly across the tinder-dry Carmel countryside, left parched after the hottest November in Israel in 60 years.

One of the first residential areas to be evacuated was Kibbutz Beit Oren, where all 400 residents reached safety before the entire collective farm was razed.

Netanyahu said evacuations would continue and authorities would take no risks where civilian lives were in danger.

"Evacuations will be conducted as needed, with sufficient advance warning. We do not want any more injuries," said Netanyahu, who called an emergency cabinet meeting for Friday morning.

As the fire raged on, the town Isfiyeh, a centre for Israel's Druze community, much of which is concentrated in the Carmel mountains, was next to be evacuated.

Police evacuated students in Haifa University dormitories. They were transferred to a nearby high school. Some 200 patients from the Tirat Hacarmel psychiatric hospital were also evacuated.

Firefighters trying to contain the blaze. [Israel Sun and Flash90 photos]

Opinions

My ode to friendship

If I were a poet I would write an Ode to Friendship. But I'm not, so I'll write this column.

When I first moved to Montreal, I had this strange idea that each person had a limited allotment of best friends. I figured I had used mine up, sort of like a pie, and I didn't expect to find any more. I also knew that making friends as the rabbi's wife was not ideal. People have strange expectations about rabbinic families. So naturally, like a self-fulfilling prophecy, it was difficult for me to find friends at first. (I must note that my husband had none of my hesitations.) Admittedly, Montreal was a hard city to engage in friendship terms. People here grew up together. They had a long history together that felt like a barrier to this newcomer.

Norma Baumel Joseph in Montreal

But I was wrong on all counts.

Friendship, like love, is both boundless and endless. The more you love, the more there is. So as I opened up, more people opened up to me in friendship. Over the years, men and women have become close to me – friendly, welcoming, accessible, responsive, intimate.

What is it that makes friendship so wonderful and so necessary? We don't seem able to survive without our friends. It isn't enough to rely on family alone, or to have one partner exclusively. We need close friends. We're social animals, and our good survival requires a social existence. We expect a community of like-minded people, some of whom share many precious moments together with us. With some, we spend happy occasions, and we know we can call on them when trouble descends.

At each stage of life, we expect and need different qualities from our friends. We're capable of sustaining different types of relationships when we're young than when we're old. Our requirements shift.

Youngsters desire a playmate, a steady partner in games and gossip. In the teen years, loyalty and steadfastness are perhaps valued in a friend, as is a touch of the impulsive, the willingness to brave something new and exciting together.

Later as adults, friendships shift. Making new couple friends and perhaps losing old single friends, we look toward joint values and roots. In the final stage of old age, what's left? A life lived, a history of experiences, work and play, volunteering and studying, values shared, laughter and tears. These are the elements of life's friendship.

Be committed to your friends with laughter, confidence and love.

Jews and aboriginals: finding common ground

We have just returned from a trip to New Zealand and Australia, a gift to ourselves for a number of family simchahs.

We were fortunate to be able to visit a Maori Marae (settlement) in New Zealand, even catching a haka competition (see the movie Invictus for details of haka). In Australia, we saw numerous examples of emerging Australian indigenous art, meeting one artist who gave us insights into their use of symbols.

Jean McGerbet in Vancouver

Both in New Zealand and Australia, the coming of the white colonials was a disaster. In Australia in particular, unlike in New Zealand, the indigenous populations were hunted like animals, herded into settlements far from their own traditional lands – which were handed out to whites – and treated like sub-humans

The indigenous population was once up to one million strong, with hundreds of languages and traditions. Stories about the Dreamtime, origin tales, were their histories. Most of these languages are lost, and most of the stories and tribal wisdom, held by elders and passed on orally to the next generation, are only recently being reclaimed where possible.

Yet we found that a robust art tradition – only begun in the 1970s – has provided a way for them to express a return to their roots. Indigenous art could be ephemeral, such as sand paintings and body paintings associated with dances. It could be more permanent, as in rock carvings and body tattoos. But in the past 40 years, the traditional symbols have been translated onto canvas and bark, or carved in wooden grave poles, so that stories once almost lost can be told again.

That is to say, they will paint for the observer, but the secret meanings may remain hidden from all outsiders.

How does it feel to have one's identity wrenched from oneself and one's people? How did it feel when Australia's aboriginal children of mixed parentage were rounded up and put into Dickensian camps? The brutality of the repression made it a hard road back to owning one's past and being able to hand it on to one's children.

It seems that as the heavy hand of assimilationist policy has been slowly lifted, indigenous people have taken tools of the wider society and turned them to good advantage while maintaining their own traditions. So while there's anger, there's also, more importantly, hope. Where there's poverty and despair, there's also economic and psychological strength.

There are many roadblocks, but the youth seem to be up to task.

What's the connection to our lives?

Here in comfortable North America as Jews, we face other challenges as a minority community when it comes to retrieving, preserving and passing on our own heritage.

Acceptance has led to assimilation. Whereas in Australia persecution failed to erase an indigenous identity, perhaps they should have tried acceptance. I'm being facetious, of course. No one should be forced to abandon a heritage and culture that defines who they are. The indigenous people of Australia are in the process of rebuilding a heritage all but lost.

What's true in Australia also holds true in Canada. Centuries of persecution and forced assimilation all but destroyed many First Nations communities.

We now bask in the warmth of western democracy and hope that the winds of prejudice are stilled. If there's any chance that the idea of multiculturalism can work, that it can build a society in which everyone shares basic values while maintaining their own identities, it will be in a democratic society. That's an idea we must believe in.

Here's the bad news: First Nations activists often identify with Palestinian aspirations while considering Israel totally at fault for the situation in the Middle East.

Make no mistake. Persecution of Jews and the Holocaust are historical concepts. But nightly televised broadcasts of riots with Palestinian children facing Israeli soldiers are the current reality. We need to acknowledge this reality.

As companion minorities in a democratic society, we share some common ground, just not all of it. We should keep that in mind as we seek that common ground.

Kol ishah: the voice of a woman

Despite significant strides in past decades, women worldwide have yet to achieve egalitarianism. For example, recently in Iran, a woman who was originally found guilty of adultery was sentenced to death.

The United Nations continues to slide downward in repute and utility. In September 2011, it plans to convene Durban III in New York City, another conference ostensibly directed at stemming racism. The memory of the original World Conference Against Racism in Durban, South Africa, in 2001 and its display of antisemitism should serve as a warning to avoid yet another UN-sponsored fiasco. Wisely, the Canadian government has decided not to participate in this charade.

Gerald L. Gall in Edmonton

And, recently, in "advancing" women's rights, the UN has established an agency, designated UN Women, to promote gender equality and the empowerment of women. Saudi Arabia, where women are prohibited from driving and require a male guardian's permission to travel or to have surgery, has now been elected to the new agency's board. The thought is mind-boggling.

In Canada, we should be proud of the gains made toward gender equality, although there is much yet to be achieved. Egalitarianism is an entrenched constitutional right through sections 15 and 28 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and the courts have provided a thorough analysis as to the nature and meaning of those provisions. We have had a female prime minister. Of the nine judges of the Supreme Court of Canada, four are women including the chief justice of Canada. The Alberta Court of Appeal, the province's highest court, is the only provincial court of appeal that includes more women than men, and the previous two Governors General were women.

We are readily offended by religious regimes that subjugate women, but what about our own faith community? Many rabbis, cantors, synagogue presidents and community leaders are female. But, sadly, branches of our community, in Canada and throughout the world, treat women as second-class citizens. In Israel recently, dozens of haredim clashed with around 200 worshippers from the Women of the Wall group at the Western Wall in Jerusalem. The men were disturbed by the mixed prayer taking place, as well as by the women's singing. Last summer, the group's leader, Anat Hoffman, was arrested for praying in public with a Torah scroll.

Closer to home, we frequently encounter the prohibition against the "voice of a woman" in formal prayer, celebration and other facets of Jewish life. This prohibition can be traced to the Talmud, in particular, the Gemara, and connotes the notion that the voice of a woman is attractive to a man and that a woman's singing will distract the man from prayer.

The issue of kol ishah, in terms of equality, is somewhat akin to the requirement of modesty. The dictates of modesty have led to several controversies in Quebec, including one at an exercise facility where women working out in front of full-length windows disturbed the sensibilities of chassidic men.

The prohibition of the voice of a women and the requirement of modesty underscore a view of the roles of men and women in traditional Judaism.

It's time to re-think an outdated, antiquated and discriminatory view of the traditional roles and responsibilities of men and women. The Talmud is rich in interpretation and reinterpretation. Even Halachah has been the subject of interpretation. Nothing is immutable, nor should be fixed for all time, and even the "word of God" must be applied contextually as circumstances change through passing generations.

What should be immutable, if anything, is the notion of egalitarianism between genders and respect, dignity and equal opportunity for all members of our faith. Regarding the notion of modesty, what do the traditionalists fear – that men exposed to the voice and sight of a women will lose control or become so distracted as to render them incapable of prayer? This is insulting to men, just as the deprivation of participation in all facets of Jewish life is insulting to women.

Let us be uplifted, inspired and enriched by all voices that celebrate our rich heritage, including kol ishah, the voice of a woman.

The Kirshner File

A cornucopia of books ...

The days grow dark as December descends, but these books, wide-ranging, eclectic and never less than interesting, let in a spray of light during Chanukah.

The Life and Legends of Simon Wiesenthal (Doubleday), by Tom Segev, is a thoroughly researched and nuanced biography of the late Nazi hunter.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Segev, having mined 16 archives and read Wiesenthal's private papers, has produced a book rich in detail and unconventional in interpretation. Tracing his life from the Galician town of Buczacz to Vienna, from where he conducted his relentless search for war criminals, Segev takes a reader on a tumultuous journey. Although he clearly respects Wiesenthal's achievements in tracking down Nazis, Segev, an Israeli journalist known for not pulling his punches, claims his subject had a complicated relationship with the truth and was not averse to inflating his importance.

Anthony Julius' Trials of the Diaspora A History of Anti-Semitism in England (Oxford University Press) is magisterial in conception and sweep. Counting the index and notes, Julius' magnum opus runs to more than 800 pages. With the exactitude of a good lawyer, he examines four distinct aspects of antisemitism: the medieval variant of defamation, murder and expulsion, the literary antisemitism of British writers such as Chaucer, Shakespeare and Dickens; the antisemitism of insult and exclusion that prevailed from 17th century readmission of Jews to Britain to the 20th century, and the antisemitism that delegitimizes Israel.

Robert Wistrich's massive and highly informative work, A Lethal Obsession: Anti-Semitism from Antiquity to the Global Jihad (Random House), does not leave a stone unturned. A professor of modern European history at the Hebrew University, he delves deeply into the oldest hatred.

The notorious Alfred Dreyfus affair unfolded at the intersection of the birth of political Zionism and the rise of modern antisemitism. Ruth Harris' Dreyfus: Politics, Emotion, and the Scandal of the Century (Metropolitan Books) is a probing and enlightening account of a significant and telling event that foreshadowed Vichy France.

Louis Begley's Why the Dreyfus Affair Matters (Yale University Press) skilfully analyzes the forces that brought down an innocent Jewish army officer and divided a nation in a spectacular historical drama.

Dreyfus' persecution serves as a launching pad for Sarah Hammerschlag's book, The Figural Jew: Politics & Identity in Postwar French Thought (The University of Chicago Press). In this intellectually complex study, she uses the proverbial wandering Jew, the target of nationalist rhetoric, to explain how this much maligned figure has been positively recast by contemporary philosophers in France.

Olivier Philipponnat and Patrick Lienhardt, in The Life of Irene Nemirovsky (Alfred A. Knopf), recount the tragic story of a Russian Jewish émigré in France who achieved literary fame in the late 1920s, only to be arrested and deported to Auschwitz during the Holocaust.

The Glatstein Chronicles (Yale University Press), edited and with an introduction by Ruth Wisse, consists of two autobiographical novellas by the renowned poet Jacob Glatstein (1896-1971). The novellas, brimming with childhood memories and observations of prewar Poland, are based on a trip to his native land in 1934.

In Prophets of the Past (Princeton University Press), Michael Brenner, a professor of Jewish history at the University of Munich, delivers a discerning analysis of how modern Jewish historians, from Simon Dubnow and Cecil Roth to Jacob Katz and Salo Baron, have interpreted Jewish history.

Arnold Reisman, in An Ambassador and a Mensch (self-published), tells the story of Behic Erkin, a Turkish ambassador in Nazi-occupied France who saved the lives of Jews.

With the fall of czarist Russia in 1917, Jewish writers and intellectuals devised a radical new vision of Jewish culture broadly based on art rather than religion. Kenneth Moss deftly traces the arc of this short-lived development in Jewish Renaissance in the Russian Revolution (Harvard University Press).

One of the pre-eminent Jewish figures of the 19th century was the British financier and philanthropist Moses Montefiore. Abigail Green, a young British historian, has written a first-rate biography, Moses Montefiore. Jewish Liberator, Imperial Hero (Harvard University Press).

Martin Fletcher, a seasoned television correspondent based in Tel Aviv, knows Israel well, having reported from the Jewish state since 1973. But in Walking Israel: A Personal Search for the Soul of a Nation (St. Martin's Press), he rediscovers and reconnects with the country as he walks along its coast from Gaza to Rosh Hanikra and meets a diverse array of people. Quite a journey.

The Crusaders sought to reclaim the Holy Land from Islam, and for a while, they were successful. In Holy Warriors: A Modern History of the Crusades (Random House), Jonathan Phillips, a specialist on this era, charts their conquests. Paul Berman, in The Flight of the Intellectuals (Melville House), presents a searing critque of how thinkers in the West have fumbled in grappling with Islamist ideas and violence.

The modernization of Europe ushered in an orgy of ethnic cleansing: Jews in Russia and Armenians in the Ottoman Empire, to cite but two examples. In Genocide Before the Holocaust (Yale University Press), Cathie Carmicheal exposes instances of bloody-minded persecution from the early 20th century to 1941.

A companion volume, The Jew in the Secret Nazi Reports on Popular Opinion in Germany, 1933-1945 (Yale University Press), edited by Otto Dov Kulka and Eberhard Jackel, is extremely revealing. The book clinically presents 752 German documents, accompanied by commentaries, showing the extent to which Germany's population supported Nazi antisemitic measures. Chilling, to say the very least.

Hitler's Germany nazified German Christianity, placing antisemitism at its theological core. Susannah Heschel expertly examines this phenomenon in The Aryan Jesus: Christian Theologians and the Bible in Nazi Germany. (Princeton University Press).

Gordon Horwitz's illuminating Ghettostadt: Lodz and the Making of a Nazi City (Harvard University Press) has been republished in a soft-cover edition.

A whiff of Americana: Tom Nolan's Three Chords for Beauty's Sake (W.W. Norton & Company) is an authoritative biography of jazz giant Avram Isaac Arshawsky, otherwise known as Artie Shaw. It appears on the 100th anniversary of his birth. A Fine Romance: Jewish Songwriters, American Songs (Schocken), by David Lehman, celebrates some of America's finest composers and lyricists.

Walter Schneir's Final Verdict: What Really Happened in the Rosenberg Case (Melville House) revisits the arrest, trial and execution of accused spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

U.S. commentator Norman Podhoretz tackles a contentious subject with relish in Why Are Jews Liberals? (Doubleday).

In general: Laura Hillenbrand, in Unbroken: A World War II Story of Survival, Resilience and Redemption (Random House), vividly recounts the amazing tale of a courageous and resourceful U.S. soldier who cheated the odds after his airplane crashed into the Pacific Ocean during a routine flight.

Empires in World History (Princeton University Press), an erudite volume by Jane Burbank and Frederick Cooper, carries us from Rome and China to the Ottoman, Mongol, Spanish, French and British empires. World Heritage Sites and Unforgettable Places (Firefly Books) guide you to visually thrilling locales around the world. Ditto Unforgettable Canada (Boston Mills Press). 50 Aircraft That Changed the World (Firefly Books), by Ron Dick and Dan Patterson, is fascinating.

In Romspen We Trust

As Trustees of a religious organization it is our responsibility to balance our budget, and in particular to invest our funds wisely. After a long history of personal experience by one of our Trustees, Gloria Sullivan, we followed her recommendation and chose to invest with Romspen. It has proven to be a wise choice. Interest from the fund, consistently paid on the 15th of each month, has made a significant difference in keeping our congregation secure and buoyant. We have trusted in Romspen's management team for 10 years and continue to have complete faith in them.

From left to right: Bill Myhill, Gloria Sullivan, Betty Krunys, John Blewett, Trustees of Willowdale United Church

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Chinese Judeophile hopes to convert

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

Like many Chinese immigrants, Aaron Wood anglicized his name when he arrived in Canada – in his case, partly to avoid association with a kind of strong tea.

He used to be Aaron Chai.

In his native Mandarin, "chai" ("ch" as in "children") means wood, and he smiles and nods knowingly about the auspicious meaning and symbolism of the word in Judaism.

"Yes, it means 'life,'" Wood says. "I know." And he pronounces it perfectly.

Wood knows this because he has immersed himself in Jewish studies and Hebrew in the hope of converting one day and "becoming a member of the community."

In fact, Jewish studies have become a chief priority for the earnest 37-year-old, who trained as an engineer and now works as an acoustics consultant. Books on Jewish philosophy, Israel, Hebrew and Holocaust memoirs, which he devours, are strewn about the apartment he shares with his wife, Lisa. Taped to the wall above his computer is a chart of a Hebrew keyboard.

"I am learning Hebrew for one purpose," Wood tells The CJN. "To understand the Torah." He shows a reporter his dog-eared copy of the Jerusalem Bible. Hebrew words he does not understand are highlighted in yellow marker. There aren't many.

Wood is a fixture at Toronto's Village Shul – a shlep, he concedes, from his home near Humber College in Etobicoke, where his wife is studying to become a nurse. She too has joined him on his path to Judaism and attends synagogue with him each Shabbat and, sometimes, during the week for women's classes.

Aaron Wood holds a Hebrew primer, written in Mandarin. [Ron Csillag photo]

"It's not easy for us to go to any synagogue," Wood says. "We want to move closer to Bathurst Street so we can be more exposed."

Wood's exotic story began in his native Tianjin, a city southeast of Beijing. He was raised in a "totally secular" family (like many Chinese, he feels that Buddhism and Confucianism are cultural forces rather than religions). Ironically, his first contact with Judaism came by way of Christian missionaries he met at university about 15 years ago.

"They gave me a Christian Bible, Old and New Testaments. I started to learn it and went to a few churches," he recalls. Comparing the Christian sources with the Tanach, "I found something was wrong. I said, 'This is the opposite of the Torah.' [Christians] borrowed and twisted Judaism into something else."

Wood knew virtually nothing about Judaism. "I heard about this other 'ism,'" he says, "but that's all." He began reading Jewish sources such as Maimonides and Martin Buber, and went online to discover more.

"This made a tremendous intellectual impact on me," he says.

Soon, he was leading Bible study groups and he visited a Chabad centre in Beijing. He encountered a few other Chinese who shared his interest. Officially, the Communist government recognizes just five religions, and Judaism isn't one of them. "As long as religion is private and not against the government, they don't care," Wood says.

He also began to learn Hebrew. "That was very hard for me. There was no material. It took me a year to figure out how to write a daled."

Wood also began listening to distant radio broadcasts about Israel and why Jews should "return" there. That intrigued him. He was more used to Chinese media depictions of Israel as an aggressor and an American proxy.

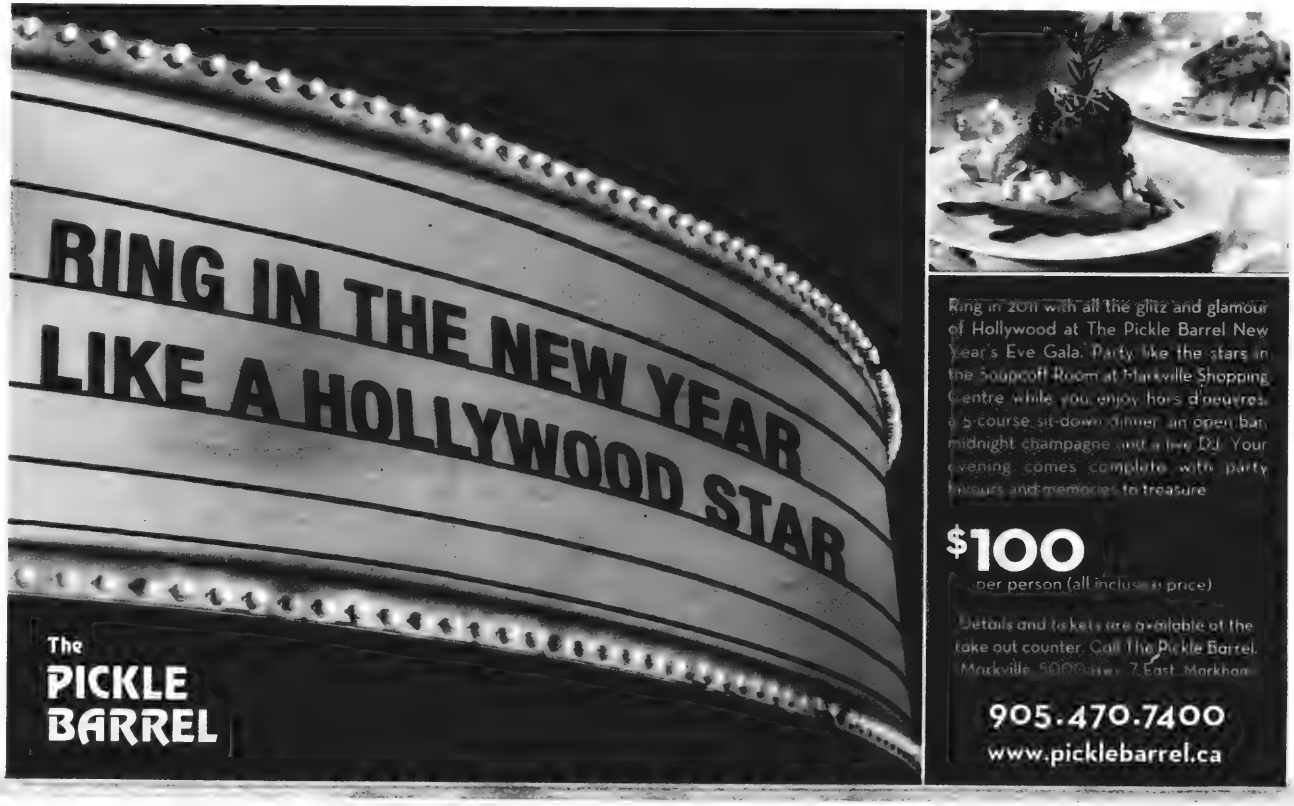
A friend directed him to Canada, and he arrived in 2005. It was only after he left that he discovered Tianjin had a synagogue that was built in 1939 by Russian refugees.

As a gentile – for now – Wood feels a duty to defend Israel. "I'm quite right-wing on Israel," he says. "The surrender of land is wrong. China once tried land for peace, and that dynasty collapsed."

Today, Wood firmly believes the Torah "is based on fact, not blind belief."

He also blogs in Mandarin on Jewish affairs at jewishjournal.com/you_tai_ren.

In all, he says, "I feel very comfortable here."



RING IN THE NEW YEAR
LIKE A HOLLYWOOD STAR
The PICKLE
BARREL
Ring in 2011 with all the glitz and glamour of Hollywood at The Pickle Barrel New Year's Eve Gala. Party like the stars in the Soupcoff Room at Markville Shopping Centre while you enjoy hors d'oeuvres, a 5-course sit-down dinner, an open bar, midnight champagne and a live DJ. Your evening comes complete with party favours and memories to treasure.
$100 per person (all inclusive price)
Details and tickets are available at the take out counter. Call The Pickle Barrel, Markville, 5000 Hwy 7 East, Markham 905.470.7400
www.picklebarrel.ca

NY woman plays pastoral role in Orthodox shul

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Elana Stein Hain is one of a handful of Orthodox women filling synagogue leadership roles that have traditionally been reserved for men.

Elana Stein Hain

Although her title at New York's Lincoln Square Synagogue is "community scholar," she is listed on the synagogue's website as one of the clergy.

Her role comprises a pastoral element, and includes shivah visits, attending funerals (albeit not officiating, other than to sometimes read psalms), counselling, teaching and delivering sermons on Shabbat mornings after the service ends.

Stein Hain, 29, spoke to The CJN at Ulpanat Orot Girls School on Nov. 19, a Friday. She had just addressed students at the school, beginning a packed weekend as scholar-in-residence at Shaarei Shomayim Congregation and also guest speaker at Torah in Motion.

After Lincoln Square hired Stein Hain three years ago to bring young people into the shul, she started a monthly young professionals minyan, which now averages between 40 and 60 people each week, she said. A rabbinic intern runs the service.

In forging a relatively new path for Orthodox women, Stein Hain has kept in mind advice from her father, Martin Stein, a lawyer: "My dad always said, 'Do what you think is right… just be yourself.'

"I sort of see myself as just being myself. I enjoy what I do. It's my skill set, and my community's so lovely."

Last year, Stein Hain was named one of the New York Jewish Week's "36 Under 36," young adults who are having an impact on the Jewish community.

Stein Hain, who was born in New York and raised in Teaneck, N.J., also has a Canadian connection. Her mother, Mindy Silverberg Stein, national president of Emunah of America, is from Toronto, and Stein Hain's grandparents still live here.

As a community leader, she said any change is "much more about what the community needs than some abstract objective standard.

"I think every community needs to set parameters for itself… You might be able to be one step ahead of the community, but you have to respect the process."

Only a handful of women have full-time leadership positions in Orthodox synagogues, but female scholars-in-residence are "going everywhere," she said.

Stein Hain, who is a graduate of Yeshiva University's graduate program in advanced talmudic studies, is pursuing a doctorate in religion at Columbia University. She is writing her dissertation on halachic loopholes.

Growing up, she wanted to be a lawyer, but eventually she decided she "liked Torah stuff more."

LIGHTING THE CHANUKIYAH: Rabbi Tzali Borenstein, co-founder of Chabad of Durham, is seen with Whitby Coun. Lorne Coe and regional Coun. Don Mitchell at the town's menorah lighting ceremony, held Dec. 1 in front of the Whitby Central Library. Durham Region, where Whitby is located, is experiencing a growth in its Jewish population.

Our family wants your family to love your car.

SISLEY HONDA
family driven

Greg Ashkenazy
Used Vehicle Sales
gashkenazy@sisley.ca
800-211-0931 ext.356

Seymour Ezer
New Vehicle Sales
sezer@sisley.ca
866-384-7916 ext.333

88 Steeles Ave. W,
www.SISLEY.ca
866-490-6721

STEELES
YONGE
N

Children of Holocaust remembered in new garden

Compiled by CJN Staff

Construction recently began on a testimonial to the children who perished in the Holocaust, the Samuel Edelstein Children's Garden at Toronto's Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue

The late Samuel Edelstein was a Holocaust survivor who believed that the best answer to the horrors of the Holocaust was each succeeding generation of Jewish children. Two of his three daughters, Rena Attar and Tami Benayon, were on hand to witness the first stage of construction

The sisters said their father believed in building gardens in tribute to the children rather than memorials, as gardens represent the total life cycle from beginning to end, and then renewal

The garden will be filled with indigenous Canadian plants, shrubs, ground-cover and prairie grasses chosen to attract and house birds and butterflies, including the monarch butterfly, considered a species of "special concern" by the Committee on the Status of Endangered Wildlife in Canada.

Anne Frank will be among the children remembered in the garden. Beth Emeth is one of the designated organizations in Canada to plant a sapling from the Anne Frank chestnut tree.

The purchase of the sapling was facilitated through the generosity of Beth Emeth board member Michael Kerzner and his wife, Rochelle

"The memory of Anne Frank will now have a permanent and umbilical link to my synagogue, Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda, which was founded by Holocaust survivors in the late 1950s," Michael Kerzner said.

Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue marks the beginning of construction of the Samuel Edelstein Children's Garden. Seen are two of Edelstein's daughters, Tami Benayon, left, and Rena Attar

Bernie Farber, CEO of Canadian Jewish Congress, said that "Canadian Jewish Congress is also delighted to join Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue in incorporating Anne Frank's memory, hope and inspiration as part of this unique and special garden."

The children will be remembered with paving stones inscribed with the name of a child 14 years old or under and his or her home town. The stones will be interwoven into the environmentally sustainable garden. A stone had already been purchased to honour the memory of Anne Frank, and there will be an even closer connection to her through the ever-growing chestnut tree, the offshoot of her private and special connection to the outside world, the synagogue says.

The garden will be open to the community, and everyone is invited to participate and to dedicate paving stones and other special features to honour and remember Jewish children whose lives were taken away.

A children's learning concourse will be incorporated into the garden, specifically designed to provide a special resource area where groups of children can congregate to learn the lessons of the Holocaust and hear survivor stories first hand.

In addition to the the Edelstein family, Beth Emeth acknowledges the many donors who contributed to the garden through the Yakir Hakahal – Precious to the Community Gala Tribute Dinner, held last May 6 in honour of Sir Nicholas Winton, who saved the lives of 669 children from Czechoslovakia and found them a safe haven in England.

For more information about the garden, call Claire Horowitz, director of financial development, at 416-633-3838, ext. 242.

A FAMILY SAYS THANKS TO THE COMMUNITY

Just a few years after she was born, our beautiful daughter Sheree began to have seizures and had to undergo many tests. She was heavily medicated and was hospitalized on several occasions Doctors had no answers for us as to why she was in such distress, and we were told that because there were no schools or training facilities available at that time, Huronia Regional Hospital would benefit our daughter and help her with her developmental disabilities. She existed there for six years. Then came Reena, the brain child of Rabbi Joseph Kelman. Without the incredible dedication and foresight of the late Rabbi Kelman, there never would have been a Reena.

Rabbi Joseph Kelman z"l

Sheree with her parents at a Reena Gala

Shortly after Reena was established, Marilyn and I rescued Sheree from her confinement at Huronia. With the professional skill and caring of Reena's staff, Sheree has progressed from living in group homes to the point where she now lives independently in an apartment that she shares with two other Reena clients. She travels to and from her apartment on her own, to work, shop, bank and socialize and has attained a measure of self-confidence beyond our expectations.

Joe Berman z"l

While Sheree developed and blossomed, Reena expanded by opening one group home after another. Through the generosity of the late Joe Berman, Camp Reena was built. With aid from the Ontario Ministry of Community and Social Services the number of clients serviced by Reena continued to grow and group homes were expanded with the establishment of the Municipal Housing Apartments.

Reena partnered with JVS and B'nai Brith to add more group homes and apartments to its residential base.

By way of further expansion, Reena entered into arrangement with Kehilla Residential Program, the housing arm of United Jewish Appeal Federation in establishing more residential facilities. An incredible milestone was reached with the construction of the Battle Centre funded through a bequest from Toby and Henry Battle and generous donors in the community. It became available for day programs and other Reena undertakings.

An important milestone to cope with Reena's aging clientele came with the opening of the first elder home soon to be followed by the second and third elder homes for seniors.

Always willing help guide and improve other social agencies, Reena has been acknowledged by the Ontario government as a leader and role model with respect to persons with developmental disabilities.

Reena expanded its service base by dealing with youth with autism which eventually led to the opening of a Reena group home for children and youth with autism.

Reena's Toby & Henry Battle Developmental Centre

Reena Community Residence under construction on the Lebovic Campus

Reena prides itself in having a highly professional and committed staff which is aided and abetted by volunteers. None of the activities of achievements could have been attained without the generous support of the United Jewish Appeal Federation and the Ontario Governments Ministry of Community and Social Services.

Marilyn and I have derived a tremendous satisfaction with over 35 years of service in working as board members, being on various sub-committees and fundraising dinner events. Volunteerism is the heart and soul of Reena and more hands are always needed especially now that the UJA Federation has welcomed the building of the Reena Community Residence on the Lebovic Campus in Vaughn which will be Reena's crowning jewel to date. But Reena will not stop there. There are members of the community in dire need of Reena's services so that facilities must be expanded. The most crucial issue to be addressed is Reena clients' aging population. We hope through the support of Federation, the Ontario government and generous donors that the invaluable work of Reena will continue to be a shining light in the community to enable Reena's clients to develop to the full extent of their potential and to take their rightful place as proud members of our society.

Bert Raphael, Q.C., Honorary Legal Counsel

Space sponsored by Bert and Marilyn Raphael

Greater Toronto Area

'Chosen People Ministries has become increasingly aggressive in the last few years'

Continued from page 3

In their presentation to Jews, Ciss said, these groups have "altered, renovated and distorted all of Christian terminology, customs, symbols and traditions to make them look Jewish in order to make [Jews] feel less inhibited at considering Christianity as an option."

Ciss said it's his understanding that CPM is the second-largest group of its kind in the world, next to Jews for Jesus.

Rabbi Michael Skobac, Jews for Judaism's director of education, said the ministries have an increasingly vigorous mandate.

"Chosen People Ministries has become increasingly aggressive in the last few years," Rabbi Skobac said. "They opened a centre in Sderot [Israel] and another in the heart of the Jewish community in Flatbush, New York. Their successes are our [communities'] failures."

Rabbi Skobac said the typical profile of converted Jews he encounters are those who grew up in traditional Jewish households and went to Jewish school but say they never experienced Judaism in a spiritual way.

"They say they only ever experienced it as a heritage or tradition that didn't resonate as a vibrant, spiritual path [and] didn't involve building a personal relationship with God" that Christianity offers them, he said.

Jews for Judaism keeps an inventory of missionary groups operating in Canada. There are some 100-plus such organizations now in Canada, the majority of which are based in southern Ontario, Ciss said.

"Unfortunately, this messianic approach to evangelizing Jews is becoming very successful," Ciss cautioned. "They are attracting intermarried couples... because there's always a conflict between the Jewish and gentile partners" as to how to make the marriage work and how best to raise children.

He said missionary groups "are very good" at making both partners feel spiritually comfortable by blending Christianity and Judaism together to make them feel harmonious.

But the reality is very different, Ciss said.

"There's nothing about Christianity that Judaism can accept, which is why [Jews] reject the entire premise and why, as a people, we've never accepted the claims of Christianity," he said.

"But today, these missionary groups are making Jews feel that it's kosher" to convert, he added.

He said it's only recently that the groups have made more inroads in the Jewish community, likely because of growing rates of assimilation and intermarriage.

According to a 2001 census analysis by UIA Federations Canada and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, of people in Toronto who identify ethnically as Jews, some six per cent, or 10,955 people, practise a religion other than Judaism. And most of those, Ciss said, are practising Christianity.

"One thing is clear: the numbers [of Jewish converts to Christianity] are growing," he said, adding that while missionizing accounts for a lot of them, the missionary movement is now educating other Christian evangelicals on how to better target Jews for conversion.

"The reality is, let's be honest, a Jew who is assimilating is not interested in wearing a yarmulke, or keeping Shabbat or wearing tzitzit... and many Jews are even converting to Christianity through the mainstream evangelical churches. The Jewish community is not aware of how great the problem really is. They're not aware of the scope."

Ciss worries that the Jewish community is blind to the phenomenon because it's not happening in the public sphere but is occurring much more on the Internet.

"Just because the community doesn't see the missionaries on the street corners" doesn't mean the missionizing isn't happening, Ciss said.

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

Eva Goldfinger
Rabbi & Psychotherapist
Humanistic Jewish & Intercultural
Weddings
Namings • Funerals
Bat/Bar Mitzvahs
Counselling
416-494-7450
evagoldfinger@rogers.com

Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pad
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Factory Direct Pricing
Free in-home service
Dover Pad
UNBEATABLE QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary MagnaLoc
Canada Wide: 1-800 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca

Join us in celebrating the arrival of 2011 at Glow Fresh Grill and Wine Bar
8:30PM seating
Includes
4 course special set menu wine pairing with every course, champagne at midnight to toast in the new year, d.j. and party favours
$100 per person (Plus taxes and gratuity)
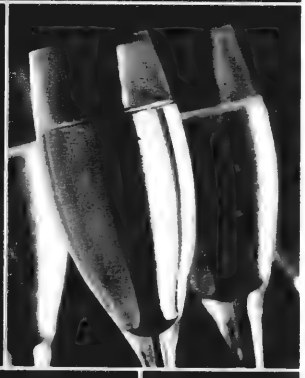
Glow Fresh Grill and Wine Bar
416-384-1133
www.glowfreshgrill.com



Wishing the Jewish Community a Very Happy & Healthy Chanukah

TORONTO DRIVEAWAY

SERVICE (NATIONWIDE) INC.

WWW.TORONTODRIVEAWAY.COM

5803 Yonge Street, Suite 101, Willowdale

416-225-7754

Operating since 1959

CJN Giveaways

7 lucky readers will each win 1 pair of tickets to

Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre's

"Hard Love"

(total value $62)

The Toronto Centre for the Arts

5040 Yonge St.

Wednesday, January 5th, 8 pm

To be eligible to win click on "Contests" at www.cjnews.com and email us your name, address and daytime phone number or mail/fax us the information.

All entries received by 3 p.m. on Wednesday, December 22nd are eligible. The winning entries will be randomly selected at The CJN offices on Thursday, December 23rd. The winners will be notified the same day. Odds of winning depend on the number of entries received. One entry per person.

The CJN will not enter into any correspondence with contestants.

Email your information to "contest@thecjn.ca" Re: "Hard Love" Contest, or mail to: The Canadian Jewish News, 1500 Don Mills Road, Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 or fax to: 416-391-0949.

Employees and family members of The CJN and Teatron Jewish Theatre are not eligible to enter.

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

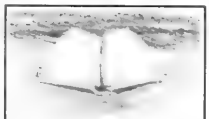
Jewish Life

The role of the menorah

BY RABBI YITZCHAK FEIGENBAUM

The party is over and another Chanukah has passed. Other than some presents and possibly a stomachache from too many doughnuts, what will we take with us from this eight-day festival?

Every holiday strengthens a particular value that we are supposed to hold for the rest of the year. What is the lasting message of Chanukah? It is interesting to note that notwithstanding the great military victory and re-establishment of Jewish sovereignty in the Land of Israel that features prominently in the Chanukah prayers, the only public celebration is the lighting of the menorah to commemorate the miracle of the oil.



Rabbinic Reflections

That miracle itself is puzzling. There was plenty of oil to rekindle the menorah in the Temple – but it was "defiled." It would have burned clean and bright, yet it was invalidated for use because it lacked a certain sanctity. Why did God have to change the laws of nature so that one day's supply of "pure" oil would last for eight days? I understand the splitting of the sea – the Jews were in danger and needed to be saved from their pursuers. But oil is oil!

Of course, the classic Jewish format for answering a question is by posing another question. We will pose the famous Chanukah question asked by rabbis over the ages. Since the vial of pure olive oil that was discovered contained sufficient oil to burn for one day, the miracle was actually only seven days long! So why do we celebrate Chanukah for eight days?

To understand all this, we must understand the unique mission of the Jewish People to be "a light unto the nations." Our responsibility is to add sanctity and moral stability in an increasingly materialistic and morally relative world.

That's why our God-given "user's guide," the Torah, contains laws that structure and give meaning to the food we eat, the clothes we wear, how we conduct our business, how we treat the elderly and how we relate to family. We do not take religion out of our pocket when convenient and apply it only to certain days and specific places. Rather, our entire day-to-day life can be either "defiled' or "pure" depending on our goals, values and mode of conduct.

Thus God had to make a miracle to let the small vial of pure oil burn eight days to teach us that "oil is not just oil" but rather a gift from God to be used appropriately.

And this is the lesson of why we light our menorahs for eight days. There is really no difference between the overt miracle of the last seven days and the "natural" burning of the first day. We must view our very waking up, the sun rising and our five senses as daily miracles and gifts from God. Thus it's our responsibility to thank God for all that He does for us, and our obligation to use these gifts within His guidelines every day.

As was once said in a eulogy for one of the giants of Jewish leadership in the previous generation, the mark of a great person is not in the great things accomplished, but in the day-to-day small accomplishments. If we remember this, then our menorahs will burn brightly all year long, illuminate our homes and businesses with meaning and values, and hopefully shed some of that light on our communities.

Rabbi Yitzchak Feigenbaum is the principal of Yeshivas Bais Yaakov High School in Toronto.

An 'A' for effort

Money Matters

One of the key aspects of the world of business is the crucial importance of the bottom line. And that's the way it should be. The primary – some would argue only – goal of business is to make money, or as economist Milton Friedman famously noted: "The business of business is business." It is not the role of the private, profit-driven sector to address social needs, crucial as they may be. The only proper limitation on money making is the law.

Classical Jewish teachings would tend to agree, with the possible caveat that, at times, one must go beyond the letter of the law when, in a given situation, the law would not be able to address an ethical imperative. The amount of effort extended to achieve success is irrelevant from a business perspective. It is results that matter.

It's in the realm of religious growth that effort, not outcome, is what matters. God demands we give it our best, but people who have internalized their faith in God understand that results are often out of our control and it is our efforts that truly count. This distinction, while true in theory, often has little practical application. Poor results in every field may come from great but misfocused efforts. If we can produce better religious growth by refocusing our efforts, we must do so and not accept effort as a measure of success.

It is most unfortunate that many charitable organizations are run without the tools of modern business. Charities must not be a place where poor performance is tolerated. In fact, they likely have a greater obligation to ensure high standards are met, as wasted efficiency means that it is the most needy who will suffer. At least in the private sector, business inefficiency leads to the loss of private money "only."

I was thinking of this theoretical dichotomy between efforts and results when reading about the growing debate over the University of Manitoba's awarding a PhD in mathematics to someone who twice failed one of his final examinations. The student has exam stress disorder and finds it difficult to demonstrate his true ability on exams. This mitigating factor led the university to award him his doctorate, arguing that he is in fact an "exceptional student." The university has suspended without pay an outspoken professor who strongly protested the granting of such a degree.

It seems to me that the university has confused the two realms. A PhD is granted for accomplishment not effort. While failure may be due to a legitimate disorder, that does not change the fact that he failed the exam.

Had such an approach originated in a yeshiva, it would have been understandable. A yeshiva is a place where personal growth is primary, and thus honest effort is to be rewarded. In truth, however, such an approach was never common in the great 19th-century European yeshivot where intellectual achievement, even elitism, was the norm.

Coming from a university, such a position is rather startling. Universities are meant to be centres for the development of critical thought, where academic freedom is supreme and personal moral choices are irrelevant. Universities pride themselves on distinguishing between knowledge and living based on that knowledge. Finding alternate methods of evaluation may be understandable, even commendable, but would seem to have no place in awarding a doctorate.

Comments to rabbijay@torahinmotion.org

Jewish Life

Book on Hillel points to the essence of the Torah

By Martin Lockshin

One of the most famous rabbis in the Talmud was Hillel, who died 2,000 years ago, around the year 10 CE. Although his name and a few of his teachings are well known, very little is known about his life. When I started to read the latest biography in the Schocken "Nextbook" series, Hillel If Not Now, When? by Rabbi Joseph Telushkin, I couldn't help wondering where the author was going to find enough material to write a "life of Hillel."

Rabbi Telushkin, a leading modern Orthodox thinker, admits right away that the task is impossible. He gathers and presents to his readers the few biographical hints about Hillel that appear in talmudic literature. But he acknowledges very reasonably that the stories have a legendary quality and can hardly be used to build a clear, complete picture of Hillel, the man. His book, then, is an attempt to create a portrait, not of Hillel's life, but of his temperament and values. Very little attention is paid to Hillel's many teachings on intricate questions of Jewish ritual law. Instead, Rabbi Telushkin relies on the ethical teachings of Hillel and his disciples as well as the stories told about him.

The book is written for a popular audience – no previous knowledge of Judaism is required. But even the expert student of rabbinic texts will benefit from some of Rabbi Telushkin's deep insights into Hillel's ethical teachings.

While I am always suspicious of facile attempts to contrast Jewish and Christian ethics, Rabbi Telushkin uses Hillel's sayings to make a few comparisons that I found persuasive. For example, he gathers a number of sources showing that Hillel, often disagreeing with other rabbis of his day, felt that truth-telling was not a supreme value in Jewish ethics.

The most famous saying on the subject is that of Beit Hillel (the "house" or disciples of Hillel) that when you dance before a bride at her wedding, you should always call her "a beautiful and graceful bride," (Ketubbot 17a) no matter what she looks like, since making a bride and groom happy is more important than truth-telling. The "house of Shammai," the consistent opponent of the Hillelites, disagrees, arguing that even a bride must be described "as she really is," following the biblical imperative to stay away from falsehood (Exodus 23:7).

Rabbi Telushkin points out that Hillel's became the standard Jewish ethical position, which Rabbi Telushkin contrasts with classical Christian teachings. For example, 400 years after Hillel, Saint Augustine taught that lying is never permitted, even to save the life of another human being: "Since eternal life is lost by lying, a lie may never be told for the preservation of the temporal life of another" (On Lying, in Treatises on Various Subjects). Modern Christian thinkers like Immanuel Kant and John Henry Cardinal Newman have reaffirmed this absolutist approach to truth, a position that Jewish ethicists would not support. According to Rabbi Telushkin, this is due to the pervasive influence of Hillel on Jewish ethics.

In another insightful comparison, Rabbi Telushkin compares the talmudic stories about Hillel with the Christian Bible stories about his younger contemporary, Jesus. He points out that while both Hillel and Jesus are portrayed as reaching out to uneducated Jews in the land of Israel, Hillel consistently challenged people to educate themselves and study as much Torah as possible. He taught: "Do not say, 'I will study when I have free time,' because perhaps you never will have free time" (Avot 2:4), and "One who studies a chapter 100 times cannot be compared to someone who studies it 101 times" (Hagigah 9b). On the other hand, Jesus (at least according to the stories about him) taught people to come close to him and to God and to God's Kingdom, but is never quoted encouraging people to study Torah.

JOSEPH TELUSHKIN
HILLEL
IF NOT NOW, WHEN?

The one text that Rabbi Telushkin keeps going back to in this book is the famous story of the potential convert who wanted to be converted on condition that someone teach him the entire Torah while he stood on one foot. He made that request of Shammai and was rebuffed. But Hillel obliged and converted him, teaching him: "That which is hateful to you, do not do to another. That is the entire Torah. The rest is commentary. Now go study" (Shabbat 31a).

It is in the discussion of this story that Rabbi Telushkin's agenda in writing this book becomes clearest. Rabbi Telushkin explains that this story, and others in the Talmud, show that Hillel was eager to encourage conversion to Judaism. There is no hint in this story that Hillel tested the convert to assure himself beforehand that the convert really intended to observe all the ritual commandments of the Torah. In fact, there is no reason to think that Hillel's convert had anything more than a hazy impression of the contents of the Torah when he converted. Hillel wanted to be sure that the potential convert accepted the interpersonal demands that the Torah makes of all Jews. He figured, Rabbi Telushkin writes, that as long as the convert understood that Judaism requires constant study of Torah (hence: "Now go study"), the convert would come to see the importance of the ritual commandments of the Torah, too.

Rabbi Telushkin contrasts Hillel's warm, trusting and speedy approach with the suspicious, discouraging and lengthy process that is required of Orthodox converts today, a process that centres on building commitment to Jewish ritual laws, like Sabbath observance and kosher food laws, and not on how to relate to other human beings.

Rabbi Telushkin certainly knows that contemporary Jewish law need not conform with every story told about a rabbi in the Talmud. I am sure that he is well aware of the many talmudic texts that can be cited to support the common contemporary approach to conversion. In fact, many historians suggest that, in the century after Hillel, Judaism had a strong motive for abandoning Hillel's welcoming attitude to converts, since so many pagan-born converts to Judaism soon "deserted" and joined the ranks of the new Christian movement, which did not require observance of the Torah's ritual laws, including circumcision.

Still, Rabbi Telushkin argues that what worked 2,000 years ago for Hillel is what Judaism needs now in the 21st century. He decries the fact that the religiosity of potential converts and of all Jews is generally measured today according to their adherence to Jewish ritual law, not adherence to Hillel's rule, "That which is hateful to you, do not do to another." And he suggests that welcoming outreach along with encouraging people to study Torah is as valid today as it was 2,000 years ago.

I found Rabbi Telushkin's message very moving. Hillel and Rabbi Telushkin were/are sincerely dedicated to observing the details of Jewish ritual law. When the message comes from them that the essence of the Torah still is "That which is hateful to you, do not do to another," it is particularly powerful.

DELMAR®
www.delmarcargo.com
FREIGHT FORWARDING
CUSTOMS BROKERAGE
& LOGISTICS SERVICES

SERVICING THE WORLD COMES NATURALLY

Did your son just have a birthday?
Did your daughter just have a baby?
SEND US YOUR PHOTO ALONG WITH 25 WORDS.
GO TO WWW.CJNEWS.COM
CLICK THE FAMILY MOMENTS BANNER

ISRAEL 2010-2011
COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345
WINTER SPECIAL 2010 BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
July 3 - Jul. 17
July 17 - Jul. 31
July 24 - Aug. 7
July 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28
WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FLIGHT INCL. 5 NIGHTS IN 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1515 +TAX
Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345
PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322
Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com
BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!
PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

"Toronto's Newest and Finest Concert Space"
TORONTO STAR
The Royal Conservatory
The finest instrument is the mind

Simone Dinnerstein
SUN. DEC. 12, 2010 3:00PM KOERNER HALL
Hear Dinnerstein's interpretation of Bach's Goldberg Variations on Koerner Hall's incredible Hamburg Steinway piano.

"personality, verve, and thoughtfulness"
- The Washington Post

"An utterly distinctive voice in the forest of Bach interpretation, Ms. Dinnerstein brings her own pianistic expressivity to the 'Goldberg' Variations."
- The New York Times

TICKETS AND GIFT CARDS ON SALE NOW!
rcmusic.ca 416 408 0208
TELUS centre 273 Bloor St. W. (Bloor & Avenue Road) Toronto

Josh Scheinert lights the menorah at the Chanukah party he and his fellow Canadian lecturer, Danny Auron, gave for their Gambian neighbours.

My Gambian Chanukah

By JOSH SCHEINERT

Guest Voice

It's not as hard as you'd think to order 30 sufganiyot and a challah in a Muslim West African nation. I did it recently. And it's a good thing too – I had promised a lot of non-Jews an authentic Chanukah!

The invitations to the Gambia Chanukah party went out with a disclaimer to our Muslim colleagues and hosts: Jewish celebrations come with wine, and while we (my friend and I) aren't trying to offend anyone, there would be alcohol at the party. Not a problem, answered one of our friends. He reminded us, correctly, that Gambia, a sliver of a country on the coast of West Africa, prides itself on religious tolerance – they would stick to the soft drinks and were looking forward to learning about Jewish culture and tradition.

So, after realizing I'd bought sweet potatoes instead of regular ones (they look the same here), I made a quick exchange and began the grating. Watching me, our 15-year-old female neighbour remarked, "I didn't know you could do this." It was the first time she'd ever seen a man cook and clean.

The party went off without any major hitches. Our water supply turned off about halfway through, but the electricity stayed on the whole night! The latkes – our Gambian friends took extra care to pronounce the word correctly – were a hit, and they enjoyed the addition of apple sauce to their list of potato condiments. The sufganiyot, though a little short on the jam filling, were still delicious – not that my laktes weren't!

Of course, no Jewish celebration can come without an explanation, so mid-way through the evening we paused, as I stood before Gambian Muslims, Filipino Catholics and other expats who'd never even heard of Chanukah, and recounted the story of the Macabees and why we were eating all this oily food. And thanks to a recent visit home for a wedding, I was equipped with a chanukiyah and candles, which were lit with the blessings, and Maoz Tzur was sung in the background (it was, unfortunately, a solo performance).

I think I become more religious, faithful, traditional, or whatever you want to call it, when I'm without other Jews to fall back on. It's a unique opportunity to be a true minority in a society that has no concept of your religious or traditional background. It forces you to really reflect on where it all fits into your identity and to what level is it going to define you.

For me, the year has so far been an opportunity to realize that some aspects of my upbringing are perhaps more important to me than I'd previously realized. Coupling that realization with the opportunity to share certain aspects of it to a curious audience has been a rewarding experience.

I don't know what I'll do during Tu b'Shvat. It might be a bit insensitive to celebrate trees in the middle of the dry season as everything around us turns brown. But seeing as Gambia just marked the Muslim holiday of Eid by having each household slaughter a ram, I think Passover's going to be a hit!

Happy Chanukah from Gambia.

Josh Scheinert of Toronto is spending the year as a visiting lecturer with the faculty of law at the University of Gambia.

prossermanjcc | כולל KOLEL

INSPIRING JEWISH ADULT LEARNING

A huge variety of unique 4, 6 and 8 week Kolel classes begin in February, at both Prosserman JCC and Miles Nadal JCC, including: Nia Torah, Israel: Reflections of an Outsider From The Inside, Hebrew, Mussar, Jewish Identity Through Food (a hands-on cooking and learning experience), Doing Jewish (Basic Judaism), Conversations About Conversion, Jewish Paths Into Understanding Illness and Healing, Women's and LGBTQ Jewish Ritual and Liturgy in the 21st Century, and more!

December 13, 8:00–9:30 p.m. Prosserman JCC
With Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Dr. Rachel Adelman, Jerusalem
THE FEMALE RUSE: STORIES OF WOMEN'S DECEPTION IN GENESIS
A unique co-teaching with an Orthodox female scholar and a Reform female Rabbi on Rebekah and Tamar, deceivers and wearers of veils. $10 at the door, no pre-registration necessary.

Thursday, January 27, 7:30–9:00 p.m., Prosserman JCC/ With Rabbi Elyse Goldstein
BEYOND THE RED THREAD: THE KABBALAH CRAZE
Come and explore the history and basic foundations of Kabbalah with no "hidden agenda." $10 at the door, no pre-registration necessary.

Tuesday, April 5, 7:00-10:00 p.m., Miles Nadal JCC/ With Rabbi Elyse Goldstein
THE FEMINIST SEDER
Explore the "liberating" role women play in the Passover story, from a feminist and spiritual perspective. Co-presented with the Miles Nadal JCC. Advance registration only. $50+HST. Space limited to 50!

APRIL 29-MAY 8 / TIKKUN OLAM: GUATEMALA!
Co-led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Adrienne Rosen (Director, Access Education Guatemalan Children's Fund).
This unique "voluntour" will take you to gorgeous lakes, cloud-forests, ziplining and ancient Mayan ruins while giving you the unique opportunity to meet indigenous native Jews, and most importantly, help build a school which is critical to the children in a small rural village.

For registration and information call Access Education at 416.537.9459

NOVEMBER 13-22 /
WOMEN'S INWARD BOUND 3
Rabbi Goldstein once again leads her very special physical and spiritual women's tour of hiking, biking, meditation, yoga, dance, learning and laughter. For women only. Space is limited.

For registration call Michelle at Payless Travel, 416.922.0116 x.1.

Thursday, March 31, 7-10 p.m., Prosserman JCC

KOLEL COOKS WITH BONNIE STERN!

PASSOVER WITH RABBI ELYSE GOLDSTEIN & BONNIE STERN

Passover always seems so complicated. We are here to make it easier. Bonnie Stern and Rabbi Elyse Goldstein team up for a class with demo and tastings to enliven your Passover. Advance registration only. $95+HST includes a signed copy of Friday Night Dinners (value $29.99), a $36 tax receipt, and a tasting of all the dishes. Space limited to 40!

POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION | Miles Nadal jcc

www.kolel.org / visit us on facebook and twitter: kolelTO.
For registration please call 416.638.1881 x.4325 kolel@prossermanjcc.com

Coast to Coast

Leaks confirm Sunni Arab feelings about Iran

Last week saw a flood of media analyses and commentary about the fallout of WikiLeaks' release of the first batch of a quarter million confidential U.S. diplomatic dispatches. Three facts about the Middle East stood out. The dispatches confirmed what was generally already well known, if not publicized:

- The Sunni Arab states – in particular, Gulf states such as Saudi Arabia – view a nuclear Iran as the great threat to regional peace and security;
- These states are looking to the United States and Israel to disarm the Iranian threat and,
- Despite all the Arab pleadings (including Saudi Arabia's King Abdullah's imploring the American administration to attack Iran before it's too late), the United States has not acted militarily against Iran and probably won't do so.

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

Much has been made also of the fact that the Arab states say one thing in public while in private urging something else entirely – military action against Iran. To a large degree, that inconsistency (some would say hypocrisy) is true. Yet well before the WikiLeaks disclosures, there were quite a number of media reports about growing, if covert, ties between Israel and the Arabs, including Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, etc., against Iran. These included stories, denied by Saudi officials, that Israel would be given fly-over and even landing rights in their country should it decide to launch an attack on Iran's nuclear facilities.

What WikiLeaks did was bring some of this out into the open (which may have the negative effect of embarrassing Arab leaders and making co-operation with Israel more difficult, even if not less urgent).

* * *

In the December issue of Foreign Policy magazine, whose cover story is a ranking of the "100 Top Global Thinkers of 2010," Ahmet Davutoglu, Turkey's foreign minister, was accorded seventh spot. He's praised for his brilliance in pursuing Turkey's "global reawakening" – that is, using his country's "geographic position and identity as a secular Muslim democracy to build bridges between Europe, the Caucasus, and the Middle East."

Sounds charming. But according to Der Spiegel's reading of the leaked U.S. dispatches, this glowing picture is grossly misleading.

As far back as 2004, American diplomats in Ankara were disturbed that a member of a leading AKP (ruling party) think-tank said that Turkey's role is "to take back Andalusia and avenge the [Muslim] defeat at the siege of Vienna in 1683," a view, the Americans argue, Davutoglu shares. They're "alarmed by his imperialistic tone." In a dispatch summarizing a speech Davutoglu delivered in Sarajevo in January 2010, the U.S. ambassador wrote: "His thesis: the Balkans, Caucasus and Middle East were all better off when under Ottoman control or influence."

Even more alarming is a report that appeared in the Nov. 28 Ma'ariv by Eli Bardenstein. Not only does Davutoglu maintain that Turkey should reassert its dominance in the Middle East, he also believes that Israel will disappear as a Jewish state, which he believes is illegitimate, and that it will be replaced by a binational state.

"Davutoglu is considered the top ideologist of the ruling AKP party" Bardenstein writes.

Davutoglu's ideas are widely shared throughout the Islamic party. According to Der Spiegel, Israel's ambassador to Turkey, Gabby Levy, was quoted as saying in a confidential U.S. embassy dispatch from October 2009 that prime minister Recep Erdogan is "a fundamentalist. He hates us religiously." And that's at the root of the Turkish government's animosity towards Israel, not Jerusalem's policy on Lebanon or Gaza.

While none of this was unknown before the leak of the American dispatches – as we see in Ankara's growing closeness to Tehran – what is now acknowledged is that, contrary to the official U.S. position on Turkey, the Americans are dismayed by the Islamic radicalism of Turkey's leadership, by the insularity and ignorance of key ministers, and by the corruption of many, including, it is alleged, Erdogan himself (a charge Erdogan has challenged).

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF SHARON LYNN COLE ז"ל
September 6, 1947 to December 7, 1987
A Very Special Person

CALLING ALL BRIDES & GROOMS
The CJN
wants you to share your story with our readers in our upcoming Bridal Supplement.
Tell us how you got engaged, talk about your wedding plans, or share your feelings on your wedding day.
Deadline for submission is Wed. Jan. 19
Send about 400 words plus a picture to:
cblackman@thecjn.ca

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
•Free in-home service
•Made in Canada
•Choose from 3 qualities
•Best service price quality
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
Toronto 416-252-2500
Hamilton 905-383-1343
Ottawa 613-247-3334
Canada Wide 1-800-466-7439
www.prip-mats.com

SINGLES EVENTS
DEADLINE: Wednesday 4 p.m. 8 days preceding issue date
call 416-391-1836

"Games Jewish Singles Play!
Sun., December 19, 7:30 pm.
Beth Torah, 47 Glenbrook. $8.
Call Mollie 416-733-3634 or mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca

"SOULMATES"
Mazel Tov!
to all our couples getting married in Spring, 2011 www.soulmates.net
info@soulmates.net
905-709-3868

דער יידיש ווינקל

דזשערי קעין

צוויי יידישע טעכטער אין מאָסקוע

פֿון אַהרן הירשהאָרן

אין סעפּטעמבער 1948 איז געקומען קיין מאָסקוע גאָלדע מאיר די אַמבאַסאַדאָרשע פֿון ישׂראל קיין סאָוועטן פֿאַרבאַנדט. באַלד נאָך איר קומען האָבן זיך אָנגעהויבן די ימים נוראים.

אין איינעם פֿון די אָנדערע מיטגלידער פֿון דער ישׂראלדיקער דעלעגאַציע, איז גאָלדע געגאַנגען צו פֿוס אין דער גרויסער מאָסקווער שול. טרוימנטער יידן זענען טיף נגרויס נעפּאָרן פֿון איר בי זיך תּי א פֿאַרשטיין פֿון דער נייַער יידישער מדינה. אָן די יידן פֿון מאָסקוע האָבן איר עפּנטלעך אַדיסנגעזיין זייער ליבשאַפֿט – אַ באַוויזן אַז אין זיי איז נישט פֿאַרלאָשן נעפּאָרן דאָס פּינטעלע יידּ. אַ שאָד תּאָס סטאַלינען איז נישט נעפֿאַלן נעפּאָרן דער אויסגיסנג פֿון ליבשאַפֿט צו גאָלדען.

איידער דייטשער האָט עשׂרים דערוויַלע אַז סטאַלין האָט נעזען אַס די אומגעהיינלעכע סצענע פֿון זיין פּנים נעמען אין קרעמל. ער האָט באַשלאָסן אַז יידן זענען אויפֿפֿאַלאַלעך, אַן אומזיכערער עלעמענט, אוּן אַז ישׂראל האָט אים אָפּגענאַרט מיט אומדאַנק.

היסטאָריקער דאָמיַנק די "סאָוועטש יאָרן פֿון די סאָוועטישע יידן" – די יאָרן הען מען האָט באַשולדיקט זיי אין "אופּפֿאָרצלטן קאָזמאָפּאָליטיזם," –פֿון דער גורליקער באַגעגענישׂ צוישׂן גאָלדען און די מאָסקווער יידן. אין סטאַלינס אירגן, האָבן די יידן נעגענט אַ קלאָרן באַווייַז פֿון אַ צעטיילטער לאָיאַלקייט.

איינע פֿון די תּאָם האָבען ספּציעל אַנליטן פֿון סטאַלינס פֿאַראַנטיון האָס איז נעזען מאַראָם מאַלאָטאָוו. די פֿרוי פֿון דעם מיניסטער פֿון אויסלענדישע ענינים. זי האָט נעליטן תּי אַ חשובע סאָוועטישע פּערזענליכקייט, און אויך אין איר איינעם רעכט. זי איז נעזען אַ פֿאַרבעטענער נאַסט בייַ אַן אירפֿנעם נעגענט פֿון מאַלאָטאָוו אין יאָרשאַג פֿון דער סאָוועטישער רעגאַלוציע. נאָלדע איז דאָרט אויך נעזען. אין איר אירשטאַבאַפֿע, האָט נאָלדע דערמאָנט איר צוזאַמענטרעף מיט פֿאַלינע מאַלאָטאָוו. "נאָכדעם תּאָס איך האָב נעדריקט מאַלאָטאָוס האַנט, איז זיי פֿרוי צוגעקומען צו מיר אוּן נעזאָגט, מיט אמתר חיוּרמקייט, 'עס נעפֿעלט מיר אזוי זיך צו באַנעמען מיט אייך צוליבט', "נאָכדעם האָט די צוגענעבן 'איך רעד יידיש. זיי איז דאָך אַ יידּ?' האָב איך נעמנט־פֿערט –יאָ. האָט די מיר נעמנט־פֿערט אַרויף יידיש 'איך בין אַ יידישע טאָכטער.'"

דער אויסלאָז איז נעזען ביטער פֿאַר פֿאַלינען. סטאַלין האָט נעהייסן אַז מען זאָל איר אָפּשאַפֿן פֿון איר שטעלע תּי שׂרף פֿון דעם קאָמסעוויק טראַסט, אַרעסטירן פֿאַר בגידה קנען דעם מוטערלאַנדצוליב אירע פֿאַרבינדונגען מיט דעם אינטערנאַציאָנאַלן ציוניזם, אוּן פֿאַרשיקן איר אַ לאַנגער.

כאָטש מאַלאָטאָוו איז נעזען צוגעבונדן צו איר, האָט סטאַלין אים נעניט אָנצוּטעמען די אָפּשאָצונג. אַלע מינגלידער פֿון פֿאַליטבוּרא האָבן נעשטימט פֿאַר איר אַרעסט, חוץ מאַלאָטאָוו.

די באָשולדיקער איז ניט נעלונגען אויסצולעשן דאָס פּינטעלע יידּ. פֿון די הונדערטער יידן תּאָס האָבן נעשטראָמט צוּתאָמען מיט גאָלדען צו דער גרויסער מאָסקווער שול איז נעזאָגן אַ מענטשנשטראָם רעפֿוזניקעס. דרייסיק יאָר שפּעטער האָבן די נעפּועלט צו עמיגרירן קיין ארץ אישׂראל. תּער קנן זאָגן אַז גאָלדע איז ניט נעזען דערהיַי צו באַגריסן זי תּי דער פֿרעמיער פֿון מדינת ישׂראל.

אויב איר האָט נעראַנקען דעצן אונדזער הינקל שרייבט דוּרך פֿאָסט אָדער בליין־פֿאָסט info@thecjn.ca

Former Winnipeg principal among dead in Carmel fire

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Rabbi Uriel Malka, 32, a former principal at the Ohr Hatorah Day School in Winnipeg who fought against Hezbollah in hand-to-hand combat in the Second Lebanon War, was among those killed on the prison's service bus that was engulfed by flames in the Carmel forest fire last Thursday.

Rabbi Malka, from Karnei Shomron, who was training to be a chaplain in the prison system, was with prison service cadets en route to Damun Prison to evacuate prisoners from the path of the flames.

He was laid to rest Sunday night at the military cemetery in Yavne.

In an interview with The CJN in October 2008, Rabbi Malka recalled that he narrowly escaped death while fighting Hezbollah in 2006.

"It is a miracle that I am alive, as there were times in the war when I was shot at directly by Hezbollah terrorist fighters," he said. "I met them face to face. I could see their eyes."

Twelve of Rabbi Malka's colleagues from his paratroop unit were killed in a Katyusha rocket attack on Kfar Giladi as they were standing outside in a parking lot en route to deployment on Aug. 6, 2006.

"I was not in Kfar Giladi with them, because I was already in Lebanon," he recalled in the interview.

"We did not find out that those in our unit had died right away. Our commander had us take out the batteries to our equipment so we could not hear the names of those who died, so we wouldn't realize they were from our unit. Four days later, our commander called us together in the [deserted] home of a Hezbollah terrorist and told us what had happened. He told us we had to be strong.

"It was very difficult."

Rabbi Malka, who is survived by his wife, Ortal, and five children, recalled in the 2008 interview that on his very first day in the Second Lebanon War, he got a taste of how difficult things were going to be.

While fighting in the village of Rabat Talatin, he said, "Hezbollah terrorists were shooting at us in one direction, and as we pursued them from that direction, another group of Hezbollah came from the other direction.

"There were 60 of us from my unit in a Hezbollah home. Hezbollah had the opportunity to shoot three missiles at us in the house.

"Had they hit the house, all of us would have died. The first two missiles just missed the house. The third one hit the roof. We were all lucky to get out alive."

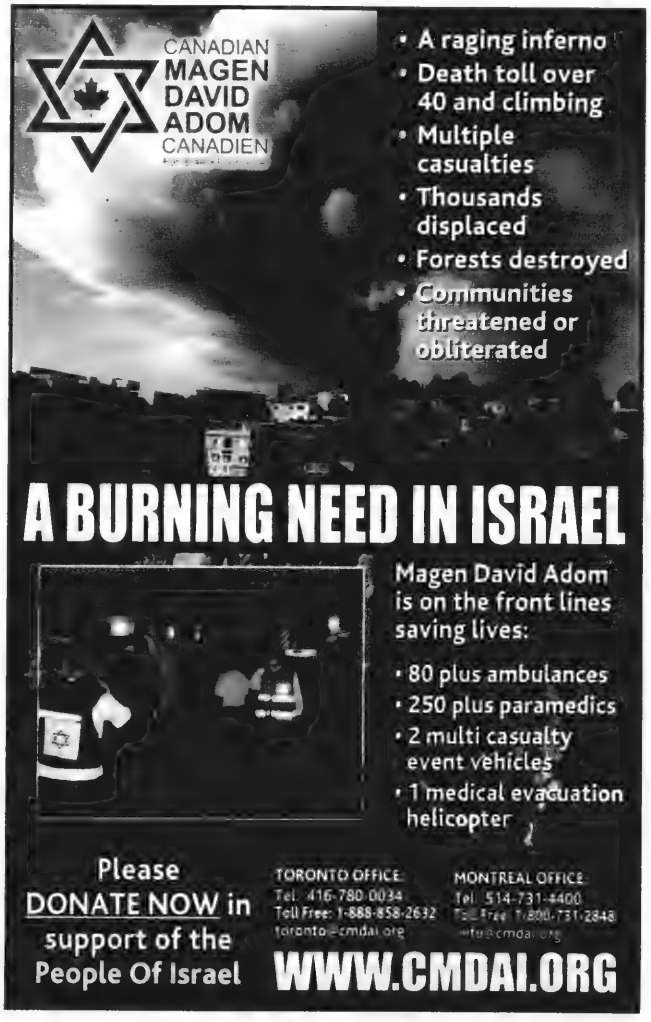
At the time Rabbi Malka got called up to fight with his unit, he was scheduled to go on shlichut (emissary service) with his family to teach in Denver.

"My ticket was booked and our suitcases were already packed. The Jewish Agency later told me that if I had explained the situation to the army, I would not have had to serve in the war... We are like brothers in my unit. I couldn't have left them to fight alone. So I cancelled my ticket and we got to Denver later than planned."

Rabbi Malka had a bachelor of education degree from the Beit Midrash for Teachers of Judaic Studies in Rehovot, and was a graduate of the Israel Defence Forces' hesder program, which combines study and military service within a religious Zionist framework. Before arriving in Winnipeg, he spent two years teaching at an Orthodox day school in Denver.

PREMIER LIGHTING: B.C. Premier Gordon Campbell lights a chanukiyah in front of the provincial legislature in Victoria. It was just one of the public lightings in five cities on Vancouver Island and Salt Spring Island.

HOUSE OF COMMONS CANDLELIGHTING: Liberal MP Irwin Cotler, centre, lights the chanukiyah in the House of Commons, with Conservative MP Scott Reid, left, and Rabbi Chaim Mendelsohn looking on. An invitation to the menorah lighting and a reception was sent to MPs and senators by Liberal MP Peter Milliken, Speaker of the House (not pictured), and the Canadian Federation of Chabad Lubavitch.



Catastrophe averted as shul finishes oil cleanup

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — The cleanup of soil contaminated by heating oil around the vandalized Young Israel of Chomedey Synagogue was completed last week, after six weeks of excavation, and the beleaguered congregation is now awaiting the final bill.

Although total costs are expected to be at least $150,000, president Frank Cwilich said the shul is now more optimistic about its future. The worst-case scenario – seepage of oil under the foundation – did not occur. That would have been "catastrophic" for the congregation of about 150 families, he said.

Cwilich is bracing for the final bill this week from the companies that did the digging and soil testing. The first half of that work rang in at about $65,000, so he's expecting at least a similar sum for the rest. In the latter half of the work, the removal of soil from under a building used for storage required a more complex procedure.

Tests indicate that the remaining soil meets the standards set by the Quebec Environmental Agency.

The congregation's insurers will pay a maximum of approximately $25,000. The congregation is heartened by the generosity and moral support of so many people, even from strangers and other unexpected sources. Last week, donations totalled more than $30,000, and a significant part of that amount has come from non-Jews or those outside the Montreal area.

In addition, there are thousands of dollars in related costs, including the cleanup of the flooded basement; the replacement of the 2,300 litres of oil that were spilled; enhanced security measures, including more surveillance cameras, and landscaping.

On the night of Oct. 6, someone opened the synagogue's exterior oil pipe, put the nearby garden hose down the pipe and turned on the water. The water ran all night and by morning, all of the fuel in the four oil tanks had been forced out onto the back of the property and 3,200 litres of water inundated the basement and grounds.

The synagogue had surveillance cameras at the front and sides of the building, but none in the back.

Rabbi Zalmen Stiefel, left, welcomes Father Peter Sabbath to the Young Israel of Chomedey Synagogue.

Police have not given the congregation any news on their investigation. Cwilich suspects the culprit or culprits may be among the youths that hang out at all hours at a nearby shopping mall. There is no evidence the motivation was antisemitism.

Last week, representatives of the Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church in Chomedey, led by Father Peter Sabbath, came to the Young Israel to present a $1,000 cheque on behalf of the church. Individual parishioners either contributed or collected another $1,000, and the church is continuing to try to raise money.

Cwilich said the synagogue and church, although in the same district for many decades – 51 years in the case of the Young Israel, 45 for Holy Name – previously had no contact with one another, so the neighbourly gesture was all the more surprising.

"We are honoured and touched by this generosity and were pleased to have a special evening [at the synagogue] where we could express our most sincere gratitude to members of Father Sabbath's parish for helping us cope with our huge financial burden," Cwilich said. "This act of common decency fortifies our resolve to bring our synagogue back to its healthy state."

The Young Israel's Rabbi Zalmen Stiefel has invited the priest to join him at his family's Shabbat dinner. The experience will not be strange. Father Sabbath was born Jewish.

The Young Israel has been struggling for years to survive, due to a steep decline in membership from a peak of nearly 900 members in the early 1970s. It has no endowments or wealthy benefactors of its own to fall back on.

There have been other heart-warming incidents. A couple visiting from Calgary, not Jewish, read about the Young Israel's plight and wrote a $1,000 cheque. Employees of a nearby TD Bank branch chipped in $750.

Many donations are small. Only the day before, Cwilich said, an unknown woman came to the synagogue office and handed over a bag of coins, apparently her meagre savings.

The North American network of Young Israel, headquartered in New York, is appealing to its member congregations. Former Young Israel of Chomedey members or area residents have also contributed.

The Young Israel continues to contact philanthropic members of the Montreal Jewish community for donations, and is having encouraging results, Cwilich said.

No donation has been received from Federation CJA, but he is still hopeful of having a meeting with one of its leaders.

"It's ironic that this is Chanukah, which is the story of miraculous oil, while oil has been the source of our tragedy. But people's kindness and warmth has let us believe that some good can come out of all this."

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE

L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS

A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home

Cold outside?
At L'chaim, we don't know from cold. Our temperature-controlled environment is always set to "Heartwarming".

L'CHAIM occupies a unique middle ground between retirement and nursing homes. It's a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs and caring staff allow them to do just that. Discover everything L'chaim has to offer. — Judy Cohen, Founder

416.398.7898 L'chaim 718 Sheppard W.
www.lchaimretirement.ca Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

Winter Sale starts Dec 11

PAMPER YOUR FEET!

- Samples from $50 (Eglinton & Leslie only)
- 20% off all regular stock (fall/winter collection)
- Ends of lines from $60

• Prairie Dog, 960 Eglinton Avenue West 416-782-4596
• The Naot Store, 5891 Leslie Street (Pickle Barrel Plaza) 416-496-9116
• The Naot Store, 1102 Centre Street West, Thornhill 905-597-7191
www.naot.ca

MADE IN ISRAEL

NAOT
FOOTWEAR • SOLEMATES INC.

on cjnews.com

The CJN's French-language reporter in Montreal, Elias Levy, writes about:

• Congrégation Or Hahayim de Côte Saint-Luc recently honoured three of its longtime volunteers, Joseph Abehséra, Charles Barchéchath and Jacques Sabbag.

• In an interview when he was in Montreal, Israeli Zionist Rabbi Shlomo Aviner expresses his views on the life and philosophy of the average Israeli..

Also this week on the web:

• CHAT students Avigael Samson and Sapir Negrin describe the lasting effect March of the Living had on their lives.

• Israel Bonds stages its first interfaith evening in Montreal.

• CJN Correspondent Masada Siegel looks back on the year 2010 as a year of change.

Coast to Coast

Chanukah greetings

During Chanukah, Jewish communities around the world light menorahs in remembrance of the rededication of the Holy Temple in Jerusalem and the Maccabean miracle. These eight days are a time to reflect on the illuminating power of faith to overcome the forces of darkness.

Canadians embrace the spirit of Chanukah through our efforts to build a tolerant nation where the light of hope burns brightly. Canada is committed to defending religious freedoms and denouncing the ideologies of hatred that threaten this ideal.

On behalf of the government of Canada, I would like to wish you all a memorable and blessed celebration. Chanukah Samayach!

Stephen Harper
Prime Minister of Canada

On the first night of Chanukah, Jewish families across Canada gathered to light the menorah, spin the dreidel, eat sufganiyot and celebrate miracles old and new. The triumph of the Maccabees is the story of Jewish survival. We are proud, as Canadians, to continue that story in our country and in our time.

The Chanukah story is about freedom – the freedom to be true to one's own identity and beliefs. The liberty we love must never be taken for granted. In the 2,000 years since Antiochus desecrated the Temple and banned the study of Torah, his atrocities have been echoed with deadly symmetry.

On Chanukah, all Canadians join together to condemn all forms of discrimination and hatred – notably anti-semitism – as we celebrate our differences, and the freedom that makes them possible. We cherish the rituals of Chanukah, because they speak to how celebrations of faith, in all their rich and diverse forms, help bring us together as Canadians.

On behalf of the Liberal Party of Canada and our parliamentary caucus, I wish all Canadians the very best for the Festival of Lights. Happy Chanukah. Chag Samayach.

Michael Ignatieff
Leader, Liberal Party of Canada

We are excited to introduce Moshava Ba'ir Toronto

A new Bnei Akiva day camp, conveniently located at the beautiful TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Family Centre (Thornhill).

Moshava Ba'ir offers children entering JK through grade 5 a wonderful, fun-filled summer of daily instructional and free swim, sports, arts, music, dance, drama, learning and more, all deeply infused with Jewish and Zionist values.

Early Bird Discount expires December 15

For more information, see our website:
www.moshavabairtoronto.org
Email: mbt@bneiakiva.org
Phone: 416-900-0856

EMERGENCY APPEAL
CARMEL FOREST FIRE

ON DECEMBER 2, 2010, A MASSIVE FOREST FIRE SWEPT THROUGH ISRAEL'S CARMEL REGION, CAUSING LOSS OF LIFE, INJURIES AND TREMENDOUS DESTRUCTION OF THE LAND. JNF FIREFIGHTING CREWS CONTINUE TO WORK WITH THE IDF, LOCAL FIRE DEPARTMENTS, POLICE FORCES AND MEDICAL TEAMS TO REDUCE THE SPREAD OF THIS NATIONAL DISASTER.

JNF IS 100% ISRAEL. YOUR DONATION TO JNF IS A DONATION DIRECTLY TO ISRAEL.
HELP JNF RAISE FUNDS FOR FIREFIGHTING SUPPLIES AND FOR THE FUTURE REHABILITATION OF THE AREA.

• DONATE NOW BY PHONE OR ONLINE •

100% ISRAEL JNF

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO
416.638.7200 • WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA • TOR@JNF.CA

Class Acts

CHANUKAH AT LEO BAECK: Grade 4 students, teachers and Israeli emissaries from Leo Baeck Day School's north and south campuses took part in a collaborative Chanukah activity that included making their own chanukiyot. Pictured, from left, are Rebecca Train, Izabella Wise, Nicole Wolfe, Faith Pasternak and Sarah Nirenberg.

JNF WINNER: Zachary Cole, a Grade 5 student at Bialik Hebrew Day School, recently won the Jewish National Fund's video contest. Students from grades 5 to 10 were asked to make a TV commercial that explains the important work JNF is doing in Halutziot and the significance of the Negev to Israel's future. Zachary's video placed first, and he won two tickets to Israel. He's pictured with Bialik's head of school, Shana Harris.

Just For You

Photographic Footprints
www.photographicfootprints.com
647-236-6341

Photographic Footprints provides high quality portrait photography services that are fun and [illegible] memorable for everyone! Customer service and satisfaction is our main priority. We come to you! Sam is patient and naturally calming, yet energetic nature encourages children and parents to share their smiles, laughter and more through photographic footprints.

The Paper Boutique
875 Eglinton Avenue West, Unit 5
416.789.4045 www.thepaperboutique.ca

The Paper Boutique is an intimate paper and gift shop specializing in a variety of custom and personalized stationery, notecards, invitations (all printed on-site) and gifts for all occasions.
Mention this ad and receive 10% off.
We are open Mon-Fri 11-5 and for private appointments.

THE PAPER BOUTIQUE

GRAND OPENING!
Pet 'n' Master
416.807.3846
We're located on the Lower Level of the Sheppard Centre, NE corner of Yonge and Sheppard.

You deserve the very best and so does your pet! We have a large selection of brand name lifestyle and comfort products that will keep "everyone" in the family healthy, active, and happy!
Bring in this ad for a 10% discount on your purchase.
Exp. 12-31-2010

beau' Aime décor
Home Staging Professional
Diana Khoury – 416.890.7717
www.beau-aime.com

Staging is a sophisticated approach of preparing your home for sale. You only get one chance to make a great first impression. We can help you transform your home with an affordable range of solutions to maximize the potential of your home with the aim of selling it faster and for top dollar.

beau' Aime décor

Lilliane & Robin's Fine Jewellery
220 Bloor Street West, Hotel InterContinental
416-920-7676

There is nothing like the sparkle of a well-cut diamond, the feel of an exquisite strand of pearls, or the intoxicating lure of a fine coloured stone.
We carry spectacular new jewellery or our design experts will transform your old pieces into fine art. Schedule a consultation today.

BEAVERTAILS PASTRIES
www.beavertailsinc.com
Suzanne Steinberg · 416-785-3313 beavertailstoronto@gmail.com

What are BeaverTails Pastries? Deliciously addictive whole-wheat pastries stretched to the shape of a beaver's tail, float cooked and served piping hot at events and meetings. Dazzel your guests by featuring irresistible beavertails pastnes with their choice of delectable toppings. Available for kosher events.

One More Time
www.onemoretime.ca
905-597-7194 416-484-1044

Make a small party a huge success! Add a five piece band. Live entertainment designed to tastefully entertain at your boomer party while you dine and dance! We offer music for all celebrations including accapella for Sabbath Day.

'quite simply the smoothest rock n' soul band'

Herschey's Family Restaurant
1943 Avenue Road
416-785-7427
Two Floors of Culinary Excitement

- All day breakfasts
- Great soups, salads & wraps
- The best Montreal smoked meat
- Delicious Dim Sum
- Chicken shish kabob, BBQ ribs
- Tilapia
- Grilled Salmon
- Lemon pepper sole
- Fish & Chips
- Liver & Onions, BBQ Chicken
- Lasagna
- Shepherds pie... and more! Call to arrange a private party for up to 60 people

Class Acts

CHANUKAH TREATS: Students in Netivot HaTorah Day School's Gan Netivot – from left, Noah Lev, Lielle, Dov, Ezra, Eliza and Chesed – celebrated Chanukah with all the trimmings last week. [Rebecca Ansel photo]

LIGHTING THE MENORAH: Benjamin Switzer, dressed as the high priest, prepares to light the menorah at Torah Tots at Chabad of Markham, with assistance from his friend, Shayna Kukle.

Ask us how to Capture the Upside and Neutralize the Downside in a Tax Efficient, Low Cost Way

Finally a Unique, Better Solution for Today's Markets

Allan Newman H.B.A., LL.B.

Greg Newman B.Comm., LL.B.

ScotiaMcLeod

The Newman Group
Wealth Advisors
Expect More
416-863-7756 or 800-387-0489

E-mail us to receive a brief e-mail explanation (PDF) or call for a Brochure
greg_newman@scotiamcleod.com

"Registered" trademark used under authorization and control of The Bank of Nova Scotia. ScotiaMcLeod is a division of Scotia Capital Inc. Member CIPF

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Arlene & Murray Finkelman were thrilled to be in Israel for the birth of their great-granddaughter, Yael. Proud parents are Sarah & Idan Sharabi.

Mazel tov Annabelle & David Shulman on your 50th wedding anniversary. With love from your children and grandchildren.

Happy 19th birthday Jordana Rosen. May you have the best day and year ahead. Love, Mom & Dad.

Mazel tov to Ezzie Stavsky on his sixth birthday.

Happy first birthday to our grandson Tyler. With much love, Bubbie Renee, Bubbie Sharon and Zaide Keith.

Mazel tov to Libby Kraft on her recent 80th birthday, and many more in good health! Love from all the family.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Mazel Tov on Your New Arrival"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Our regular columnist, Leila Speisman, is away on medical leave.

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
call 416-636-3575
or email alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Dec. 23 is Dec. 13. There is no paper Dec. 30. Deadline for Jan. 6 is Dec. 23. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Dec. 9

TEMPLE SINAI CHANUKAH
Celebrate Chanukah with lights, latkes and laughter. Featuring klezmer band A Touch of Klez. 7:30 p.m. Refreshments served. $10. weducation@templesinai.net, 416-487-3281.

CHANUKAH PERFORMANCE
Chanukah with Mark Youhanan, singer and pianist. 2-4 p.m. $5, includes refreshments. Beth Tikvah.

Friday, Dec. 10

SHABBAT SERVICE
Join Solel Congregation of Mississauga for Shabbat with Jay Brodbar, executive director of New Israel Fund Canada. 8 p.m. Catered adult dinner, 6:15 p.m. Registration required for dinner. 905-820-5915.

Saturday, Dec. 11

MISHPACHAH MINYAN
Families with young children are invited to participate in Shaar Shalom's mishpachah minyan. 10:15 a.m. Service starts with Torah reading and ends to coincide with the main service so participants can join congregation members for kiddush. 905-889-4975.

GAMES NIGHT
Games at Beth Radom. 7:30 p.m. Texas Hold 'Em, mah-jong, blackjack. Silent auction and prizes. games@bethradom.com, 416-636-3451.

MOVIE NIGHT
Shrek pyjama party and movie night. 5:30-8 p.m. Shaar Shalom. The Giborim and Maccabee Youth groups will join the congregation for Havdalah. Movie starts at 6 p.m. Snacks served. Register: you@shaarshalom.ca, 905-889-4975, ext. 62.

Sunday, Dec. 12

BREAKFAST LECTURE
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Brotherhood presents lecture with Stephen Kraft. "Science and the Bible: New Take on Stories of Bereshith." 9:15 a.m. $5, includes breakfast. 416-633-5500.

NCSY CONCERT
30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsyconcert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

JEWISH HEALING PROGRAM
Healing Service. 3-4 p.m. Miles Nadal JCC. Rabbi Ed Elkin and Judy Shier Weisberg facilitate. Free, wheelchair accessible. 416-638-7800, ext. 6287.

MUSICAL RECITAL
Concert at Borochov Cultural Centre, 272 Codsell Ave. New time: 2-4 p.m. Refreshments served. Tax receipts for donations $18 and over. Sponsored by Na'amat Canada.

YIDDISH CHANUKAH
Chanukah celebration with Yiddish folk and theatre songs by Aron Gonshor. 2 p.m. Workmen's Circle, 471 Lawrence Ave. W. Refreshments served. $5 for Workmen's Circle and Friends of Yiddish members, $10 for non-members.

IRENA SENDLER
Toronto première of In the Name of Their Mothers, the new and most complete documentary film about Irena Sendler. Producer Mary Skinner speaks after the screening. 8 p.m. Congregation Habonim. irenasendlerfilm.com.

Tuesday, Dec. 14

INTERMARRIAGE GROUP
Beth Tikvah Men's Club hosts monthly meetings for family and friends of inter-dating or inter-married couples and those who would like support or information, or would like to help those in similar circumstances. 8 p.m. Discussions are confidential. Meetings are attended by professional facilitator Andrea Litvack. Free, all welcome. Moe: mhorenf@idirect.com, 647-282-0277.

Continued on page 27

הסוכנות היהודית לארץ ישראל
Jewish Agency for Israel
Celebrating over 5,000 years of miracles.
Begin Your Miracle Today
Contact your Aliyah Shaliach to find about the services, benefits, and programs available for people making Aliyah.
www.jewishagency.org/aliyahna
ALIYAH
NORTH AMERICA
Nefesh B'Nefesh

Leo Baeck
A Reform Jewish Day School
www.leobaeck.ca
We are so proud of the 100+ Leo Baeck Day School graduates who were on TanenbaumCHAT's honour roll this year for achieving 80% or higher (35 attained above 90%)
Mazel Tov to all of you and your families for this amazing accomplishment.
A Special Mention:
Kimel Centre Campus
Samantha Cooper
overall highest Grade 10 average
Laura Sheriff
overall highest Grade
Wallenberg Campus
Simon Axelrod
overall highest Grade
Lauren Rudolph
Derech Eretz Award
THANKS FOR MAKING LEO BAECK PROUD!

Continued from page 26

JIAS GENERAL MEETING

Annual meeting for Jewish Immigrant Aid Services Toronto. Guidy Mamann, partner of Mamann Sandaluk Immigration Law Firm, on "Recent Trends in Immigration and the Impact on Our Community." 7 p.m. Prosserman JCC

WRITING PERSONALS

Temple Har Zion presents Lolette Kuby discussing and reading from her new book Writing Personals. Bring your lunch at noon, presentation begins at 12:30 p.m. Coffee and cookies served. Temple Har Zion members $3, non-members $5. 905-889-2252

Wednesday, Dec. 15

SPIRITS WITH SINAI

Next Generation Group presents Spirits with Sinai. Spend an evening at the Duke of Kent with Rabbi Eleanor Steinman. Meet young professionals for a discussion on strengthening our spirits. 7-9 p.m. 2315 Yonge St. Register: education@templesinai.net.

Other News

SATELLITE AT SINAI

"Miriam's Mosaic: Diverse Women of the Rabbinate." Panel discussion with women who have entered the clergy. Hear from Rabbi Dianne Cohler-Esses, Cantor Angela Buchdahl and Rabba Sara Hurwitz. Moderated by Rabbi Diana Gerson. Dec. 16. Doors 7:30 p.m. program 8 p.m. Members $10, guests $15 at the door. 416-487-3281, education@templesinai.net.

MAD SCIENCE SHABBAT

Tot shabbat with mad science at Temple Sinai. Dec. 17. 6 p.m. dinner, 7:15 p.m. services. Adult members $16, member children (3-7), $9. Adult guests $20, children $10. Register by 12 p.m. Dec. 15. 416-487-3281.

BILLY ELLIOT

Beth Sholom is going to the theatre. Billy Elliot the Musical, Jan. 30, 2011. $130 and $150. 416-783-6103 ext. 228.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

Bernard Betel Centre needs volunteers for Meals on Wheels, to help seniors with basic computer skills, Healthy @ Home program and visiting seniors, in person or over the phone. Karen, 416-225-2112 ext. 127 or karens@betelcentre.org.

THE JEWISH WORLD

Israel and the Jewish World on CTS channel 9. Dec. 12, 19 and 26. 9-11 p.m.

RABBI'S TISH

Dec. 25 following Shabbat services. Study session and kiddush with Rabbi Martin Berman. Shaar Shalom. 905-889-4975.

BAYCREST VOLUNTEERS

Baycrest is looking for volunteer gallery guides and arts and crafts facilitators. If you have an art background, skills in jewelry design, drawing, painting, photography, creative writing, storytelling and more, call 416-785-2500 ext. 2572.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Janice Shaw, 905-882-2331, ext. 232, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

High conflict divorce. Workshop for parents wanting to develop strategies and techniques to deal with a high-conflict situation and help lessen the impact of that conflict on their children. Requires active participation and is not for individuals in an abusive situation. Dec. 15, Promenade Mall, Suite 313. 6:30-9 p.m.

Adolescents and divorce. For parents who have adolescents and are going through a separation or divorce. Dec. 16, Promenade Mall, Suite 313. 7-9 p.m.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211. Dec. 9, 1:30 p.m. Chanukah musical celebration. Aviva Chernick sings in Hebrew, Yiddish, Ladino and English. Refreshments. Reserve at ext. 155.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Sheila, 416-665-3333.

Beth Tzedec Seniors. "New Horizons for Chavurah" with Rabbi Miriam Margles, Dec. 13, 1:30-3 p.m. (recurring). Rich discussion and a nosh as we learn from and with each other. All welcome.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Dec. 15, departs 10 a.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Social circle – needlepoint, etc. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen. 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Wellness lecture: "Exercise and the Heart," with kinesiologist Melissa Nicholson. Dec. 16, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

Lecture: "Great Italian Composers – Gioacchino Rossini, Pt. 1." With Myriam Shechter. Dec. 14, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Bingo bonanza. Dec. 15, 1-3 p.m. Two cards for $1.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St, www.prossermanjcc.com, 416-638-1881.

Registration for morning programs and full-day daycare is now open.

Registration for the Tic Tac Summer program is now open children ages 2 and 3 enjoy a fun and educational experience from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Kosher lunch included. To book a tour or to find out more, call Kailah, ext. 4351.

Registration for winter courses starting in January now open, with more Ryerson/Chang programs for 50+. Recorder, Latin dance, mah-jong and bridge lessons, acting classes, folk dance, current events.

Note: Creativity Club, Jokers Club and PRO won't meet in December.

"The Female Ruse: Stories of Women's Deception in Genesis." Why do women deceive in the Bible? Unique co-teaching with an Orthodox female scholar and a Reform female rabbi. Dec. 13, 7:30 p.m. $10 at the door, no pre-registration required. Room 105. Ext. 4255.

Prosserman JCC offers the best family programs at competitive prices. Programs include Baby and Me Israeli Dance, Deborah's Sing-Along, Drama Tots, Little Superstars pre-Shabbat music class with Mark Weinstock, preschool dance, Sports with Jay, Lego Brand Brick Club, Kids Love Tech and the best Shabbat party. Register early.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www.mnjcc.org

Michael Bernstein Chapel holds services Sundays, 8 a.m., and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Complete kosher breakfast after services. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

Give the gift of film this Chanukah. 2011 Toronto Jewish Film Society Subscription Season are selling out. 8 great film events from January to December at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. 2011 paid-up members can buy 7:30 p.m. memberships for their kids (18+) for $60 if they've never been TJFS members. Joelle: ext. 139, joellem@mnjcc.org.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22 regular, $18 group. Ext. 0.

Dec. 12, 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m. "Lighting the Night: Festivals of Light around the World," with Diana Mingail. $9 drop in, refreshments served. sharonis@mnjcc.org, ext. 154.

Registration opens Dec. 15 for all MNJCC winter programs. Register for classes at ext. 0.

Sign up for the winter session of Shabbat Club for 3- to 6-year-olds with Sarah Brodbar-Nemzer. Fridays 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. starting Jan. 21, 2011. Ext. 0 to register. For info: ext. 277, sarahbn@mnjcc.org.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

CLUB BEERSHEBA DONATES CHANUKAH GIFTS: Members of Club Beersheba of Na'amat Toronto brought, to their recent meeting, gift bags filled with Chanukah presents for children who are being helped by Jewish Family and Child. From left are Judith Ross, Shirley Margel and Mollie Rothman. [Frances Klinger photo]

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 20

KitchenAid 5 Quart Professional 475 Watt Lift Bowl Stand Mixer

Includes Stainless Steel Bowl with Handle, Premium Burnished Wire Whip, Flat Beater and Spiral Dough Hook. Choice of Colours.

Lowest Price In Ontario 269.99 Compare at 599.99

Full Money-Back Refund Policy! Always 1st Quality!

THE NEW ADVENTURE! WAREHOUSE OUTLET 125 Tycos Dr.

Cayne's THE SUPER HOUSEWARE

112 DONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont. One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St. 905-764-1188

Mon-Fri 9-9 Sat-Sun 10-6

Shop Online at www.cayneshousewares.com

Toll Free BRIDAL REGISTRY

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Betty Simon	Nov 19/10	1995 Lenarthur Dr
Benjamin Lieberman	Nov 21/10	24 Shorthill Rd
Sidney Baker	Nov 20/10	7460 Bathurst St
Harvey Pivnick	Nov 19/10	3397 Hwy. 38, RR#1
Sara Langer	Nov 21/10	23 Markwood Lane
Lee Greenspoon	Nov 21/10	154 Bentoak Cres
Honey Rotenberg	Nov 21/10	28 William Carson
Joan Greenspoon	Nov 21/10	50 Waterloo Ave
Adele Raizin	Nov 21/10	3900 Yonge St
Renee Aston	Nov 21/10	4003 Bayview Ave
Celia Eisenberg	Nov 23/10	625 Avenue Rd
Helen Florence	Nov 23/10	205 Cummer Ave
Moshe Tzelnik	Nov 24/10	4266 Bathurst St
Sylvia Robbins	Nov 24/10	2 Neptune Dr
Rose Cherry	Nov 24/10	4300 Bathurst St
Ethel Cooke	Nov 24/10	3560 Bathurst St
William Goldstein	Nov 26/10	7300 Yonge St
Anne Steiner	Nov 26/10	11 William Carson
Sandi Lublin	Nov 25/10	140 Erskine Ave
Murray Sibulash	Nov 26/10	225 Old Forest Hill
Irma Singer	Nov 27/10	3560 Bathurst St.
Luba Bard	Nov 25/10	339 York Hill Blvd.
Frimette Lyons	Nov 27/10	117 Scenic Millway

HEBREW BASIC

Ronald Powell	Nov 25/10	2574 Morrison Ave
Joyce Attis	Nov 25/10	56 Touraine Ave

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH
• HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE
• DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

With deep sorrow we mourn the passing of

Lilly Revy ז"ל adored mother and grandmother of

Eva Rigor Sommers, Frank, Robert and Daniel.

She was a loving woman of valor, who is greatly missed by family and friends.

She will live in our hearts forever.

The family of the late

Harry (Herschel) Vandelman ז"ל

Architect/Artist

wishes to extend heartfelt gratitude to family and friends for their compassion and support which eased the pain of loss and brought us strength and courage in our bereavement for a beloved husband, brother, brother in law, uncle, great-uncle, cousin and friend.

On Campus

UBC students protest funding of Canadian Gaza flotilla

By LAUREN KRAMER
Pacific Correspondent

VANCOUVER — A controversial motion to transfer $700 of University of British Columbia student fees to the Canadian Boat to Gaza was approved Dec. 1.

The motion passed at a meeting of the Alma Mater Society (AMS), the UBC student government, by a 26-10 vote.

The result means the AMS must unfreeze the accounts of UBC's Social Justice Centre (SJC), one of the AMS' constituent groups, and allow the centre to send funds to the Gaza mission, which is slated to leave next spring to try to break Israel's blockade of the coastal strip.

The AMS receives a percentage of student fees each year and distributes them to various student organizations, including the SJC and UBC's local Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights (SPHR) student group, whose members are also active in the SJC and effectively control it.

The AMS recently faced pressure from anti-Israel groups across North America after SPHR issued a statement demanding that the AMS approve the use of student fees to help fund the Canadian Gaza flotilla.

The SJC receives $10,000 a year from the AMS and is supposed to be a safe place for all students, said Eyal Lichtmann, executive director of the Vancouver Hillel Foundation.

"The SPHR has taken control of the SJC and has ['Israeli] apartheid' posters up on the office walls," he said. "When our students asked them to remove those posters they refused and plastered the entire student union building with the same poster, as a provocation."

UBC's administration tried to mediate between SPHR, Hillel and the AMS to resolve the situation, but SPHR was "belligerent and unco-operative," Lichtmann said.

At the SJC's annual general meeting this fall, Jewish students showed up in large numbers to contest the centre's elections. Their goal, Lichtmann said, was to elect a new slate and pass resolutions to reverse the funding of the Gaza mission and the SJC's support of a recent talk in Vancouver by former British MP George Galloway, a vocal critic of Israel.

But SPHR members unilaterally cancelled the meeting and the elections. "Then [SPHR] continued operating the SJC as if nothing had happened, expecting that the $700 funding for the flotilla would still be supplied by the AMS," Lichtmann said.

But cancelling the meeting and elections violated AMS rules and procedures, he said. As a result, the AMS froze SJC's financial accounts and scheduled the Dec. 1 council meeting to discuss the matter.

"Our policy is to put a hold on things while investigations are conducted and ask student groups to remedy the situation before we release the funds," AMS president Bijan Ahmadian told The CJN before the meeting.

Rael Katz, president of UBC's Israel Awareness Club, was disappointed by the outcome of the AMS vote last week.

"There was a motion put forward… [to allow the] transfer to go ahead as planned on the condition that SPHR donates the money to a [Canadian International Development Agency]-recognized NGO that's on the ground in Gaza, and that was also voted down," Katz said.

"They voted in favour of the political means rather than the humanitarian means. When you can guarantee that aid will arrive on the ground rather than the chance that it might not… they still chose the more political, more dangerous, more possibly violent means," he added.

By allowing money to go to the flotilla, Katz said, the AMS could be criminally liable. "The AMS did seek a lot of legal advice on this matter. One thing that the legal advice said is if by any chance the Canadian Boat to Gaza or the Alternatives foundation, the charity they're working with, are found to have any ties with a terrorist organization, the AMS could be found liable after the fact under the Criminal Code of Canada."

The AMS has frozen the accounts of some 20 student groups this year for violating its rules and procedures. The groups' accounts were unfrozen as soon as the relevant issues were resolved.

Lichtmann said that Ahmadian was "a very brave individual" to take "a moral stand on due process in this issue. He [was] insisting that the SJC have new elections and that its accounts should be frozen until that happens."

At Galloway's talk in Vancouver on Nov. 22, SPHR had asked attendees to contact Ahmadian and denounce his actions. As a result, he and the AMS were flooded with negative e-mails from across Canada, Lichtmann said.

In response, Hillel began collecting signatures on a petition against allocating student fees via the SJC to the Canadian boat to Gaza. "This is a numbers game – our students need large numbers of signed petitions which will be sent to the student government to show that this is not a popular undertaking and discredits and tarnishes the reputation of UBC," the petition stated.

The petition had nearly 1,000 signatures by Dec. 1, Katz said.

Lichtmann said Hillel's lawyers are investigating whether the AMS can legally use student fees to fund the non-registered charitable group that's organizing the flotilla.

"The SJC is an autonomous body, and I believe precedent dictates it has the right to provide $700 in funding to SPHR for this purpose," he said. "I hope I am wrong, because our personal belief is that this is deplorable."

Efforts to reach representatives from SPHR and the SJC for comment on this story were unsuccessful.

With files from Laura Stricker

MENORAH MAKERS

Hillel recently hosted menorah-building competitions at Ryerson University, York University and University of Toronto in which students had one hour to build a menorah out of Mega Bloks. Pictured, from left, with their creation are the competition winners from Ryerson, Joel Silver, Eli Vandersluis, Adam Piet and Alan Hudes.

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

International

Israel & the Jewish World

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

WikiLeaks exposed the true Mideast conflict

By ARI SHAVIT
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

Opinion

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange is a dangerous man. He is not merely a delusory anarchist humiliating the greatest power on earth. He is not merely an uninhibited megalomaniac disrupting modern diplomacy and undermining the world order. Assange is a dangerous criminal because he has shattered the accepted dogma on the understanding in the Middle East in the 21st century.

This dogma states the following: the main problem in the Middle East is the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The main problem in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is the occupation. The main problem in the occupation is the settlements. Therefore, if we just stop the settlements, the occupation will begin to end, the Israeli-Palestinian conflict will be solved and the Middle East will be stable.

In the last decade, this dogma became fixed and was sanctified. It became a kind of core belief that cannot be questioned. This was the truth they swore to in the White House, the Elysée Palace and 10 Downing Street. This was the truth they reported in the Washington Post, Le Monde and the Guardian. This was the truth that incorporated the supreme moral gravity that formed the worldview of enlightened elites in the West and directed the policies of the western powers.

Then along came Assange and shattered the dogma. The secret government documents that WikiLeaks published recently proved that the settlements, the occupation and even the Israeli-Palestinian conflict are not the main problem in the Middle East. The confidential e-mails proved that the world they were talking about in Washington, Paris and London was an imaginary world. Assange proved that there is no connection between the real Middle East and the Middle East they talk about in the Washington Post, Le Monde and the Guardian. He revealed that the entire Arab world is currently busy with one problem only – Iran, Iran, Iran.

There is no doubt about it – Assange is dangerous. But he is dangerous not because he penetrated the Pentagon's information systems, but because he revealed the western intelligentsia's lack of intellectual integrity. Assange is dangerous not because he leaked state secrets on an unprecedented scale, but because he revealed to us all that the West's hegemonic discourse is superficial and mendacious. Assange is dangerous not because he embarrassed the West's allies but because he proved that the West is contaminated by political correctness that cuts it off from the diplomatic reality. Assange placed a giant mirror in front of us all and proved the extent to which we had been duped in recent decades. A false dogma has prevented us from looking logically at the historic challenge facing us.

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad

But let's not confuse things. The settlements are indeed a disaster. The occupation is intolerable. The Israeli-Palestinian conflict is dangerous. But now that Assange has opened our eyes, we must no longer shut them. The confidential e-mails must be read and reread so they can be understood. There is no chance for the current diplomatic process, they say. There is no chance of signing an Israeli-Palestinian agreement as long as Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas is living under the menacing shadow of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. There is no chance of regional peace as long as the Arab world is living under Tehran's incessant threat.

After all, just as the Egyptian president, the Saudi king and the Gulf emirs whisper, Iran is the heart of the problem. Iran is the source of the poison and the source of the consternation. As long as Iran is growing stronger, is seeking nuclear weapons and is terrorizing the Middle East, there is no chance for peace.

The lesson is a bitter one. If Iran develops nuclear weapons, peace will disappear. A nuclear Iran will deal a final blow to the chance of achieving a compromise between Israelis and Arabs. Therefore the dove of peace has to be extremely hawkish toward Iran. The peace-seeker must deal with Iran.

The opposite is also true. Anyone who wants to appease Ahmadinejad is betraying peace. Anyone who takes a lenient view of the ayatollahs is abandoning Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Abbas. A moratorium on the settlements will help in the struggle against the centrifuges. But the strategic order of things is utterly clear – Iran first.

Brazil recognizes Palestinian state

JTA

JERUSALEM — Brazil has recognized a Palestinian state within the 1967 borders, President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva announced in a public letter.

The letter addressed to Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas, which was made public last Friday, recognizes what it calls the "legitimate aspiration of the Palestinian people for a secure, united, democratic and economically viable state coexisting peacefully with Israel."

Abbas had made the request to Lula last month to recognize a Palestinian state, Bloomberg News reported. Lula, who is stepping down next month as president after eight years in office, made his first visit to Israel and the Palestinian territories in March.

Israel's Foreign Ministry said in a statement that it was disappointed by the Brazilian declaration.

"Recognition of a Palestinian state is a breach of the interim agreement which was signed between Israel and the Palestinian Authority in 1995, which said that the issue of the status of the West Bank and Gaza Strip would be discussed and resolved through negotiations," the statement said.

"Every attempt to bypass this process and to decide in advance in a unilateral manner about important issues which are disputed only harms trust between the sides and hurts their commitment to the agreed framework of negotiating towards peace."

Representative Ileana Ros-Lehtinen (R-Fla.), the incoming chairwoman of the U.S. House of Representatives' foreign affairs committee, also expressed her objections, as did Representative Eliot Engel (D-N.Y.), the outgoing chairman of the Latin America subcommittee.

"Brazil's decision to recognize a Palestinian state is regrettable and will only serve to undermine peace and security in the Middle East," Ros-Lehtinen said in a statement.

Engel blamed the decision on the leftward tilt of Brazil's outgoing government.

"Brazil's decision to recognize Palestine is severely misguided and represents a last gasp by a Lula-led foreign policy, which was already substantially off track," Engel said in a statement. "One can only hope that the new leadership coming into Brazil will change course and understand that this is not the way to gain favour as an emerging power or to become a permanent member of the United Nations Security Council."

www.tanenbaumchat.org

Jewish Studies – Posts Commencing September 2011

TanenbaumCHAT has over 1450 students on two parallel campuses, and more than sixty full-time Jewish Studies faculty, with a strong academic tradition. High School teaching is a major growth area. TanenbaumCHAT is a major centre of excellence

Teach High School Jewish Studies | TanenbaumCHAT – The Anne & Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto – offers tenure-track, well-paid posts teaching Senior High School (Grades 9-12) in one of North America's premier, expanding Jewish communities. Toronto has excellent Day Schools at all levels and reflecting all philosophies. You should have excellent Ivrit, and recognized teaching qualifications, experience in a High School, and be able to offer one or more of Ivrit (Language & Literature), Tanakh, Jewish History, Rabbinics, Talmud, Ethics & Philosophy

Director of Ivrit | TanenbaumCHAT has a vacancy for a Director of Ivrit. Candidates must have qualifications and experience in second-language acquisition, and should preferably be familiar with ACTFL protocols

THE ANNE & MAX TANENBAUM CHAT 50th Jubilee
Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto | האקדמיה העברית ע"ש טננבאום

CV'S/ FIND OUT MORE:
Paul Shaviv, Director of Education
T: 416-636-5984 x 260
F: 416-636-5755 : E: pshaviv@tanenbaumchat.org
Best if applications for September reach us by previous February.
Candidates must have appropriate qualifications.

UJA Federation

Rehabilitation of forest has started

Continued from page 1

Amir Gissin, Israeli consul general for Toronto and Western Canada, expressed his office's appreciation to Canadians for their support in his country's time of need.

"We have received word that the rehabilitation of the forests is starting to take place, although the recovery will take some time, with great effort and resources. We also appreciate the hard work of the Jewish organizations who are channelling efforts and support," Gissin said.

The Israeli Foreign Ministry has recommended that Diaspora Jews who wish to make a donation to help should do so through their local JNF offices, as that organization will lead the restoration effort.

But Gissin noted that donations from all organizations "are welcomed."

Joe Rabinovitch, executive vice-president of JNF Canada, told The CJN that all initial donations had been routed toward extinguishing the fire, with the money being used to purchase much-needed fire retardants and equipment for beleaguered JNF and Israeli firefighters on scene.

He added that 100 per cent of donations to JNF Canada were being rerouted to Israel.

"We're not factoring in any overhead costs at all," he said. "Over two million trees have been destroyed, from what I've heard."

Once the fire is completely extinguished, JNF will begin assessing the damage, and trees will be strategically replanted shortly afterward, Rabinovitch said.

Of the 42 people killed by the fire, most were young Israeli prison guard cadets who became trapped on a bus when a burnt tree fell across the roadway while they were on their way to rescue inmates from nearby Damon jail during the onset of the fire.

In a statement last week, Canadian Liberal multiculturalism critic Rob Oliphant offered condolences to the cadets' families.

"The courageous actions of these young Israelis, risking their own lives to save the inmates they were tasked to guard, are a tribute to their dedication and compassion, and indeed a tribute to the State of Israel itself," Oliphant said.

Robert H. Serry, the UN special co-ordinator for the Middle East peace process, issued a statement last Friday expressing the UN's sadness over the tragic events in Israel.

"This is a terrible tragedy. I convey my deepest sympathy to the bereaved families and have extended my condolences to the government of Israel. The United Nations is actively engaged in assisting to mobilize support from member states, some of which have already deployed assets to help those currently fighting the fires," Serry said.

Early Sunday at an emergency cabinet meeting, Netanyahu ordered a halt to the arrival of new foreign firefighting aircraft after apparently accepting an Israeli Air Force recommendation that the existing firefighting force was providing the best response to the bushfire.

Netanyahu said the government will launch a program to rehabilitate the areas in the Carmel region that were badly damaged. "This is a special type of battle. Unlike ordinary fires, it requires measures different than those usually employed," Netanyahu said.

The cabinet also announced it would provide NIS $140 million ($40 million Cdn) in emergency aid to those affected by the fire. "We must speed up the payment of the compensation. I don't want delays or bureaucracy," Netanyahu said.

Israeli police arrested two teenage brothers from the Druze village of Ussfiya on suspicion of negligence in starting the fire, and they were put under house arrest on Monday.

They are accused of lighting a bonfire near their home, which is said to have sparked the fire.

* * *

In related news, in Israel on Monday, thousands of mourners attended the funeral of Haifa Police Chief Ahuva Tomer, the highest-ranking female officer in the Israeli police force, who died earlier in the day after succumbing to critical injuries sustained in the fire.

Tomer, who headed the Haifa Police Department, was critically injured on Thursday driving behind the bus full of prison guards that burned up in the flames.

Tomer was one of the best-known and highest-ranking officers in the northern region. She made history in 1997 when she was appointed police commander in Nahariya, and again in 2009, when she was appointed commander of the Haifa station, the largest in Israel.

With files from Frances Kraft and Ha'aretz.

Jews for Judaism's Board of Directors, Staff and Executive Volunteers - Jerry and Sandra Genesove extend their sincere condolences to the family and friends of

Jo Lavitch ז"ל

Josephine / Yente bat Yechiel Feivish v'Leah

on the loss of their beloved mother, mother-in-law, grandmother, sister and good friend.

She was an appreciated volunteer for the Jewish community.

המקום ינחם אתכם בתוך שאר אבלי ציון וירושלים

Jews for Judaism. KEEPING JEWS JEWISH

Show Israel You Care!

Volunteer as a Civilian worker for 2 or 3 weeks on an Israeli army supply base

SAR-EL CANADA

Free: accommodations, kosher meals, trips and events. Cost: flight, $100 registration fee, weekend expenses.

416-781-6089 or toronto@sarelcanada.org

514-735-0272 or montreal@sarelcanada.org

www.sarelcanada.org

Programs start approximately every 3 weeks.

Hansen, Hebrew U join for spinal cord research

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Rick Hansen, the "Man in Motion," was in Israel last week as part of a Middle East tour to announce a collaboration between his Rick Hansen Institute and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem to increase research on spinal cord injuries.

He also visited with researchers in Jordan.

Speaking at a Chanukah candlelighting ceremony in Jerusalem at Hebrew U's Institute for Medical Research Israel Canada (IMRIC) last Thursday, Hansen said he had hope that more international collaboration on research in this area would help improve the lives of people affected by spinal cord injuries and eventually produce a cure.

"When I first began the Man In Motion World Tour 25 years ago, we set out to achieve two goals: find a cure for spinal cord injury and make the world more accessible and inclusive," Hansen said.

"This trip in Israel, and the initial stop in Jordan earlier this week, marks an important milestone for our 25th Anniversary: the opportunity to advance collaborative partnerships with the Rick Hansen Spinal Cord Registry and to recognize the achievements of those who are making a difference in the areas of finding a cure for spinal cord injuries and creating accessible communities."

Rick Hansen takes part in the lighting of a chanukiyah at a reception hosted by Hebrew University last week.
[Rick Hansen Institute photo]

Last week, Hansen's institute and Hebrew U signed a memorandum of understanding to create an international registry to collect and analyze valuable data on spinal cord injuries and clinical treatments.

After the signing, Hansen paid a visit to a Canadian landmark in Israel, the Terry Fox Memorial, located in the centre of Jerusalem at Liberty Bell Park. It was nearly 25 years to the day of his original visit to the memorial for his close friend Fox.

While in Israel, Hansen also presented two Rick Hansen Difference Maker Awards, one to Dr. Aharon Lev Tov, chairman of Medical Neurobiology at IMRIC, and one to Yuval Wagner, chairman and founder of Access Israel, a non-profit organization that seeks to help Israel become more accessible for citizens with "an array of disabilities."

Hansen's tour of Israel was scheduled to conclude Dec. 7 after a meeting with Israeli President Shimon Peres.

בס"ד

High School Vice Principal
Hebrew Academy of Montreal

Hebrew Academy of Montreal, a Modern Orthodox, Torah U'Mesorah, Trilingual Day School, is seeking a dynamic educator to assume the role of High School Vice Principal (VP) beginning the 2011-2012 school year.

Applicants should have Semicha in addition to an academic degree in administration or education, and several successful years of teaching experience at a Day School or Yeshiva High School.

Send curriculum vitae to:
adele.sidel@ha-mtl.org

German president visits Schalit family

JTA

BERLIN — German President Christian Wulff's unprecedented visit to the family of captured Israeli soldier Gilad Schalit sends an important signal to the International Red Cross, Jewish activists in Germany said.

Peter Diedrich, head of the German branch of the International Association of Jewish Lawyers and Jurists, said he hoped Wulff's visit last week in Jerusalem would boost his group's efforts to press for the soldier's release. The organization has a rally calling for Schalit's release from captivity in Gaza planned for Dec. 10 outside the offices of the German Red Cross.

The rally, to mark the 62nd anniversary of the passage of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, is part of an international effort co-ordinated by the Israel-based parent association of Jewish lawyers and jurists to draw attention to the case of Schalit, who was captured by Hamas in a cross-border raid from Gaza in June 2006.

Schalit has not been permitted to receive any Red Cross visits in contravention of the international body's mandate to "visit prisoners of war and civilian internees to verify whether they are being treated according to relevant international standards."

During his Nov. 29 meeting with the soldier's family, Wulff pressed for a Red Cross visit to the soldier and for his release. The German president's visit included meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, President Shimon Peres and Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman.

Wulff is the first head of a state to visit the family and address the issue of the Red Cross, Diedrich told JTA in a telephone interview from his Berlin office. The presidential visit underscored that this "is just a human rights issue, and everyone has not only the right but also the duty to go for it."

The Dec. 10 rally in Berlin is supported by several Jewish organizations in Germany.

Israel Briefs

PA removes Western Wall report

The Palestinian Authority reportedly removed from its website a paper that denies any Jewish connection to the Western Wall. The report was not on the PA's official website on Dec. 1, the Associated Press reported. Its author, Al-Mutawakil Taha, a civil servant in the Information Ministry, told the AP that he stands by his report, which says the Western Wall was never a part of the Temple Mount complex. "This wall was never part of the so-called Temple Mount, but Muslim tolerance allowed the Jews to stand in front of it and weep over its destruction," he wrote. Earlier in the week, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu denounced the claim. Condemnation of the Palestinian position also came from Washington. "Regarding a claim by a senior Palestinian official of the Western Wall is an Islamic Waqf, we strongly condemn these comments and fully reject them as factually incorrect, insensitive and highly provocative," State Department spokesperson P.J. Crowley said on Nov. 30. "We have repeatedly raised with the Palestinian Authority leadership the need to consistently combat all forms of de-legitimization of Israel, including denying historic Jewish connections to the land."

New Jerusalem neighbourhood

A Jerusalem municipal committee approved the establishment of a new neighbourhood in eastern Jerusalem. The Jerusalem District Planning and Construction Committee approved 625 housing units in Pisgat Ze'ev. The new neighbourhood reportedly will be called North Pisgat Ze'ev. The Obama administration strongly opposed the announcement, according to news reports. Palestinian Authority chief negotiator Saeb Erekat said that the approval showed that Israel had chosen "settlements and not peace." The Palestinians have said they will not return to peace negotiations with Israel unless Israel halts building in all West Bank settlements and eastern Jerusalem.

Conversions again in doubt

Israel's Chief Sephardi Rabbi Shlomo Amar said he will no longer be responsible for any state conversions if the Knesset passes a bill requiring the recognition of all military conversions. In a letter sent to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Rabbi Amar called on the prime minister to prevent the bill from passing. Rabbi Amar has created a committee to look into legal and halachic issues surrounding the military conversions. He asked Netanyahu to allow the committee to conclude its work before allowing the legislation to go forward. "This is to inform you that if this bill passes, I won't be able to take care of all matters of conversion, and will no longer bear the responsibility for them," Rabbi Amar said. The Shas Party also called on Netanyahu to quash the bill, telling him that it is a breach of coalition agreements with Shas. The bill to protect Israeli soldiers who have converted to Judaism through military conversion courts from having their conversions annulled was approved on Nov. 28 by the Knesset's ministerial committee on legislative affairs. It would force all state agencies, including rabbinic courts, the chief rabbis of cities and other Orthodox marriage registrars to accept the converts as Jews.

ANYWHERE ELSE THIS WOULD JUST BE A NIGHT AT THE OPERA
BUT THIS IS MASADA Israel's famed mountain fortress may be the only venue for world-class opera with a history that rivals the drama onstage.
It stands high above the breathtaking Dead Sea, where renowned spas and stunning landscapes abound. Come experience where the drama, history and culture that makes us who we are still lives.
There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca
Text GOISRAEL to 51413 now for Best Deals

Consider fostering as route to adoption: JF&CS

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Benita Friedlander of Jewish Family & Child urges prospective parents to look outside the box when it comes to adoption.

The agency has a number of children who are in its fostering program, she said, and although the agency's aim is to return them, when possible, to their parents, they do want some permanency for them.

"We don't like to see kids [in long-term] care going from foster family to foster family. There is always the chance that the birth family will regain control and parent again, but sometimes we seek adoptive parents for these kids. A long-term foster family is a good choice," said Friedlander, who is JF&CS' adoption co-ordinator.

"We desperately need foster families, and sometimes the option of adoption becomes available."

Those considering adoption have to be approved, she said, which includes a home study and 27 hours of mandatory training. "Once they're approved, they join the agency's list, and wait for a match.

"The more [open-minded the prospective] parents are, the better the chance is for a match. That is where long-term fostering comes in."

John and Lisa (not their real names) have been fostering a three-year-old boy since July who they're "pretty sure" will be up for adoption.

"We were on the list for adoption, and then this opportunity came up. We were [given the opportunity] to foster the child and were told it was probably long term. There was a small chance that he would not stay, but we were willing to take the chance," says Lisa, who stays at home to care for the boy.

They took this route because they didn't want to go through fertility treatments. "We had full intentions of adopting a child, and then he became available. We try not to think about the adoption until it actually happens," she said.

It has totally changed their lives, said John. "It's his house now. Most people have nine months to prepare for a baby. We had two hours. We came and met him, and took him home. We wouldn't change it for anything."

Another couple with two adopted children say they picked up one of their sons at his bris.

"He was with a foster family at the time, and the foster father held the baby at the bris. The baby was then passed from the foster father to the adoptive parents. It was very moving. There wasn't a dry eye in the place," the adoptive mother said.

She said they're still involved with the foster family. "Foster parents and adoptive parents need to work together for the transition period, because babies get attached to the foster families."

Friedlander said JF&CS runs an adoption support program for people who have recently adopted a child. "Adoption is a kind of invisible minority. It's not really spoken about."

Both the children who are adopted and their adoptive parents have suffered a loss, said Friedlander. "Kids going through foster homes experience loss when they're moved from their birth family and then from their foster family.

"The birth parents also suffer loss, because by and large, they couldn't conceive. They feel a loss when they realize they can't have children. Families in the support group are facing the same issues. They often forge a connection, especially families with kids of the same age," she said.

Adopted kids shouldn't feel ashamed, and they shouldn't feel proud, Friedlander said. "It's just life, and some lives are different from others."

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

L'Chaim
CANCER SUPPORT FOR JEWISH WOMEN
Cancer?
We've "been there".
We are Jewish women cancer survivors who can "be there" for you during your cancer journey.
We provide confidential peer support to Jewish women undergoing cancer treatment.
Hotline: 416-630-0203
National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto Section

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !
ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER
Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida
You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.
We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.
Call now for reservations
(954) 802 - 8100

RESEARCH SUPPORT

The newly appointed president of the Israel Cancer Research Fund (ICRF), Bryna Goldberg, and her husband, Howard Harris, have pledged $350,000 over a seven-year period to fund Dr. Yosef Yarden's biological regulation department at the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel. Yarden is conducting research on growth factors that contribute to tumour progression. His extensive research on the structure and function of growth factor receptors has led to their recognition as targets for cancer therapy, and over the last decade, several anti-cancer drugs have been developed based on this knowledge.

SUPPORT SICK KIDS: Nine-year old Zachary Winkler held his fourth annual "Do Something Sweet" fundraiser, Nov. 7, in support of the Hospital for Sick Children. More than 250 people turned out to take part in inflatable games donated by Hart Entertainment; balloon animals; face painting, and a silent auction. Items included a Toronto Maple Leafs signed hockey stick; theatre tickets from Mirvish Productions; and a Toronto Blue Jays signed baseball. Zachary also had an online campaign authorized by the hospital . Zachary surpassed last year with a total of $5,222.77. Pictured is Zachary and his sister Maya.They are handing over the cheque to Lonnie Griffin from the Sick Kids Foundation.

Business

Israeli exploration company listed on TSX

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

When Alan Friedman makes his pitch on behalf of Adira Energy, he likes to recount a story that was told by Golda Meir, but with a 21st-century twist.

Meir used to say that in ancient times, Moses "took us 40 years through the desert in order to bring us to the one spot in the Middle East that has no oil," Friedman says.

The story, of course, reflected the late prime minister's frustration that Israel had no bounteous natural resources to exploit, unlike many of its neighbours.

It turns out, that story is so 20th century. In fact, Friedman explains, one of the world's largest discoveries of natural gas, measured in trillions of cubic feet, has been found in Israel's front yard. And Adira is well situated to exploit it.

Last week, Adira Energy became the first Israeli resource company to be listed on the TSX Venture Exchange (TSXV). It had also been listed on the OTCBB, a listing service for penny stocks.

The TSX listing gives the company the opportunity to entice investment funds whose internal governance requires a listing on a prominent exchange, with all the regulatory and capital requirement they entail. "Now we're getting to the bigger exchange and can attract bigger investors," he said.

"We are excited to bring the first Israeli venture to the Toronto Stock Exchange," said Friedman, co-founder and executive vice-president of Adira Energy (TSXV-ADL). "The TSX is host to over 35 per cent of all oil and gas companies listed globally and more than $60 billion [Cdn] has been raised for the sector since 2002."

"Adira's listing on TSX is positive evidence of the growing trade and investment ties between Canada and Israel, and the mutual benefits for the people of both countries," said Dennis Bennie, co-founder and chair of Adira.

"Adira will gain wisdom from Canada's tremendous expertise in natural resource exploration. But we are especially proud to be making history, and paving the way for even greater opportunities for both Canadians and Israelis into the future," he added.

Friedman said Adira's listing on the TSX provides an opportunity for the company to attract major-league investors with expertise in the oil and gas sector. Apparently, there is already some interest in the firm. The company recently raised $11 million US to qualify for TSX listing – it needed to raise only $5 million and in the end turned away potential investors – and on its first day of trading last Thursday, it closed at 55 cents Cdn on a volume of 59,500 shares. It raised the $11 million by offering 27.5 million units at 40 cents US. Last week the currencies were almost at par.

According to research by Jennings Capital, which sponsored Adira's financing, "The company holds three offshore exploration licences: the Gabriella, Yitzhak and Samuel licences, and two onshore licenses, the Eitan and Notera licences."

"Adira's offshore Israeli blocks hold significant potential, as the offshore areas have seen significant success of late, such as Noble Energy's Dalit, Mari and Tamar discoveries that hold 1.0 trillion cubic feet (tcf), 2.0 tcf and 8.4 tcf of reserves respectively.

"Tamar was the largest natural gas discovery in the world in 2009. Initial expectations target first production from Tamar by the end of 2012."

Friedman said Adira's licences run north from Gaza for 60 kilometres to the area around Netanya and are a few kilometres offshore in fairly shallow water. Funds that have been raised will go toward exploration and evaluation of seismic tests to determine the extent of the gas reserves below the surface.

Alan Friedman, left, and Dennis Bennie are co-founders, along with Ilan Diamond, of Adira Energy.

Once the extent of the reserves are determined, the company will have to raise further sums, since it costs $30 to $150 million to drill a single well, Friedman said.

Friedman, who has been in the "oil and gas space a long time," said some prestigious investors have already sunk their money into Adira, including BRM Group, an Israeli investment company led by Eli Barkat; Lapidoth Israel Oil Prospectors, Israel's only oil and gas drilling company, and the Halman Aldubi Group, a leading financial services company in Israel.

Prospectors strike oil in the Holy Land

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — An Israeli oil prospecting and production firm announced it has struck a commercial amount of the black substance in central Israel, Army Radio reported recently.

Givot Olam Oil Ltd notified the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange of the find in its "Megev Five" drill near the town of Rosh Ha'ayin, saying it can produce 470 barrels of oil a day.

The Industry, Trade and Labor Ministry said in response that the ministry's head of oil affairs had not yet received the relevant test results, thus preventing it from declaring a commercial amount of oil.

The prospected find comes in the wake of an unprecedented amount of natural resources being discovered in Israel in recent months.

Last month, the U.S. firm Noble Energy, which together with its Israeli partners has been carrying out exploratory drilling at three sites off the Haifa coast, raised its reserve estimate at the Tamar field by 15 per cent, to 238 billion cubic metres.

The firm also announced it would start natural gas exploration at the Leviathan offshore prospect off Israel's coast in the fourth quarter of this year. The latter announcement came in the wake of estimates of 16 trillion cubic feet of natural gas in the prospect.

Givot Olam Oil discovered the Meged oil field, which it touts as potentially the largest oil field in Israel, about 20 kilometres northeast of Tel Aviv.

KPMG
cutting through complexity
Camp to get a clear overview of the markets and gain an understanding of financial reporting, tax, legal, and corporate governance requirements. Learn first-hand from a C-level executive who has lived the IPO kpmg.ca

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CARICATURIST
Mark Gable, Caricature Artist

CATERERS
Caterteam Inc.
Dining Detail
Jewish Food Specialties & Catering
Mimis Parties to Please & Event Makers
Shagrir

CONSULTANTS
Allegro Artists Event
Hello Showbiz
Kool Party Organizing & Advice
Magical Entertainment
Party Sitz
Toronto Family Shop & Party Coordinator
Up & Coming Events

DECOR
David's Fine Linens

ENTERTAINMENT
Bounce Entertainment
Magen Boys Entertainment Ltd.
Mini Events
Mitchell Maria
Pleasantview

EVENT PLANNERS
Lea Mayer
Mimis Party Event Consulting
A Whisper Plan

FASHION
Bedmar
Flowing Soul
Delphi
St. Hedwige Label Fashion

FLORISTS
Petal Garden Florist

GIFTS
Blue Water Jewellery
Mark Tauber
Mark Wallace

HENNA
Little Miss Henna

INVITATIONS
Invitation Divas
Stationery Plus/Gilda Lefton

KETUBOT
Esther Jem

KIDS PARTY PLACES
Athletic Eye Activity Programs

MUSIC
Benchmark Music Entertainment
Hip Hop Kids
Joe Kay Band
Lenny Solomon Holograph Band, The Mike Peedman Band, The Party Hearts Rolling Stones Tribute
SheMoreTime

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP
Dynamite Party and Novelty Supplies
Incredible Novelties Inc.

PARTY FAVOURS
Chocolate Moose
Jinja Ninja Custom Cookies
MarChef Inc.
Regina's Fine Foods
Summer Fresh Salads Inc.

VIDEOS
Abi Productions
Pershine Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Affair
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoParty Guide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Agincourt Synagogue
Avian Lounge
The Avenue
Baycrest Hospitality Services
Bayview Golf and Country Club
Bellvue Manor
Beth David Synagogue Senior Residence
Bialik
Chabad
Ritz
Toni Bulloni
Yamato
Warehouse Event Venue, The

PLANNING A PARTY?
Want A Little Help?

The CJN Party Planner Online Directory will give you easy access to all our Party Advertisers' websites.

Go to WWW.CJNEWS.COM,
click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Sensation!

To Advertise in the next CJN Party Planner call 416-391-1836

Arts & Travel

INFAMOUS LEO FRANK CASE IS THE FOCUS OF PARADE

Acting Up Stage Company and Studio 180 Theatre present Parade, the musical by Alfred Uhry (book) and Jason Robert Brown (music) about the infamous Leo Frank case. The director is Joel Greenberg.

Parade had its world première in New York in 1998 and won a Tony and other awards. It has since been staged in London and Los Angeles, but not in Toronto until this month.

The story recounts the experiences of Leo Frank, a Jewish factory manager in Atlanta in 1913 who is wrongly charged with a rape and murder. Considered one of the most sensational trials of the early 20th century, the Frank case pressed every hot-button issue of the time: North versus South, black versus white, Jewish versus Christian, industrial versus agrarian.

Uhry is also the playwright of Driving Miss Daisy.

Parade features a cast of 15 and runs at the Berkeley Street Theatre Upstairs, Dec. 30 to Jan. 22, 2011. Tickets are $32 to $40. 416-368-3110. www.paradethemusical.com

* * *

Film & TV

• Toronto Jewish Film Festival presents Jaffa, a Romeo and Juliet-type romance, Middle-Eastern style. A 2009 Israeli, German and French production directed by Keren Yedaya, the film is in Hebrew and Arabic with English subtitles. Chai Tea and A Movie, Cineplex Odeon Sheppard at Yonge St. $15. Sunday, Dec. 12, tea 4 p.m., film at 5. 416-599-8433, www.tjff.com.

• The Polish-Jewish Heritage Foundation of Canada and the Young Polish Canadian Professionals Association present the Toronto première of In the Name of Their Mothers, a new documentary film about the life and heroic deeds of Irena Sendler. Congregation Habonim, 5 Glen Park Ave. Limited seating, come early. Sunday, Dec. 12, 8 p.m.

• Ramzor, an Israeli television sitcom about three friends and their romantic relationships, won the International Emmy Award for best comedy. The show was selected as a finalist by a panel of 700 judges from 50 countries and beat entries from Thailand, Mexico and Britain. An American version of the show, called Mixed Signals, is due to start airing on the Fox network in February.

* * *

Music & Live Theatre

• Active Seniors presents a Chanukah Musical Celebration with recording artist Aviva Chernick who will sing in Hebrew, Yiddish, Ladino and English. Seasonal refreshments. Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, Thursday, Dec. 9, 1:30 p.m. RSVP, 416-924-6211, ext. 155.

• Studio 5030 presents Sharron's Holiday Party with Sharron Matthews ("Canada's own Bette Midler") and the baritone trio Bravura. $25. Toronto Centre for the Arts, Studio Theatre, Thursday, Dec. 16, doors open 7 p.m., show starts at 8. www.studio-5040cabarets.com

• Bowfire, a band featuring Lenny Solomon, performs Holiday Heart Strings, a CD release concert. $39.50 to $69.50. Roy Thomson Hall, Dec. 17, 8 p.m. www.bowfire.com

• David Mirvish presents A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, the Stratford Festival's musical production written by Burt Shevelove and Larry Gelbart, with music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, and originally produced on Broadway by Harold Prince. $40 to $120. Canon Theatre, Dec. 15 to Jan. 16. 416-872-1212, www.mirvish.com

• Puppetmongers presents Tea at the Palace, a retelling of two Russian folk tales for adults and children. $13 to $18. Tarragon Theatre Extra Space, Dec. 18 to Jan. 1. 416-531-1827. www.puppetmongers.com

Arts in Brief

• Yehoshue Perle, Ruth Almog, Clive Sinclair, Nessa Rapoport, Alan Kaufman, Gail Hareven and other authors are featured in the second issue of jewishfiction.net, the online magazine of Jewish fiction edited by Nora Gold.

• Polar Visions, photographs by Mark Loren Freedman, is on view in the Jacobs Lounge, Miles Nadal JCC, until Dec. 31.

Ronit Elkabetz and Moni Moshonov star in the Israeli movie Jaffa

Soprano picks up where she left off, 30 years later

By JORDANA DIVON
Special to The CJN

There's a good chance any woman under 40 who hears Renee Barda's story will react with some measure of anger. Or at the very least, a strong opinion.

But first picture the era in which stories like Barda's regularly occurred. It's the early 1970s. A naïve, sheltered, but gifted young soprano from Toronto has just stepped onto the Heathrow Airport tarmac sporting two bags and a Canada Council grant.

She's only 23, and her life to this point has been nothing but a series of triumphs. The eldest daughter of doting parents, they encouraged her talent from the outset.

"My parents would buy me a record every Sunday of a famous opera star, and put it on while I had my breakfast," Barda, who is performing at the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre in Toronto on Dec.11, recalls, sitting in her sunny Willowdale kitchen.

"I started piano lessons when I was six, and would play concerts every week for my aunts and uncles. Then they realized I had a voice, and the voice took over."

That voice landed the teenager at the University of Toronto's faculty of music, where she studied opera. The title role in a summer Stratford production of Rossini's La Cenerentola followed.

"The performances were absolutely magnificent," she says. "I worked like a dog and the reviews were great. And after that, I felt like a really big star."

Her professors agreed. Barda graduated with the Eaton Award, and a referral to study in England with the Hungarian vocal coach, Vera Rozsa. With her scholarship in tow, the young singer arrived, alone, in the British capital.

"Until that point, I wasn't sent to camp, or even allowed to mix outside of the house. It was a different generation," she says of her inexperience in those early London days.

So while her vocal technique flourished, the singer sought the familiarity of her sheltered Jewish upbringing. And at a Friday night gathering at Hillel House, she met Dino Barda, the charming, sophisticated and much older man who would become her husband.

"There wasn't a long courtship. He was many years older and he was just ready to get married," she says. "He came from an aristocratic Jewish Italian background. I had never met anyone like that. He knew all the little particulars about table manners, how to dress, how to handle yourself. I was very taken with this."

Around the same time Dino Barda proposed, the singer received the opportunity of her life: an audition at London's Covent Garden.

"They all said I had a great voice – very gifted, an unusual quality," she says matter-of-factly. "For the big time people, it's not just the technique, but what they call golden voices of a certain quality. Pavarotti had it, for example. They told me I had that, too."

The night before the Covent Garden tryout, Dino called and asked to take her for a drive. "I said I didn't want to be out late because my audition was in the morning, but he told me it wouldn't take long."

It didn't. Dino's message was simple: it's either me or your career.

"He said, 'I just spoke to my father in Rome and we decided you can't really raise a family if you're going to be trotting all over the world,'" Barda recalls. "He said, 'If you don't go, call me. But you have to be sure what you tell me is true, and a year after we get married you won't get disappointed and start singing again.'

"I almost cried first, and then started thinking it over. I wasn't too rational about it," she says. "I was just so madly in love with this guy that the whole world was blinded."

Barda cancelled her audition.

"The agent who booked me was livid. He said, 'You'll never have an opportunity like this for the rest of your life. You're finished.'"

And until her husband's death 30 years later, so it seemed.

Renee Barda

Barda locked her music away in the basement and couldn't even bring herself to look at it. Several times, her husband caught her vocalizing in the shower and chided her for "getting ideas to go back to the opera." She stopped.

But it wasn't all bad. Barda adored being a mother to her three sons and took to her domestic tasks. Her husband's poor health also kept her busy. After their wedding, he revealed that he had a number of genetic disorders, including congenital kidney disease, Mediterranean Fever, and later in life, he had cirrhosis of the liver.

Barda remained his dedicated nurse until his death in 2000.

Two years later, her son startled her one night at the dinner table. "He said, 'You know, you never sang. We don't even know what you really sound like. Why don't you get back into it?'"

Barda realized there was no longer anything preventing her from singing again, except her own fear. But slowly, tentatively, she unlocked that basement door. Everything was still intact, just as she'd left it, including her voice.

"I picked up a big aria and thought, 'Nah. No way.' But I went through that aria and it was all there. I couldn't believe it. I was ecstatic, in tears."

Since recovering her voice, Barda has been busy. In 2004, she recorded a CD. From there, concert dates, media coverage and even a TV documentary have followed.

When asked by younger women if she feels any resentment for what she gave up, the diminutive grandmother of three doesn't waver.

"There's also a lot of positive that happened: I adore my grandchildren, children and daughters-in-law," she explains. "I'm the kind of person that moves on in life. You can't change the past, so I look on the positive side of everything."

Barda performs classics of George Gershwin, Cole Porter, art songs and more at the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, Al Green Theatre, Dec. 11 at 7:30 p.m. 416-924-6211.

Directed by Ari Weisberg January 5 - 16, 2011

Hannah and Zvi are reunited after divorcing twenty years earlier. Raised in Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim, the couple ended their marriage when Zvi turned his back on Judaism and Hannah did not. Now the teenage children from their second marriages have become romantically involved, forcing Hannah and Zvi back into each other's lives.

PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

TORONTO JEWISH FILM FESTIVAL PRESENTS

JAFFA

It's Romeo and Juliet, Middle-Eastern style! In the heart of modern Jaffa, Toufik, a young Palestinian, works with his father at a garage run by Reuven Wolf, who is Jewish. Reuven's daughter Mali and Toufik have been in love since they were children. As they secretly plan to build their life together, hostilities mount between the two families that threaten the hopes of the two young lovers. Presented at the 2009 Cannes Film Festival, Jaffa features a mesmerizing performance by Dana Ivgy, who portrays Mali with a quiet self-determination as she is forced to navigate this conflict of loyalties.

Sunday, December 12
4:00 pm – Chai Tea
5:00 pm – Film
Cineplex Odeon
Sheppard Centre Cinemas
Yonge and Sheppard

$15 door or advance
Subject to availability
Tickets & Information
416 599 8433
tjff.com

CINEPLEX ENTERTAINMENT
TORONTO ARTS COUNCIL
Arts. Culture. Heritage.
UJA FEDERATION
ONTARIO ARTS COUNCIL / CONSEIL DES ARTS DE L'ONTARIO

TJFF.COM

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

studio5040cabarets presents
Sharron's Holiday Party
Thursday, December 16
Doors open 7:00 p.m.
Show starts 8:00 p.m.
Sharron Matthews, Canada's own Bette Midler, invites you to her hysterical and cheeky celebration. With songs, stories, snacks, sing-a-longs and surprises...
Cabaret-style table seating, snacks, entertainment...
FUN for $25
Toronto Centre for the Arts
Studio Theatre
5040 Yonge Street, Toronto
TICKETS: 416-872-1111 or
www.studio5040cabarets.com

Lorraine Kimsa
Theatre for Young People
"This is a show that the whole family can enjoy!" - Toronto Star
A YEAR WITH FROG AND TOAD
MUSIC BY ROBERT REALE BOOK AND LYRICS BY WILLIE REALE BASED ON THE BOOKS BY ARNOLD LOBEL
A YEAR WITH FROG — AND — TOAD
RECOMMENDED FOR AGES 3 & UP
ONSTAGE NOW - TO DEC. 30 ONLY!
Two shows daily Dec. 27-30: 11am & 2pm
Tickets $15-$20 HST & service charges extra
This delightful Tony Award-nominated Broadway musical celebrates friendship and the attributes that make each of us different and special.
CALL OR CLICK : 416.862.2222 | LKTYP.CA
165 FRONT STREET EAST, TORONTO
EDUCATION PARTNERS
BMO Financial Group
SEASON DESIGN
GOVERNMENT & FOUNDATION PARTNERS
Canadian Heritage
Patrimoine canadien
TORONTO ARTS COUNCIL
METCALF FOUNDATION
The Ontario Arts Council and the Ontario Trillium Foundation are agencies of the Government of Ontario.

Quebec tour for disabled travellers

BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

The tour bus enters the walled section of Old Quebec City, or Vieux-Quebec, and winds its way through narrow streets lined with stone buildings. Many of them date back to 18th-century New France.

One of the first stops is the 400-year-old site of the first fort, which had been strategically perched on a high cliff overlooking the narrowest point of the St. Lawrence River. The passengers take in this dramatic panorama from Dufferin Terrace, the walkway along the edge of the cliff near the iconic Chateau Frontenac, the city's most famous landmark.

The bus then follows a road that descends to the historic lower city or Basse Ville, which can also be reached by a steep staircase or by the historic Quebec funicular cable car, which is on a 210-foot vertical track. The bus slowly makes its way through the Basse Ville, a colourful area bustling with boutiques, restaurants and outdoor cafés.

We are on the last leg of a three-day whirlwind tour highlighting the accessibility of travel destinations in Montreal and the Quebec City vicinity. In fact, two people in the group are using wheelchairs. However, the person providing the most feedback to the tour organizers is Ray Cohen, CEO of the Canadian Abilities Foundation and founding editor-in-chief of Abilities magazine.

Ray Cohen

This national magazine – it's published four times a year – focuses on lifestyle issues for people with a realm of disabilities that includes mobility and sensory limitations, Cohen explains. "People with disabilities have the same lifestyle interests as anybody else. We cover a range of issues like fashion, travel, nutrition and relationships."

He says he was impressed with the accessibility of the sites on the tour, which he attributes to the advocacy work of Kéroul, a non-profit organization that promotes and develops accessible tourism and culture in Quebec for people with physical limitations.

"Kéroul points people in the direction of places with accessible features. The outcome has been a major step towards ending the marginalization of people with disabilities by excluding them from the major cultural and historic places in Quebec."

Panoramic view of Quebec City

Every province has an advocacy organization to expand accessibility, but they're not necessarily as influential as Kéroul, Cohen says.

He draws a distinction between venue accessibility and independent travel, pointing out that while many stops on the tour, which included Old Montreal and Canyon Sainte-Anne near Quebec City, can accommodate wheelchairs, a person with a disability would still require assistance to negotiate the physical terrain.

"Quebec is a beautiful city. It's rich in history and culture. However, people using wheelchairs would have difficulty manoeuvring through the city unassisted, because there are so many hills. It would be worth their while to have a companion to facilitate accessibility."

Cohen says he was particularly impressed with the accessibility and beauty of Montreal Botanical Gardens. The group also visited the nearby Chateau Dufresne Museum, a period home from the early 20th century.

He found Wendake, a rural First Nations village outside Quebec City, conducive to independent wheelchair travel, because it's flat. The First Nations Museum Hôtel in Wendake, where the group stayed, is also fully accessible, he notes, lauding the beauty of the modern glass and wood structure and its picturesque ravine setting.

"The number of accessible rural tourism destinations are few and far between," Cohen says. "Not many can claim the accessibility of Wendake."

He says the other hotels on the trip – the Fairmont Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal and the Chateau Bonne Entente in Quebec City –also met accommodation standards.

Among the amenities he looks for is emergency lighting for the deaf and the height of furniture and grab bars at the sink, shower and toilet.

This information is available on the Access Guide Canada, which can be through the Abilities website at www.abilities.ca/agc/. The guide provides information on a range of accessible Canadian resources that include lodging, theatres, restaurants and parks.

Cohen's work with children with disabilities at the Alberta Children's Hospital in Calgary led him into publishing. He says there was a "huge discrepancy in services" once the children turned 18 and had to leave the hospital school. "The real world was less accommodating."

In researching resources, Cohen realized he needed "a vehicle to spread the information" he was accumulating and so in 1986 he founded the Canadian Abilities Foundation – it has been based in Toronto for the past 21 years – to "provide a framework" for publishing Abilities magazine.

The foundation, a charitable institution, also publishes the Abilities Bulletin, an online monthly newsletter.

Cohen says there has been much improvement in quality of life issues, because today most disability matters are governed more by social than by medical policy.

"This is the first generation of people with disabilities living outside institutions," he adds. "In the past they rarely went out."

Abilities magazine's website is at www.abilities.ca.

AIDA at Masada
June 2011
Masada, Dead Sea and Jerusalem Opera Festival - June 2011
Dead Sea June 2 - 5, 2011
Including Verdi's AIDA and Messa da Requiem at Masada
Jerusalem Jun 3 - 7, 2011
Including Verdi's Opera Jerusalem & Church Concert in Jerusalem, AIDA at Masada
Alternative dates and length of packages are available. Space is limited.
Call Gloria Pelchovitz at New Wave Travel
416 - 928-3113 Ext. 238
or 1-800-463-1512
gloria@newwavetravel.net
Ont. Reg# 1337762

Collector's rare Jewish books on exhibit

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Some people collect comic books, while others seek out first-edition Harry Potter novels. One man looks for an entirely different type of rare book.

Ron Benson has been collecting rare Jewish books, some dating back as far as the 1400s, for 10 years. His collection to date consists of 100 books, and some of them are on exhibit at Adath Israel Congregation.

Benson's collection began when he wanted to buy a unique wedding gift and settled on a Haggadah. However, he didn't actually end up giving it away.

"It was a really good idea, so good that I decided to keep it for myself," Benson said, laughing.

From there, he went on a mission to find more Haggadahs. His contact in Israel who helped him find the first Haggadah said finding an original was very difficult because of the large number of counterfeits and reprints in circulation. Benson then started to look into collecting other rare Jewish books, with one specific qualification.

"The criteria for me was to get things that were of museum quality," he said. "Resource wise, I didn't want to buy things for the sake of buying it.

"I may be lucky and get 10 books in one year, or only get two books. Today my collection consists of 100 books. They're all incredible. I don't have one bad book that I've acquired."

Benson's favourites in his burgeoning collection include a 1695 Haggadah from Amsterdam – "one of the first Haggadahs to be illustrated by copperplates," he said – and a mini Bible that is currently featured in the Adath Israel exhibit.

Benson approached the synagogue with the idea to display the books. "I was keeping the books in boxes… [and] wanted to share them with people," he said.

The books will be displayed for a year, but Benson hopes to make the exhibit more permanent.

"I've had an incredible response," he said. "The enjoyment comes from sharing it with the Jewish community and the congregation. Close to 2,000 people have been through the exhibit.

"The printing process only started in the mid-1400s," he added. "Some of these books are the only editions… It would take maybe five or six months to print and put [the books] together, so there weren't that many done – [it was a] pretty crude process. The fact that they've survived all these years is pretty amazing."

From left, Ron Benson with Holocaust survivor Erwin Schild, rabbi emeritus at Adath Israel.

The Jewish cemetery of Calcutta

By ROBERT HIRSCHFIELD
Special to The CJN

Calcutta's three synagogues are empty. No Jews live on Ezra Street, named for the once prominent realtor David Joseph Ezra.

Less than 40 Jews live in Calcutta altogether. But behind the locked metal gate on Narkeldanga Main Road, there erupts a village of tombstones blazing in the diabolical heat. It is the Jewish cemetery of Calcutta – the only place in this city of 11 million where the Biblical injunction "be fruitful and multiply," applies to the Jews.

The cemetery land was bought by Shalom Cohen, the first Jew of Calcutta, who arrived in 1684 to become the court jeweller of the Nawab of Oudh.

Eighty-year-old Flower Silliman said that Cohen paid an Indian friend for the land with the ring on his finger. Silliman's late husband David, who ran a foreign exchange business in Calcutta, was related, down the line, to Cohen.

There was never antisemitism in Calcutta, the cemetery holds no blood graves. But there are many tiny headstones, the mute narratives of children's lost battles with diarrhea and malaria.

Every time a Jew dies here, the community loses an irreplaceable piece of itself. Sinking into the earth, the dead fade into its disappearing history.

It is hard for a community to acknowledge that the cemetery is soon to double as its collective destiny. References to it are always made with sighs that stop just short of long-tailed remorse.

"What can you do?" Silliman punctuated her sigh with a shrug. "Many communities have died throughout history. Of course, it's different when it's your own."

When visitors to Calcutta are taken around to the city's three synagogues: Neve Shalom, Beth El and Magen David, the sites are spoken of in the past tense as if they were already relics – as if the Jews who once gathered to pray in them no longer exist. They do exist, if fractionally, but their ailing bodies prevent them from coalescing as a minyan.

Shalom Israel, 37, is Calcutta's only living Jew to reside in the cemetery. The community built him a small house at the edge of the stone slabs so he can care for the graves. He is also the only Jew to pray in the three synagogues. Every Friday he lights candles in each of them and says prayers.

He has been chosen to function in places where functioning has ceased, a replacement community of one.

Cohen walks with a slight stoop among the graves, like a professor checking on students in a vast, hushed classroom whose silence often gets broken by car horns and shouts beyond the gate.

He knows some of the dead as no one else knows them.

Among his other services to the community, he performs the taharah (preparing the body for burial) on the men who have died.

Does it feel strange, he is asked, to be living in a cemetery, a man so young?

It doesn't feel strange at all, he says. "In this life, it's the living that will harm you, not the dead," he remarks like a thoughtful old man. "Besides, the cemetery is the one place in Calcutta where Jews are the majority."

A TREASURY OF
JEWISH CULTURE & HERITAGE
KRAKOW, WARSAW, BERLIN, DRESDEN
OCTOBER 15–28th, 2011

Vivien and Bonnie invite you to discover the essence of the rich Jewish heritage of the grand old cities of Eastern Europe. Together we'll explore our common roots and the traditions that bind us from the tragic history of the Holocaust to the contemporary reality of the rebuilt Jewish communities.

New Synagogue, Berlin

LAND COST: $5,275.00 CAD per person based on double occupancy single supplement available on request.
DEPOSIT: $1,000.00 CAD per person non-refundable deposit due at the time of booking.
AIR: available on request in economy & business class with multiple airlines.

Please contact:
Vivien Rethazy or Bonnie Horowitz
416-789-3273/1-888-666-8747 (TRIP) vivien@thetravelnetwork.com
the TRAVEL Network
1920 Avenue Rd.

We wish everyone a Happy & Healthy Chanukah

Ontario Reg #02455819

Theatre Passe Muraille in producing partnership with Convergence Theatre presents:

YICHUD (Seclusion)

MAY 21-29, 2011

COME CELEBRATE THE WEDDING OF THE YEAR!

"...it has tremendous heart. This production is a don't miss."
~ Classical 96.3 FM

SOME NIGHTS ALREADY SOLD OUT!
The perfect Hanukkah gift! passemuraille.on.ca 416.504.7529

Written by Julie Tepperman
Co-directed by Aaron Willis and Richard Greenblatt
Featuring: Diane Flacks, Richard Greenblatt, Jordan Pettle, Michael Rubenfeld, Julie Tepperman, Aaron Willis
Set, lighting and costume design by Beth Kates, Musical Direction and original composition by Aviva Chernick

Jordan Pettle, Julie Tepperman, Aaron Willis and chorus by Keith Barker

Novel's heroine struggles with her sexual orientation in delightful coming-of-age novel

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

Girl Unwrapped by Canadian writer Gabriella Goliger is a compelling coming-of-age novel about a young girl growing up in 1950s and '60s Montreal.

The daughter of Holocaust survivors, Toni Goldblatt grows up struggling not just with her Jewish identity but also with her sexual orientation. As a young girl, eight at the start of the novel, Toni is labelled a tomboy. She'd much rather play with the neighbourhood boys than with the annoying Orthodox Nutkevitch twins next door, Ashie and Shevie. She hates the dresses her seamstress mother makes for her, preferring T-shirts and dungarees.

Girl Unwrapped (Arsenal Pulp Press) begins with Toni having Shabbat dinner at home with her mother, Lisa, and her father, Julian.

The spectre of ghosts haunts the entire book. Each parent deals with the ghosts of the past in their own way. Lisa invokes the memories of her dead relatives by lighting memorial candles, while Julian busies himself collecting books written by long-forgotten prewar Jewish writers.

The Holocaust is a mostly forbidden topic, and photographs of dead family members remain hidden in desk drawers. Toni learns that certain corners of her parents' lives must not be poked into, for the result will be hard, blank silence.

Her parents are proud and refined, and her mother is eager to move out of the immigrant Maplewood Avenue apartment to the more dignified Cote St. Luc neighbourhood, where they can be with "their own, but with a bit of lawn in between."

The novel follows Toni's growth into awkward adolescence and adulthood as she struggles with her increasing alienation and angst. Reading a health pamphlet for young teens on the tribulations of the monthly cycle that her mother left for her one day, Toni begins to think that maybe she's not a woman, but an "it." "You'd be sorrier if you never did menstruate, but she remained an 'it' without any of the normal manifestations of being a grown-up woman," the pamphlet preaches.

At one point she goes to the Jewish General Hospital to see if she could be "cured" of her lesbian inclinations through hypnotism. The doctor suggests she talk with her guidance counsellor at school.

One summer when she is 15, much to her horror, Toni's parents decide to send her to the Zionist Camp Tikvah for the summer. Goliger has a natural gift for capturing the emotional depth of her characters, and the best part of this novel deals with Toni's misadventures at summer camp. All readers who were ever bullied and ostracized by others will identify with Toni here.

At camp, Toni, her body maturing into a gangly, big-footed, ungraceful figure, is further alienated, especially when she is teased by the other girls, including the much-hated Nutkevitch twins, now adolescent beauty queens, who suspect her sexual inclinations. She hates the routine, the lack of privacy and communalism and the requirement to be smiling all the time. She begins to count down the seconds until her torment is over.

The only positive that summer is her crush on Janet, the leader of the singing group at camp. One night, drunk on an illicit bottle of wine, she publicly shouts out her love for Janet.

The next day, she gets kicked out of camp for being drunk and told the camp is not equipped to deal with girls like her.

On the drive home, she angrily tells her mother that she's a lesbian, but her mother will have none of it. Admiring an older girl is normal, but lesbians are "she-devils," her mother says, conjuring images of female Nazi sadists at concentration camps. "You have nothing in common with those monsters."

Feeling patriotic after attending a pro-Israel rally at the Sheraton Mount-Royal, Toni, now a young woman, runs off to Israel after the 1967 war, ostensibly to study at Hebrew University of Jerusalem, but also to track down Janet, whom she learns is now a folk singer in Jerusalem.

The novel's pace here begins to slow down somewhat with unnecessary digressions that include a fruitless trip to a recruitment office and a drunken tryst with an Arab boy. The reader understands at this point that Toni is lost, confused and hurt. But if we sympathized with the alienated girl at summer camp, we now want to slap the older Toni on the head and say, "It happens to all of us. Deal with it."

Girl Unwrapped's strength lies mostly in its first half, as the young girl and adolescent Toni fights her alienation and struggles to come out of the closet, at the same time dealing with being Jewish in an increasingly secular environment.

Readers, particularly those who are familiar with or grew up in Montreal, will enjoy all the references to Montreal, including the Snowdon branch of the Jewish Public Library, the Jewish General Hospital, Paperman's Funeral Chapel and Hadassah bazaars.

Although the novel begins to get weighted down toward the end, Goliger, winner of the 2001 Upper Canada Writers' Craft Award for her debut novel Song of Ascent, has written an enticing and delightful coming-of age novel.

On the Park
Events & Conference Centre
Named 2010 Small Business Employer of the Year by JOIN
✦ Weddings ✦ Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
✦ Corporate Meetings & Socials ✦ Brunches
✦ 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
✦ Seven Beautifully Themed Rooms ✦ Kosher Catering Available
LIVE JAZZ
THURS DEC 9
6 PM – 9 PM
416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723
1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

UJA Federation OF GREATER TORONTO

DID YOU KNOW?

PRIVATE FOUNDATIONS ARE PUBLIC AND PUBLIC FOUNDATIONS ARE PRIVATE

Discover the advantages of establishing a Donor Advised Fund at the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto.

YOU CAN:

1. Recommend grants to any registered charity
2. Benefit from expert investment of funds
3. Enjoy the ease of worry-free management and low-fee administration
4. Establish a fund with as little as $10,000
5. Create a family legacy that will continue for generations
6. Have the option to be anonymous

The Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto is a community public foundation that offers a great opportunity for donors to make charitable gifts while retaining the highest possible amount of flexibility and effectiveness.

"Remember, if you contribute to your fund via a donation of appreciated securities, mutual funds or segregated funds, not only will you get a receipt for the fair market value but you will pay no capital gains tax on the accrued gain."

Jamie Golombek
Chair, Professional Advisory Committee
Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto

To take advantage of this giving vehicle and benefit from a 2010 tax credit, please call the Jewish Foundation at 416-634-3030 or jewishfoundation@ujafed.org or visit our website at www.jewishfoundationtoronto.com

CADESKY AND ASSOCIATES LLP
Canadian and International Tax Specialists

CIBC For what matters.

Miller Thomson
lawyers | avocats

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

HOUSES FOR SALE
HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
HOUSES FOR RENT
HOUSES FOR SALE RENT
ROOMMATES WANTED
ROOMS WANTED TO RENT
ROOMS FOR SALE
ROOMS FOR RENT
CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE RENT
CONDOMINIUMS WANTED
ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
ACCOMMODATION WANTED
SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
ACCOMMODATION SWAP EXCHANGE
HOUSE SITTERS
UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
APARTMENT FOR RENT
SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
APARTMENT TO SUBLET
ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
APARTMENT WANTED
PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
COTTAGE FOR SALE
COTTAGE FOR RENT
COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
COTTAGE WANTED
TIME SHARE FOR SALE
TIME SHARE FOR RENT
TIME SHARE WANTED
FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL
FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
ISRAEL PROPERTY WANTED
ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
OTHER PROPERTIES
OTHER PROPERTIES
OTHER PROPERTIES AVAILABLE
OTHER PROPERTIES WANTED
TIME SHARE FOR SALE RENT SHARE
TIME SHARE FOR LEASE
COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
OFFICE SPACE WANTED
STORAGE SPACE WANTED
STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
LAND LOTS FOR SALE
LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
BUSINESS FOR SALE
BUSINESS WANTED
CAREERS/EMPLOYMENT
EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
EMPLOYMENT WANTED
CAREERS
DAY CARE AVAILABLE
DAY CARE WANTED
HOMES TO SHARE AVAILABLE
HOMES TO SHARE WANTED
HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
HEALTHCARE WANTED
SENIORS
BUSINESS PERSONALS
PERSONALS SEARCH
PERSONALS
ENTERTAINMENT SERVICES
PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
ANNOUNCEMENTS
LOST & FOUND
PETS
ART SALES FOR SALE
ART SALES WANTED
BOATS
CARS
CONTENTS SALE
GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHURCHES
375 CLEANING CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-787-1712
www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

BATHURST / LAWRENCE — NEW LISTING
Spacious 3 + 3 bdrm bung in prime location. Sep entry to in-law suite, new laminate flrs, family-size eat-in kit. Steps to TTC, Spadina subway, schools, shops. $549,000. Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — BRING AN OFFER!
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

GLEN PARK CONDO
Dream model penthouse unit, Brian Gluckstein designed, all the bells & whistles. Wraparound terrace, gourmet kitchen, 2 bdrms, den, exquisite finishes, $845,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

3000 BATHURST CONDO
Newly renovated & decorated thruout. 2 + 1 bdrms, 2 baths, approx 1,500 sq ft, W exposure, generous entertaining area, gleaming parquet flrs, brand new appls. Shows a 10+ Avail immed. $399,900 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

SOLD FOR MORE THAN ASKING PRICE
BATHURST / LAWRENCE
INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY! ...Classic 6-plex in desirable location close to subway, TTC, shops, Yorkdale. 2-3 bdrm units, 3-2 bdrm units, 1-1 bdrm unit. Open balconies, 6 garages. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDOS
FOR SALE: Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes thruout. 2 pkg, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

FOR RENT — NEW LISTING! Bright, sunny 2 bdrm, 2 baths, open concept, w/o to open balcony. Shows well. ONLY $1,650 / MONTH — ACT NOW! Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

AS LOW AS 2% TOTAL MLS COMMISSION* FREE LAWYER'S FEE
Doris Ender, Broker
Sutton Group Admiral Realty Inc., Brokerage
TOP PRODUCER 416.739.7200
*When representing both buyer & seller Some conditions apply
Not intended to solicit properties already listed for sale

BATHURST / YORK DOWNS — 33 DANBY AVE.
B-E-S-T value in all of North York guaranteed for this fabulous 50 x 120 ft south lot. Close to Earl Bales Park, two synagogues, Downsview subway station. Prime demand location with excellent schools & plazas. Million dollar plus homes in the area. Build your dream home. ONLY $465,000.

BATHURST ST. & STEELES AVE. "PRIMROSE"
Magnificent 2 bdrms. Condo. Shows like New.2 baths, solarium, bright large rooms. Eat- kitchen Parking, locker +++ ONLY $ 289,000.

BATHURST ST. & CLARK AVE Beautiful 2800 sq.ft. Home
4 spacious bedrms., 3 baths, huge family room, with Fireplace & bar. Bright kitchen with breakfast area, 2nd fl. Sitting room, skylight, cathedral ceiling. Main. Fl. Laundry rm. & entry to 2 car garage $599,000.

NAT STARK
Sales Representative
RE/MAX REALTRON REALTY BROKERAGE
905-764-6000

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

PREMIUM ADDRESS IN FOREST HILL
355 St. Clair Ave. W./Tower Hill West
Luxuriously renovated 1 and 2 bedroom suites with 2 full bathrooms. Stainless Steel appliances, balconies with spectacular views and concierge service. Walking distance to Forest Hill Village Shops, St. Clair subway station and Loblaws. Utilities included.
Call us today to book your personal tour!
416.961-0024
www.caprent.com

Bigger Than the Average Condo!
3636 Bathurst, "The Empress House"
LARGE 3 bdrm SPECIAL! Central a/c, Hardwood, New Appliances, Ceramic Tiles, New Kitchens, Quiet "Professional Type" Building, Large Terrace Balcony, FREE Membership to the Empress House Club- Pool, Sauna, Exercise, Laundry on Site, Underground Parking
416-931-2206 • 416-781-4672 • 416-663-8662

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373
OVERBROOK/WILMINGTON
3 bdrms. 2 bths, fam size kit, liv & din comb, fin bsmt, garage.
416-633-7373

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

A 2 bdr. co-op apt. Person selling is also a stylist offering FREE haircuts. Call: 416-782-8451.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

SANTEL REALTY INC. (BROKERAGE) 416-441-2003
SKYMARK DON MILLS & FINCH
*Skymark Elegance 65 – reno corner spacious 2 br. + LR + lge. family rm. + balcony. Approx 1889 sq. ft., 2 1/2 baths., 2 pkg. + locker. Priced to sell.
SANTEL REALTY INC. BROKER OF RECORD

Got a fixer - upper?
Check out the Service Directory
Call 416 391 1836

82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting.
6 Apts. per flr
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 - 416-631-0388

Bath. n. of Finch, furn. bsmt. apt. in lux. TH, bright, 750', incl. cable, internet, a/c, close to shops, TTC & parks. Call 416-665-8674.

124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES

IT'S 78 & SUNNY IN ARIZONA
Now is a great time to buy! Prices and Rates are Low! Vacation, Investment, Relo
PENNY FIELD, Broker
480-282-0964
penny@pennyfield.net
HomeSmart Real Estate
Phoenix, Arizona

PHOENIX/ SCOTTSDALE
Specializing in Unique Residential Properties
Neil Schneider
Prudential Arizona Properties
602-571-4586, NeilAZ@cox.net
www.OpeningAZDoors.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

SAPPHIRE
in Fort Lauderdale new construction only 10 units left first come first served lowest prices for 2 bedroom plus den ready to move in. Selling for $238.00 pr sq ft deal of the century.
Unique opportunity!!
Hurry this won't last call now.
Maria Papas 754-423-3343

MIAMI BEACH - MIMOSA CONDO For Sale by Owner, great Ocean View $235K on Low Floor 305-895-3000.

MIAMI BEACH CARRIAGE CLUB Large 2/2, Ocean View, Low Floor David - Kotler Rlty 305-895-3000.

WILLIAMS ISLAND CONDO Magnificent 3 Beds. & 3 Baths. 3,000 square feet Marble Floors $899K Furnished 305-895-3000.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON X-Large Studio Furnished Oceanfront, Pool, Spa, Beach $2,000/Month 305-895-3000.

Delray-KP, 2/2, 55+, Country club living, bright & breezy, golf view, all new tropical design, nr. bch. 3 mos. min. $1350/mo. Call 561-272-1859.

Hollybrook, Pembroke Pines, 2 bdr., 2 bth. condo, 1st flr., fully renov., new appls., Jan. - Mar. (3 months). Call 905-881-6677.

3 Islands, 1 bdr., 1.5 bth., S.E. view, open kitchen, 3 - 4 months. $1300. US/mo. 416-481-9152.

Sunny Isles, spacious oceanfront, 2 bed. + den., furn'd. condo. Avail. Jan. 5 - Apr. 5th. Luxury bldg. with health club, pool, spa. 847-951-9493.

Sunny Isles across beach. Nicely furnished. 1 bedroom, 1 spacious dining and living room with balcony. 1 1/2 bathrooms. KOSHER kitchen. Available January 12 - April 12. 450-973-9920; cell 514-691-9920.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Boca Raton, C.V., 1 bdr., 1.2 bth., exc. cond, kosher kit, lake view. Avail. immed. 416-633-3268

Surfside/Bal Harbor, lovely 1 br. shopping, shul & transp. kosher krt. Dec - Jan1. 416-939-0816

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean. CLEAN 905-886-0347 Lv msg.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

GOLDEN CARE
Live in/out caregivers.
Cleaning ladies, drivers.
Best service, Lowest Prices!
Honey Hecker
416-665-8674
www.goldencare.ca

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.
ELIE KOFFMAN
Real estate broker - Realtor
MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717
FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4501
O: 305.498.8401
LONDONO REALTY GROUP INC
ECR

Boca West CC. Wonderful 4 bed., 3 bth. apt., 24'x24' porch w/fantastic view, garage, beaut. furn'd. 4 golf courses/39 tennis crts./6 restaurants. Avail. seas. rental $4000 USD/mo. lease or for purchase. By owner. Pls. call 561-852-3583 or 413-348-2605.

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

Miami Beach - New spacious, lux., furn'd. studio, 1 bed. & 2 bed apts. w/balcs. avail at oceanfront Crown, 40th & Collins. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, valet pkng incl. 877-424-7848, stay@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

Sunny Isles - Lux. spacious, furn'd. 1 bed., 2 bed. & 3 bed. apts. w/ balcs. & intracoastal views. 2 bl. from beach. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, marina. Call 877-424-7848, iyc@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

NANNY TAX FRUSTRATION?
www.nannytax.ca
905-326-3222
Canada's provider of nanny payroll tax services
- All paperwork, T4, ROE included
- Personalized payroll tax updates throughout the year

SHURE Consulting Services

Lady seeks work in homes, apts., offices, days only, refs., exper. 416-827-1059.

Experienced cleaning lady will clean your home. Please call Vicky at 905-671-0124.

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Cleaning for You! We clean apartments. Please call Deborah at 416-781-4138.

Exper. Israeli lady looking for job to take care of elderly or disabled. Refs. 416-509-1333.

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

SECRETARY/ADMIN ASSISTANT for a Synagogue/organization
The ideal candidate should have:
- Proficiency in Microsoft office
- Excellent organizational skills and attention to details
- Strong interpersonal and communication skills (both oral and written)
- Good working knowledge of general office procedures
- Ability to work independently, multi task and take initiative

Please fax resume to: 905-886-0421 or email: esthera@on.aibn.com

F/T ASST CUSTOMER SERVICE MANAGER
at upbeat, online company downtown. Excellent English and read/write Hebrew. Resume & cover letter to: careers@ketubah.com

Administrative assistant who speaks Hebrew, 60+ yrs. old, some computer knowledge, part-time. 647-204-4663.

To place a classified ad please call 416-391-1836

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Reliable, hard working and experienced caregivers available. Please call 416-546-5380.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

2 brothers, handsome & estab., 50 ish, looking to date 2 sisters or friends, 35-45 for fun & friendship. CJN Box # 5308.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militana. 416-890-9644

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?
Address your mail to:
The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4
Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.
CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

GLATT
Take-out & Catering
Shiva Meals
Peanut Free Simchas COR
Shabbat Dinners
905 - 597 - 7571

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
- BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
- SIMCHAS
- SHIVA MEALS
- SHABBOS DINNERS

844 Sheppard Ave. W.
at Wilmington
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

387 DECORATING

DRAPERY, BLINDS & SHUTTERS Excellent service & quality, reasonable prices. 647-272-7282.

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile, water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

A-1 Handyman. Expert kitchen repairs and refacing. New kitchens and countertops, plumbing and electrical. For free estimate call 647-887-5075.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

460 PLUMBING

PLUMBER ON CALL!
Drain, Plumbing, Heating, A/C
Call TOM the Plumber
647-654-8099

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
WINTER IN ISRAEL
FROM $676 + TAX

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this ADVERTISING WORKS! To book your ad in this spot call 416-391-1836

Judo fighter has sights set on Olympics

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Roman Abramovich has had the fighting bug in him ever since he was a young boy in Bishtek, Kyrgyzstan.

His dad, Yuri, was the head coach of the country's national sambo team and got him involved in the Russian martial art and in judo at a young age. As a junior representing his country at the judo world championships, he finished fifth.

After moving to Israel at age 17, he quickly dominated that country's judo scene, winning five national championships and representing the Jewish state in international tournaments, winning a gold medal at an event in Austria.

Since arriving in Canada last May, he hasn't had that level of success – yet – although only a few weeks ago, Abramovich, now 23, gave notice to judo aficionados across the country that he will be a force to be reckoned with. He easily won the Quebec Open, defeating two members of the Canadian national team to do it.

With judo in his blood, Abramovich, who fights in the under-73-kilogram "light-weight" group, has his sights set on a berth on the 2012 Canadian Olympic team. To do so, he must accumulate points at recognized high level international competitions. Last summer, he placed seventh at the World Cup in Miami, which attracted some of the best judo fighters in the world, so he's confident he can do it.

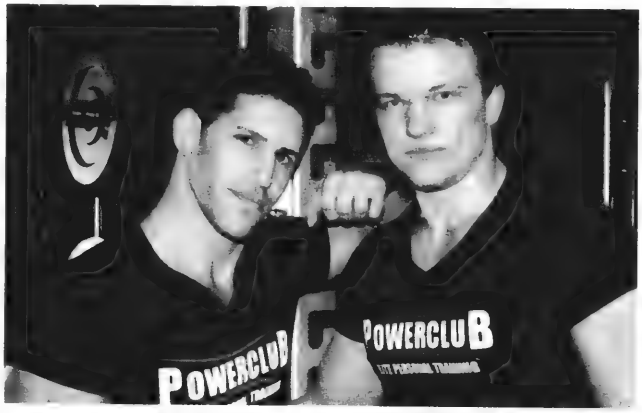
So are the people mentoring him in Canada.

Erez Cohen is an Israeli fighter who now lives in Toronto and who is a third-degree black belt in judo. He's also a partner with Rachelle Bronfman in Powerclub, a fitness club on Eglinton Avenue West, the scene of many of Abramovich's workouts.

"I knew him from the first day he came to Israel," Cohen said. "He trained at the Hapoel B'nei Brak [club], and I was one of his trainers there. He was the national champion in Israel at 13, 14 and up in judo and sambo."

Cohen, who won two gold medals for Israel at the Maccabiah Games and a bronze for Canada in 2009, said Abramovich could easily beat him in a contest today. In fact, he's so dominant that most of his matches in Canada end in about 12 seconds.

At the Quebec Open, he defeated the one-time Canadian champion in 20 seconds. "It was too easy," Cohen said.



Erez Cohen, left, is helping train Roman Abramovich with the goal of making the Canadian Olympic judo team.

"He works so hard. He gives 150 per cent at every workout, and the amount of blood at every workout is amazing."

Of course, it takes more than that to make a champion, and Cohen said Abramovich's technique "is perfect. He's been doing it since he was four."

In judo, also known as "the gentle way, technique is everything. He's got technique and power."

Bronfman said you'd never suspect Abramovich is a major league fighter by looking at him. "He looks strong, but he's so sweet, quiet and shy," she said.

Abramovich trains twice a day for a total of about three to four hours, and in January he'll join other elite international athletes at a training camp to prepare for the Olympic qualifying season.

That sort of regimen hardly deters Abramovich. On the contrary, he revels in it. In Israel, he points out, as an elite athlete, he regularly trained twice a day at the Wingate Institute.

During his army service, he was permitted to prepare for international events, and he gave instruction to young soldiers in hand-to-hand combat techniques.

Even before, he was a committed judoka. "I started young, and I love it. After you win, you feel very good. It's like drugs."

He shakes off the injuries that are common to the sport. He's broken the cartilage in his ears, and he's had other breaks, sprains and a rib injury, but so what?

The future he's planned for himself is one of plenty of blood and guts. After the Olympics, he foresees a career in professional mixed martial arts, specifically the UFC, the American made-for-TV spectacle.

Abramovich smiles when he's asked if he's really interested in that form of brawling, down and dirty martial art.

He plans to taking some boxing lessons before he joins the league, he said, and as Cohen explained, it's not the first time UFC fighters have been hit.

The two guys in the cage train together and know each other. Most fights end when one fighter has the other in a position where they can exert pressure on a joint and cause the vulnerable combatant to tap out. That gives judo guys an advantage over guys from other martial arts, Cohen asserted.

To illustrate his point, Cohen, a five-time Israeli judo champion, shows an Internet video in which a much smaller Russian fighter, a judo expert, took on a huge Japanese opponent. After exchanging a few punches, the Russian got in close, engaged the bigger fighter in what looked like a bear hug, took him to the mat and then defeated him in seconds with an arm lock.

"Judo and sambo [a Russian martial art that resembles judo] are used to striking and grappling, taking them down and make them submit quickly," Cohen said. Practitioners of these disciplines are getting into UFC matches and doing well.

"There's a lot of money in it, but for fighters, it's also prestige," he added.

The money part is clearly far off in the future. As of today, Abramovich is barely making do. Unlike his billionaire namesake, a Russian tycoon who owns the Chelsea Football Club, he lives a frugal lifestyle.

"He and his wife live in the basement of a house in a very basic existence. His wife is learning English," Bronfman said. There are a lot of expenses related to training at an elite level. She's helping out, but she'd like others in the Jewish community to pitch in.

"He's a nice Jewish boy who's a real champion," she said.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (416) 391-0949
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number ____ _____
Email _____

Managing from a distance

By MICHAEL GORDON

I got a phone call from the day program that one of my long-standing patients was attending.

"We need your help," the social worker said. "Mrs. P's son just called and told us to cancel the occupational therapist's home assessment, which we had just arranged, to ensure Mrs. P's home environment is safe. She is showing some worrisome deficiencies.

"The son said he doesn't want anyone going into his mother's house without his meeting the staff and the therapist. But the son will be abroad for another month, and in the meantime, he does not want anything done. We are also concerned that she may not be taking her medications," the social worker said.

"There is a nursing agency involved, but they are not sure what their role is because they keep getting conflicting instructions. The agency director is unsure of whether she is putting her employees at risk for not carrying out what they believe is their professional duty."

Soon after the phone call, an e-mail from the son arrived, telling me he's losing confidence in the staff at the program and the agency because they are not following his directions. He asked my advice, but indicated he would prefer that they back off and wait until he returns to the city, adding that he would be going away again for another few weeks.

I knew from past experience that this only son was a senior executive and needed to feel he is in control. I also suspected from my experience with him and his mother that he was somewhat ambivalent about his relationship with his mother. He had postponed career advancement because of her needs, but then decided to take a good offer although it meant he would travel a good deal and would be available only long distance, as if a BlackBerry and laptop could replace constant filial presence.

The Senior Side of Life

He arranged his mother's financial affairs because he is a financial expert, but he did allow her access to some funds at her bank through an arrangement that limited the amount of money she could withdraw. At times, she forgot that she had been to the bank recently and tried to withdraw more money than her limit. Bills were paid automatically, and she could shop using a credit card, which the son was responsible for so he would know what she bought. She agreed to shop with someone hired to help her.

After hearing the input from those involved, I surmised that the son's desire for control was impeding the care of his mother and potentially putting her at risk. I diplomatically suggested that he had to decide what he wanted – to be in control, which would likely require that he change his career path so he could be in the city most of the time, or to defer to health and social-service professionals who are devoted to his mother. He acknowledged that they had her best interests as well as her wishes at heart. I emphasized that they needed the leeway to carry out their roles without his constant micro-management and excessive scrutiny and tendency to criticism.

It took some negotiating, but finally he agreed that he had to collaborate with and have faith in those in whose care he had left his mother. Managing at a distance can be an enormous challenge, and getting help that one can trust is crucial to fulfilling that goal.

Dr. Michael Gordon is medical program director of palliative care at Baycrest and co-author with Bari Mindszenthy of Parenting Your Parents (Dundurn Press). His latest book, Moments that Matter: Cases in Ethical Eldercare, follows his previous book, Brooklyn Beginnings: A Geriatrician's Odyssey. All can be researched at his website: http://www.drmichaelgordon.com.

HORS D'OEUVRES MAC & CHEESE

1/2 lb. elbow macaroni
1/2 tbls butter, plus more for brushing
1/4 c grated Parmesan cheese
2 tbls flour
3/4 c milk
1 c cheddar cheese, shredded
4 oz mozzarella cheese, shredded
1 lg egg yolk
1/4 tsp paprika

Preheat oven to 425°. In large saucepan of boiling salted water, cook macaroni about 5 mins. Drain well. Spray mini muffin tins with cooking spray. Sprinkle ½ of the Parmesan into each muffin space, tap out excess.

In lg. saucepan, melt butter. Over moderate heat, whisk in flour for 2 min. then milk, whisking until boiling, about 5 min. Add cheddar & mozzarella cheeses, whisk until melted. Off the heat, whisk in egg yolk & paprika. Fold in macaroni. Spoon macaroni into prepared muffin cups, packing them gently. Sprinkle remaining Parmesan on top. Bake 10 min until golden. Cool 5 min. Using small spoon, carefully loosen mini-macs, transfer to platter & serve.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

* Avenue Road just south of Lawrence
416-789-4555 • caplans.com

A Family Business for over 60 Years

Tips for using less fat

There are many tips you can utilize to cut back on unnecessary fat and calories when cooking at home.

Two places where we take in a ton of added and often unnecessary fat are in the fat that we put into the pan – for example, the butter we use when making an egg, or the oil used in sautéing vegetables or preparing stir-fries – and the fat we add to cooked vegetables and salads.

About Nutrition
By LISA WEINBERG

Many of these oils are heart healthy, but they are still 100 per cent fat and really add up in calories. One tablespoon of oil, any oil, contains about 14 grams of fat and about 125 calories.

So how can you cut back without compromising on flavour or cooking quality?

One tip most people are already of aware of is to use cooking spray in the pan when making an egg or sautéing. You can use the ones you buy in the store in the spray can or buy an oil spray bottle at a kitchen store and add any oil you like. If you use the spray bottle, this also works well for spraying a light mist on salads, cooked vegetables or raw vegetables before roasting or grilling.

Another way to get away with less oil is to put a drop of oil in the centre of the pan and spread it using a pastry brush, which also allows you to get away with much less.

Still another tip when sautéing vegetables is to use stock in the pan in place of fat. It adds both moisture and flavour.

A final important key to successful cooking with less oil is to use a good non-stick pan. Pans are available in all sizes and with many different surfaces and allow you to use much less fat.

Lisa Weinberg is a registered dietitian/nutritionist in Toronto, in private practice and at the Genesis Professional Group. You can also follow Weinberg at http://www.lisaweinberg.ca. If you have any nutrition questions, please send them to The CJN.

The year is almost over

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

We are living in the post-Holocaust mourning era.

Until a short while ago, the Holocaust and the murder of our six million beloved family members stuck in our minds like a stir stick in cement. The Toronto Jewish community built Holocaust memorials, as if there would never be enough plaster and building materials to remember all we needed to. We made major and minor decisions based on our terrible memories. The Holocaust cast a massive shadow over our lives.

We were in constant mourning. The shivah period had passed. The 30 days were over, but we were still in "the year."

But something has shifted in our spirit, and we are slowly allowing life to take precedence over death. And as we rebirth, young Jews are showing their cultural stuff, launching hip new publications with less looking back and more celebrating of the "now" and the future. Today, our events are more full of life, less crisis-oriented. We present internationally acclaimed stars, as opposed to the Israeli general who speaks of our terrible past and scary future.

While the general continues to be heard – as the Jewish people will never be out of danger – it became paramount that we mix things up so as to create a tapestry of anticipation, curiosity and wonderment.

The older guard is no longer totally in charge. Sadness is no longer our only fallback. Happiness has crept in. It feels like we are completing "the year."

New and compelling Jewish music is cropping up everywhere, as opposed to the perennial Havah Nagilah list of songs we held onto so dearly for decades. Listen to Aaron Lightstone and his band Jaffa Road to determine the difference.

While Jewish theatre in Toronto is a long way from Broadway, more attention is being paid to our talent and we, the Jewish people, the storytellers. The Al Green Theatre is described online as "a 288-seat state-of-the-art theatre in the heart of the Annex." Impressive!

We are singing on Bathurst Street. We are dancing in Thornhill. We are pounding the drums of life south of Bloor. We, the living.

This cultural change will likely impact on fundraising and has already on aliyah.

For years, our wealthiest community members contributed more to the arts than the community itself. They did it because art and culture was relegated to a second tier of importance in our community. Survival was the guest-of-honour. But a revolution is afoot. Donors will see that.

Aliyah is barely talked about now. We feel safe in our newer Jewish Toronto. The new generation sees Toronto as its home, and Israel as the homeland. One still hears of the occasional individual or family making aliyah. But when we do, we wonder why.

We will always mourn our six million who were savagely murdered. We will continue to build Holocaust memorials – the National Holocaust Memorial in Ottawa is one such example. We will forever and always be saddened about this point in history, as we are about the destruction of the Temples and having been thrown out of Arab lands.

It feels, though, as if the intense mourning period, the rawness of real suffering, is coming to an end. As it does, we must take care of the few survivors left and embrace our past, with the recognition that a rebirth is happening around us, and within. We must sing, and sing loudly.

To comment go to http://avrum.net.

BEING JEWISH DOESN'T HAVE TO BE EXPENSIVE!

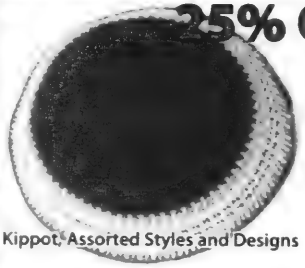
THE ISRAELI SOURCE

MID-WINTER SAVINGS

25% OFF OUR EVERYDAY LOW PRICE



Kippot, Assorted Styles and Designs

Traditional Tallitot
, Assorted Styles and Sizes

Tzitzit, Assorted Styles and Sizes

Tallit Bags
Assorted Styles and Designs

FOLLOW THE ISRAELI SOURCE ON TWITTER AND FACEBOOK
TO KEEP INFORMED OF SALES AND PROMOTIONS!

twitter.com/IsraeliSource • facebook.com/IsraeliSource

60 Doncaster Ave., Thornhill • (905) 482-2025 • info@israelisource.com

Sunday 10-5 • Monday-Thursday 10-6 • Friday 10-2

Travelling to Israel?

Take a cell phone and call home for as little as 10¢ a minute!

IsraelPhones
Stay connected. Enjoy Israel!

NEW - Now Available:

Unlimited Data Packages
for your iPhone or other SmartPhones
For just $4/day!

BEST PRICES, BEST SERVICE!

Phones available for pickup at

THE ISRAELI SOURCE

60 Doncaster Ave., Thornhill
(905) 482-2025 or 1-877-613-18-18 info@israelisource.com

Shipping available Canada-wide
$25 (Greater Toronto Area)
$35 (Other locations in Canada)
Includes delivery AND return courier service!

Unlimited Data
High-Speed USB Modems
for your Laptop Computer
Starting at just $3/day!

Never have to pay
hotel internet rates again, and take it with you
wherever you go!

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

44 Pages | Thursday, December 16, 2010 | 9 Tevet, 5771 | $1.25

This Week

National

Thesis raises questions about U of T's standards. Page 3

At 97, Anne Gitterman is a model of good aging. Page 17

Heebonics

Andrea Eisen is a tutor to the stars. Page 28

Arts & Travel

Tamara Miller always looks on the bright side of life. Page 38

Sports & Leisure

Judaism runs deep in Dan Shulman's life. Page 42

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 12
According to Reports 14
Jewish Life 18
Just Between Us 20
On Campus 22
Family Moments 23
What's New 24
Obituaries & Notices 26
Heebonics 28
Health & Lifestyles 30
Business 35
Books & Authors 39

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Canada, Israel co-operate on innovation

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Canada and Israel are stepping up efforts to create a framework that would make it possible for corporations from both countries to co-operate in money-making ventures in a number of high-tech sectors.

High-level meetings between the two sides have the potential of leading to historic and strategic alliances, said Henri Rothschild, president and CEO of International Science and Technology Partnerships Canada (ISTPCanada) and the Canada-Israel Industrial Research and Development Foundation (CIIRDF). "This is a major event in the life of Canada-Israel relations."

Canadian Industry Minister Tony Clement met recently with Israel's chief scientist Eli Opper as well as 50 officials from both countries at the Canada-Israel Technology Innovation Summit in Toronto. The event was hosted by National Research Council of Canada on behalf of the federal government. A follow-up conference is scheduled for Israel in 2011.

Tony Clement

The summit focused largely on collaborative efforts on water purification, renewable energy, and brain research. Rothschild believes that the great untapped potential for collaborative ventures between the two countries in these areas will benefit both.

"This is the first time Canada has ever engaged in this kind of discussion, and whatever emerges in terms of a robust collaborative process will be a model for other countries as well," he said.

CIIRDF "came up with the concept to begin with, and one of the models is a redefinition of a creative and expansive role to promote company to company relationships. We are creating a strong co-operative platform for company to company relationships... as well as a greater exchange of post-doctoral fellows and researchers," he said.

The ultimate goal is "to become business partners through commercialization of products that are developed."

Continued on page 12

Remembering during the rebuilding

A memorial for the victims was placed near Beit Oren, one week after the massive fire in the Carmel mountains. Thirty-eight cadets from the Prison Service officers' course were killed after their bus was caught in the fire as they headed to rescue prisoners from the Damon Prison. In all, 43 people died as a result of the fire, which was the worst in Israel's history. Restoration projects are now underway to reclaim the forest. Please see related story on page 32.

[Flash90 photo]

Vayechi
Candlelighting: 4:23
Havdalah: 5:29
Greater Toronto Area

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(U)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 015
PO BOX 972 STATION F 781
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

lews
m

Rabbinic ruling evokes wide condemnation – please see page 33

The News in Brief

Canada

Conference Call

OTTAWA — The Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture is accepting applications for its North American mini-Nahum Goldmann Fellowship, slated for March 27 to 29 in Ottawa. Organizers say it will offer an intensive experience in Jewish living, learning and leadership for men and women ages 25 to 40 who show serious interest in Jewish culture and a potential for individual growth and communal leadership. The foundation has organized 22 such meetings since 1987 in western and eastern Europe, as well as Australia, Southeast Asia, South Africa, South America and Israel. Titled "Redefining and Reconfiguring Our Normative Connections," the Ottawa event is the first in North America and will feature University of Ottawa history professor Irving Abella and Columbia University professor Saul Berman. For more information, call 212-425-6606, or e-mail office@mfjc.org.

Teen To Meet Jews

CALGARY — Calgary Jewish leaders will meet with a teen who admitted to spray-painting antisemitic slogans on two shuls and a Jewish community centre in November 2009. The boy, now 18, was 17 at the time of the attacks and can't be named under the Youth Criminal Justice Act. He pleaded guilty last July to wilfully promoting hatred and mischief causing damage to a place of worship. An official of the Calgary Jewish Community Council told reporters it's important for the teen, a known neo-Nazi, to learn about the Holocaust and that he hopes survivors will attend the meeting, slated for February. The teen will be sentenced March 4, after he turns 19. He's been free on bail since July and was to have been sentenced last week, after a meeting with Jewish leaders, but he couldn't be found because he had moved, the Calgary Herald reported.

World

Rain Destroys Shul

CARACAS — Heavy rains destroyed a piece of Venezuelan Jewish history dating from the colonial era, according to the Center for Sephardic Studies in Caracas. The roof of the 19th-century House of Prayer collapsed after nearly two weeks of unusually heavy rains. Located in Coro, five hours west of Caracas, the one-room building was used for prayer by Venezuela's first Jewish settlers, who came in the mid-1800s. A local Jewish preservation body had warned of the structure's decay and was seeking support for repairs.

Teens Charged

NEW YORK — Hate crimes charges were filed against two teens in an assault on at least one chassidic man in Brooklyn, N.Y. The teens were caught Dec. 6 by members of a Jewish volunteer patrol after the assault. Brian Pena, 15, and Pete Montanez, 14, allegedly attacked Moshe Guttman, 45, as he left a Chanukah party at Yeshiva Beer Hatorah. They were charged as minors with assault as a hate crime, but Jewish leaders want them charged as adults. Police are probing whether they're also responsible for a Nov. 25 attack on an employee leaving the same yeshiva.

Surkis Gets 45 Days In Jail For Child Porn

MONTREAL — Former Jewish community official Bill Surkis was sentenced last week to 45 days in prison for his conviction on child pornography charges.

Surkis, 71, must also perform 240 hours of community service and be on probation for three years, Judge Céline Lamontagne ruled.

Surkis, a onetime Quebec regional director of B'nai Brith Canada and, prior to that, executive director of the Montreal Holocaust Memorial Centre, avoided the Crown's demand that he be put on the national sex-offender registry. He will also not have to provide a DNA sample for the criminal DNA bank, nor will he be subject to Criminal Code provisions that restrict such offenders from contact with minors, as the Crown had requested.

Crown prosecutor Cynthia Gyenizse and Surkis' lawyer, Steven Slimovitch, agreed in October on the 45-day jail term – to be served on weekends – as well as community service and probation. That's the minimum sentence for Surkis' conviction on one count each of accessing and possessing child porn, downloaded from the Internet.

Surkis pleaded guilty to the charges last May. He was arrested in July 2009.

Although Surkis has been repeatedly identified by his past employment with B'nai Brith, the organization has disassociated itself from him. In a statement last week, it said that the "charges stem from a period in which Mr. Surkis had no connection to B'nai Brith Canada."

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol. XL, No. 49 (1,978)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Shen Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

J. Dahan, S. Epstein, B. Gladstone, D. Held, S. Horowitz, G. Koren, Rabbi D. Marmur, M. Mietkiewicz, P. Michaels, A. Rosenweig, L. Speisman
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, Jose De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr, Steven Cummings, Michael Goldbloom, Igor Korenzvit, Julia Koschitzky, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe
Directors

George A. Cohon, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Honourary Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.

CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

Stone Craft Monument Factory
Large inventory of top quality
Granite Monuments
in our own North York factory
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
Single Monuments $1400 | Double Monuments $2400
•Monuments Available Within 1 week
•Cemetery Lettering and Restoration
Serving the Jewish Community for Many Years
121 Brisbane Rd., #1 Downsview
416-667-1474
www.stonecraftmonuments.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel
www.steelesmemorial.com
•Current Listing of Funerals
•Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
•Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
•Kaddish Texts
•Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
•Jewish Holiday Dates
905-881-6003
Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

My Zaidy's Pizza
Cholov Yisroel
My Zaidy's Pizza & Bakery
9340 Bathurst St. at Rutherford
(in the new Longo's Plaza)
1 Dozen Bagels $2.99
Challah $1.99
Small Rye $1.99
Large Pizza Plain 16 inch $9.99
Large Container Soup $5.99
White or Whole Wheat Bread $1.99
Large Double Rye $2.25
Pick Up Only

The Canadian Jewish news
How To Reach Us
Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: 416-932-5095 Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 416-391-0949
E-mail: thecjn@gmail.com
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
Manufacturers of Custom-built Table Pads
• FREE IN-HOME SERVICE
• MADE IN CANADA
• BEST SERVICE-PRICE-QUALITY
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
TORONTO 416-283-2508 | HAMILTON 905-383-1343
CANADA WIDE 1-800-668-7439
www.ptpads.com

National

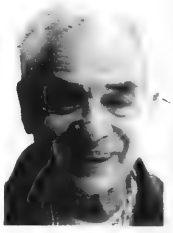
Greater Toronto Area

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future? Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

U of T's standards questioned in approving thesis

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Faculty at the University of Toronto should be "concerned" about the school's reputation for excellence after a master's thesis was approved that fell far short of acceptable academic standards, a retired sociology professor asserted last week.



Werner Cohn

Werner Cohn, who taught at the University of British Columbia, said "it's the university faculty who need to be concerned. It's their university that's under attack. [U of T's] Ontario Institute of Studies in Education [OISE] is becoming a huge liability to this truly great and famous institution."

Cohn has been at the forefront of those criticizing the university for granting a master's degree based on a thesis that focused on "Jewish racism" and denounced the March of the Living (MOL) and March of Remembrance and Hope (MRH) as promoting "Jewish victimhood."

The thesis, titled The Victimhood of the Powerful: White Jews, Zionism and the Racism of Hegemonic Holocaust Education, was submitted by Jennifer Peto as part of a master of arts degree in OISE's department of sociology and equity studies in education (SESE). OISE is a branch of U of T.

In a letter to U of T president David Naylor, Cohn argued the thesis is averse to empirical data and its author "makes wild… charges against her fellow Jews without a shred of evidence."

Last week, Cohn stepped up his critique, saying that "the Peto thesis is no aberration at OISE, and the public's attention should not be confined to it. On the contrary, the thesis is unfortunately rather typical of what is done at OISE, at least in [SESE]… OISE, or at least SESE, often resembles a political cult more than an institution of higher learning."

Cohn said he had looked at the abstracts (summaries) of 36 OISE theses and found 18 "were political without scholarly merit… I found a prima facie case that they're not scholarly."

Cohn went on to say the political approach in the theses all came from one particular side of the political spectrum. "Nobody said I'm a Christian, a conservative or a Zionist – God forbid."

"There's hypocrisy at the University of Toronto bureaucracy that says it defends freedom of speech. There is no freedom of speech for dissenters. It's a political cult without dissenters, and they've found a way for the public to finance it."

The university declined to take questions about the controversy. When first asked to comment about the thesis in late November, the university issued a statement by vice-president and provost Cheryl Misak that read in part:

"Due to our privacy obligations to students, I cannot discuss an individual student's academic work or his or her performance. What I can, say, however, is that freedom of expression issues are ever-present in our society, especially on a university campus. The University of Toronto's Statement on Freedom of Speech makes it clear that freedom of inquiry lies at the very heart of our institution.

"The university is committed to allowing and encouraging a full range of debate. The best way for controversy to unfold is for members of our community to engage with the perspectives and arguments they dispute. It is intelligent argument, not censorship, that lies at the heart of our democratic society and its institutions."

Last week, Misak issued a follow-up statement: "Nothing has happened in the last week to change our view. Please do remember that this is a piece of student work, submitted to be considered as part of the requirements for a master's degree, along with six courses. It was judged to be acceptable in that context."

Continued from page 12

Celebrate the Magic
$250 FREE
In Dining and Attractions Passes
Book your Hotel Waterpark Package
and receive $250 FREE in dining and attraction passes
WATERPARK PACKAGES FROM $159
Hotel Waterpark Package offers:
• Accommodations at Sheraton on the Falls, Crowne Plaza Fallsview, Skyline Inn or Hampton Inn by Hilton at the Falls
• 4 two day passes to Fallsview Indoor Waterpark
FALLS AVENUE
Sheraton on the Falls
CROWNE PLAZA
Skyline Inn
866.596.5234 • fallsviewwaterpark.com/cjnews

REDUCE RISK?
ENHANCE RETURNS?
ACHIEVE THE GOALS MOST IMPORTANT TO YOU.

Irwin Igra, Investment Advisor
Tel: (416) 646-6926
Wellington West Capital Inc.
Suite 501-4100 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario, M2P 2B5

WELLINGTON WEST
Capital Inc.
Wellington West Capital Inc., Member CIPF

Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings

A new service delivered straight to your email.

Michael Levitt,
Vice President Business Development,
The Benjamin Group

Every day, thousands of people visit the Benjamin's website to stay informed about deaths in the Jewish community.

Benjamin's is pleased to announce a new service that will deliver the news directly to your email – twice daily – so that you will always be kept up-to-date.

Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings is the most complete source for all Jewish funerals in the GTA, no matter where the service is being held. The Listings include details about funerals, shivas and unveilings. Whether you are in town or travelling, it's simply the best way to stay connected.

Sign up for Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings today. Just visit our website at www.benjamins.ca.

Through the generations... a sacred trust.

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services.

Greater Toronto Area

It's time they adjusted

From the editor's desk...

U.S. Special Mideast envoy George Mitchell is back in the Middle East on orders from Washington to shuttle between Israelis and Palestinians in his quixotic quest of a seemingly impossible dream: a peace agreement.

He probably hates the assignment. After all, he's been there before. Many times. He has been at it a long time.

He knows the parties. He knows the wariness of one, and the all-consuming, self-defining sense of grievance of the other. He knows the issues. And he knows the excuses.

He is returning because Washington has backed away from trying to squeeze a further three-month construction freeze from Israel on the West Bank and in east Jerusalem.

What was the substantive magic in three months, the administration correctly asked itself? That there may have been symbolic magic for the Americans in having Israel accede to the request is another matter. But would that have changed in the attitudes of the Palestinians when the three months had expired, yet still without an agreement in place?

The Americans knew and virtually admitted as much that the Palestinian Authority (PA) would resume pouting and complaining and then place new non-construction ultimatums in the path of bilateral negotiations. And then back to the same standoff as before.

In advance of Mitchell's arrival this week, PA leaders met in Ramallah to vent their wrath at what a key PA president Mahmoud Abbas' confidant, Yasser Abed Rabbo, bombastically referred to as "the first time since the Vietnam War that the U.S. declares its failure.

"We don't want to return to indirect talks to once again discuss agendas for the negotiations because we will then waste another year," Rabbo said.

Has Rabbo perhaps not noticed that neither does Israel wish to return to indirect talks. Indeed, Israel has been pleading with the PA for more than two years to set aside false postures, such as the construction freeze demand, and instead engage in direct, face-to-face bilateral negotiations on all aspects of a peace agreement.

The PA was as upset as it was surprised that the Americans finally gave up the chase for a futile construction freeze. How they respond to Mitchell's entreaties to continue with a peace process remains to be seen. As of this writing, the American envoy had not yet landed in Israel.

If the article written by chief PA negotiator Saeb Erekat last Friday in the Guardian is indicative of what the Americans and the Israelis can expect from the Palestinians now, then the discussions are in deep trouble and the possibility of a peace treaty between the contending neighbours is slight indeed.

Erekat placed the threshold issue of the right of return for Palestinian refugees squarely in the eye-catching middle of the negotiating table.

"Contrary to what Israeli political figures would like the world to believe," Erekat wrote, "the issue of Palestinian refugees is not an academic matter, the solution of which is somehow rendered moot by the passage of time and by the creation of Israeli 'facts on the ground.'"

The number of refugees today is "more than seven million people worldwide – 70 per cent of the entire Palestinian population" Erekat prevaricated.

And of course he blamed Israel for having created the problem.

"Israel bears responsibility for the creation of the refugees," Erekat casually wrote.

"Disregarding their legitimate legal rights enshrined in international law, their understandable grievances accrued over prolonged displacement, and their aspirations to return to their homeland, would certainly make any peace deal signed with Israel completely untenable... Any deal that does not respect the rights of refugees has been viewed as bearing the seed of its inevitable failure." (My emphasis)

Not surprisingly, Israeli officials threw up their hands in disbelief and encroaching despair. "Erekat says he wants peace, but by pursuing a hardline position on refugees, he is actually making peace more difficult," a Foreign Ministry official said.

Demanding of Israel that it author the script of its national suicide is simply not a reasonable negotiating stance.

Conferring a right of return for real or phony Palestinian refugees will spell the end of a Jewish majority in the Jewish state. Erekat and the entire PA leadership know this. But more to the point, they know that no Israeli government would ever or has ever agreed to it. And should the obvious not be stated at least here since it was not stated by Erekat in his Guardian essay?

The reason there were Palestinian refugees in 1948 – setting aside the question of their real number today or then – was because the Arab world refused to acknowledge the right of the Jews to a sovereign state. They attacked the nascent Jewish state hoping to destroy it at birth and to annihilate the Jewish people striving to live free in their own homeland. But the Arab states failed.

Israel was not destroyed, nor were its people thrown into the sea.

Sadly, the Palestinian leaders have not yet adjusted to that. For the sake of their people, it's time they did. –

MBD

SeeJN

STORM HITS ISRAEL

Israel's first real winter storm caused major damage throughout the country. The storm, which began Sunday and continued on Monday, included heavy rains and winds of up to 75 miles per hour that caused huge waves to wash up on Tel Aviv beaches, breaking windows and throwing café furniture. Ben-Gurion Airport closed to some flights on Sunday, and several planes were diverted to Cyprus, while thousands were without power due to downed electrical lines and damaged generators. Thirty-two weather-related injuries were reported. The storm also knocked out a sea wall protecting the Caesarea archeological site, exposing the walls of the ancient port and raising fears waves could cause irreparable damage.

Jewish War Vets seek to help needy members

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Jewish War Veterans of Canada, Toronto Post, is reaching out to members who are in financial need.

Treasurer Amek Adler said that a recent bequest has enabled the organization to distribute funds to veterans and family of veterans who are living near the poverty line.

Adler is a Holocaust survivor who lived in Italy after the war and worked with the Israeli Irgun Tzvai Leumi as part of a company that illegally shipped young men and women to pre-state Palestine. He's managing the fund with post commander Norm Gardner. Veterans or family of veterans who served in the Canadian Armed Forces – they must submit a regimental number – are eligible, Adler said. The money is being distributed through Jewish Family & Child.

Those eligible will receive a one-time gift of $500, he said. "This is the first time we're doing this, but we would like it to become annual. We're hoping to generate interest so that others will leave money as well."

Eric Kirsh, supervisor of the financial assistance and rehabilitation program at JF&CS, said prospective recipients will meet with a case worker who can determine what other services JF&CS can provide for them.

The $500 can come in very handy for someone who may need dental work, glasses or medication, or needs to repair an appliance, Kirsh said.

Adler said Jewish War Veterans has registered some 200 veterans, but only about 130 are paid up. "Maybe they don't pay because they can't afford the dues, but we don't turn anyone away."

Anyone interested in the one-time gift can call a JF&CS intake worker at 416-638-7800.

Alexis Wronzberg

Alexis showing results in Israel

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Alexis Wronzberg – the 27-year-old who received a potentially life-saving bone marrow and stem cell transplant from her mother last month at Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital – has started to show the hoped-for results.

Her blood work is moving toward normal and showing signs of engraftment, indicating that the new bone marrow and stem cells are starting to work, her father Rick told The CJN. As well, a recent bone marrow biopsy showed no signs of leukemia, he added.

In late September, Wronzberg suffered a recurrence of acute lymphoblastic leukemia. She travelled from Toronto to Israel for the $300,000 treatment, following an urgent fundraising campaign.

She no longer has to stay in the hospital, and her spirits are generally good, Rick said. Almost a dozen friends and family members have travelled to Israel to spend time with her.

However, she has been fighting infections and still has to be in the hospital as an outpatient five days a week.

"We're waiting for complete engraftment," Rick said, adding that her doctors are cautiously optimistic.

"One day at a time, but things are moving in the right direction."

Family

We believe that family is everything. That's why they're always welcome at Delmanor Northtown; and not just in your suite. Show them off in the internet lounge, teach them to putt on the putting green, or play piano or billiards in the lounge. There's even gardening in the potting room! The list is almost endless.

When you make Delmanor Northtown your home, there's no more household chores and lots of time for family so your family can enjoy Shabbat dinner in our gracious dining room. Of course, your suite has a kitchenette so you can still say "Ess a bisel eppis, tatelleh".

Discover this grand Tridel inspired retirement rental lifestyle with exceptional service. Come for a personal tour and lunch, or call to inquire about a free trial stay.

Act now to enjoy full hotel style service, including meals and limited time move in bonuses:
1 Bedroom rental suites from $ 3695
2 Bedroom rental suites from $ 4495

DELMANOR
Northtown

5351 Yonge, south of Finch • (416) 225-9146 • www.delmanor.com

TRIDEL

Technion engineers lend a hand in Nepal

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Mark Talesnick is holding up a wooden base with three wooden blocks attached to it at varying heights.

"Which one of these buildings would you want to be in during an earthquake?" he asks. The answer? The one that doesn't fall down.

Talesnick is a University of Toronto geological engineering graduate, a senior lecturer in the faculty of civil and environmental engineering at Israel's Technion Institute of Technology and a member of Engineers without Borders. He spoke Dec. 2 at Beth David Synagogue on "Engineering with Soul: Achievements of Israeli Engineers without Borders (EWB)."

Much of Talesnick's talk focused on what he calls the "global engineer," a new type of engineer for "the other 90 per cent" of the world's population.

Engineering schools worldwide tend to emulate the teaching lessons of schools in North America, he said, which is a problem – because those engineers are mainly taught how to build "80-storey buildings and six-lane highways.

"[We are] trying to create a new type of engineer at Technion, and it's working," he said.

One such example of "engineering for the other 90 per cent" is a project Talesnick, along with some Technion students, undertook in Nepal in conjunction with EWB to come up with a sustainable way for residents in rural villages to cook and heat their houses.

Engineer Mark Talesnick, centre, and two Technion students, Alaalden Samara, left, and Elad Katriel, are inside their "biogas digester" model, made of bamboo and sushi mats. The digester allows rural villagers in Nepal to cook and heat their houses in a sustainable way.

Before Technion students got involved in the project, 90 per cent of the population cooked using wood, Talesnick said. This was problematic because it caused depletion of natural resources, and the smoke generated from using wood for cooking often led to respiratory disease.

Their solution was to build a "biogas digester" – which uses water and animal manure or human waste to bring power to buildings – for every house in Namsaling, a village in Nepal.

There were already 200,000 digesters in Nepal, but the building process was very time consuming. First a pit had to be filled with soil, then a dome was shaped over it and concrete was laid over the surface of the dome. After the concrete was laid, the soil under the dome had to be removed.

Returning to Israel, the students got to work on a way to make the process of building a biogas digester easier. Using aluminum and Styrofoam, they built a dome that reduced the time and effort required to build the digesters. However, aluminum and Styrofoam are not readily available in Nepal, so a model made with bamboo and sushi mats is now used to build the digesters.

The use of biogas digesters doesn't result in deforestation, they provide cleaner energy, and there are no health-related problems with them. As well, the waste that comes out of the digesters can be used as fertilizer, Talesnick said.

His goal for this type of engineering, what he calls "engineering with soul" is to get three per cent of civil engineering students involved, he said.

"If we don't change the way we teach engineering, the globe will collapse."

Israel's finest memories...

Eldan, Israel's leading car rental company, offers you
The Best Way to Experience Israel eldanrac

www.eldan.co.il/en

Cemetery hopes new plots will finance upkeep

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Philip Covshoff, president of Bathurst Lawn Memorial Park, has a "simple" task ahead of him.

He has to convince 49 Jewish organizations to agree on a single issue.

Covshoff, an auditor originally from Montreal who has been president for about two years, said there's excess land in the cemetery that he'd like to use for community plots.

"The problem is that about 55 organizations have the right of way to this land, and our mission is to get 49 of these organizations to see the land's potential."

Three years ago, he said, the association built a new road in the 26-acre cemetery – located on Bathurst Street between Finch and Steeles avenues – and redeveloped some vacant land to create community plots. These plots are managed by Jewish Cemetery Management Inc. (JCMI), a Bathurst Lawn group that takes on the work of organizations that no longer want to operate their cemetery sections themselves.

"Bathurst Lawn is not an owner, so a separate entity was set up, and it is that entity that owns section 55," the section that was developed three years ago.

He wants to use the same formula to develop the excess land, he said. "The money earned from these plots – there would be about 1,100 and would be sold for about $4,300 each – would be split between Bathurst Lawn and JCMI. We would have a fund of money, and the interest could be used to continue the care and maintenance of the cemetery."

He said that under the Ontario Cemeteries Act, 40 per cent of the sale of cemetery plots must go into a fund for care and maintenance, "but many organizations did not put this money aside. As the cemetery ages and fewer organizations have money for maintenance, we will need a fund to keep it up."

About 50 per cent of the community does not belong to an organization and would benefit from a community section, he said. "People have already come to us and told us they're interested, but we have to get our right of way."

As an auditor, Covshoff said he's good at correcting problems, "and this is an opportunity to eliminate a problem. Once we get our approval, there's minimal work to get it processed."

In other news, Covshoff said Bathurst Lawn is in the process of rebuilding its office structure. "Our 55-year-old building needed a lot of work, and we realized that rebuilding – it should be ready in October 2011 – made more sense than renovating."

For information on the proposed new cemetery section, call 416-223-1373.

Jewish life returning to Kishinev

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

For those with a feel for Jewish history, the city of Kishinev is inevitably linked with pogroms and antisemitism.

In 1903 and then again in 1905, under the Russian czar, mobs enraged by stories of a blood libel murdered dozens of Jews and wounded hundreds more. The events were an international cause celebre at the time, and renowned poet Chaim Nahman Bialik penned his famous work In the City of Slaughter based on events there.

The pogroms prompted a substantial emigration from the Bessarabian capital.

Things only got worse during the Nazi occupation, when 100,000 Jews were killed. Following the collapse of the Soviet Union, thousands jumped at the opportunity to depart for Israel and western nations.

Today there are only 7,000 to 10,000 Jews in Kishinev and in other centres of the independent state of Moldova, Yisrael Livshits believes.

Livshits, 39, is a native of Kishinev who made aliyah to Israel in 1991 but returned 3-1/2 years ago to help revitalize the Jewish community there.

During his sojourn in Israel, Livshits became observant and knowledgeable about Jewish culture, tradition and lifestyles. Working under the principle of "Torah v'avodah" (Torah and good works), he's attempting to transfer that knowledge to Jews who have chosen to remain in Moldova.

It's a daunting task, he said last week during a two-week visit to Toronto and Montreal. "After 70 years of the Soviet regime, they didn't give any opportunity to local Jews to develop Jewish traditions."

Since his return, Livshits has been a sort of Jewish jack-of-all-trades for the community there. He serves as schoichet and mohel, runs the chevra kadisha, makes sure the cemeteries are in good condition and officiates at one of the city's two synagogues. The other is under the supervision of a Chabad Lubavitch rabbi.

He also oversees production of a local kosher wine, which "is very good quality based on an old Moldovan village technique" and which he hopes to eventually export to raise funds for the community.

A secular Jew when he first moved to Israel, after serving in the army and studying business, he and other expats from the former Soviet Union began taking an interest in religious studies. They gathered and read the Talmud, becoming more observant. "Baruch Hashem, I started to keep Jewish traditions," he said.

Kishinev Jews, many still traumatized by an antisemitic tradition that was common to the Czarist and Communist eras, are reluctant to identify openly as Jews, he said. That may be why the Jewish Agency estimates there are 25,000 Jews in Moldova, a figure he disputes, though "nobody knows for sure," he said.

Today there is little open antisemitism – at least by earlier standards – and a few Jews sit in the Moldovan parliament. There are also a few-high profile successful Jewish businesspeople and "the Moldovan people respect the Jews, as they give a lot to the local economy," he said.

As Jewish life revives, the community supports two Jewish public schools, which, Livshits notes, also attract non-Jews because of their quality. There's also a Jewish kindergarten, a library, a cultural centre and the synagogues with two mikvahs.

Outside the capital, however, there are few Jewish facilities, he added.

It's all a far cry from the situation in the early part of the 20th century, when Jews were about one-third of the population and the region was home to 72 synagogues. More than half were destroyed by the Nazis, and the rest were confiscated by Soviet authorities and put to other uses. Since the disintegration of the Soviet state, one of the synagogues has been returned to the community.

Yisrael Livshits, seen here with a grape harvest, hopes to market kosher wine based on traditional Moldovan techniques.

Livshits officiates at the Sciusev Street synagogue, which attracts 50 worshippers to Shabbat services. On High Holidays, some 100 people attend services. The Chabad house of worship attracts similar numbers, he added.

"We have built a little religious community, but even some non-religious people come to Shabbat and holiday services," he said.

Needless to say, operating facilities costs money, and one of the reasons for his presence in Canada was to meet people with ties to Moldova to seek their support and to solicit investors in the kosher wine business.

"We want to build a working, fundraising community that doesn't need support from outside... and restore Jewish life as it was for thousands of years," he said.

GETAWAY FOR A DAY

Every Thursday from December 16th to April 28th
Experience a Taste of Kensington Place

If you're curious about whether retirement residence living is right for you, try it out for the day at Kensington Place. For a limited time, we're offering a very special "Getaway for a Day" program that will give you the opportunity to sample all that Kensington Place has to offer – while also benefiting the National Council for Jewish Women. For a nominal donation of $25 you'll enjoy a full day at Kensington Place, including:

- Hair styling, manicure and pedicure
- Fitness program
- Delicious kosher lunch
- Afternoon recreation program
- Use of a fully furnished private suite all day long
- And even a kosher dinner!

The $25.00 cost will go to support the National Council of Jewish Women's Passover Food Drive. Space is going quickly so call to reserve.

Call Lisa to reserve, arrange transportation or to book a tour today!

Living Life RETIREMENT RESIDENCES Your Lifestyle Your Way

Kensington Place

(416) 636-9555
For a full list of our free events visit www.thekensingtonplace.com
866 Sheppard Ave. West

TORONTO'S FINEST KOSHER RETIREMENT RESIDENCE COR

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor

The Canadian Jewish News is incorporated without share capital

Head Office

[illegible] Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 1X4

These are not the values of Israel

Some weeks ago the chief rabbi of Safed, Shmuel Eliahu, publicly offered that Jews should not rent or sell property to non-Jews. He was criticized for his abhorrent views. To his defence, alas, some 39 other local, municipally appointed rabbis signed a decree that sought to justify his execrable opinion in religious terms on the basis of Halachah.

That was too much for the rest of the country.

The statement of the signatory rabbis is now being investigated by Israel's attorney general, Yehuda Weinstein, to see whether it is legally offensive. That it was morally offensive is incontrovertible.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu severely condemned the rabbis' decree. "Such things cannot be said, not about Jews and not about Arabs. They cannot be said in any democratic country, and especially not in a Jewish and democratic one. The State of Israel rejects these sayings."

President Shimon Peres expressed what most Israelis felt. "The rabbis' letter creates a fundamental moral crisis in Israel which affects the definition of Israel as a Jewish and democratic state. The State of Israel is composed of Jewish citizens and non-Jewish citizens, and we all have the same rights, which include the right to practice any religion. This fundamental right is engraved in our Declaration of Independence, as well as in legislation forged in the Knesset. I call on all of us to keep intact the true nature of the democratic, Jewish and egalitarian State of Israel."

Many rabbis also rejected the decree. The two chief rabbis of the state have condemned the statement. Rabbi Ovadiah Yosef, spiritual leader of the Shas party, refused to join his name to the decree. Rabbi Yosef Shlomo Elyashiv, head of the non-chassidic Ashkenazi haredi community, rejected the decree with the pointed message, "I've said for some time that there are rabbis who must have their pens taken away from them."

David Rosen, the Jerusalem-based international director of interreligious affairs of the American Jewish Committee, perhaps said it best when he wrote of Rabbi Eliahu and his colleagues that they "represent not only a halachic regression and a capitulation to scaremongering, but they are guilty of nothing less than chilul hashem, a desecration of the Divine Name, and an embarrassment to our Jewish heritage."

In effect, the entire secular and observant establishment in Israel rejected the reprehensible outlook and teaching espoused by Rabbi Eliahu of Safed and his supporters. Their values are not the values of the State of Israel, they have proclaimed loudly.

We cannot urge the "moderates" of other religions to reject the dreadful attitudes and the behaviour of their extremists if we ourselves do not do the same. We, therefore, join in rejecting and condemning these rabbis' detestable decree. They do not speak for Israel.

25 years ago in The CJN

Herbert Marx was appointed Quebec justice minister by premier Robert Bourassa, making him the second Jewish cabinet minister in Quebec history. Marx, then 53, had been MNA for the Montreal riding of D'Arcy McGee since 1979. Victor Goldbloom was Quebec's first Jewish cabinet minister, having been named environment minister in 1970 during Bourassa's first stint as premier.

Dry Bones PSSST!
DID YOU HEAR WHAT HILLARY CLINTON . . .
JUST SAID ABOUT THE "PEACE PROCESS?
NO
BUT I WON'T BELIEVE IT
UNTIL I READ IT ON WIKILEAKS!
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Aboodi, Maurice Bezzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Survivor objects to 'Jewish racism' thesis

I have read the thesis The Victimhood of the Powerful. White Jews, Zionism and the Racism of Hegemonic Holocaust Education, by Jennifer Peto ("Critics slam thesis that alleged 'Jewish racism,'" Nov. 25; also see page 3 in this issue). As a Holocaust survivor who has accompanied hundreds of students on 10 trips of the March of the Living, and once on the March of Remembrance and Hope, I take issue with the criticism of both in Peto's thesis. Both trips are committed to teaching universal lessons of tolerance and empathy, using the Holocaust as a terrible example of where intolerance, racism, antisemitism and denial of human rights can lead.

It's not true, as Peto states, that "human rights discourse is instrumental in deflecting criticism of Israel" or used "to further Zionist political goals and Zionist ideology." She herself says that she did not interview any March of the Living participants or Remembrance and Hope students, or anyone connected with these trips. As I understand, she herself had never been on either trip.

I know from experience how committed students are to learning the lessons of the Holocaust when they return from a march. They dedicate themselves to making the world a better place, and are more aware of and involved with social causes. Many of the students have kept in touch with me, and many of them have chosen helping professions – social work, medicine and teaching. One of them is even teaching law in Gambia.

Anita Ekstein
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Peace with neighbours

Is it possible the miracle of Chanukah has unfolded with Palestinians helping Israelis to fight the forest fire ("Netanyahu thanks international community for aid," Dec. 9)? May they continue to seek peace with their neighbours, and may the brave and compassionate souls of the Jewish prison guards who lost their lives saving Palestinian prisoners rest peacefully in the world to come.

Debbie Bauer
Toronto

* * *

90 years of history

I'm a retired detective of the Toronto Police Service and a professor in justice studies. I'm very disappointed to hear that there is a move to abolish the current divisions of community representation and create a "single Jewish public affairs organization encompassing the national and regional level" ("Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan," Nov. 25).

As a former detective in the Toronto Police Hate Crime Unit, I was privileged to have known such a great group of advocates in the Canadian Jewish Congress. Police officers in Toronto are aware of the great work and advocacy services that are provided by the known entity, the "Canadian Jewish Congress." Mind you, this was not always the case. It has taken years for the CJC educational outreach process to take place within the police ranks and communities at large. Today, police officers are in a better position of knowing how to access advocates in human rights.

Removing the name "Canadian Jewish Congress" is not cost effective, nor is it an efficient move. In the ever-shifting trends of global unrest and antisemitism, we cannot afford to have ambiguity or confusion of where law enforcement can refer or access the services of Jewish advocates. As a law enforcement officer, I always felt that a timely and proactive response to injustices in the Jewish community of Toronto created good partnerships with the community. Much of this was possible thanks to the educational process that the Canadian Jewish Congress had undertaken for the Toronto Police Service. As a citizen of this great city and country, I would ask that the decision-makers in this amalgamation keep the name "Canadian Jewish Congress" so that 90 years of history won't be lost.

Dino Doria
Toronto

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1636

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

* * *

Distressed by Claims Conference fraud

Triggered by the article "17 arrested in $42.5-million fraud at Claims Conference" (Nov 18), I strung together a few words that have been gathered from a pool of anguish. Imagine how many beds could have been installed at Baycrest to accommodate ailing survivors lingering on the waiting list and how many caregivers could have been retained for needy survivors had the $42.5 million been given to sustain survivors. My comment about this situation is called Birds of Prey Any Day or Night: "From Leningrad Stalingrad Shtetlgrad/ Forty two+1/2 million preying sorties/ Swooped down on six million dead/ To pick on filmy bones./ In broad daylight they picked/ Bon Appetit/ "Easy pick," Madoff said,/ In Memory of the Dead."

Eli Pfefferkorn
Toronto

For more letters, see cjnews.com.

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Recognition of a Palestinian state is premature

Legally invalid and undermines negotiation process

By ALAN BAKER

The reported declarations of formal recognition by Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, and possibly other Latin American states of a "free and independent Palestinian state within the 1967 borders" raise several significant issues – both political and legal – in the bilateral political relationship between Israel and those states, and between Israel and the Palestinian Authority.

Recognition of a political entity as a state does not, in and of itself, create a state, as such recognition carries no definitive or substantive significance in the creation of statehood. At most, it is indicative of the political viewpoints of the recognizing states.

Establishment of statehood, on the other hand, requires a series of internationally accepted and customary criteria, as set out in the 1933 Montevideo Convention on the Rights and Duties of States, relating to a capability of governance, permanent population, defined territory, and capacity to enter into relations with other states.

In fact, that convention specified specifically that "the political existence of the state is independent of recognition by the other states."

But in the Palestinian context, these criteria for statehood must be read in the context of the substantive, tailor-made requirements of the various United Nations resolutions dealing with the settlement of the Middle East issue, as well as the specific commitments by the Palestinians in several still-valid agreements signed with Israel over the years.

This factor was perhaps amplified following a Palestinian attempt to declare statehood in 1988, when more than 100 states gave their recognition. But clearly, this unilateral Palestinian attempt to dictate a solution to the Israel-Palestinian issue outside the internationally accepted and sponsored peace negotiation process established by the UN Security Council in resolutions 242 (1967) and 338 (1973) was never seen to be a serious factor in solving the issue.

Thus, any act of recognition of a Palestinian state, whether by Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay or anyone else, can have no validity whatsoever other than as some sort of political expression. To the contrary – such declarations of recognition run counter to the very resolutions to which those states are party, and to the agreements that they themselves have, over the years, endorsed and supported.

Interestingly, the present instance of the Brazilian declaration of recognition of a Palestinian state within "the 1967 borders" would appear to run counter to Brazil's own statement to the Security Council during the course of its acceptance of and support for Resolution 242, in November 1967, when Brazil's representative declared: "Its acceptance does not imply that borderlines cannot be rectified as a result of an agreement freely concluded among the interested states. We keep constantly in mind that a just and lasting peace in the Middle East has necessarily to be based on secure permanent boundaries freely agreed upon and negotiated by the neighbouring states."

Alan Baker

In fact, a draft resolution submitted to the emergency session of the UN General Assembly by 18 Latin American states (including Brazil and Argentina) on June 30, 1967, included a call to the parties "to end the state of belligerency, to endeavor to establish conditions of coexistence based on good neighbourliness and to have recourse in all cases to the procedures for peaceful settlement indicated in the charter of the United Nations."

Thus, the vital and overriding principles advocated by Brazil, Argentina and other states in 1967 – endorsing boundaries being freely agreed upon, good neighbourliness and peaceful settlement procedures pursuant to the UN Charter – would appear to have been overlooked by the recent decision of the Brazilian and Argentine governments, at the behest of the Palestinian leaders, to favour unilateral Palestinian dictation of a boundary, without agreement, in violation of any notion of "good neighbourliness," and undermining the UN-sanctioned peaceful settlement procedures.

However, while Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay may well be undermining their own declared principles, the Palestinian Authority leadership – in actively lobbying for such recognition throughout the world as part of a declared and concerted aim to achieve recognition by the United Nations of a unilaterally declared Palestinian state, and acknowledgement of the 1967 lines as its border – is in fact undermining the whole peace negotiation process and abusing the bona fides of the international community.

Legally speaking, the actions by Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas, and his aide Saeb Erekat, in pushing to achieve this aim are in violation of the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement of 1995, article IX, paragraph 5(a), according to which "the [Palestinian] Council will not have powers and responsibilities in the sphere of foreign relations, which sphere includes the establishment abroad of embassies, consulates or other types of foreign missions and posts or permitting their establishment in the West Bank or the Gaza Strip, the appointment of or admission of diplomatic and consular staff, and the exercise of diplomatic functions."

No less importantly, the Palestinian leadership is committed, in Article XXXI, paragraph 7, not to "initiate or take any step that will change the status of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip pending the outcome of the permanent status negotiations."

Any activity by the Palestinian leadership, including lobbying foreign governments for individual recognition and initiating resolutions in United Nations organs to bring about the unilateral establishment a state outside the negotiation process, is a serious violation of their commitments vis-a-vis Israel. It is tantamount to bypassing the internationally accepted negotiating process, and undermining the very resolutions and agreements that serve as the basis and foundation for the peace-negotiation process.

Since the Palestinian commitments vis-a-vis Israel were witnessed and guaranteed by central elements of the international community, including the United States, the United Nations, the European Union, Russia, Egypt, and Jordan, and endorsed by most other states, including Brazil and Argentina, then clearly Palestinian lobbying activities must be condemned by those elements and should not be encouraged by them.

This problem becomes even more complex given the background of the ongoing and concerted efforts by the Palestinian leadership to block any progress in the negotiating process through their misleading demand that Israel freeze all settlement activity – a demand that has no basis whatsoever in the series of agreements between Israel and the Palestinians.

In addition to the above, it would appear that the Palestinian leadership is, by its own hand, undermining and prejudicing any negotiating ambiance or good faith between the two sides through a series of offensive actions such as

- hostile statements by their chief negotiators, both vis-a-vis the internal Palestinian population and vis-a-vis the international community;
- open encouragement and initiation of legal proceedings in international as well as foreign national courts against Israeli leaders and officials, and other activities in foreign states aimed at undermining Israel's status;
- attempts to utilize and abuse the international community to question the national and historical heritage of the Jewish people, and
- daily official incitement in schools, universities and the Palestinian media.

Clearly this activity – openly, officially, and even proudly sponsored and supported by the head of the Palestinian Authority, Mahmoud Abbas, and the head of the negotiation division of the Authority Saeb Erekat – in addition to its inherent and obvious bad taste, is utterly incompatible with any negotiating ambiance.

How, one might ask, can the Palestinian leadership expect to instil confidence in the Israeli government and public while at the same time engaging in a policy of maligning Israel and its leaders, seeking to delegitimize Israel, and undermining the agreed-upon negotiating process that is aimed at achieving peace between the two peoples?

Alan Baker is director of the Institute for Contemporary Affairs at the Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs. He's also a former legal adviser to Israel's Foreign Ministry and Israel's former ambassador to Canada, and he participated in negotiating and drafting the Oslo accords.

File photo of Mahmoud Abbas speaking in Ramallah on the anniversary of Yasser Arafat's death. [Flash90 photo]

Opinions

We've never had it so good

Harold Troper's new book, The Defining Decade, documents the transformation of Canadian Jewry in the 1960s into the respected and influential minority that it is today. Though we're barely one per cent of the population, our presence is felt far beyond our numbers. We're widely regarded as the most integrated minority in the country.

Rabbi Dovic Marmur in Toronto

But not all Jews experience it that way. Many continue to see themselves as victims of antisemitism, at best enjoying a respite from discrimination and often pointing to the pockets in society where they aren't welcome, usually the odd private club where the movers and shakers huddle together to keep out Jews. Even when the evidence is questionable, the sense of unease remains strong and painful.

Whenever I venture to suggest that Jews have never had it so good, I encounter opposition from the most unexpected quarters, sometimes even from those who have made it big in the country. Should my Jewish interlocutors occasionally concede that things are good in Canada nowadays, they'll hasten to recall blatant past antisemitism and its continued traces, often manifest in what they perceive as the persistently and perniciously negative image of Israel in the media.

Thus, for example, instead of celebrating the fact that almost all young Jews in Canada get a university education, we're told again and again about what's at times bombastically described as "the campus wars," because of the actions of some student groups led by Muslim and left-wing hotheads who maliciously castigate Israel and its defenders. Though the glass may not be full to the brim, many mislead us to believe that it's more than half-empty.

Some Jewish organizations appear to fuel this version of the story. For as Troper has shown, the danger to Israel around the 1967 Six Day War mobilized the Jewish community in ways thought impossible before. There has been a desire to retain the momentum in order to continue the mobilization in the laudable pursuit of building Jewish institutions here and supporting worthy causes in Israel. Some seem to fear that satisfaction will lead to complacency.

But whereas this negative attitude may still cut ice with the older generation that remembers what Canada was like before the 1960s, when many came here as Holocaust survivors, the reluctance to celebrate achievements and enjoy them is bound to have a negative effect on the young.

That's implied in Peter Beinart's widely publicized analysis of why many American Jews keep away from the community, especially in its relations with Israel. Canada may soon be in the same leaky boat.

To learn, to grow

This being my last regular op-ed contribution to The CJN, I'd like to comment, once again, on two connected notions about contemporary Jewish life: creativity and education. I haven't added my usual adjective, "Jewish," to these two nouns, because I don't believe these ideas are unique to Jews and Judaism. However, since my life's work has been primarily in the Jewish world, I can only speak intelligently and from experience of the particular nature of current Jewish existence.

Seymour Epstein in Toronto

First though, let me tell my readers of an exhilarating experience I just had at a conference near Baltimore. For some years now, a movement has been growing in Israel around the revival of piyutim, Jewish liturgical poetry from all ages and across the globe. This revival has attracted religious and secular, Ashkenazi and Sephardi, urban and rural, etc. You can visit the rich and inspiring fruit of their enthusiasm by clicking on www.piyut.org.il and spending many hours listening to our musical and spiritual heritage.

Some synagogue renewal folks, mostly cantors and rabbis, decided to bring "Invitation to Piyut" to North America for a four-day conference of lots of singing and praying. Of course, the major difference between such interest in Israel and its parallel in North America is that in Israel, much of the excitement is due to the ongoing revival of Mizrachi culture, a phenomenon that doesn't exist on this side of the water. Also, the folks who are interested in piyutim here are almost all from various religious camps, mostly of the liberal variety. No problem. If anything, that underscores the need for an honest bridge that both respects the differences and illustrates the potential for dialogue.

At the conference, I was asked to give a brief introduction to Kel Adon, an ancient piyut that has become a standard part of the Shabbat morning service. We learned a North African melody that haunts the soul, but not before I explained that this piyut is part of the service that speaks of God as creator of light and many other things. My teaching was that the unknown author, in writing such an inspired and beautiful poem, was stating that we, too, can be creative in human imitation of God's transcendent creativity – indeed, that we are God's partners in creation, an authentic rabbinic notion.

Now, do you see why I told you about the conference? Over many years of writing CJN columns, I have often indicated my dislike for Jewish survival tactics, claiming that they under-value our mission. We must gear our efforts to creative growth, not mere survival.

The term I most despise is "Jewish continuity," since I believe we must constantly interface Jewish life with our current situation, both its freedoms and its limitations. And that involves growth and development, not a mere continuation of the past. Of course, it also requires deep knowledge of our past – laws, customs, history, literature, spirituality, and the constant dialogue between those values and where we found ourselves in time and space.

That kind of creativity demands Jewish education of the most profound variety. I have said it before and I'm happy to say it again: essential, pervasive, and strategic are the three best descriptors of Jewish education. It must be essential to all we are, since without it we are not uniquely Jewish. It must pervade every aspect of our community so that its values can guide us. And Jewish education is the only true strategic plan of the Jewish community. It provides our future.

I have come to believe that our goals should be those of pride and courage. We must educate our young to be proud of a rich past replete with meaningful teachings for us and the entire world, and we must train for courage to creatively apply those teachings to new situations that require fresh solutions. It can be anything from a new prayer to a new vaccine.

We have succeeded in the past and will do so in the future if our education is geared to creative growth, not mere survival.

Why the humanities crisis should concern you

Be worried about trends on university campuses.

No doubt, you've heard that alarm sounded. What happens on university campuses is of great interest to the public at large, and perhaps of particular interest to the Jewish community. Most of us are university graduates, and we look to send – or we have sent or will send – our children to earn university degrees. In our workplaces, many of us seek to hire people who have university degrees, and many of our neighbours benefited from higher education.

Sara R. Horowitz in Toronto

Canadian society acknowledges the importance of higher education by making high-quality university affordable, relative to burgeoning costs south of the border. As a culture, we look to universities not only to train the future work force, but to prepare the future citizenry to exercise its responsibilities to develop and maintain democratic values. Beyond the pragmatic values of the right degree in providing entry into a desired career, a university education teaches critical and analytic thinking, awareness of other cultures, and other things vital to understanding the implications of an increasingly globalized world.

As a university professor, I have a special interest in reading about higher education. I have become accustomed to hearing about my own university in alarmist terms, often by people who have not set foot in our campus and in ways that are not entirely accurate. Our community is right to focus concern about what takes place at the institutes of higher education that train our children and our fellow citizens. But, except for the pages of professional publications geared toward professors and administrators, I rarely come across discussion of what I believe should most concern us: the inexorable suffocation of the humanities and the liberal arts.

Have no doubt: the humanities are in crisis, not only at Canadian universities, but at American ones and Israeli ones, as well. Humanities departments – history, literature, languages – are shrinking, the victim of budgetary crises faced by universities and the families of students who enrol in their programs.

A major American university several hours away from Toronto, for example, recently announced as a budget-cutting measure that – with the exception of Spanish – there will be no language majors or minors, which is to say, no way to study most languages and their attendant literatures and cultures beyond the first few years of basic language instruction. In other words, as the executive director of the professional association representing North American literature and language professors has noted, there will be no courses beyond those that students might access in high school. Classics, too, was pulled off the university curriculum. And all this as universities promote the values of cross-cultural awareness and the demands of globalization in business and professions.

In Israel, I was part of a delegation of leaders in Jewish studies that met with President Shimon Peres to express our concern that Israeli institutions were losing ground rapidly as a result of budgetary cuts.

What does the humanities crisis mean for Jewish studies and Jewish life on Canadian campuses? Here, too, humanities departments must accommodate themselves to diminished funding. Across Canada, venerable programs have been faced with the threat of closure because, despite their reputations, they serve only a select group of students. Courses that are significant to certain academic or career pathways but don't attract vast numbers face a similar threat. Think about Hebrew- or Yiddish-language courses. Think about Jewish culture, history, literature – the place not only to enrich the intellectual lives of Jewish students, but the means to familiarize other students with (and to combat misconceptions about) Judaism, Jewish history and Jewish values.

The product of the intersection of economic pressure with utilitarian approaches to higher education, the crisis in the humanities threatens to remove from university curricula what has always been at the centre of the mission of higher education: fostering the intellectual models that help us to understand our place historically and culturally, to think about the future we wish to create, and to speak productively and sensitively across cultural, linguistic and geographic boundaries.

The Kirshner File

Defeat in 1945 transformed Germany

Writing in his diary on the last day of 1944, Joseph Goebbels, Nazi Germany's propaganda minister, predicted, "I believe that the year 1945 will be a very stormy one for us."

He was absolutely right

Less than two weeks later, the Red Army stormed into Germany in the greatest offensive in military history, causing massive casualties and immense property damage and destroying the murderous regime's last flimsy hope of forestalling defeat in World War II

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

"In January 1945, the roof caved in on the Third Reich," writes Richard Bessel in his excellent book, Germany 1945: From War to Peace (HarperCollins).

By the time the Nazis surrendered, 65 years ago, Germany lay prostrate, its sovereignty extinguished, its infrastructure smashed, its economy paralyzed, its cities devastated by Allied bombing raids, its population largely demoralized, hungry and homeless, its armed forces disbanded, its government nonexistent and its territory occupied by foreign armies.

The shock of it all, Bessel observes, ultimately had a positive effect, compelling Germans to abandon racist and imperialist fantasies and making it possible for Germany to re-embrace civilized values and transform itself into a lively democracy in the second half of the 20th century.

If it had been left up to Adolf Hitler, Germany would have continued fighting to the last German. In the Nazi leadership's vision, the war would end in a battle of attrition in which the fanatically committed German people would grind down Allied armies and break their will to fight. Cooler heads, however, prevailed and Germany, though having been thoroughly defeated, saved itself from a still worse fate.

Nonetheless, as Bessel points out, Germany in 1945 lay in utter ruins, politically, socially, economically and morally. Although the Wehrmacht, the German army, had not yet collapsed, its casualties were no longer sustainable. In January alone, more than 450,000 German soldiers were killed, compared to 185,000 in January 1943.

Meanwhile, nearly half a million German civilians were killed as the Allied bombing campaign reached its terrifying peak, while millions more fled westward as the Red Army inexorably advanced into the eastern part of the country.

Amid this gargantuan exodus, Germans scrambling to survive discovered that transportation and telecommunication systems had broken down, that gas and electricity supplies had been cut, that water and sewerage systems had been severely damaged and that food supplies were precarious.

Surveying the disaster that had befallen Germany, a regional German politician likened Germany's defeat in 1918 to a tempest in a teacup compared to the "typhoon" of 1945.

Clearly, the waning months of 1945 were by far the bloodiest of the war, which Germany had started with its brazen invasion of Poland in 1939. More Germans were killed during that period than in 1942 and 1943 combined.

The arrival of the Red Army ushered in an orgy of looting, violence and rape. "The horrors that the Nazi regime had perpetrated against others across Europe were now visited on Germans themselves," says Bessel.

For many Berliners, the postwar era began with rampant sexual brutality as Soviet troops raped or gang-raped German women in their homes, often in front of their children. The behaviour of some French soldiers, particularly Moroccans, was not much better.

The Soviet high command had ordered soldiers to avoid contact with the civilian population, but Moscow's vengeful anti-German propaganda swept away calls for restraint.

To Bessel, the forced removal of millions of Germans from their homes in eastern German provinces such as Silesia and West Prussia probably cast the darkest shadow.

By his estimate, 5.6 million Germans were expelled from these areas, while even a greater number were driven out of Poland, Romania, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and the Baltic states, where ethnic Germans had lived for generations.

The expulsions changed the complexion of Europe and created "a sense of victimhood" among millions of Germans who would never see their homes and lands again.

"When the Second World War ended, Germany had become a land of the homeless, the dispossessed and the displaced," Bessel notes. "Never before in its history had the country contained so many people who had lost their homes, who had been evacuated, expelled, uprooted, imprisoned."

Of all the displacees, the predicament of Jews was the most difficult.

Though 15,000 German Jews had managed to survive, saved by their Christian spouses or their hiding places, the vast majority of Jews in Germany in 1945 were Polish and Hungarian nationals.

Having been pushed into Germany after suffering through the Nazi occupation or spending the war in the Soviet Union, they were usually the sole surviving members of their families.

German civilians surrender to American soldiers in April 1945.

Profoundly uprooted, they had no desire to return to their homelands.

All in all, 250,000 Jewish refugees, among whom were my parents, David and Genia, found temporary refuge in the U.S. and British zones. Originally, they were thrown together with other Europeans, some of whom had been Nazi collaborators. When the inevitable tensions flared, the Allies concluded that separate displaced persons camps would have to be built for Jews.

The first such facility was set up in Feldafing, south of Munich. This was not too long after Allied soldiers stumbled upon emaciated Jews in Bergen-Belsen and Dachau, recoiling in disgust and anger.

German Jews who decided to remain in Germany after the Nazi nightmare re-established prewar Jewish communities, first in Cologne, Munich and Hamburg and then in Mainz and Bonn, which would be the capital of the new West Germany after 1949.

Not surprisingly, there was friction between German and Yiddish-speaking Polish Jews, some of whom were accused of black market activity.

"Jewish DPs were probably no more involved in black market trading than the German population or occupation soldiers had been," Bessel writes. But their "conspicuous presence seemed to confirm the stereotype that Jews engaged in illicit trading and shied away from supposedly honest, constructive work," he adds.

Despite expectations by the American army that the Allied occupation might be disrupted by a German insurgency, no such thing ever happened. Germans were simply too busy rebuilding their lives and trying to forget the Nazi interregnum.

In reconstructing western Germany, the Allies chose German partners who had been prominent anti-Nazis and experienced civil servants as well. The Soviets, in the eastern zone, selected anti-fascists who had been members of the German Communist party prior to the war.

As for de-Nazification, the Americans generally viewed it as a moral crusade, while the Soviets used it to eliminate Germans who stood in the way of fundamental social and economic change.

Some American politicians, notably Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, a Jew, wanted to gut Germany of its industrial base and turn it into a pastoral nation that could never wage war again. But with the Cold War looming, his vision was still-born.

The Americans wanted to reform, stabilize and democratize Germany, and this is what they ultimately achieved in West Germany and a reunified Germany.

Every night I pray for Romspen's continued success.

After 31 years working at the TTC I retired in 1988 on pension and investment income.

My brother Stanley got me into Romspen 10 years ago. Today my Romspen investment has tripled in size. Combined with my TTC pension, I earn much more today than when I was working. Truth is, I would not be able to enjoy my independent lifestyle otherwise. Every night I say a prayer for the boys at Romspen to continue to be healthy and successful. My life would not be the same without them.

Marvin Feder

You've heard of the Romspen Mortgage Investment Fund. Isn't it time you found out more? Call us to receive an information package or visit www.romspen.com.

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Professor terms thesis a 'standards issue'

Continued from page 3

She added: "In terms of the OISE culture, OISE is a very diverse place where different views are expressed and brought to the table for academic discussion. No one point of view dominates others."

One U of T professor who requested anonymity said "I think this is essentially a standards issue and not an anti-semitism issue… I'm not saying it's not anti-Jewish. I think the core is a matter of standards."

The professor and Cohn pointed to a second master's thesis at OISE that Cohn called "incoherent" and the professor said was "unintelligible." The thesis, by student Griffin Epstein, is titled Extension: Towards a Genealogical Accountability: (The Critical [E]Race[ing] of Mad Jewish Identity. Its abstract suggests Ashkenazi Jews "have been deeply implicated in structural violence."

The U of T professor suggested that when such poor quality scholarship is considered for a master's degree, "the problem is less with the student. The question is what sort of supervision and oversight, checks and balances are in the department. These are the questions to ask."

An OISE alumnus also came down hard on her old school. Karen Mock, who served as executive director of the Canadian Race Relations Foundation from 2001 to 2005 and as national director of the League for Human Rights of B'nai Brith Canada for 12 years, was scathing in her critique.

"Having led the Holocaust and Hope Educators' Study Tour to Germany, Poland and Israel for 12 years… and having published articles on the topic in textbooks and refereed journals, I was outraged by the lack of scholarship and also embarrassed that my alma mater would pass a thesis that cited none of the relevant literature on Holocaust education in the context of anti-racist education in Canada," said Mock, a Liberal candidate for the federal riding of Thornhill.

"The fact that the author did not speak to anyone who had designed or participated in either of the programs in her so-called case studies, citing only their websites, certainly does not meet the rigorous academic standard usually required for a successful thesis… She did not use empirical data, but simply opinion to support her ideology. To call what she did 'research' is a misnomer. And to call the MOL and the MRH of the Canadian Centre for Diversity 'racist' is unfounded and completely false. Such rhetoric and shoddy work have no place in the University of Toronto," she said.

Concerns about the thesis were also raised in the provincial legislature last week. Ontario Citizenship and Immigration Minister Eric Hoskins said he was "disgusted" by it, while Thornhill Progressive Conservative MPP Peter Shurman said he found the thesis "a piece of garbage.

"If I'm a privileged white person and if I'm guilty of something, it's working hard, supporting my family, having a good life and not thinking ill of other people," Shurman said.

His father, he continued, was a Holocaust survivor who lost everything. How could his family be considered privileged, he asked.

Responding to suggestions that the legislature's interest in the issue could be construed as inhibiting free speech, Shurman said "we're not interfering with anything. The legislature is the house of the people. There is nothing that happens in the province of Ontario that is off limits."

The government's response was "appropriate," he continued, and to the extent "that this kind of thing is accepted as a learned thesis, it is questionable. It needs a look, but not necessarily under the aegis of government.

"We're pointing a spotlight at the University of Toronto. Let it get its house in order," he said.

***

Friends of Simon Wiesenthal Center (FSWC) is establishing a new scholarship program to support master's and PhD candidates focused on publishing academic papers on the legitimate rights and aspirations of Israel and the Jewish people.

To read story, please go to cjnews.com

NER ISRAEL YESHIVA
250 Bathurst Glen Drive, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 8A7
Celebrating 50 Years of Torah Continuity
Provides for
KADDISH SERVICES, OBSERVING YAHRZEIT and MEMORIAL PLAQUES
Please invest in the future. Remember Ner Israel in your will.
CALL 905-731-1224

Israel a natural innovation partner

Continued from page 1

In his keynote address to the summit, Clement said an essential part of his role as minister is "to make sure that our businesses have access to the opportunities they need not only to succeed at home, but also to lead on the world stage. This means making connections with the right knowledge, know-how, expertise and experience wherever on the globe it may be found.

"One such place of concentrated ingenuity and enterprise is Israel. In the very short time since it was founded, Israel has seen millions of people from all over the earth come together to build a modern, prosperous, vibrant, democratic country. Israel truly is a 'miracle in the desert.'"

Clement said that as the global economy recovers, "it is essential to keep our borders open to ideas and innovations that may come from elsewhere – and to share our expertise with the world."

Opper, chief scientist of Israel's Ministry of Industry, Trade and Labor, said, "By leveraging Israeli and Canadian strengths in the fields of water, renewable energy, and neuroscience, our countries will create new opportunities for technological innovation. Through co-operation and collaboration, we can utilize the advantages both countries have in these fields, paving the way to technological breakthroughs that will improve not only our economies, but our societies as well."

Rothschild said Israel is a natural partner in these fields. It devotes 4.5 per cent of its GDP to research and development, while Canada spends less than two per cent.

Israel's value as a leader in innovation was recognized earlier in the year when it was named chair of Eureka, a pan-European network of 40 countries dedicated to market-oriented, industrial research and development, he said.

Addressing the summit, Clement said, "talks focused on expanding collaboration in the areas of water, renewable energy and neuroscience research, with a particular emphasis on improving commercialization.

"Indeed, in these areas, I see significant opportunity for Canadian and Israeli business, including through increased collaboration in irrigation technologies (something our prairie provinces know plenty about), water purification innovations, biofuel production, geothermal technologies and training, wind energy projects, and research on diseases such as Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, autism and schizophrenia – crippling neurological afflictions that know no geographic, cultural or religious boundaries.

"Our two countries have penned agreements on space co-operation, double taxation, and a science and technology innovation partnership whose watershed was the creation of the Canada-Israel Industrial Research and Development Foundation to promote collaboration between Canadian and Israeli companies. There have been more than 70 full-scale industrial research and development projects involving some 120 Canadian and Israeli companies in everything from satellite imagery and medical research to environmental technology. Indeed, our two countries have a significant foundation upon which to build."

The proposed partnership is a result of a meeting in Ottawa last May between Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Bagelicious presents FALAFEL BALL
AlleyCatz
2415 Yonge Street
Tickets: $20
Doors: 9:00pm
*Tickets from this event will also get you into the Matzoball 30+
An Event for All Singles, Couples, Friends... Everyone!
Friday
December 24, 2010
DJ, Dancing, Drinks
HOTLINE: 905.513.6464 gloria@magenboys.com
THE 22nd Annual MATZOBALL
Six Degrees - 2335 Yonge Street
Doors: 9:30pm
DJ Spinning Hip Hop, RnB, Dance, Rock n Roll & More
Lots of Dancing
Friday December 24, 2010

Need to Pay your UJA Pledge By December 31st?

5 EASY WAYS TO PAY YOUR PLEDGE:

MOBILE DEVICES NEW!

Pledge and pay your donation instantly, anytime, anywhere using your cellphone or Blackberry. Just go to ujadonations.mobi which enables you to make secure, fast and convenient transactions on-the-go, from any web-enabled mobile device.

And, receive an instant tax receipt by e-mail when you pay your pledge.

ONLINE

at United Jewish Appeal's payment website: ujadonations.com The most efficient way to pay! Receive an instant tax receipt by e-mail. You can pay by Visa, MasterCard or American Express. It's secure, fast and easy!

INTERNET / TELEPHONE BANKING

For your convenience, you can pay your UJA pledge through internet or telephone banking at the following financial institutions: Bank of Montreal, CIBC, RBC,Scotiabank and TD Canada Trust.
Internet Banking made easy:

- You will need to add UJA to your list of payees where we are listed as "United Jewish Appeal of Greater Toronto."
- You will need to input the first six digits of your UJA account prior to the letter 'A.' Your UJA account can be found in the upper right corner of your UJA billing statement.

HOTLINE

Call the UJA Payment Hotline at 416.631.5705 and a member of our staff will process your payment immediately.

STOCK DONATIONS

Made simple at ujastocks.com. With no capital gains tax on publicly traded securities donated to a public charity, the time has never been better to transfer your stocks to UJA. The normal taxable portion of the capital gain when securities are sold is 50%. A receipt is issued based on the market value of the transferred securities on the day UJA receives them in our account.

However, the amount credited to your campaign pledge will be based on the proceeds realized from the sale of the securities, less selling commission.

NEW CHALLENGES. ETERNAL STRENGTH.

Pledge payments must be made prior to January 1, 2011 to receive a 2010 Tax Receipt

For more information, contact: Shimmy Wenner, Associate Campaign Director at 416-631-5699

United Jewish Appeal OF GREATER TORONTO

Short of national suicide, Israel can't offer more

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

The disclosure, via WikiLeaks, that several Arab leaders have urged U.S. action against Iran has provided additional ammunition to Mideast analysts who have long argued against linking a resolution of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict (or indeed the larger Arab-Israeli conflict) to a resolution of the region's broader problems.

They have correctly pointed out, contrary to much conventional wisdom, that achieving a Palestinian-Israeli peace agreement (as important a goal as this is itself) is not the key to unlocking the problems and threats elsewhere in the Mideast, such as Iran's nuclear program.

David Frum has been one of the most articulate voices in this debunking exercise, as demonstrated in his Dec. 4 National Post column on the "unintended lesson" of WikiLeaks.

Nevertheless, on the subject he mentioned in passing – why the peace process involving the Palestinians and Israelis has broken down – Frum might consider an important modification to his view that it's because the Palestinians "hope that if only they hold out a little longer, they will be offered even more [by Israel]."

As with the linkage argument, this belief also requires debunking. It's not a matter of the Palestinians waiting for more than, say, what then-Israeli prime minister Ehud Olmert offered Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas during the Annapolis talks in late 2008 (which was even more than what Israeli prime minister Ehud Barak offered former PA president Yasser Arafat at Camp David eight years before).

In both cases, the Palestinians spurned offers for a contiguous, viable state with control of Arab areas of eastern Jerusalem. Compromises were offered even on the Holy Basin. These unprecedented Israeli concessions took many by surprise – including Israel's Peace Now.

The harsh reality is that short of committing national suicide, there's nothing more Israel can offer the Palestinians that would lead to a deal. It's not about politics – that is, additional political and territorial concessions. Rather, it's a conceptual blockage: the Palestinian (and Arab) ideological refusal to accept the very legitimacy of Jewish sovereignty (as we have seen, once again, in the PA's denial of the Jewish historical attachment to the Western Wall).

In "Bleak House" (Tablet Magazine, Dec. 2), Israeli historian Benny Morris argued that "insurmountable" obstacles exist in the peace process: "Palestinian political elites, of both the so-called 'secular' and Islamist varieties, are dead set against partitioning the Land of Israel/Palestine with the Jews. They regard all of Palestine as their patrimony and believe that it will eventually be theirs…

"This basic Palestinian rejectionism, amounting to a weltanschauung, is routinely ignored or denied by most western commentators and officials. To grant it means admitting that the Israeli-Arab conflict has no resolution apart from the complete victory of one side or the other (with the corollary of expulsion, or annihilation, by one side of the other) – which leaves leaders like [U.S.] President Barack Obama with nowhere realistic to go with regard to the conflict."

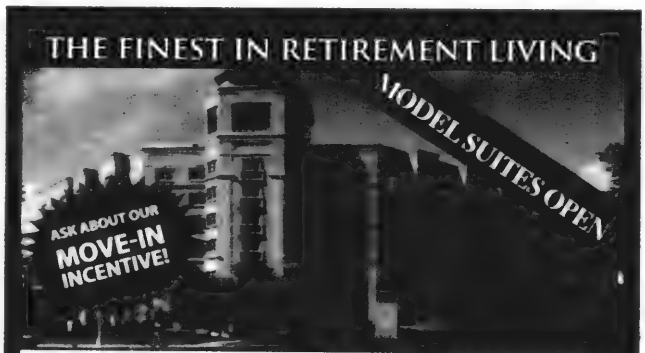
Morris is equally blunt about the Palestinian insistence on the "right of return" of Palestinian refugees to Israel: "Contrary to what many western commentators and analysts have chosen to believe, the Palestinian stress on the importance of the refugees is not a tactical matter – a way to gain further leverage in negotiations… The idea that the refugees must return to their homes [in Israel] has been the ethos, the be-all and end-all of Palestinian politics and policy, since 1948. No Palestinian leader can or will ever abandon this principle, on pain of assassination, and none has."

Benny Morris

This being the case, in order to preserve Israel as both a Jewish and democratic state, could Israel unilaterally withdraw from much of the West Bank as it did from Gaza in 2005? Not unless it's willing to incur rockets launched from the West Bank onto Israel's major cities, including Tel Aviv. This of course is out of the question, Morris says. The security imperative must trump any other consideration.

The bleak conclusion is that Israel remains trapped on the proverbial horns of a dilemma.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.



FROM THE AWARD-WINNING TEAM AT DIVERSICARE

Comes a community where extraordinary luxury, comfort and security are just an ordinary part of everyday living.

WELCOME TO FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

- Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
- Three meals daily including snacks
- Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
- Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
- Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
- Secure Assisted Living Floor

Call today for more information or to reserve your suite

905-738-0905

1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6

FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Diversicare www.diversicare.ca

prosserman | כולל KOLEL

INSPIRING JEWISH ADULT LEARNING

WINTER 2011

Kolel Programs and Events are sponsored in part by the KOLEL LEGACY FUND AT THE JEWISH FOUNDATION OF GREATER TORONTO

SUNDAY MORNING ASK THE RABBI
4 weeks / Instructor: Rabbi Elyse Glickman

DAYTIME: NIA TORAH
6 weeks / Instructor: Bayla Rae

DAYTIME HEBREW: HEBREW I
8 weeks / Instructor: Carmella Cohen

SONGS OF WAR, SONGS OF PEACE
6 weeks / Instructor: Rabbi Irit Printz

MUSSAR: JEWISH WISDOM FOR PERSONAL GROWTH
6 weeks / Instructor: Rabbi Michael Skobac

CHUG IVRIT: HEBREW FITNESS
8 weeks / Instructor: Moshe Oren

KOLEL COOKS!
JEWISH IDENTITY THROUGH FOOD
8 weeks / Instructor: Susanne Kaye

CONVERSATIONAL HEBREW LEVEL TWO
8 weeks / Instructor: Naomi Nemerov

HEARING OUR HEARTS: JEWISH GLBT LITURGY
6 weeks / Instructor: Dr. Aviva Goldberg
Miles Nadal JCC

JEWISH PATHS TO UNDERSTANDING ILLNESS AND HEALING
4 weeks/Instructor: Rabbi Miriam Margles
Miles Nadal JCC

DOING JEWISH
6 weeks / Instructor: Alena Strauss / Miles Nadal JCC

CONVERSATIONS ABOUT CONVERSION
6 weeks / Instructor: Alena Strauss / Miles Nadal JCC

BEYOND THE RED THREAD:
THE KABBALAH CRAZE
Thursday, January 27 With Rabbi Elyse Goldstein

SEEN BUT NOT HEARD
Tuesday March 15, 7:30 PM, Gladstone Hotel.

KOLEL COOKS WITH BONNIE STERN!
Passover with Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Bonnie Stern
Thursday, March 31, 7-10 p.m.

AGEING AND SAGEING: A MINI-RETREAT FOR HEART AND MIND, FOR ADULTS IN THEIR 60'S AND 70'S / Sunday, April 3, 2011 1:00-5:00 PM

THE FEMINIST SEDER / Tuesday, April 5
Miles Nadal JCC

TIKKUN SHAVUOT / Tuesday, June 7 / Miles Nadal JCC

Powered by UJA Federation of Greater Toronto

www.kolel.org / visit us on facebook and twitter: kolelTO.
For registration please call 416.638.1881 x4235 / kolel@prossermanjcc.com

Ex-gambling addict welcomes online move

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Ori Goldstein, 28, a recovering gambling addict, welcomes the news that the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corporation (OLG) will have an online gambling program set up by 2012, because it will offer more controls than are currently available on for-profit websites.

He was responding to last summer's announcement by Finance Minister Dwight Duncan that the ministry has asked the OLG to explore how it can best extend its brand online through a socially responsible and secure Internet gaming program.

Goldstein, who started gambling online when he was in high school, said it's a huge market. "It's about time the government got in on the action."

OLG chair Paul Godfrey said at the news conference that the Crown corporation's gambling program "will offer Ontarians a safe, regulated and fun option for playing games of skill and chance online."

The OLG estimates that Ontarians spend approximately $400 million each year in unregulated online gambling – with none of that money entering government coffers through taxation or fees.

"In its current form, Internet gaming in Ontario does not return proceeds to this province," Godfrey said at the summer announcement. "It does not create jobs here. It does not offer ways to protect minors or ensure they're not gambling online. It doesn't offer tools to support players to control and limit their play."

Potential players will have to register on the site before playing, and it will offer age and identity verification software to protect players.

Goldstein said that online gambling currently has no age protection. "They take your credit card number, and that's it. The government will have a better security system. They could make it safer and knock out all the smaller fish."

The government is not going to turn people into gamblers, he said. "They could find a way to regulate it."

A graduate of Jewish day schools, Goldstein said that he had, in the past, gambled for three days straight.

"I maxed out my first credit card gambling online. I had always played cards for fun with my friends, but then I began setting the alarm to get up and gamble. My whole day revolved around it. My parents only became aware when they had to bail me out on my credit card. Then I began playing again."

He played online, he said, because when he started, he wasn't old enough for the casinos.

"When I gambled, I felt a rush. I became a slave to it. I skipped work, I skipped class, and it was convenient online, because there was always a game. I spent more than I was making, but yesterday's losses didn't matter. I just kept going. In the end I was in the hole for tens of thousands of dollars. I had no choice, though. I had to play. Gamblers live in a fairy tale. They're always waiting for the next big win."

Finally, he said, someone offered to help him financially on the condition that he get help. "I had finally had enough. I was tired of being a slave to gambling."

He went to a counsellor affiliated with JACS Toronto, an organization that provides education and support to those suffering from or affected by addiction, and then to a treatment centre in Florida.

Now, he said, he has graduated as an addictions counsellor from Centennial College and runs a business delivering promotional material.

Being an addictions counsellor is his priority, however. "When I see someone struggling with an addiction, I tell them 'I've been there and done that.' I can't think of anything else I'd rather do. Maybe I had to go through it to help others."

SPIRIT WEEK

Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School students and staff got into the spirit during T-shirt day, part of the student council's Spirit Week in honour of the school's bar/bat mitzvah year celebrations.

Eating well made easy

Rose Reisman's Personal Gourmet frozen entrées delivered to your door.

Grilled basa with a maple soy glaze & edamame salad

Delicious, calorie controlled, gourmet entrées are frozen in vacuum sealed packaging to retain maximum freshness.

Your choice for just $7.95*

Buy 7 single entrées and receive the 8th at no charge

Choose from a variety of delicious entrées including:

- ✓ Salmon teriyaki with orange couscous
- ✓ Tilapia with miso glaze and brown rice
- ✓ Salmon stuffed with ricotta served with Israeli couscous
- ✓ New York steak served with mashed potatoes
- ✓ Moroccan chicken kebobs with five-grain rice
- ✓ Chicken stir-fry over jasmine rice
- ✓ Vegetable lasagna
- ✓ Cannelloni with mushrooms and cheese

ROSE REISMAN'S personal GOURMET

*Single entrée only. $60 minimum order (pre-tax) required. Plus delivery charge

For additional menu items and details visit us online at personalgourmet.ca/frozen or call 416.721.0560 to order

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CARICATURIST
Mark Ciafe, Caricature Artist

CATERERS
Catering On
Eli's Fine Foods
[illegible]
[illegible]

CO
[illegible]

DE
[illegible]

EN
[illegible]
Entertainer

EVENT PLANNERS
Ida Mallon
Vintage Event Consulting
A Whisper Party

FASHION
Beamer
Dawna Bell
Deja Vu
Fitzmorgue Jewels Fashion

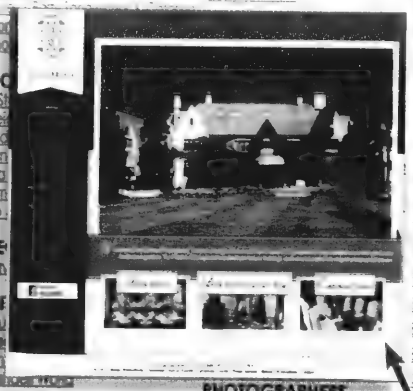
FLORISTS
Floral Orangerie Florist

GIFTS
Gold Step Jewellers
Inge Schulze
Inge's Jewellery

HENNA
Little Miss Henna

INVITATIONS
Invitation Divas
Stationery Plus/Gilda Lefton

KETUBOT
[illegible]



PHOTOGRAPHERS
Horwitz Photography
Lyman Photography

RELIGIOUS SERVICES
Rabbi Eva Goldfinger
Cantor Deborah Stalmer

RENTALS
Arriving The Table
Giant Screen Systems
Jewish Entertainment & Party Rentals

SERVICES
Gold Pomes 4U

SPECIALTY FOODS
Chocolate Charm
Chocolate Moose
Inga Ninja Custom Cookies
MenChefs
Regina's Fine Foods
Summer Fresh Catering

VIDEOS
Lisa Productions
Reading Pictures
Twin Photo & Video
Video Affair
Video Productions By Joe

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Adath Israel Synagogue
Asian Legend
The Avenue
Bayerest Hospitality Services
Bayview Golf and Country Club
Bellvue Manor
Beth David Synagogue Performing Arts Centre
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
Bonnet Creek Golf Club
Bourgi Asian Cuisine
Estates of Sunnybrook, The
Fune
Glow Fresh Grill & Wine Bar
Granite Club
Hard Rock Cafe, The
Hotel Du Fort
Loots Lounge/Factory
Lucky Strike Lanes & Lounge
Park Hyatt Toronto
Pickle Barrel Banquet Halls
Playtime Bowl
Rain Spa & Salon
Ria
Toni Bulloni
Yamato
Warehouse Event Venue, The

PLANNING A PARTY?
Want A Little Help?

The CJN Party Planner Online Directory will give you easy access to all our Party Advertisers' websites.

Go to WWW.CJNEWS.COM,
click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Sensation!

To Advertise in the next CJN Party Planner call 416-391-1836

Greater Toronto Area

Helen, left, and Sonia Kafka

Woman donates 61-year-old braids

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Recently, Sonia Kafka and her daughter, Helen, were cleaning out Sonia's basement when they came across an old chocolate box.

Inside it were two carefully preserved light-brown braids, each 14 inches long.

For years, Sonia, 74, couldn't bring herself to part with the hair she'd had cut as a young teenager shortly after immigrating to Canada.

But now – having seen pictures in The CJN of youngsters who donated their hair to provide wigs for cancer patients – she wondered if her braids could be used as well.

"I said, finally, 'It's time,'" Sonia told The CJN.

Helen – who used to play with the braids as a child, holding them up to her own hair in front of a mirror – inquired about donating them, and was told the braids could be used, even 61 years after the hair was cut.

Mike Suba, president of Continental Hair, which makes wigs for children who have lost hair to cancer treatment or because of other medical issues, said that Kafka's braids are lovely. They're "really thick at the base, and the hair is in really good condition. It's not faded."

Donated hair needs to be 10 inches or longer, unbleached and not permed, and secured by elastics at both ends, he said. The age of the hair "isn't a problem," if it's been stored properly in a clean, dry place, he added.

For Sonia, a stylish haircut was a symbolic part of beginning a new life in Toronto.

"You tried to fit in as much as you could," she recalled.

The long braids went, and she began wearing long skirts and saddle shoes instead of the sailor blouse and "little pleated skirt" that she wore when she arrived here at age 13 with her mother, stepfather and stepbrother.

An older brother, who had arrived three years earlier with his wife, sponsored the family.

"That's when my life began," recalled Sonia, who was only three years old when World War II broke out.

She spent her early years in the Polish port city of Gdynia, and survived the war in an orphanage, reuniting with her mother when it was over.

They arrived in Canada not knowing any English, having spent the postwar years in a DP camp in Germany.

"It wasn't easy," Sonia recalls. The family rented a flat in a downtown home until her parents were able to buy a house on Euclid Street.

Sonia left school as a teenager to work in sales and was married shortly before her 18th birthday.

In fact, she said, she grew up with her three children, learning how to skate and swim when they did.

HAIR TODAY, GONE TOMORROW

Alexis Friedman, left, and Jacki Satok of Leo Baeck Day School's south campus, in Holy Blossom Temple, donated more than eight inches of their hair to the Pantene Beautiful Lengths Program, which creates wigs for cancer patients that are distributed through the Canadian Cancer Society.

Seniors Scene

Independent 97-year-old leads a fulfilling life

By CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

At 97, Anne Gitterman could be the poster model for successful aging.

Gitterman is legally blind, travels in Toronto with Wheel Trans, and has an oxygen tank for when she needs it. Yet she participates in a weekly pottery sculpting workshop at Bernard Betel Centre.

"Whenever one of my students or someone new to pottery says that they can't do something, I inspire them with the story of Anne Gitterman," the workshop's instructor, Anisoara Kirschner-Kozai, told The CJN.

Nothing stops Gitterman from attending her pottery workshop or from remaining positive and leading a fulfilling life.

Gitterman's daughter, Gail Donner, who visited her mother at the Betel Centre during the interview, says, "My mother is amazing. She is very determined and just gets on with things. All of us forget that she is 97. She has good genes and you need that in life. She just moves forward."

Recently, Gitterman fell and bruised herself. However, she got up as if nothing had happened and continued what she was doing.

Petite, weighing only 85 pounds, and living independently, Gitterman has been described as the wind-up pink Energizer bunny. She loves to tell stories and jokes and has a good memory.

She was born in Mizerich, Poland (now Ukraine). When she was one month old, her father, Jacob Mindess, and some other men from their small town were allowed to leave Poland, expecting to bring their families with them. But World War I broke out and the women had to stay and work to support their children.

When she was six years old, she, her nine-year-old brother and her mother came to Canada to join her father, who had settled in Winnipeg, where the Naiman family had sponsored many immigrants.

Anne Gitterman at the pottery workshop at Bernard Betel Centre

"I met my father for the first time when I was six years old. We moved to French-speaking St. Boniface where my father opened a grocery store," Gitterman says.

"We moved back to Winnipeg when I was 10, because my brother was going to have his bar mitzvah."

After she finished Grade 12, her parents, who then had two more children, couldn't afford to send her to university.

Employment was hard to find in the 1930s, so she went to work in her cousin's variety store.

Speaking of how she met her husband she said, "My mother had saved up money, and she sent me to Boston for a family simchah."

Her parents also asked her to go to New York to meet her father's older brother and some cousins. When she was returning, on a double-decker bus, from a cousin's house, a young man, Sydney Gitterman, approached her and said that he knew her from Winnipeg.

"He was taking a fur design course in New York. He invited me out. I asked him to show me some identification," Anne Gitterman says.

He called her when they returned to Winnipeg. They were married in 1940, and they worked side by side at their successful fur business, Gitterman Furs. They were married for 48 years.

Gitterman moved to Toronto 12 years ago, following her four children.

"I have great naches from my children, and they let me do what I want." With pride she adds, "They are all very successful, and I have six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren."

Optimistically she says, "Every morning when I get up, I pinch myself. And every day, I go for a walk outside. Sometimes in the winter, I take a walker."

Reflecting on her life, she says she regrets that all of her friends are gone and that, with bad vision, she can no longer play cards or games.

"When you are older, it's difficult to make new friends, but I invite people to come in for tea and I always have baked stuff. I also bring my baking to my pottery group."

Kirschner-Kozai said that "Anne is always caring and willing to listen and she offers her wisdom. I have sought her advice many times. She is truly inspiring for young and old.

"Everyone can learn from her positive attitude. If everyone, any age, will have her tenacity, it is a sure recipe for success."

Holiday Special !!!
ALL YOU CAN EAT
ASIAN CUISINE
Dim Sum, Seafood & BBQ
Lunch & Dinner
Weekday $18.99 (Fri. Sat. Sun & Holiday +$2)
Including one AAA Grade Steak per customer !
ASIAN COURSE
Sensational Pan Asian Bistro
905-889-3888
30 Disera Drive, Unit 100
Thornhill, ON. (Bathurst & Centre)
Hwy 407
Promenade Mall
Post Delivery Area
L.L.B.O.
Business Hours: Mon - Thu & Sun 11 AM - 11 PM
Fri - Sat 10:30AM - 12:00 Midnight www.asiancourse.ca

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

Experienced Mohel
Rabbi Avraham Sultan
Cantor Shaarei Shomayim
Performs lifecycle events
Sephardic & Ashkenaze rituals
Bar/bat mitzvah lessons Weddings
FREE CONSULTATIONS
FREE FIRST BAR MITZVAH LESSON
Contact rabbisultan@yahoo.ca
Cell 416-735-8736

CALLING ALL BRIDES & GROOMS
The CJN
wants you to share your story with our readers in our upcoming Bridal Supplement.
Tell us how you got engaged, talk about your wedding plans, or share your feelings on your wedding day.
Deadline for submission is Wed. Jan. 19
Send about 400 words plus a picture to:
cblackman@thecjn.ca

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Jewish Life

Israel's water shortage

On Shmini Atzeret, Jews around the world recited the Tefillat Geshem, the prayer for rain: "For blessing and not for curse. For life and not for death. For plenty and not for scarcity." [http://bit.ly/isrwat1] But scarce it is. Israel's perennial water shortage made headlines last month as the country's chief rabbis urged worshippers to pray and fast on behalf of rain. [http://bit.ly/isrwat2] And then came the worst forest fire in the country's history.

After years of below-average precipitation, the Sea of Galilee is more than three metres below the "red line," the optimum water level of the lake. Sinkholes have appeared on the shores of the Dead Sea, and there has been talk of a ban on watering gardens in Israel. [http://bit.ly/isrwat3]

Why has the situation been allowed to deteriorate so seriously? As reporter Herb Keinon says in a detailed and depressing article in the Jerusalem Post, there have been warnings for years but no one seemed to be listening. He quotes Haim Gvirtzman, a Hebrew University hydrologist: "No one cares. Everyone cares about politics, about peace, about making money. Who cares about things like health, the environment or water?" [http://bit.ly/isrwat4]

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

In the 1950s, future prime minister Levi Eshkol helped develop plans for a network to link most of the regional water projects throughout Israel. [http://bit.ly/isrwat5] The huge civil-engineering project joined the Sea of Galilee with Israel's other aquifers and is credited with pumping water and bringing life to the Negev, a dream of prime minister David Ben-Gurion. [http://bit.ly/isrwat6]

The Sea of Galilee isn't the only Israeli lake with problems. The Dead Sea, the lowest point on earth, is also experiencing a serious decline in sea level. Water diversion projects and industry on the Israeli and Jordanian sides have reduced the Dead Sea to record lows. The water level drops by one metre every year, and Dead Sea resorts are finding themselves farther and farther from the water's edge. [http://bit.ly/isrwat7]

Despite the gravity of the issue, Israelis can be fickle about the water situation. All it takes is a couple of rainy winters and the crisis is forgotten. Journalist Zafrir Rinat points a finger at the media for letting the issue fade from the headlines. [http://bit.ly/isrwat8]

Israel's water crisis extends well beyond its borders and could result in regional conflict, or worse. The World Bank's Ismail Serageldin said in 1995: "If the wars of this century were fought over oil, the wars of the next century will be fought over water unless we change our approach to managing this... resource." [http://bit.ly/isrwat9] And prime minister Ariel Sharon said, "People generally regard June 5, 1967, as the day the Six Day War began... in reality, it started 2-1/2 years earlier, on the day Israel decided to act against the diversion of the Jordan." [http://bit.ly/isrwat13]

Israel is blamed by its neighbours for abusing its control of water resources. You can read about the conflicting views [http://bit.ly/isrwat10] followed by a backgrounder by the pro-Israel group CAMERA. [http://bit.ly/isrwat11]

Many suggestions for easing Israel's water shortage have been made. We'll look at some of those initiatives next time. Until then, you can keep an eye on the Sea of Galilee's changing water level. [http://bit.ly/isrwat12]

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based Internet producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be reached at highway@rogers.com.

Doors need to be open to women

A co-educational Orthodox school in Toronto recently began the search for a new vice-principal. Working alongside administrators, department heads and teachers, the vice-principal will be responsible for curriculum development, extra curricular activities and student discipline, and will serve as a religious role model supervising daily tfillah. The job description is in line with many in Jewish day schools where staff serve as both content instructors and religious models.

What struck me about the advertisement was the list of qualifications. In addition to a degree in education and several years of successful teaching experience, the ad requires applicants to have smichah, rabbinic ordination.

In an Orthodox school, smichah precludes female applicants.

The Judaic skills and knowledge acquired in rabbinical school are prerequisites for day school leaders. The title, however, is not. The vice-principal needs to be a leader in education: a successful pedagogue and supervisor, an expert in curriculum, and a guide to students, teachers and parents. As well, the vice principal must be a religious role model who imbues the vision and values of the school, who is steeped in Jewish knowledge, and who can model and motivate Jewish learning and living. While these expectations may describe someone who holds smichah, the ideal candidate may have gained the skills through alternate paths.

CLASS ACT
By Daniel Held

Contemporary Orthodoxy offers women a variety of advanced training programs. Women can study Tanach, Talmud and Halachah at institutions such as Yeshiva University's Graduate Program for Women in Advanced Talmud or Drisha's Scholars Circle. The newly founded Yeshivat Maharat complements a curriculum in Jewish studies that parallels rabbinical school with training in pastoral care, pedagogy and communal leadership.

In a co-ed Orthodox school, we need strong role models on both sides of the mechitzah.

I don't believe the job description was written with the intention of excluding women. Vice-principals rarely act as a decisor of complex halachic issues, witnesses in a beit din or chazzanim – roles that some Orthodox communities limit to men. Rather, the selection committee likely copied a job description used in the past, unintentionally perpetuating a historical gender bias.

Three things must take place to propel the paradigm shift compelled by contemporary co-educational schools.

First, selection committees must carefully match required qualifications with job descriptions. Rather than filtering candidates by title, the committee must consider what knowledge, skills and abilities most closely match the intended roles.

Second, we need trailblazers. When a highly qualified female colleague asked me if she should apply, my answer was an enthusiastic yes. By applying, she will put herself on the line. She will need to advocate strongly and convincingly for her skills and ability. We need trailblazers who are willing to take risks, apply and pave the way for others.

Finally, as a community we must advocate. As more and more qualified women graduate from professional training programs, we must ensure that there are jobs waiting for them. Our community must be ready to accept these professional women into leadership roles as a way of offering role models for both boys and girls.

Strong female educational and spiritual leaders working alongside male colleagues will strengthen our schools, provide role models for young boys and girls, and serve to further expand the scope of professional career paths available to committed women.

Jewish Life

Hillel keeps students involved

Last year, Alana Kayfetz was the director of Hillel in Ottawa. She did a fantastic job, but she's moved on. Hillel chose Penn State graduate Ross Diamond as her replacement.

Diamond, who has a degree in information science and technology, took over from Kayfetz this past August. He praised his predecessor, saying that "Alana got students on board with community leadership." He believes that her good work has made his job for this year easier.

On Campus
By Justin Dahan

The first distinction Diamond likes to make about Hillel is that it's not your average club. "Hillel Ottawa is more than a club. It's a place for students to build their community," he said.

The general goal of Hillel Ottawa, according to its current director, is to be a facilitator. As Diamond told me, "Students run the show. We are a resource for them."

That means that Hillel doesn't force students to do anything, nor does it create programs for them. Rather, it lets them create events for themselves.

Diamond gave an example of this philosophy: "If you're interested in cooking and a handful of friends are, too, Hillel would facilitate a cooking event. We'd encourage a cooking club amongst the students and produce resources to help – kosher ingredients, recipes, etc."

Of course, not all events are planned around food, but events such as this allow Jewish students who have things in common to bond and help to build a stronger Jewish community.

The belief in building a strong Jewish community is why Hillel Ottawa likes to work with other Jewish groups on campus. A lot of Hillel members belong to other Jewish organizations, such as the Jewish fraternity Alpha Epsilon Pi or J.E.T. on Campus (a group that aims to bring Jewish life to campus), as well as the Chabad Student Network. In addition to having members that belong to multiple organizations, Diamond believes in continuing to partner with a plethora of groups, including non-Jewish ones, such as the Faiths Acts Fellows.

It's through this style of programming that students benefit the most, Diamond believes, because they not only get programming completely catered to them, but they also get to develop their leadership skills.

Speaking of leadership, earlier in the semester, Hillel Ottawa held a leadership retreat in a cottage just outside Maniwaki, Que. Focusing on building leaders helps to ensure that Hillel continues to run smoothly for this year and beyond.

Diamond described the retreat as a "forum for students to brainstorm their vision and learn to achieve."

He believes the skills Hillel is teaching its members are transferable and will benefit them during and beyond their academic careers. He believes that these students will soon be recognized for "standing out as the future of the Jewish community.

"[Hillel's] student leaders will be running [Jewish community centres] and other Jewish organizations" one day, he said.

Finding the light of holiness

In February 2008, I had the great honour to host the former chief rabbi of Israel, Rabbi Israel Meir Lau, in Vancouver. It was one of the most cherished moments in my rabbinate.

As I was waiting for him to emerge from the plane into the airport, I was nervous. After all, it isn't every day that one has the opportunity to meet such a personality. When Rabbi Lau saw me, he was smiling from ear to ear and, giving me a hug as if he had known me for many years, made feel at ease.

Sephardi Window
By Rabbi Ilan Acoca

In honour of Rabbi Lau, my wife, Dina, suggested bringing the children of a Jewish day school to greet Rabbi Lau at the airport. When Rabbi Lau saw them, he went to each child and greeted him or her personally. One of the children had a question for the rabbi, who gave the child his full attention for a few moments, rubbing both cheeks and making him feel like his own.

Rabbi Lau's visit gave me a new perspective on life. Here was a man who had lost most of his family during the Holocaust, yet finds meaning in life. He has successfully maintained the traditions and teachings that his forebears left him and continues to transmit them to succeeding generations, thus bringing light and hope to people around the world.

In my own congregation, there are people from the four corners of the earth who were forced, in many cases, to flee their generations-old homes, leaving behind all of their material possessions. In new lands, many of these people have succeeded in recasting their lives anew, resurrecting hope, not only for themselves and their families, but for the entire world.

One of these people in my community was Nazem Aboody, born in Iraq. Aboody had a great impact on my life. One of the founders of my synagogue, Aboody quietly took me under his wing from the day of my arrival in Vancouver and became an important mentor and teacher. Aboody was a remarkable presence. He was a discreet man of few words, each one of which had depth and meaning. His mere attendance brought decorum, respect, and grace to any venue.

The Talmud teaches us that God created the world with a unique, holy light that He hid after the sin of Adam and that He will restore in Messianic times. I believe there are individuals who possess a particle of this hidden light, thereby continuing to illuminate us with holiness and hope.

These re-settled individuals did not lose hope, even though it would have been understandable at times to do so. Rather, through their faith and perseverance, we have become the beneficiaries of the holiness they bestow in this world.

Sometimes, when I ponder how I could achieve this, I believe that each of us can be worthy of a particle of this light, and that our discovering and using it, though presently hidden, is a matter of choice and determination.

God gave us free will and our Torah. Why then should we not reach for this light even in the darkest of times?

Rabbi Ilan Acoca is spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Hamidrash in Vancouver.

ECOFLEXTRA - Guaranteed Income for Life

- Guaranteed income for life - no matter how markets perform!
- Lock-in market growth with automatic tri-annual resets
- 5% Annual bonus* up to 15 years
- Death Benefit Guarantee
- Tax efficient for non-registered accounts

KenStern
500-1867 Yonge St.
Toronto, ON M4S 1Y5
T: 416-545-5323 | www.kenstern.ca

Clarington Investments — Industrial Alliance

The newest addition to the CJN...
The Canadian Jewish Shmooze
Read the CJN's new blog!
http://canadianjewishnews.blogspot.com

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 – Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 – April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 – Jul. 10
July 3 – Jul. 17
July 17 – Jul. 31
July 24 – Aug. 7
July 31 – Aug. 14
Aug. 14 – Aug. 28

WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FLIGHT INCL. 5 NIGHTS IN 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1515 + TAX

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

Jewish Life

Shoddy, racist 'scholarship' at University of Toronto

By LEN RUDNER

Up until now, I've been proud of the bachelor of education degree I earned from the University of Toronto in 1978 and have retained pleasant memories of time spent in the both the faculty of education and the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education buildings on Bloor Street. But a recent decision by the university to accept a thesis submission by Jennifer Peto may require me to change my views.

Guest Voice

Peto's master's thesis, lyrically titled The Victimhood of the Powerful: White Jews, Zionism, and the Racism of Hegemonic Holocaust Education, advances the position that Jews are persons of privilege who present themselves as victims of persecution and who make use of the Holocaust to "obscure Jewish privilege, deny Jewish racism and promote the interests of the Israeli nation-state."

A lot of people have sent me copies of Peto's thesis, asking me if I think it is antisemitic. Of course it is, because it constantly refers to "Jewish racism" as an observation about Jews collectively. It makes Jews complicit in racist acts whether or not we actually participated in them. We – Jews – weren't involved in initial colonial violence in Australia, but we are said to benefit from it today and are said to be "involved in contemporary violence" against Aborigines. We – Jews – are also showered with inane generalizations such as that "many Jews" fought for the Confederate army in the American Civil War; that Jews were "fully involved" in military actions in South Africa, and that the Jewish community was "complicit" in apartheid and in "American and Israeli racism."

Perhaps we aren't so much guilty of being Jewish as we are of being white. Or a combination of both. And that's why the title pinpoints white Jews. Small consolation.

But what really captured my attention was the fatal weakness of the core arguments. A central pillar of Peto's thesis is that Israel is a racist, apartheid state and that Jews show their racism through their support for Israel, sometimes going so far as to mischievously deploy human rights discourses in order to defend a racist, apartheid regime. But here's the funny thing: in 107 pages, Peto devotes less than four of them to "proving" that Israel is an apartheid state. Indeed, her proof amounts to agreeing with Ronnie Kasrils, John Dugard and Desmond Tutu.

But Peto has more to say on the matter.

"Citizenship rights [in Israel] are tied to ethnic and religious identity," she says. Perhaps she hopes readers will be ignorant of the Arab Israelis who are citizens, who vote and who elect fellow Arabs to the Knesset, etc.

Most revealing, though, is her description of a purported 2008 Knesset vote to "ban Arab parties from running in the federal elections." We are told that "this decision was later overturned by the Supreme Court, but that it was passed by legislators and had public support is quite telling."

Let's dwell on the blindingly obvious: that the overturning of a committee decision by the Supreme Court of Israel completely undercuts the notion of Israel as a racist state. Peto also got the year wrong. It was 2009. And she omitted mentioning that it was a committee of the Knesset rather than the Knesset itself that proposed the ban. Nor did she consider it relevant to mention that the only political party that has ever been banned in Israel is a Jewish one: Kach. And it was banned for racism.

A second important pillar of Peto's thesis is that Jewish claims to victimhood are "no longer based in a reality of oppression." Peto is careful to qualify her claim by limiting it to North America. Her footnote explains why: "I have chosen to focus on North America partly because it is my context, but also because it can be argued that antisemitism is more systemic in Europe, particularly in France, where there are more frequent violent attacks against Jewish people and institutions." So it's not so much that there's no evidence of antisemitism in the world. It's just that Peto isn't interested in it.

Let's recap.

Peto needed to prove that Israel is an apartheid state and that Jewish victimhood is not a reality. She failed on both counts.

Peto could have contacted the organizations she has defamed – the Canadian Centre for Diversity and the March of the Living – but she chose not to. Is basic research no longer an academic requirement?

The antisemitism of Peto's thesis is her problem. The lack of academic standards by the University of Toronto, however, should be a problem for all of its students.

It's certainly a disappointment for this graduate.

Len Rudner is Ontario regional director of Canadian Jewish Congress.

Singles Events

is an advertising feature of
The Canadian Jewish News

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-391-1836

Games Jewish Singles Play! Ages 21-39; 40-69. Sun., Dec. 19, 7:30 pm. Beth Torah, 47 Glenbrook. Millionaire, Scrabble, etc. Bingo, 7:30-8. Prizes, refresh. $8. 164 couples have met! For info, Mollie 416-733-3634 or mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca

Deadline: Wednesday, 4 p.m., 8 days preceding issue date.

Jewish Connections Inc.

Hey Guys . . . Are you looking for :

Stunning blonde beauty, 32, 5' 7", slim, never married, fun, energetic and professional

♥ ♥ ♥

Very attractive brunette, 34, 5' 4", athletic, slim, never married, Medical Specialist

. . . Are you the one . . .

For a complimentary consultation call Carole: 905-889-3900

carole@jewishconnectionsinc.com
www.jewishconnectionsinc.com

on cjnews.com

The CJN's French-language reporter in Montreal, Elias Levy, writes about:

• La Rafle, a film about the Nazis removing the Jews of Paris to the Vélodrome d'hiver, then to a holding camp and finally to Auschwitz, will begin its Montreal run Dec. 17 as part of the Cinémania Festival.

• The Spanish & Portuguese Synagogue recently honoured its cantor, Rabbi Yehuda Abittan, for his 26 years of service to the congregation.

שיאר ג'ינג

גידי קורן וחברים

נאוות יחידה- אהובה תומר ז"ל
ישראל היא אחת המדינות היחידות בעולם שבהן המפקד נמצא בחוד החזית. יש על זה הרבה ביקורת- יש אומרים שהתימצאות בחזית איננה מאפשרת למפקד לראות את כל התמונה, ועל כן עליו להיות מאחור ולקבל דוחות מהשטח שמאפשרים לו לקבל החלטות מאוזנות. מנגד- התיאוריה הישראלית אומרת שלהתימצאותו של המפקד בשטח יש כוח מוראלי עצום, ואיתו גם יכולת אינטימית לדעת מה עובר על החיילים שלו. על כן המילה "אחרי" היא אולי המושג הישראלי רב העוצמה יותר מכל מושג וסמל אחר.

למפקדת משטרת חיפה, אהובה תומר ז"ל, האשה שהגיעה לדרגה הגבוהה ביותר בתולדות משטרת ישראל, לא היה שום ספק היכן היא צריכה להימצא- היא ניסתה לחלץ את אוטובוס הצעירים, ואיתו גם נספתה. אמרו שמצבה אנוש, ואחר כך גם שהלה הטבה מסויימת- אבל רק אחרי שנפטרה דווחו שסבלה מכוויות ב 90% משטח גופה. בכלל- אין אדם יכול להישרד בשיותר מ-60% מגופו נפגע מכוויות.

זוכרים את המאנטרה של משחקי המתבוארם של ילדותנו הרחוקה?
"מי שעומד מלפני ומאחורי ובצדי –הוא העומד".
אז הינה שיר קטן שכתבתי לאהובה תומר ז"ל, גיבורת חטכה, שאת גבורתה יחגגו שנים רבות אחרי שהכרמל יכוסה שוב בעצים:

"מי שעומד מאחרי- אמרת כמו כולנו
במשחק המחבואים של ילדותך,
אבל בבוקר חנוכה אחד, במורד הכרמל
לא אמרת "אחרי",
פשוט הלכת ראשונה,
לפניך נלכד באש אוטובוס מלא ילדים בני עשרים
ואת חשבת רק עליהם ולא על האש.

אומרים שטרומפלדור לא ממש אמר
"טוב למות בעד ארצנו",
את צעקת במכשיר הקשר
"אנחנו נשרפים"
ואנחנו נשמע את המלים האלה כל יום בחיינו,
את היית אמיתית, בשר דם
ונגעת בחיים גם במותך,
היית גיבורה כי לא רצית להיות גיבורה.
נוחי בשלום, אהובה,
את עלית לשמים בלהבה,
ואישך תהיה לרבבה.

ואנחנו
ואנחנו היינו שם, על הכרמל, נעולים בעיניים דומעות
לטלביזיה, למה שקורה עשרת אלפים קילומטרים מכאן. וכאן,
כל קיץ עולים באש יערות עד בבריטיש קולומביה ששטחם פי
עשר מגודל מדינת ישראל, ועשרות רבות של משפחות מאבדות
את בתיהן, ואנחנו מעולם לא ראינו אותם. אנחנו חיים כאן אבל
רואים את לונדון וקיר שנבאום ואת אברי גלעד ואת השריפה
בכרמל, כאילו אנחנו גרים בפתח תקווה. למה לא! כמו שיש
בריטיש קולומביה, למה שלא תהיה קנדיאן פתח תקווה.
ואולי בעצם הגיע הזמן לחזור הביתה!

FAIR GAME
סרט רב עוצמה שמבוסס על סיפור אמיתי,שיש בו את תמצית האירוע החמור ביותר של עשר השנים האחרונות. ממשל בוש מנסה להוכיח בכל צורה שלסאדם חוסיין יש אחריות במה של הכנת פצצה, למרות שה CIA לא מצליח למצוא אפילו שמץ של הוכחה לכך. הוכחה כזאת היא קריטית כדי למלוש לעיראק.
שגריר האמריקאי לשעבר נשוי לסוכנת סמויה של ה CIA. לבקשת אשתו הוא נסע לאפריקה ומגלה שהשמועה שהמדינה האמריקאית מכרה לסאדם חוסיין אורנים היא שקרית. הוא מדווח על כך לשלחיו, למרות זאת הוא שומע את הנשיא בוש מדווח לקונגרס שאכן כן נמכר אורניום. הוא יוצא בהצהרה ציבורית שמכחישה את הדברים וגורם לרעידת אדמה פוליטית, כי הוא מוכיח שהממשל משקר בגלוי. כנקמה מדליפים אנשיו של בוש לעיתונות שאשתו היא סוכנת CIA, מה ששודף אותה כסוכנת וגורם למותם של אנשים שאיתם עבדה בעיראק.
בסוף יוצאת האמת לאור ואשמים נענשים פלילית רק כדי לקבל הנינה מהנשיא.
סרט חובה. שון מן ונעמי וואט יהיו ללא ספק מועמדי אוסקאר על המשחק.
עשר בשלום קורן.

Sharing the light of the menorah across the GTA

Thriving Centres of Jewish Life host simultaneous Chanukah celebrations

By Daniel Horowitz

It was truly a Chanukah to remember across the Greater Toronto Area recently, as more than 1,400 participants enjoyed a unique holiday celebration, sponsored by UJA Federation.

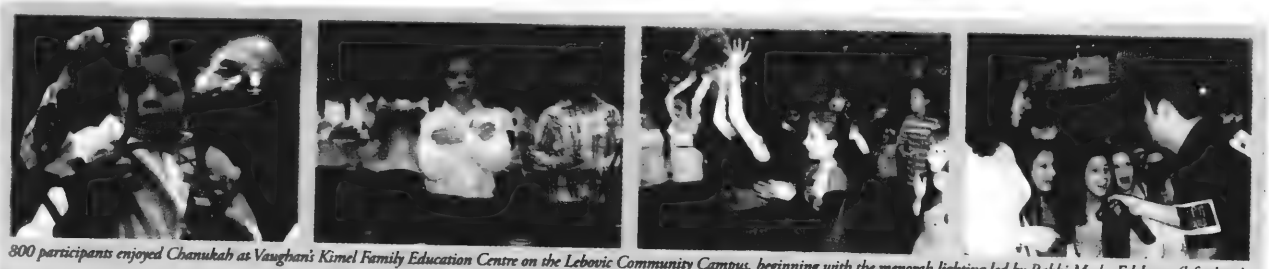
Uniting men, women and children of all ages and backgrounds to celebrate Chanukah were the three new centres of Jewish life in the GTA – Vaughan's Joseph & Wolf Lebovic Jewish Community Campus; The Prosserman JCC and The Lipa Green Centre on Sherman Campus at Bathurst and Sheppard, and downtown at the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, which included a Chanukah swim - made possible through UJA Federation's Tomorrow Campaign.

A fourth location, the LOL Lounge, downtown, hosted over 400 participants between the ages of 20 and 30, who celebrated Chanukah with great music and dancing.

The event marked the first time that all three new community campuses offered a simultaneous program for the entire community.

"It was great seeing this amazing Jewish community come together in so many locations simultaneously across the GTA," said UJA Federation President and CEO, Ted Sokolsky. "These kinds of events point to the great depth of diversity and passion each of our neighbourhoods have to add in building a great community. We've always said that our new community campuses will be judged much more by what actually takes place inside the new buildings we are creating as opposed to buildings themselves. Nights like these prove just how true that is."

The photos on this page show the Chanukah festivities which took place at all four locations.



800 participants enjoyed Chanukah at Vaughan's Kimel Family Education Centre on the Lebovic Community Campus, beginning with the menorah lighting led by Rabbi Moshe Edelman (left photo).

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein, with the help of a young volunteer, (second photo from left) lit the menorah at the Prosserman JCC on Sherman Campus while a good time was had by all who attended.

Chanukah celebrations at downtown's Miles Nadal JCC included, among other things, a family Chanukah swim.

Two exciting bands, One Fell Swoop (pictured at left) and The Apollo Effect, entertained an enthusiastic crowd at the LOL Lounge downtown.

On Campus

Former Spanish PM addresses York crowd

By MICHAEL ISENBERG
Special to The CJN

Israel's right to exist will become obvious to anyone who considers it a western country, said former Spanish prime minister José Maria Aznar.

"I believe in the West. I believe in the values, the principles that we call the West," he said. "Freedom. Democracy. Real love. Tolerance. Equality between men and women... These are western values.

"I consider Israel part of the West. It is not part of the Middle East. It is a West country in the Middle East."

Addressing an audience of about 250 students and non-students recently at York University, Aznar said that Israel's principles and views are on par with those of other prominent countries, including the United States, and that Israel should be recognized for its positive contributions to the world in addition to its ways of governance.

Aznar said that Israel, which is continually growing and trying to improve itself, needs to be respected like other developed countries and that it should be given a voice on a global stage. This, he said, is what democratic societies do – enabling other countries to succeed instead of trying to disable them.

"There is a reason to try to convince other [countries] of our beliefs and values that a democracy is better than a theocracy," he said.

"What to do, in the world, to defend our ideas? To defend our principles?... We need to speak up, talk to people. Israel has the right to live peacefully. It is a democracy. It is a land of opportunity. Israel needs to be heard."

This comment led to a standing ovation with no opposition. On a campus known for its protests against Israel, there were no protesters at Aznar's talk.

Answering a question on whether the United States feels the same urgency to defend and support Israel, Aznar replied that it's only now starting to get the message.

"The big temptation at the beginning of the Obama administration was to establish a relationship with the Muslim world [and] to change the position of Israel," he said.

"We can maintain our traditional support for our allies. We first need to strengthen our support and alliance with Israel. Never can you put its existence in doubt. Then we can work forward."

Aznar's talk was hosted by the Canadian Network for Israel Affairs, the Christians United for Israel at York, Hasbara at York, Hasbara Fellowships, Hillel of Greater Toronto and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto.

Aznar helped found the Friends of Israel Initiative, whose aim is get prominent individuals and political leaders to join together to defend Israel's right to exist. The friends include Nobel Peace Prize laureate David Trimble; Peru's former president, Alejandro Toledo; Italian philosopher Marcello Pera; former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, John Bolton, and British historian Andrew Roberts.

"Israel is undermined," Aznar said, explaining the need for the Friends of Israel Initiative. "We must not allow it to be undermined."

José María Aznar, the former prime minister of Spain, visits Abir Yaacob Congregation. From left are Max Benaim, president of the Sephardic Kehila Centre; Aznar; Meyer Keslassy, vice-president of Sephardic Kehila Centre, and Rabbi Haham Amram Assayag.

SF Partnership, LLP
Chartered Accountants

Congratulations!

Hisham Alwafai
Navjit Dhaliwal
Harris Goldenberg
Maria Khoushnood
Jason Leung
Subramanian Narayanan
Karen Philp
& their families

On the successful completion of the recent Chartered Accountancy Exams

We've been making great CA's for over 35 years!

A member of KS International

The Madison Centre
4950 Yonge Street 4th Floor, Toronto, Ontario M2N 6K1
T: 416.250.1212 www.sfgroup.ca F: 416.250.1225

A "BORN-AGAIN" CHRISTIAN BORN AGAIN AS A JEW!

WHY A MINISTER CHOSE JUDAISM

A lecture with YEHUDAH TEBBITT

Ten years ago, Yehudah Tebbitt was an Evangelical Christian minister. He began seeking the original roots of his faith and soon was questioning many key doctrines of Christianity. This led him to a deep involvement in the "Messianic Jewish" movement. His search ultimately led him all the way back to the Jewish faith!

Sun., Dec. 26, 8 PM
SHAAREI TEFILLAH
3600 Bathurst St.
Admission: FREE
Donations Welcome
For information:
416-789-0020
torontoe@jewsforjudaism.org
www.jewsforjudaism.org

Shaarei Tefillah Congregation
UJA Federation
Jews for Judaism
KEEPING JEWS JEWISH

There will be no issue of The CJN on December 30, 2010

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Only paid Family Moments announcements can be guaranteed to appear in a specific issue, when received by deadline, 10 days prior to publication date. All other items will appear on a first-come, first-served basis, as space allows.

Mazel tov announcements featured on onlysimchas.com will appear as space permits.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Label the back of all photos and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for return. Please keep all announcements to 25 words, maximum.

To send in digital photos, please visit

www.cjnews.com

and click the Family Moments banner at the top.

Elena & Peter Mitnik, Marla & Wille Rozen are delighted to announce the engagement of Elizabeth to Justin. Proud grandparents Sam & Ella Rozencwajg.

Mazel tov to Reuben & Dorothy Farberman on their 65th wedding anniversary on Nov. 25 with much love from your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mazel tov to Sybil & Gerald Berley on their 66th anniversary, from children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren. Breslow, Ratner and Kaplan families, and the Berley family in Australia.

Whitney & Stuart are overjoyed with the birth of their daughter Ryla Lauren Sherman Detsky. Grandparents, Jeannie Berg & Kevie Sherman and Mirah & Howard Detsky.

Happy first birthday to our special little man Aidan Shane! Love, Mommy, Daddy, big sister Skylar, Bubbie Diane, Auntie Lori and the whole family!

Introducing Hannah Claire, darling daughter of Shauna & Jeremy Bornstein. Bubbies & zaidies are overjoyed: Gilda & Barry Waltman and Brenda & Rick Bornstein.

REGENCY INTERIORS 2000 INC.

MANUFACTURERS OF CUSTOM FINE FURNITURE

T: (416) 661-9100

sal@regencyinteriors.info kitchens bedrooms bathrooms living rooms dining rooms

www.regencyinteriors.info

JNF
Say it with Trees
"In Loving Memory"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
416-636-3575
alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Note there is no paper Dec. 30. Deadline for Jan. 6 is Dec. 23. Deadline for Jan. 13 is Jan. 3. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Dec. 16

SATELLITE AT SINAI

"Miriam's Mosaic: Diverse Women of the Rabbinate." Panel discussion with women who have entered the clergy. Moderated by Rabbi Diana Gerson. Doors 7:30 p.m., program 8 p.m. Members $10, guests $15 at the door. 416-487-3281, education@templesinai.net.

Saturday, Dec. 18

RABBI'S TISH

Special study session and kiddush with Rabbi Martin Berman in the social hall of Shaar Shalom Synagogue following morning services. Topic is "The Messiah." 905-889-4975.

TORAH CLASS

Beth Tikvah class: Rabbi Grover on parshah Vayechi. 9:45 a.m.

Sunday, Dec. 19

SINGLES GAMES NIGHT

"Games Jewish Singles Play." 7:30 p.m. Beth Torah Synagogue, 47 Glenbrook Ave. Ages 21-39 and 40-69. $8. Info: Mollie, 416-733-3634 or mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca.

Other News

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

Bernard Betel Centre needs volunteers for Meals on Wheels, to help seniors with basic computer skills, Healthy@Home program and visiting seniors, in person or over the phone. 416-225-2112 ext. 127.

BILLY ELLIOT

Beth Sholom is going to Billy Elliot. Jan. 30, 2011. $130 and $150. 416-783-6103 ext. 228.

BAYCREST VOLUNTEERS

Baycrest needs volunteers to assist their clients. Every Friday from 3-4 p.m. Baycrest has Kabalat Shabbat services. Volunteers are needed to escort clients to the program and help the women light the candles. 416-785-2500, ext. 2572.

FAMILY FUN DAY

Join Beth Tzedec for an afternoon of family fun with sports, havdalah crafts, ceramics, havdalah drum circle, cookie decorating and more. Dec. 25, 4-8 p.m. $10 each, advance registration only. Dinner $5 extra. 416-781-3511.

FAMILY FUN NIGHT

Bingo, karaoke and games with Pride of Israel. Dec. 26. Pizza and salad dinner. $10 for adult members, $12 for adult guests. $6 for ages 12-17, $4 for ages 6-12. Children 5 and under free. Purchase tickets in advance: 416-226-0111, ext. 10.

EREV SHABBAT

Erev Shabbat service at Temple Har Zion. After the service Rabbi Cory Weiss discusses "The Jewish View of the Messiah." Dec. 24. 905-889-2252.

MISHPACHAH MINYAN

Families with young children are invited to attend services in the Cayne Family Chapel, Shaar Shalom Synagogue, 10:15 a.m. Jan. 8. Service ends to coincide with the main service so the participants can join the other members of the congregation for kiddush.

45+ SINGLES DANCE

Shaar Shalom Synagogue Singles presents "Let's Dance Again." Jan. 9, 7:30 p.m. with DJ Dave Jones. David, 416-224-9494.

ECHO SCULPTURE

Echo Sculpture Studio, the only public studio with pneumatic, electric and hand tools for carving stone and wood. Visit echosculpture.com, come by Jan. 4 between 12 and 4 p.m. for a tour or call 416-444-8955. Calls will be returned as soon as possible over the holiday season.

Continued on page 25

Continued from page 24

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211, ext. 155.

Computers: Beyond the Basics. Four Tuesdays, 1-3 p.m. Six students.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Sheila, 416-665-3333.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Jan. 19, 10 a.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Doll making Thursdays, 10 a.m.-12 p.m. Art classes start Jan. 18. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen. 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Lecture: "Great Italian composers – Gaetano Donizetti." Dec. 21, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. www.prossermanjcc.com, 416-638-1881.

Registration for morning programs and full-day daycare is now open.

Buy tickets for Stage West, Mississauga – Joseph and the Amazing Dreamcoat Jan 26, Casino Rama Feb 15, Billy Elliot at Canon Theatre March 2 and Tuesdays with Morrie May 11.

Registration for courses starting January now open, with more Ryerson/Chang programs for 50+.

Register now for winter family programs: Shabbat Party, Drama Tots, Preschool Dance, Lego Brand Brick Club, Baby and Me Sign and more. Visit the website for a full list.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel services Sundays, 8 a.m. and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Kosher breakfast after services. Coleman, 416-968-0200.

2011 Toronto Jewish Film Society subscriptions are selling out. Eight great films from January to December on selected Sundays at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. 2011 paid-up members can buy 7:30 p.m. memberships for their kids (18+) for $60 if they've never been TJFS members. Joelle, ext. 139 or joellem@mnjcc.org to register.

Registration open for all winter programs. Aquafit, Zumba, Baby and Me, Yiddish History, etc. Register at ext. 0.

Winter session of Shabbat Club for three- to six-year-olds with Sarah Brodbar-Nemzer. Games, songs, candles, crafts and more. Fridays, 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. starting Jan. 21.

Register at ext. 0. Info: ext. 277.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

DINNER OF MIRACLES

The annual Dinner of Miracles, an evening of dialogue between Holocaust survivors and young adults, was held Dec. 6 at Petah Tikvah Congregation. At left are survivors George and Fanny Fox. At right, survivor and keynote speaker Agnes Tomasov reads from her memoir, published by the Azrieli Foundation, as her granddaughter, at the podium, looks on. [David Collin photos]

SOCALLED RAPS AT BIALIK

Josh Dolgin, a.k.a. Socalled, performed in Yiddish for Bialik Hebrew Day School students recently. The klezmer/hip-hop maestro reinterprets Yiddish classics. With Dolgin, from left in the back, are Abigail Landau, Gabriele Roitman, Matthew Mamelak, Jacob Schaffer, Julian Schecter and David Yuffa. In the front are Ethan Black and Abby Shore.

NEW CHAIR, MEMBERS ELECTED

Elizabeth Wolfe has been elected the new chair of the board of directors of the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto. The announcement was made, along with the names of other newly elected members of the board, at federation's recent annual general meeting. Current chair of the board, Alan Winer, beside her, was given a fond farewell at the meeting.

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 20

Cayne's
WAREHOUSE OUTLET
Starting Fri Dec 17
WE'LL PAY THE HST
CLOSING FRIDAY DEC. 24th at 6pm
Brand Name Houseware Close Outs, Bankruptcy Stock, Cancelled Orders...
Sold at a Fraction of the Original Price!
40,000 sq.ft. of Merchandise that MUST BE SOLD!
LAWRENCE AVE. W
125 Tycos Dr. at Lansdowne Ave. North York
GLENCAIRN AVE.
LANSDOWNE AVE.
DUFFERIN ST.
CALEDONIA RD.
TYCOS DR.
WINGOLD AVE.
CASTLEFIELD AVE.
OPEN Mon to Fri 10am - 8pm Sat to Sun 10am - 6pm
EGLINTON AVE. W
*Excluding Electrical Appliances
Always 1st Quality
PRICES HAVE NEVER BEEN LOWER!
Cayne's
THE SUPER HOUSEWARE STORE
112 BONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont.
One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St.
905-764-1188
HOLIDAY HOURS SATURDAY 10 - 9
Mon-Fri 9-9 Sunday 10-6
Shop Online at www.caynes housewares.com

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Mayer, Anne	Nov. 4/10	Private
Lemchuk, Michael	Nov. 22/10	Private
Cohen, Harriett	Nov. 22/10
Gawza, Michael	Nov. 24/10	Private
Sebselons, Samarijs	Nov. 24/10	Private
York, Louis	Nov. 24/10	850 Steeles Ave W
Malkin, Efim	Nov. 24/10	Private
Swimmer, Irene	Nov. 25/10	101 Maques Lane
Thaler, Riva	Nov. 26/10	784 Centre St
Iosefovici, Florentina	Nov. 25/10	Private
Greenstein, Sydney	Nov. 27/10	8 Covington Rd
Mandelbaum, Henry	Nov. 27/10
Mons, Fira	Nov. 26/10	Private
Khayut, Inna	Nov. 27/10
Rubinstein, Dora	Nov. 29/10	3000 Bathurst St
Richards, Robert (aka Benjamin Zukauf)	Nov. 30/10	8501 Bayview Av
Urman, Allen	Nov. 29/10
James, Helene	Nov. 30/10	8 Elkpath Ave
Baker, Evelyn	Nov. 30/10	300 Antibes Dr
Pearl, Jack Harold	Nov. 28/10	28 Tavistock Rd
Koenigberg, Ida	Nov. 28/10	3560 Bathurst St

With profound sadness we mourn the passing of Rabbi Louis I. Schechter ז"ל

Rabbi Schechter was buried in Israel as was his wish.
Well loved and well respected in all communities he served; he will be sorely missed.
Donations can be made to the JNF in his honor.

The Schechter family, the Silberbachs and the Lazers.

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
SHIVA MEALS
SEUDAT HAVRA'AH
(Traditional Meal After Funeral)
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

The family of the late

Abraham Ginsberg ז"ל

wishes to express our sincere appreciation to our family and friends for their support, condolences and donations made on behalf of our dear husband, father and Zaidy.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite
DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, neo-commissioned sales environment.
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

To place an unveiling notice, please call at least 15 DAYS prior to the date of the unveiling. To place any other family-related notice, please call at least 10 DAYS prior to the issue date. 416-391-1836

Coast to Coast

More than 500 attend Chabad opening

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — It was a festive atmosphere Dec. 5 as more than 500 people came to Winnipeg Chabad's new Jewish Learning Centre to celebrate both Chanukah and the centre's grand opening.

"This was the most ambitious project that we have ever undertaken," said Rabbi Avrohom Altein, Winnipeg's Chabad rabbi for the past 40 years, of the $3- to $4-million project.

Rabbi Altein's son, Rabbi Shmuly Altein, director of the new centre, spoke of energizing and engaging a young and vibrant Jewish community.

The event began with music by Brooklyn-based singer and guitarist Chaim Fogelman after which, Adina Altein, wife of Rabbi Shmuly Altein, welcomed the guests.

Mezuzahs were attached to doorposts by the individual donors who funded each room. Rabbi Avrohom Altein and Abe Anhang, who co-ordinated the campaign to build the new facility, attached the last mezuzah as confetti floated down from the ceiling.

Following a concert by Fogelman, a chanukiyah was lit by former Winnipegger Koppel Goldberg, who came in from Toronto for the centre's grand opening.

Following greetings and congratulatory remarks by Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger and Ben Cohen, the president of the Jewish Federation of Winnipeg, several participants jumped into their cars for a menorah parade through south Winnipeg. Some 25 cars, including a stretch limousine, were equipped with electric menorahs on their roofs.

The building of the new facility was kick-started in September 2009 when the province and the federal government announced infrastructure grants of $320,000 each for the project. That encouraged others to take out their chequebooks..

"We have been working on this since 2005," when Chabad purchased the former railroad land in south Winnipeg, said architect Lanny Silver. "There were a lot of obstacles to overcome. There were different options to consider."

The new building will house a multi-purpose social hall/lecture hall/synagogue, along with classrooms, a library, a small gym for Chabad's preschool program and summer and winter camp, and separate mikvahs for men and women. The centre can accommodate 350 to 400 people.

"There is a tremendous amount of enthusiasm in Winnipeg's Jewish community for this project," said David Rich, co-chair of the fundraising committee, in an interview before the event. "Almost everyone in the community has been touched in one way or another by Chabad's numerous services and programs."

David Salita, a member of the fundraising committee, added that the current construction project is just phase I of a more ambitious vision. The ultimate goal, he said, is to incorporate a yeshiva and student residence that would attract students from all over the world.

MASTERPIECE RETURNED

Concordia University president Judith Woodsworth unveils the 17th-century painting by Flemish artist Jan Brueghel the Younger titled Allegory of Earth and Water at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, where it is now on exhibit. The Nazi-looted masterpiece was returned to the estate of the late Montreal gallery owner Max Stern in November by the government of the Netherlands, where it had hung in a museum. Concordia, along with McGill University and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, are the beneficiaries of the Stern estate.

National Holocaust Monument closer to reality

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Canada may soon have a National Holocaust Monument.

Last week, Conservative MP Tim Uppal's private member Bill C-442, An Act To Establish a National Holocaust Monument, passed its third and final reading in the House of Commons, moving it one step closer to becoming law.

Bernie Farber

The bill, which Uppal introduced in the House in September 2009 at the behest of Peter Kent, minister of state for foreign affairs (Americas) and MP for Thornhill, is really the culmination of years of work by Laura Grossman, a public administration student at the University of Ottawa who is minoring in Canadian Jewish studies.

Kent was unable to sponsor the private members bill himself because he's a cabinet minister.

Born and raised in Thornhill, Ont., Grossman, 22, is also the executive director of the Canadian Memorial Holocaust Project.

She told The CJN she first approached Kent with her idea in 2008 – a family friend with a connection to Kent helped broker the meeting, she said – after a discussion with one of her professors about Canadian contributions during World War II and the Holocaust.

"I was shocked to realize there was no Holocaust memorial [in Ottawa]. I always thought there would be something," she told The CJN in an interview late last year. The realization prompted her to take up the cause of a monument in Canada.

Now that the bill has passed, Grossman, with the help of Canadian Jewish Congress, will be negotiating with the National Capital Commission (NCC) – the Crown corporation that acts as the steward of federal lands and buildings in the National Capital Region – to determine where the monument should be erected.

Speaking to The CJN last week, Congress CEO Bernie Farber said since the bill passed with all-party support, it "should not be difficult" to finalize the monument's location and should go through the Senate without much delay.

Though there is no deadline for it to be built, Farber said he wanted to see a monument placed sooner rather than later to capitalize on the momentum from the bill's passage.

"Ideally, we'd like the monument to be erected as close to the Parliament buildings as possible, but there are many possibilities," he said. "We're just thrilled this actually came to fruition."

Farber credited Uppal's "tenacity" in pushing the bill, but said Grossman is the one who deserves "full credit" for the bill's success.

Grossman could not be reached for interview by deadline.

"She came to us, and we were a support. We walked the walk with her on this from day one," he said.

Asked what type of monument it would be or who the artist would be, Farber said he didn't know, but remarked that the last monument created to commemorate the Canadian Jewish community is the Wheel of Conscience, done by renowned architect and artist Daniel Libeskind in memory of the S.S. St. Louis.

Bill C-442 now goes to the Senate for approval and the royal assent.

Uppal said once royal assent is granted, the monument will have to be established within three years. During that time, a monument fundraising and planning committee will be struck.

It will be made up of interested parties derived from public applicants who "possess a strong interest in, connection to, or familiarity with the Holocaust," Uppal said.

However, according to a report in the National Post, the Liberals are saying that the government should be paying the cost of the memorial. Uppal said the government has only promised to donate the land. The money to design and build the monument will have to come from a committee set up to collect private donations.

Immigrants must learn to speak French: Landry

BY JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — Former Quebec premier Bernard Landry said the province's efforts to integrate immigrants is being hindered by federal policies of multiculturalism and bilingualism.

Landry, who made the remarks during a talk at Federation CJA's Gelber Conference Centre, said newcomers here, too, often are not learning French because they feel that as Canadians, they have the right to make English their first language.

The fact that they take an oath to Queen Elizabeth II at their swearing-in helps to reinforce this attitude, said Landry, who was Parti Québécois leader from 2001 to 2005.

Landry was the sixth and final guest speaker in a series called "Apprendre et comprendre le Québec," presented by the Institut québécois du judaïsme laïque, in collaboration with the federation's Gen J program.

Landry emphasized that Quebec is a nation, but that the Quebec identity is not an ethnic one. Rather, it's characterized by the sharing of "a common dream, a common project." He remains confident Quebec's independence is inevitable.

"Those who insist that being a Quebecer is based on race are liars and imposters. Period," he said. Almost half of Quebecers, he noted, have First Nations ancestry and a quarter can trace an Irish forebear.

He emphasized Quebec society's historic tolerance, arguing that the 1832 law extending full political rights to Jews likely paved the way for the election of Benjamin Disraeli, who was of Jewish descent, as prime minister of Britain. According to Landry, this may also have been the reason Montreal received the third-largest number of Holocaust survivors, after Tel Aviv and New York, and it may account for the fact that there are more Moroccan Jews here than in Morocco.

Landry, who was Quebec's premier from 2001 to 2003, is now a professor at the Université du Québec à Montréal.

He deplored the "Quebec bashing" that says the province's economy is lagging behind. It is flourishing, he said, led by companies founded here such as Bombardier, SNC Lavalin and the information technology firm CGI. At the same time, Quebec has remained true to its social democratic ideals, and the gap between rich and poor is the narrowest in North America, he said.

By contrast, he continued, Ontario's is a "branch-plant economy" dominated by Ford, GM, Chrysler and Toyota. And, he added, the province doesn't have Céline Dion or Cirque du Soleil, either.

The biggest threat to Quebec's growth is the aging of the population, he said. If the birthrate doesn't increase, immigration will have to be the main source of renewal. But, of course, he reiterated, those who arrive here must speak French.

Beth Tikvah Synagogue

Presents

Tuesdays with Larry Winter 2011

Shows begin at 2:00 p.m. $5. at the door

Jan. 4 A Serious Man (2009) Comedy 106 min.
(Written and directed by the Coen brothers)
Jewish Professor Lawrence 'Larry' Gopnik is facing many problems. His daughter is stealing from him; his wife has asked for a divorce; a student has tried to bribe him; he crashed his car; his next door neighbor has trespassed on his lawn; and his sick brother has moved into his house.

Jan. 11 Revolt – The Story of the Irgun Documentary 100 min.
This dramatic video examines the role played by the Irgun in the establishment of the State of Israel. Interviews with former Irgun fighters, British Intelligence officers, historians from Israel and England and with the late Prime Minister Begin are interspersed with historic archival footage

Jan. 18 Black Book (2006) Rated "R" 145 min.
(English subtitles)
In the Nazi-occupied Netherlands during World War II, a Jewish singer infiltrates the regional Gestapo headquarters for the Resistance. To fight the enemy, she must become one of them

Jan. 25 Broken Wings (2002) From Israel 87 min.
(Hebrew with English Subtitles)
Daphne and her four children try to cope with the abrupt death of husband/father. As the family seems to fall apart, a sudden incident gives them a chance to heal their 'broken wings'

Feb. 1 Holy Rollers (2010) 89 min.
In 1998, 1 million ecstasy pills were smuggled into the USA by a group of Hasidic Jews. In Brooklyn, a youth from an Orthodox Jewish community is lured into becoming an Ecstasy dealer by his pal who has ties to an Israel drug cartel

Feb. 8 Hill 24 Doesn't Answer (1955) From Israel 101 min.
(Hebrew and English, with Subtitles)
Hill 24 is one of the foothills dominating the approach to Jerusalem. The night before a cease-fire four Israeli volunteers set out to hold the hill until morning, in order to be able to claim it for Israel.

Feb. 15 A Cantor's Tale (2005) Documentary 95 min.
The story of one man's journey to becoming a chazzan, as well as the history of the chazzan in America. The narrator hails from Boro Park. He grew up loving chazzanut and the Dodgers

Feb. 22 Hey Hey It's Esther Blueberger (2008) 103 min.
A coming-of-age story about a 13-year-old girl trying to fit into both a posh private school and an ordinary public school. Sometimes to fit in you need to stand out.

Mar. 1 Walk on Water (2004) From Israel 103 min.
(English subtitles)
A Mossad agent is given the mission to track down and kill a very old ex-Nazi officer who might still be alive. Pretending to be a tourist guide, he befriends his grandson Axel, in Israel to visit his sister Pia. The two men set out on a tour of the country, during which Axel challenges his values

Mar. 8 I Have Never Forgotten You (2007) Documentary 105 min.
(Narrated by Nicole Kidman)
The documentary explores the life and legacy of Simon Wiesenthal, the concentration camp survivor who became known as the "Conscience of the Holocaust" for his efforts at tracking down Nazi war criminals and for making sure that the memory of that event would never be forgotten

Each film includes an introduction and commentary by:
Larry Ankiewicz, Programming Coordinator, Toronto Jewish Film

Series Sponsored by:

FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
905-738-0905 • www.fourelms.ca

PORTRAIT CONDOMINIUMS
PortraitCondo.com

SAR-EL CANADA
CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS FOR ISRAEL

Beth Tikvah Synagogue
3080 Bayview Ave. Toronto
416-221-3433 • bethtikvahtoronto.org

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

On-set tutor's first student was Lindsay Lohan

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Andrea Eisen has worked with an emotionally disturbed orphan, a girl from South Africa and a few young superheroes.

Since 2003, she's been an on-set tutor for movies and TV shows. Her first job was as Lindsay Lohan's tutor while she was filming the movie Mean Girls.

Before becoming an on-set tutor, Eisen taught at the United Synagogue Day School (now Robbins Hebrew Academy), and worked briefly as a supply teacher for the Toronto District School Board. However, she didn't love supply teaching and, after running into a friend from high school, started on the path to becoming a tutor.

"I happened to bump into a friend of mine from high school who's a trainer for the stars... He told me about tutoring on set and hooked me up to the right people to get in touch with. So I went from there and developed really good relationships with production managers," she said.

Some of the movies and TV shows she's worked on include Orphan, Scott Pilgrim vs. the World, Kick-Ass, Flash of Genius and Dan for Mayor. She also spent two months in Japan for The Grudge 2.

"The production manager [for The Grudge 2] was also someone I knew from high school that had moved to New York, and he called me to see if I wanted to come because they were going to have a kid on set from Toronto... We got to travel around Japan and experience that culture."

Eisen, left, tutored actor Sophia Ewaniuk, on the set of the TV show Happy Town.

When asked about personal highlights, without hesitating Eisen mentions meeting director Steven Spielberg in 2009.

"I was working on a pilot for a TV show and he was the producer. He walked on set when we weren't expecting him to come... He was so nice and so down to earth.

"This past summer I met Julia Roberts. I was working on this really great movie that she was producing. She was also really nice," she added.

What Eisen likes most about being a tutor, she said, is getting to know the kids on set and meeting all different kinds of people.

"I like getting to know the kids one-on-one. Usually there's not more than five kids at a time.

"It's nice to get to know people... out of the box that I'm used to."

Initially, tutoring on set was not the most stable of jobs, but Eisen said she's recently become so busy that she hired someone to work for her under the new company she formed, called Lights! Camera! Study!

Aside from being a tutor, Eisen is also a published author. Her first book, StarSitter, came out in 2007, and she just released the sequel StarSitter: Thank God for You! last month. A third book, StarSitter Goes to Japan, is in the works.

StarSitter is a novel based loosely on Eisen's experiences travelling with Lohan to Los Angeles when Lohan was doing publicity for Mean Girls.

"When I was in L.A. with Lindsey, I was writing e-mails home about what was going on and the fun I was having... I was friends with [writer Rebecca Eckler] and she called me when I was home and [said I] had to write a book about this.

"I had always been a good writer, but I never pursued anything with it. It was always been a dream of mine to write a book, so now I had the perfect thing to write about," she said.

In addition to writing books, Eisen loves reading them as well. Her goal for 2010 is to read 100 books. She is currently on book number 98 and plans to do it again in 2011 while raising money for charity.

"People are always talking to me about books now. It's a nice change from TV shows and movies and video games and the latest technology. It's nice to go back to the medieval talks of books."

The books she's read so far this year are listed on her website, andreadanasilverlining.blogspot.com.

Andrea Eisen [Megan Vincent photo]

Eisen started the blog "because of all these horrible things that were happening in my life [including losing several family members]... I was writing about incidents that were happening and trying to figure out how to find that silver lining within that."

One particular experience that sticks out in her mind was trying to find a psychiatrist.

"I wrote about this incident where I was trying to find the right psychiatrist to help me through grief. I went to one, and she yelled at me the whole time about being single.

"I had gone to talk about my grief – my dad – it was only three months since he'd died, and she couldn't get off the fact that I was still single. She was just yelling at me and she didn't get it."

Eisen, who's in her mid-30s, said writing the blog has helped her to heal, as well as encouraged people she knows to open up about their problems.

"It's helped people share a lot about themselves. It's helped people open up, and they probably wouldn't have had I not come out first about what was going on with me.

"That's been really effective in the healing process."

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Entrepreneur's website is a hit with young professionals

NotableTV founder and CEO Julian Brass

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Julian Brass knows what he's talking about when it comes to what young professionals want – he is one.

As the founder and CEO of NotableTV, the charismatic Brass lives and breathes the young professional lifestyle.

Notable was established by Brass as "a source [for young professionals] that cuts through the clutter, that tells them only what's relevant and actually worth knowing about," he said.

The website, NotableTV.com, features exclusive events for Notable members, advice from travel, business, relationship, tech and fitness, experts and interviews with Notable business people, including Brett Wilson and Arlene Dickinson from the CBC show Dragons' Den.

Notable, which has nearly 30,000 members, has partnered with brands and organizations including Samsung Galaxy, RW&Co, Mount Sinai Hospital and the Canadian Opera Company to run campaigns and host events. This past September, Brass worked with Cineplex.com for the Toronto International Film Festival (TIFF).

"It was awesome," he said when asked about his TIFF experience. "I'm not one to really get starstruck... but hanging out with people like Martin Sheen, James Franco, Hayden Christensen [and] Emilio Estevez – first of all it's fun.

"It is work though. For me, it was about creating a great segment every time I did an interview.

"To get to the red carpet takes a ton of work that people don't see because it happens behind the scenes. It's also very worthwhile."

Before launching Notable in 2008, Brass worked in Silicon Valley in California for Engage.com, a combination social networking and online dating website. He was offered the position with Engage when he went to an Internet conference to get ideas for starting his own business.

"I went [to the conference] just to learn and network and be a fly on the wall and take in as much as I could, because I wanted to put that into starting my own business.

"By being there and not trying to close deals and not looking for a job, I ended up making some really good relationships over the conference. Next thing I knew, I had four different job offers by the end of the conference."

One of those job offers came from JDate, the online dating site for Jewish singles. In keeping with his entrepreneurial spirit, Brass turned down the offer because he didn't want to work at what was already a well-known company.

"While I thought [working at Jdate] would be a great time, obviously, I wanted to be one of the first at a company rather than an employee of an already very well-established brand. I think I made the right decision. Not a day goes by that I'm not very thankful for everything I learned down there."

After spending just over a year as Engage's marketing, public relations and advertising manager, Brass took what he learned and came back to Canada to start NotableTV.

He hasn't looked back since, and was recently recognized for his efforts by being named 2010 Entrepreneur of the Year at the IMPACT National Conference, a youth entrepreneurship conference.

"For the past two years, I have worked so incredibly hard, sometimes I'm kind of amazed when I look back at how much effort I've put into this business and how I still love what I do," Brass said.

"It's nice to get accolades for all the hard work... The truth is, it's great to win but at the same time I'm not doing this for an award.

"It's nice to be recognized, but really my work is far from over. So while it's nice to celebrate and put a trophy on my desk, that's really all it is. My job is far from over and I wouldn't change that for anything, because I love what I do," he said.

He added that every day when he gets out of bed, he thinks about how to give back to his peers "in a way that motivates them to do more in their professional or social life, inspires them to take their career to the next level and creates a seamless way to find out what's going on.

"That's what I love about running my business, that I'm able to give back to my peers on a daily basis in a meaningful way. I love being my own boss and being able to challenge myself to be more productive and strategic."

However, Brass was quick to point out that being an entrepreneur is not easy.

"It takes a ton of self-discipline. It takes a really thick skin. It requires believing in yourself and your abilities."

When asked what advice he would give to people considering starting their own business, he had plenty to say.

"You need to be realistic [and] you need to figure out where you are in your finances and your life," he said.

"Being passionate about your idea is awesome, however, you need to take an in-depth look at the market you're trying to get into and say, 'Is there a place for me to carve out my niche? Is there room for my idea?'

"Once you decide [there is], it's time. You have to go for it headfirst... just dive in. You can't be successful if you have one foot in and one foot out," he said.

"Build a network of people who've already done this," Brass added. "It doesn't have to be the exact same industry, but if it is, even better.

"It's okay to feel down. It's only natural and part of being human. The trick is to not stay down for long and to fight back... and get yourself out of whatever temporary rut you may be in."

Brass has many plans for the future of NotableTV, including an upcoming branding change to Notable.ca at the beginning of 2011.

"The goal is to truly be the online destination for young professionals across Canada," he said. "So every young professional, 25 to 39 years old, I want them to, when they think about a destination in terms of lifestyle, networking and the places, people and things they need to know about, I want them to think Notable."

Julian Brass with former Toronto mayor David Miller

Social Networking @ The Canadian Jewish News for the :-) generation

Health & Lifestyles

"YOU DIDN'T GET MY CHEQUE? IT'S IN THE MAIL, HONEST!" Sound Familiar?
Michael Lebovic, Paralegal
25 Years in Debt Recovery (416) 784-3770 x 224
www.theydidntpay.com • theydidntpay@cclsinc.ca

Bat mitzvah girl spreads the love

Wolfe makes sandwiches for victims of homelessness

By CARA EDELL
Special to The CJN

Talia Wolfe, 12, is spreading the love this winter by making sandwiches for victims of homelessness and hunger.

On Nov. 29, Wolfe organized Toronto's first Spread the Love project at Fieldstone Day School, where she is a Grade 6 student. Her second event will take place during a family brunch after her bat mitzvah on Jan. 23.

Spread the Love is a charitable initiative that encourages groups to feed the hungry. It offers relief to front-line organizations and provides leadership opportunities to youth. To date, volunteers across Canada have made more than 55,000 sandwiches for people struggling to find a meal.

Wolfe said she donated the sandwiches made at her event to Youth Without Shelter and the North York Women's Shelter. "It seems almost strange that hunger could be a problem in Canada, but unfortunately it is a sad reality.

"The youth shelter is for people ages 16 to 24. They're going to school or to job interviews so they can improve their lives. They need food to carry on during the day," she said.

In addition to sandwiches, Wolfe decided to include an apple, juice box and cookies in each lunch bag. "I remember, the shelter sent me a video that said each person there only has a dollar a day for meals, and that's not enough. They're teenagers, so they're going to be hungry."

To prepare for her events, Wolfe wrote donation letters to food suppliers asking for support. She said she thanks Costco, Loblaws and caterer Sonny Langer for their help.

Items in need include ingredients such as bread, cheese and meats, as well as cutlery, paper bags and plastic gloves. She estimated that about 150 to 200 sandwiches would be made on each date, ranging from egg to tuna to turkey.

Talia Wolfe holds up a sign at one of the sandwich stations at her first Spread the Love event. Spread the Love is a charitable initiative that encourages groups to feed the hungry.

"The kids in my class were pretty excited to help with the sandwiches, partially because we got to miss class and partially because they like to help," she said about her first event.

"Even the teachers came to help because they thought it looked like fun and wanted to be a part of such an important cause."

Since the students at her school are required to wear uniforms, Wolfe helped arrange a "paid grub day," which meant that students who wanted to wear other clothing had to contribute $2 to the cause. "We raised $188.24 just from that. It was lots of fun, she said, "and I'm looking forward to doing it again [prepare lunches] with my family in January."

Wolfe said she first heard about Spread the Love through her cousin, who is a student at McGill University. He and his friends organized their own event in Montreal after learning about the initiative that originated in Calgary.

Wolfe said that helping others is in her blood, as her family members are very charitable. "Lots of people don't have the things I take for granted. All people should have food and water and clothing. I want to raise money so that I can give the necessities to the less fortunate."

While many teenagers who celebrate bar and bat mitzvahs give portions of their monetary gifts to charities, Wolfe said she wanted to go one step further. Since she has always loved cooking and feeding people, making sandwiches for shelters seemed like the perfect mitzvah.

Prior to becoming involved with Spread the Love, Wolfe said she devoted herself to different causes. Last summer, she held a bake sale to raise money to sponsor a child in Africa. The two-year-old girl she sponsored lives with her family in a tiny mud house and her parents cannot read or write. "Now she's gotten all of her medical treatments and has money to go to school when she gets older. That is amazing."

After making sandwiches at her school and bringing them to the shelters, Wolfe said it was rewarding "to meet some of the staff and people who live there and understand how and why these shelters are so important to so many young people."

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

The Canadian Jewish News
Log on today to www.cjnews.com
watch us on YouTube
The Canadian Jewish Chronicle
HEEBONICS
visit the blogs
follow us @ The CJN
Find us on Facebook

The Canadian Jewish news
P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

Give a Gift today
SAVE $5 ON 1 YR IN PRINT
Quote Code: T10Gift
Canadian Delivery
New Address Only

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$22.54*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑

*H.S.T INCLUDED H.S.T. #R105201149

$135.00 CND 1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN ❑

Name
Address
City
Province Postal Code
Telephone
Email
❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift
Subscriber No.

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.
AMOUNT ENCLOSED $
CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑
NUMBER
EXPIRY DATE

Now, I have global perspective.
Monica Weissmann — Investment Advisor
416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com

At Macquarie, I can deliver more.
Monica Weissmann — Investment Advisor
416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com

International

Israel & the Jewish World

U.S. envoy returns to Israel

By BARAK RAVID
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu welcomed a U.S. decision to drop efforts to achieve a construction freeze on Israeli settlements and focus on resolving core issues of the Middle East conflict.

"To reach peace, we have to discuss the issues that are truly delaying peace... I welcome the fact that we will now begin discussing these issues and try to narrow gaps," Netanyahu said on Monday in a speech to an economic forum, hours before U.S. envoy George Mitchell was due to arrive in Israel.

In the speech, Netanyahu mentioned several issues to be resolved, including that Palestinians recognize Israel as a Jewish state, security arrangements, and the future of Palestinian refugees.

Mitchell was to meet with Netanyahu in Jerusalem on Monday evening to put forth U.S. ideas for moving the peace process forward.

Mitchell was expected to make clear to Netanyahu that the Obama administration wants the prime minister to take a position in the coming weeks on the core issues, with an emphasis on borders.

Mitchell was also scheduled to hold talks with Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas in Ramallah. But the brunt of the work will be in Israel because the Palestinians have already submitted their opening positions on all the core issues – borders, security, Jerusalem, refugees, water and the settlements.

The Americans have heard little new from Netanyahu, with the exception of ideas on security and aspects considered secondary such as the environment and the economy.

Mitchell's visit to Israel will be his first in three months. On Sept. 15, he took part with U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in a tripartite meeting with Netanyahu and Abbas.

Direct talks between Israel and the Palestinians stalled when Israel's 10-month freeze on settlement construction expired on Sept. 26.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu welcomes the new American approach to peace making in a speech in Jerusalem last week. [Israel Sun]

Last week, the U.S. and Israel announced that talks on a deal for Israel to renew the settlement freeze in exchange for a set of U.S. guarantees had reached a dead end.

The U.S. now wants a return to indirect Israeli-Palestinian talks.

On Monday, Netanyahu hailed the U.S. decision to drop its efforts to get Israel to renew the settlement freeze.

"I welcome this American decision. It is good for Israel. It is good for peace," Netanyahu said.

Meanwhile Palestinian officials said that the U.S. administration should have blamed Israel for the failure of the latest Mideast efforts.

The officials reacted last weekend to a speech by Clinton before the Brookings Institution's Saban Center for Middle East Policy's seventh annual forum in Washington, in which she said Israelis and Palestinians both bear responsibility for the failure of the direct talks that took place in September.

In her speech on Friday, Clinton criticized the leadership of both Israel and the Palestinian Authority, saying they had "not yet made the difficult decisions that peace requires. Like many of you, I regret that we have not gotten farther, faster."

"Israeli and Palestinian leaders should stop trying to assign blame for the next failure and focus instead on what they need to do to make these efforts succeed," she said.

The Palestinians have said they won't resume negotiations without a full settlement construction freeze. Despite their disappointment with Washington's performance, the Palestinians are likely to participate in indirect talks. They said they'll make a final decision within a week.

In her speech, Clinton also said that a Palestinian state achieved through negotiation is inevitable.

Clinton said that the United States is serious about pushing forward a peace agreement and laying the foundations for a future Palestinian state.

"We will deepen our support of the Palestinians' state-building efforts, because we recognize that a Palestinian state, achieved through negotiations, is inevitable," Clinton said, adding that "the long-term population trends that result from the occupation are endangering the Zionist vision of a Jewish and democratic state in the historic homeland of the Jewish people."

Clinton said diplomacy would now concentrate on the core issues – all of which have proved difficult to resolve. One of the core issues is Jerusalem itself, which Israel says is its capital but which the Palestinians also hope will serve as the capital of their future independent state.

After she made the speech, Netanyahu said there were a number of positive elements for Israel in Clinton's speech, including her comment that the negotiations will be held on all core issues at the same time. He also considered positive the fact that the United States is opposed to unilateral steps by the Palestinians at the United Nations.

Kissinger: Gassing Jews wouldn't be a U.S. problem

JTA

WASHINGTON — Former U.S Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is heard saying on newly released Nixon tapes that the genocide of Soviet Jews would not be an American concern.

The tapes chronicle former U.S. president Richard Nixon's obsession with disparaging Jews and other minorities.

Kissinger's remarks come after a meeting he and Nixon had with then-Israeli prime minister Golda Meir on March 1, 1973, in which Meir pleads for the United States to put pressure on the Soviet Union to release its Jews. Nixon and Kissinger, then secretary of state, dismiss the plea after Meir leaves.

"The emigration of Jews from the Soviet Union is not an objective of American foreign policy," the New York Times quoted Kissinger, as saying on the tapes. "And if they put Jews into gas chambers in the Soviet Union, it is not an American concern. Maybe a humanitarian concern."

U.S. secretary of state Henry Kissinger speaks to prime minister of Israel Golda Meir in 1973 in Jerusalem. Israeli ambassador to the U.S. Simcha Dinitz looks on. [IGPO file photo]

Nixon replies: "I know. We can't blow up the world because of it."

Six months later, during the Yom Kippur War, Nixon rejected Kissinger's advice to delay an arms airlift to Israel as a means of setting the stage for an Egypt confident enough to pursue peace. Nixon, among other reasons, cited Israel's urgent need.

The American Gathering of Holocaust Survivors and their Descendants in a statement called for an apology from Kissinger, who is still consulted by Democratic and Republican administrations and by Congress on matters of state.

"Henry Kissinger's comments are morally grotesque and represent a disgraceful perversion of American values," the statement said. "He owes an apology to all victims of the Nazi Holocaust."

Nixon secretly recorded his White House conversations. After this was revealed during congressional investigations, the tapes became government property and have been released over the years in intervals.

Elsewhere on the batch of tapes recently released by the Nixon Library, the late president repeats many of the ethnic and racial slurs that had appeared on earlier such releases: Irish are "mean" drunks, he says; Italians "don't have their heads screwed on tight"; Jews are "aggressive, abrasive and obnoxious"; and it would take blacks "500 years" to catch up with whites.

'We will turn the Carmel from black to green'

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu last week thanked Diaspora communities for their support and donations in the aftermath of the Carmel forest fire.

Speaking Dec. 9 to more than 900 participants on a JNF USA-organized conference call, Netanyahu said that with the continued support of Jews worldwide, and under the stewardship of the Jewish National Fund (JNF), he believed Israel will be able to "turn the forest from black to green."

He said Israel must now focus on two tasks in the Carmel region: to restore the buildings, homes and "various communities hurt by the fire," and to restore the forest.

"We have to understand what we're facing – that is to renew about half of the Carmel forest. [JNF] is the main engine here," Netanyahu said.

As of late last week, Canadian donations through community organizations such as JNF Canada, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, Federation CJA in Montreal and Ve'ahavta totalled in excess of $550,000.

In addition to funds going toward the forest's renewal, donations are also being sent to help support the families of fire victims; provide trauma treatment and physiological support to members of families affected by the fire, and to provide meals to those left homeless or hungry as a result of the disaster.

The Montreal Jewish community has also set up a special fund for families affected in the south of the country.

Four residents of Federation CJA's sister city of Be'er Sheva in the Negev died fighting the fire. They were:

- Yaron Brami, 31, who had just celebrated his two-year-old child's birthday and whose wife is pregnant;
- Dmitri Kolozov, 41, a father of one, who died on his birthday;
- Rami Yisraeli, 33, also a father of one, and
- Vladislav Rahamimov, 30.

"These young men were wardens on the bus that was destroyed and were outstanding citizens of Be'er Sheva," said federation president Jack Hasen. "We honour them and pray for their families."

For information on donating, call 514-345-2600 in Montreal.

Canadian federations have been asked to raise $180,000 to help provide skin grafts to some of the critically injured now in hospital in Haifa. As well, assistance is being extended to thousands of families that were evacuated.

For its part, Ve'ahavta is splitting the donations it receives between three of its partner organizations in Israel. Some 60 per cent is being allocated to the Israel Trauma Coalition, 30 per cent to Rambam Hospital in the areas of trauma and its burn unit, and 10 per cent is going to Hazon Yeshaya Humanitarian Network.

JNF Canada is earmarking its donations to the renewal and protection of the forest.

Netanyahu said Israel will ensure that the forest's rehabilitation will be done in a way that's "compatible" with the country's economic and environmental concerns.

In this, he urged JNF to "bring assistance from across the Jewish world, and maybe from the non-Jewish world" as well.

A woman searches through the rubble from the fire that devastated her home in Beit Oren in the Carmel forest earlier this month. [Flash90 photo]

"We may not have a fire burning now, but we want to act now with the same dispatch that we used to put out the fire," Netanyahu said, adding that he aims to equip Israel's firefighting forces with updated materiel so that if a similar "horror" breaks out again, the country will be ready.

Netanyahu said that within the next few weeks, he will present a "program" to cabinet to have all donations collected by JNF go toward a "systemic program to revitalize the Carmel."

As an aside, Netanyahu told a story about his August visit with Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou. While in Greece, he said, he had the opportunity to witness that country's firefighters extinguish a forest fire using Canadian-made water-bombers.

Netanyahu said Israel has since "researched the possibility of procuring" some of these aircraft for domestic use.

"We will have to build an aerial capability to ensure that the valuable work being done by [the JNF] now rehabilitating the forest is not consumed by future fires," Netanyahu said, adding that the type of fire Israel saw earlier this month was a "mega-fire" and that this type of blaze requires different logistical firefighting techniques than other, more generic fires, such as those in a residential block of buildings or in a home.

Netanyahu said that after he returned from Greece, he "understood that [Israel] had to organize" itself to be better able to fight a large forest fire, adding that he realized the country's firefighting forces were not adequately equipped to handle a blaze of the magnitude it saw this month.

According to the JNF, approximately five million trees were destroyed in the Carmel forest fire, the worst in Israel's history.

Also on the conference call was Shimon Romach, Israel's fire commissioner, who said that "the firefighters of Israel, and emergency services all fought bravely."

Romach lamented the 43 lives lost in the fire, and specifically the death of one of Israel's "fire scouts," 16-year-old Elad Riven, a volunteer firefighter who he said "fought to the last minute" trying to save the lives of 40 prison wardens trapped on a bus in the middle of the forest on the first day of the fire.

He also strongly urged both Israel and Diaspora communities to help his force restock itself, as his department lost close to $2 million worth of firefighting equipment to the blaze. Also urgently needed, he said, are updated fire engines.

"One of our main problems is we're using fire trucks that are older than many of our firefighters," he said.

As reported in The CJN last week, JNF Canada announced it had received a $100,000 donation from a donor to be used exclusively toward the purchase of a new fire truck for JNF's firefighting unit in Israel. The cost of a new forest firefighting truck is approximately $250,000, according to JNF.

Fire death toll rises to 43

JTA

JERUSALEM — The death of another prison guard bus passenger raised the toll from the Carmel Forest fire to 43.

Jalal Bisan, 29, died Saturday in a Haifa hospital.

Bisan, a father of two, was on board a bus racing to evacuate a prison in the path of last week's historic blaze that was engulfed in flames.

Thirty-eight of the passengers on board were burned to death.

The other victims of the fire, which is being called Israel's worst civilian disaster, were three police officers – including Haifa police chief Ahuva Tomer – a firefighter and a 16-year-old volunteer.

Canadian Council of Conservative Synagogues
Building Community

Sincerely regrets and apologizes for the omission of our valued member synagogue
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
In our Chanukah greeting to the Jewish community.

Adath Israel Congregation, Toronto
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue, Toronto
Beth Sholom Synagogue, Toronto
Beth Torah Congregation, Toronto
B'nai Shalom Congregation of Halton-Peel, Oakville
Congregation Beth Shalom, Ottawa
Congregation Shaar Shalom, Chomedy

www.canadianccs.ca

Madoff's son dead of apparent suicide

JTA

NEW YORK — Mark Madoff, son of disgraced Jewish financier Bernard Madoff, was found dead in what is believed to have been a suicide.

The Associated Press quoted New York police as saying that Madoff, 46, was found hanging Saturday in his Manhattan apartment.

Bernard Madoff is serving 150 years in prison for what is believed to be history's largest Ponzi scheme, in which investors see returns only when new investors are lured in.

A number of major Jewish organizations profited from and were victims of the scheme. Hadassah last week said it would repay $45 million to the court-appointed trustee of Madoff's estate, who is seeking to distribute equitably what is left of the scheme's funds.

Madoff's sons, who reportedly turned in their father, have not been charged in the scheme, and the elder Madoff said it occurred without their knowledge.

However, Mark and Andrew Madoff were under investigation, and the trustee had sued them for profiting from the business without adequately investigating how it was making money.

Israel & the Jewish World

Rabbinic ruling evokes protests, condemnation

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Protesters rallied in Jerusalem last week against a rabbis' ban on renting apartments to Arabs

About 150 demonstrators took up positions Dec. 8 across from the Great Synagogue to protest the ruling, which was issued the day before by dozens of Israel's municipal chief rabbis

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu condemned the ruling. Israeli civil rights organizations and MKs also criticized it and called for the rabbis who signed it to be fired. Municipal chief rabbis' salaries are paid by the state

"How would we feel if we were told not to sell an apartment to Jews?" asked Netanyahu. "We would protest, and we protest now when it is said of our neighbours."

Speaking at the National Bible Contest for adults, Netanyahu emphasized that such declarations aren't acceptable in Israel.

"Such things cannot be said – not about Jews and not about Arabs. They cannot be said in any democratic country, and especially not in a Jewish and democratic one. The State of Israel rejects these sayings."

The attorney general's office stated Dec. 9 that it would look into criminal aspects of the ruling signed by a number of leading rabbis that purports to forbid renting homes to gentiles

Dozens of Israel's municipal chief rabbis signed on to the ruling, which came just months after the chief rabbi of Safed initiated a call urging Jews to refrain from renting or selling apartments to non-Jews.

An assistant to attorney general Yehuda Weinstein said Weinstein would order the examination of the apparent criminal and disciplinary aspects of the rabbis' letter.

"The attorney general thinks that it appears that the statements attributed to the rabbis are problematic in several aspects… and are inappropriate for public officials," the statement said.

The attorney general office's statement was the first official response by Israel's legal establishment to petitions calling for legal action against the signatories of the rabbis' letter.

Earlier on Dec. 9, the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial decried the letter, deeming it a "severe blow to the values of our lives as Jews and human beings in a democratic state."

"Past experience has taught us just how important, and at the same time how fragile, these basic values are to coexistence and honouring the other," the memorial said in response to the ruling

"We know that the Jewish people, that knew suffering and persecution and experience ostracism and the revocation of basic rights, has expressed its stance on matters such as these with voices different than those we have heard today with this [ruling]."

One of the country's leading non-haredi rabbis, Rabbi Yosef Shalom Elyashiv, also denounced the religious ruling. "I've said for some time that there are rabbis who must have their pens taken away from them," he said.

"It's interesting that these same Zionist rabbis support symbolically selling their land to gentiles during the shmitah year," he added referring to the seven-year cycle when agricultural fields in Israel must lie fallow.

According to the Civil Service Commission, only chief rabbis are state employees and subject to the commission's rules, while municipal rabbis are subject to the religious councils.

The Chief Rabbinate is responsible for matters of Jewish law and professional issues pertaining to municipal rabbis. Theoretically, the two chief rabbis can summon a municipal rabbi for a disciplinary hearing if the attorney general concludes he has exceeded his authority or acted improperly. Such action has rarely been taken.

Oded Weiner, director general of the Chief Rabbinate, told Ha'aretz that the institution "does a great deal for interreligious dialogue, worldwide and with the Palestinian Authority." But Weiner added that "every rabbi in his city says what is in his heart."

Gilad Kariv, head of the Reform Judaism movement in Israel, said, "The fire of racism will completely destroy Israeli society. If there is a lesson to be learned… it is the danger of complacency. The rabbinical decree is abominable and desecrates the seal of God that lies within every human being."

In the ruling, the rabbis called on the religious community to voice support for Safed Chief Rabbi Shmuel Eliyahu, who could face trial for incitement against Arabs for initiating the move against renting to gentiles.

Minority Affairs Minister Avishay Braverman has also asked Justice Minister Yaakov Neeman to begin the process of suspending Rabbi Eliyahu immediately from his post.

In a statement, the Canada-Israel Committee said that it "shares Prime Minister Netanyahu's outrage over this issue. This disturbing letter represents an extremely marginal position in Israeli society, as demonstrated by the thousands of Israeli protesters who have taken to the streets… to condemn it. It is also important to note that many learned rabbis in Israel, as well as leading institutions such as the Attorney General's office and the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial, have publicly opposed the letter.

"As the only liberal democracy in the region, Israelis remain proud of their commitment to the full protection of minority rights and equality under the law. And that's why this letter has been so widely denounced and will do nothing to change Israel's liberal, pluralistic character."

Jews ask Pope to fight delegitimization of Israel

By SHLOMO SHAMIR

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — A delegation of leaders of the World Jewish Congress met with Pope Benedict XVI in the Vatican on Dec. 10 and asked the Pontiff to speak out against the delegitimization of Israel.

"We discussed critical issues affecting world Jewry," said WJC President Ronald S. Lauder said in a statement. "[We] expressed to the Pope how much we value the close relationship we have enjoyed with the Vatican over many years in our quest for a secure Israel and a safer future for Jews everywhere."

Lauder requested that the Pope speak out against the delegitimization of Israel, particularly the denial of Jewish links to holy sites such as the Temple Mount and the Western Wall, as well as Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem, a site that's holy to both Jews and Christians.

According to the WJC statement, the Pope emphasized the need to continue to fight anti-Semitism in the Christian world, which he characterized as unacceptable. The Pope also talked about the importance of Jews and Catholics working together to fight antisemitism in all its forms, noting Judaism's patrimony to Christianity.

WJC secretary general-designate Dan Diker asked that the Catholic Church take a leading role in the fight against the delegitimization of Israel, which he called a new "politically correct" form of antisemitism.

Pope Benedict is said to have responded, saying that the Catholic Church recognizes the deep and historical connection of the Jewish people to the Land of Israel and expressed his commitment to help bolster better understanding of that connection among people throughout the world.

Israel Briefs

Rocket attack causes injury

Following a rocket strike from Gaza on the western Negev that injured one, Israel's air force struck three terror-linked sites in Gaza. The strikes early last Thursday morning hit a weapons manufacturing and storage site in central Gaza and two terrorism hubs in the northern part of the strip, according to the Israel Defence Forces. They followed a barrage of five rockets fired on southern Israel the previous evening, the IDF said. The wounded man was airlifted to a hospital in Be'er Sheva. A home in a kibbutz also was damaged. Residents of southern Israel were told to enter bomb shelters on the Wednesday night. "Escalation is only a matter of time. The threat in the area is constant and growing," read a statement issued Dec. 9 by several southern Israeli regional councils. "The government must realize that this will be an active line of conflict for the foreseeable future." About 200 rockets fired from Gaza have landed in Israel in 2010.

More Gaza exports approved

Israel's security cabinet approved a measure to allow an increase in the exports of goods from the Gaza Strip to the West Bank and abroad. The decision, approved Dec. 8, was made to help the coastal strip's economy and "ease the burden of the Gazan population under the repressive Hamas terrorist regime," according to a statement from the Prime Minister's Office. Gaza's economy expanded by 16 per cent with a decrease in unemployment in the first half of 2010, according to a report from the International Monetary Fund. Gaza has been under a blockade from Israel and Egypt since Hamas came to power in 2007.

Anne Pollard in Israel

The former wife of convicted spy Jonathan Pollard was brought to Israel for assistance. Anne Pollard and her elderly father arrived in Israel on Dec. 6 after being found living in a one-bedroom apartment in New York in dire financial and physical need. Pollard reportedly called the Israeli Consulate in New York requesting help and saying she had not eaten in six days. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, upon being apprised of the situation, ordered her to be taken care of. A special team set up to help Pollard will find her a permanent residence and a job in the coming weeks, according to reports.

Jewish Public Library
Bibliothèque publique juive

Seeking an Executive Director
Jewish Public Library, Montreal

The Jewish Public Library is a leading research institution, full-service library and cultural centre on the threshold of its 100th anniversary. Under the direction and guidance of the President and the Board of Directors, the Executive Director is responsible for the organizational, operational and administrative functions of the Library and for overseeing its fundraising operations. The Director works closely with the Montreal federation of Jewish agencies (FCJA) and its affiliated agencies and maintains strong relationships with the Jewish and general community.

The successful candidate will be a dynamic self-starter with a knowledge of libraries and information technology; sensitivity to and awareness of Jewish culture and connection to the Jewish community; strong administrative and interpersonal skills; excellent communication skills and the ability to multi-task. The candidate will be fluent in English and French. Hebrew and Yiddish are an important asset. In submitting your application please elaborate on how your background addresses the criteria outlined above. Please submit your application and credentials to:

jplbpjsearch@gmail.com by January 21, 2011.
www.jewishpubliclibrary.org

Recreational hockey tournament set for Metulla

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Danny Spodek knew he was on the right track when he received inquiries from South Africa and Finland about a hockey tournament he's been organizing for the last five years.

Till then, he'd managed to attract Canadians, Americans and Israelis to the Roger Neilson Memorial Hockey Tournament in Metulla, Israel. But the prospect of including skaters from other lands will only go toward normalizing Israel's image across the world, he believes.

The 2011 tournament will take place Feb. 21 to 25, and skaters will play six or seven games, depending on how well they do.

Last winter, more than 100 players, including 50 from outside Israel, participated in the event, a big jump from the first tournament five years ago, which brought together 45 players. Adding to the luster of the 2010 tournament was the participation of legendary stars Paul Henderson and Darryl Sittler. Although they didn't play, their presence fired the imagination of hockey-lovers everywhere, and Ron Maclean interviewed the pair from Israel as part of Hockey Day in Canada celebrations.

Both were coached by Neilson, a respected figure in NHL circles who died a few years ago after a battle with cancer. Neilson was a Christian Zionist who organized summer hockey camps at the Canada Centre rink in Metulla.

Last year's tournament featured two Canadian teams (one from Toronto, the other from Ottawa), as well as one American and three Israeli squads. Most of the Israeli players were ex-Canucks now living in the Holy Land. To make the tournament more competitive, Spodek divides players by skill level, so skaters play with and face others of similar ability.

It's a fun event that combines players' zest for hockey with their love of Israel. That and staging an event that brings people together, creates long-term personal and business relationships and gives guys an excuse to visit the Holy Land are the tangible benefits that motivate him to devote countless hours to make it happen. Plus it gives him an additional opportunity to play hockey.

For Spodek, a Toronto native who made aliyah 10 years ago, the tournament is something of a labour of love. He puts in many hours to make sure the event comes off without a hitch, while back in Canada and the United States, friends help recruit players and gather equipment for donation.

Players kick in $400 to $500 for ice rental, but they're asked to make their own arrangements to get to Israel and they pay for a hotel in nearby Kfar Giladi. El Al has come on board as a sponsor, offering group rates and allowing flexibility on return dates, he said.

"It's a unique individual who comes," Spodek acknowledged. Most players are in their 40s and combine the trip with a visit to children studying or living in Israel.

Last year, a 24-year-old from Florida made aliyah after the tournament, and the Ottawa team was bolstered by the presence of ex-NHLer Shawn Rivers.

Interest in the event is growing not only in Finland and South Africa. Spodek is hopeful that a Baptist church from Kenora, Ont., near the Manitoba border, will participate in the 2012 event as part of a mission to Israel.

Last year, about a dozen non-Jews took part in the hockey event.

A skater takes to the ice at the Canada Centre in Metulla

The tournament is "a feel-good story from Israel" that leaves a positive impression, he said. Following an innovation last year, participants will have the chance to make sandwiches for Leket Israel, the country's national food bank. "We add another component to give back to society and make it a more meaningful experience," Spodek said.

And in recognition of the late Gideon Lee, who coached Israel's first national hockey team in IIHF tournaments, the Gideon Lee Cup will be awarded the championship team.

• • •

Spodek's passion for hockey started at an early age and was not atypical for a kid from Toronto. Although he didn't play organized hockey, he was a "rink rat" who kept his equipment in an old "jalopy" and who played in pickup games around the city, he said.

Six years ago, Montreal businessman Alan Maislin came up with the idea for a tournament for players over 35. Spodek, who lives in Zichron Ya'akov, just south of Haifa, handled the arrangements in Israel and eventually took over full control of the tournament.

Of course, it's not his only hockey exposure in Israel. He plays in and organizes a Thursday-night league in Metulla for about 32 players. Forty-five want to play.

"I had to say, 'Sorry, I don't have room for you,'" he said on the phone from Israel.

From his home south of Haifa, it takes him two hours to make the drive to Metulla, but he doesn't come the farthest. There are guys who spend four hours on the road – one way – to play in the Thursday-night games, he said.

There's also a Friday-night league consisting largely of ex-Russians and local Metulla kids who play more competitively, but some are migrating to the Thursday-night game.

Spodek also organizes two children's skating programs and this year added a Chanukah skating program in which youngsters from as far as Jerusalem and Tel Aviv are bused in.

Equipment, especially for kids, is sorely needed. For more information or to register for the tournament, visit israelhockeyassociation.org or e-mail Spodek at israel_hockey@hotmail.com.

University drops Helen Thomas award after 'antisemitic remarks'

JTA

DETROIT — Helen Thomas made more anti-Zionist comments in a public forum, causing her alma mater to drop an award named for the longtime journalist.

"We are owned by the propagandists against the Arabs. There's no question about that," Thomas said Dec. 2 during a speech to an Arab-American group in Dearborn, Mich. "Congress, the White House and Hollywood, Wall Street, are owned by the Zionists. No question in my opinion. They put their money where their mouth is."

She added, "We're being pushed into a wrong direction in every way."

In response Wayne State University, from which Thomas graduated in 1942, announced the day after the address that it would no longer present the Helen Thomas Spirit of Diversity in the Media Award. The university released a statement reading in part that it "strongly condemns the anti-semitic remarks made by Helen Thomas."

Helen Thomas

The Anti-Defamation League issued a short statement saying Thomas "clearly, unequivocally revealed herself as a vulgar anti-Semite."

Thomas, 90, a Detroit native who is of Lebanese descent, also said during the speech that she stands by the controversial comments about Israel that led to her resignation as a correspondent for Hearst News Service earlier this year.

Thomas resigned in June after saying on the sidelines of the first Jewish American Heritage Month event at the White House that Jews should "get the hell out of Palestine," in an interview with Rabbi David Nesenoff, a blogger with RabbiLive.com. The exchange was captured on video. "Go home," Thomas said.

Asked to elaborate on where the Jews in Israel should go, Thomas said, "Poland, Germany and America, and everywhere else."

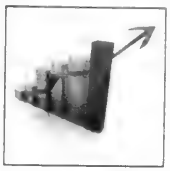
Thomas, often referred to as the dean of the White House press corps, had been a White House correspondent since the presidency of John F. Kennedy. Her place in the front row during White House news briefings was sacrosanct for years, complete with a plaque on it bearing her name – the only such reserved seat in the room.

After servings as a correspondent for United Press International since 1943, she joined Hearst about a decade ago and became a columnist.

Young entrepreneur markets folding shoe

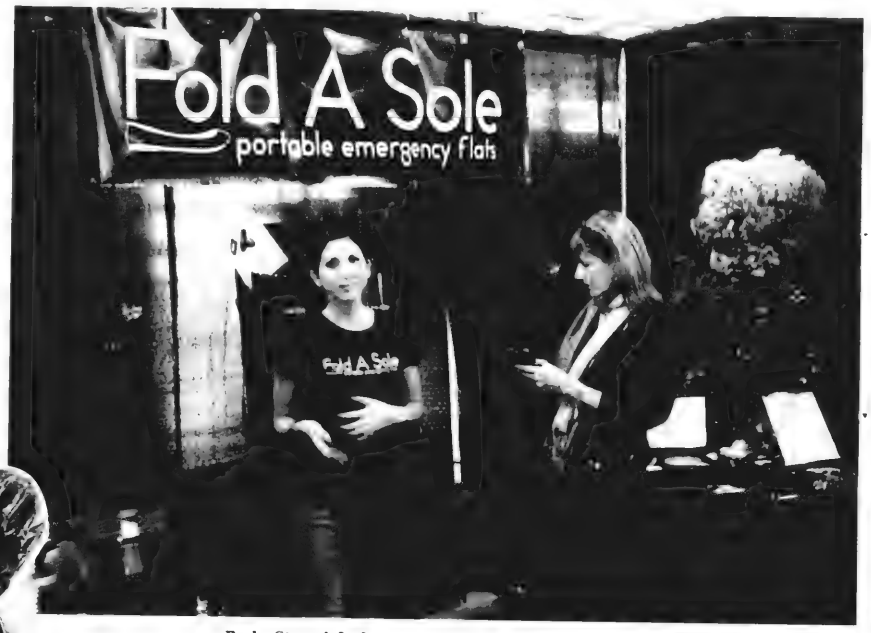
By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

It's a mystery that has puzzled guys for generations. You arrive at a formal event – a wedding, bar mitzvah, party – and your wife or girlfriend is decked out from head to toe. She's looking great, not least because of those attractive high-heeled shoes she's wearing. But if you're inclined to notice such things, and which guy isn't, you see that somehow, magically, by the middle of the evening when the DJ cranks up the music, she's no longer wearing the blister-inducing footwear but instead has switched into some sort of "flat," resembling a ballet slipper.



Wha'happened?

It turns out women have been packing sensible shoes in their purses and making the switch when guys weren't watching. Now, a young entrepreneur is promoting a product that takes the shoe switch one step further. Becky Stern, 21, has started a business that offers elegant and comfortable ladies' flats that fold in half for even greater portability and convenience.



Becky Stern, left, demonstrating her product at a trade show.

Called Fold A Sole, the company started business less than a year ago with a simple product line: "Flats that fold in half with a split sole that goes into a women's purse. The case pops up [and turns into] a bag and you can put heels in them. They're portable emergency flats," Stern said.

Originally intended for the simchah scene, the shoe has also been put to other uses. "Realtors buy them, people buy them for the winter for something to wear when they remove their boots, and people use them for travel on airplanes," she said.

"Everyone loves the product and people are buying multiple gifts, sometimes for the whole bridal party," she added.

At a recent trade show at a private girls school, "we sold tons of shoes to mothers and daughters." They appeal to consumers from age 16 to 60.

Stern acknowledges that for many women going to a formal event, "fashion trumps comfort" – at least at the beginning. But when the footwear gets too uncomfortable, "a lot of girls are taking off their shoes at weddings and bar mitzvahs and putting on woolly socks."

Woolly socks?

"They're giveaways at bar mitzvahs," she explained. "Heels are uncomfortable. They really hurt your feet."

Stern contends that wearing a folding sole doesn't take anything away from a woman's fashion statement.

"They're styled after a very fashionable shoe, Tory Burch," she said.

The shoe sells for $30 at retail stores – they're currently available in about two dozen boutiques in Toronto, including boa apparel and living 2 – and $25 online (www.foldasole.com).

Fold A Sole offers two options – a champagne-coloured shoe and a black version – and they're selling.

"We'll keep expanding," she said. "We went through our first shipment really fast and now we're on our second shipment."

Stern, who studied business at McGill University, got the idea for the product after struggling at weddings with uncomfortable footwear. She learned of a similar shoe in Europe, where vending machines sell disposable flats. However, those items were far from the quality she was looking for and so, with the assistance of her mother, Karen Taylor, she started the business. Product development took two years during which they negotiated with a factory in China before they agreed on a final product that was up to her standards.

She and her mother share the workload, though mom handles most of the financial aspects of the business, while Stern likes to focus on sales and marketing.

She also promotes the product through social media such as Facebook and Twitter.

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

CJN Giveaways

7 lucky readers will each win
1 pair of tickets to

Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre's
"Hard Love"
(total value $62)

The Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge St.

Wednesday, January 5th, 8 pm

To be eligible to win click on "Contests" at www.cjnews.com and email us your name, address and daytime phone number or mail/fax us the information.

All entries received by 3 p.m. on Wednesday, December 22nd are eligible. The winning entries will be randomly selected at The CJN offices on Thursday, December 23rd. The winners will be notified the same day. Odds of winning depend on the number of entries received. One entry per person.

The CJN will not enter into any correspondence with contestants.

Email your information to "contest@thecjn.ca" Re: "Hard Love" Contest, or mail to: The Canadian Jewish News, 1500 Don Mills Road, Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 or fax to: 416-391-0949.

Employees and family members of The CJN and Teatron Jewish Theatre are not eligible to enter.

Barney's Version is entertaining from start to finish

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Richard Lewis has finessed Mordecai Richler's autobiographical novel, Barney's Version, into a richly satisfying movie featuring outrageous characters, racy situations and crackling dialogue.

Screened at the Toronto International Film Festival and opening here on Dec. 24, this 132-minute picture is broadly faithful to the late Richler's comic sensibilities.

Spanning more than three decades and set in Montreal, Rome and New York, it revolves around the larger-than-life Barney Panofsy (Paul Giamatti), a philandering, cigar-smoking, whisky-swilling Montreal Jewish television producer who ruefully looks back at his checkered past.

The first scene, which unfolds in Montreal toward the end of his somewhat dissolute life, pretty much sets the tone. Pining for his third wife, Miriam, Panofsky, now in his mid-60s, calls her in the middle of the night through an alcohol-induced haze.

The timing of his call speaks volumes about his judgment. After Miriam's husband tells him to go fly a kite, Barney threatens to disseminate nude photographs of his beloved. That's what kind of a guy he is – rude, crude and vulgar.

After this coarse but lively sequence, Barney's Version flashes back to Rome, circa 1974, where Barney is holding court in a café.

Clara (Rachelle Lefevre), his red-headed first wife, is a handful. Pregnant with someone else's child, she is in a state of denial concerning her supposed Jewish background.

The film gathers momentum as it shifts to Montreal, a year down the road. Barney, now a producer for Totally Unnecessary Productions, a purveyor of pure, unadulterated shlock, is talking with his father, Israel (Dustin Hoffman), who claims that his career as a Montreal police detective was sidetracked by antisemitism. The truth is that his inappropriate conduct may have had more to do with his place in the pecking order.

Paul Giamatti, left, as Barney, with Dustin Hoffman as his father Israel in Barney's Version

The ensuing scenes focus on Barney's ill-advised marriage to his second wife, Mrs. P (Minnie Driver), a pampered, brassy Jewish princess who boasts ad nauseum about her McGill University MA degree.

At Barney's raucous wedding, during which Israel shocks the wife of a local rabbi with an obscene joke, his eye wanders yet again, first to an NHL hockey game on TV and then to a gorgeous-looking guest who turns out to be Miriam (Rosamund Pike).

Unabashedly smitten by Miriam, a creature with a shapely figure, silken hair, alabaster skin and luminous eyes, Barney makes a concerted play for her. For the first time in his life, he is truly and seriously in love.

"Run away with me," he says, glaringly oblivious to the fact that he has just gotten married.

Not unexpectedly, Barney's marriage to Mrs. P goes from bad to worse. Israel, offering "paternal wisdom" to his wayward son, fully comprehends Barney's marital woes: "You want to screw, she wants to talk."

Haven't we heard this before?

Fate intervenes on Barney's behalf. After he catches an old friend (Scott Speedman) in the act of making love to the adulterous Mrs. P, Barney's eyes light up and a smile creases his face in triumph. Finally, he has legal grounds to divorce Mrs. P.

The plot grows thick with suspense after Barney's friend dies in a quirky accident and an antisemitic cop blames Barney for his untimely death.

In the wake of his divorce from Mrs. P, Barney woos the elusive Miriam and captures her heart. Barney's success in achieving domestic bliss, capped by fatherhood, does not go unnoticed by his father. "You did good, boychik," says Israel.

Being a serial philanderer, Barney succumbs to the pleasures of the flesh, committing a carnal indiscretion that costs him his marriage. The onset of dementia adds to his travails.

Thanks in part to Michael Konyves' adept script, Barney's Version is a vivid fun fest.

Giamatti, playing Barney in all his phases as a St. Urbain Street bon vivant, provides the crowning touches. His measured performance climaxes in a scene in which he rages against his fate.

Hoffman, displaying a mix of cynicism and tenderness, in just right as Israel, while Pike is radiant as Miriam.

In cameo appearances, the Canadian movie directors Denys Arcand and David Cronenberg respectively portray a waiter and a director.

Robert Lantos, the producer of Barney's Version, also shows up in a cameo role. Evidently, he cannot resist the temptation to step into the film, which is easily one of his best.

Barney's Version, roaring with wit and overflowing with chutzpah, is entertaining from start to finish.

Richler, one suspects, would have approved of it.

Lorraine Kimsa
Theatre for Young People
"This is a show that the whole family can enjoy!"
Toronto Star
A YEAR WITH FROG
AND TOAD
ONSTAGE NOW -
TO DEC. 30 ONLY!
This delightful Tony Award-nominated Broadway musical celebrates friendship and the attributes that make each of us different and special.
CALL OR CLICK : 416.862.2222 | LKTYP.CA
165 FRONT STREET EAST, TORONTO
EDUCATION PARTNERS
BMO Financial Group
SEASON DESIGN
GOVERNMENT & FOUNDATION PARTNERS
Canadian Heritage
Patrimoine canadien
TORONTO ARTS COUNCIL
ONTARIO ARTS COUNCIL
CONSEIL DES ARTS DE L'ONTARIO
METCALF FOUNDATION
The Ontario Arts Council and the Ontario Trillium Foundation are agencies of the Government of Ontario.

An intimate portrait of Richler

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

Was Mordecai Richler a courageous seeker of truth and justice in the Jewish tradition or a mean-spirited polemicist out of his depth when it came to Quebec?

A new documentary film on Mordecai Richler directed by veteran Montreal journalist Francine Pelletier offers an intimate and generous portrait of the man through interviews with a score or more of people, from childhood friends to other writers such as Margaret Atwood to sovereigntist Jean-François Lisée.

Most are friendly and all are thoughtful as they reflect on Richler almost 10 years after his death.

The one-hour Mordecai Richler: The Last of the Wild Jews will air on Bravo, Dec. 19 at 8 p.m., and will be repeated Dec. 25 at 7 p.m.

Pelletier positions Richler among the brash (mainly) second-generation American Jewish writers and comedians of his age (and somewhat older) whose frankness about being Jewish shook up their elders' historic fear of drawing attention to themselves.

The expression "wild Jews" was coined by early 20th-century Russian Jewish writer Isaak Babel who longed for a new bolder, more manly Jew.

Co-written with recent Richler biographer Charles Foran, the film, like Foran's book, is less about Richler's literary legacy than his complex, and in many ways unattractive, personality.

Why did he first rebel against and, some would charge, ridicule the Jewish community, then belittle the burgeoning Canadian cultural identity, and, in his last and fiercest crusade, skewer Quebec nationalism in the most wounding way possible?

Three comments stand out in the film.

His widow, the gracious and devoted Florence, says, without a trace of resentment, that it was "It was always understood that Mordecai and his work came first, and me second."

New York-based writer Adam Gopnik observes that Richler equated Quebec nationalism with the "folkloric fascism of Europe," of which Jews were a target, and he never wanted to understand francophone Quebecers' view of history.

Richler's good friend, Gazette cartoonist Terry Mosher (Aislin), comments that Richler's battle against the separatists and language laws began with an admirable "righteous indignation," but Richler "went too far and it backfired on him," and he thankfully returned to writing literature before his death at 70.

What's clear is that Richler had a very different private persona from the abrasive public one. Florence reveals that she grew used to his long silences even at home. Others describe him as a shy person, uncomfortable in social situations. To his friends and immediate family, he was loyal and loving.

Continued on page 38

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

HOLY BLOSSOM STAGECRAFT COMPANY PRESENTS ITS FIRST ORIGINAL PLAY

For the first time in its 16-year history, Holy Blossom Temple's Stagecraft Company is presenting an original play that has never before been staged.

The play is The Last Days of Rachel Samuel, written by longtime Stagecraft member and director Michael Ryval. Actors Judy Kent, Anna Grosman and Harry Hochman take on the principal roles.

The Last Days of Rachel Samuel examines the strained relationship between Rachel and her mother, Klara, a Holocaust survivor, as the former is dying in a hospital bed. As Rachel recounts her troubled relationship with her mother in flashback, her brother Joseph provides another perspective. In several other scenes, Klara attends a class for Holocaust survivors who are writing their memoirs.

"While the play explores a number of serious themes, it does have many lighter moments as Rachel, an incorrigible joke teller, is constantly telling off-colour jokes to cheer up her family, friends and herself," said Ryval, who is also directing the play. "The humour really shines through and speaks to Rachel's indomitable spirit."

Ryval, a freelance writer, decided to try his hand at playwriting after directing several Stagecraft productions. He based the play on his personal experience.

"It was very exciting and quite a challenge to present this story in a way that respected the family members who lived through the experience and was also meaningful for those who may, or may not, share the same circumstances," he said.

Tickets are $18 and $15. Holy Blossom Temple, 1950 Bathurst St. Jan. 20, 22 and 23. 416-789-3291, ext. 511.

* * *

Israeli Romantic Drama: Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre presents the Canadian première of Hard Love, a romantic drama by Israeli playwright Motti Lerner. Actors Tara Nicodemo and Howard Rosenstein play a couple in Jerusalem's haredi Mea Shearim who reunite after divorcing 20 years earlier. Toronto Centre for the Arts, Jan. 5 to 16, 2011. $19 to $48. 416-781-5527. www.teatrontheatre.com

* * *

Names in the News: Teen pop star Justin Bieber, whose hometown is Stratford, Ont., is reportedly scheduled to perform a concert in Tel Aviv in April. Israeli producer Marcel Avraham, who brought Elton John, Rod Stewart, Metallica and Leonard Cohen to Israel, has been chosen to handle the concert, which is part of Bieber's world tour. Some 60,000 fans are expected to attend.

Another celebrity to visit Israel in recent months is actor Leonardo DiCaprio, who is reportedly considering converting to Judaism. DiCaprio has already visited his longtime girlfriend, Israeli supermodel Bar Refaeli, several times; rumour has it the couple plan to marry.

No, it's not a dream. Leonardo DiCaprio is reportedly considering converting to Judaism.

* * *

At the Galleries: Polar Visions, a group of photographs by Mark Loren Freedman is on view until Dec. 31 in the Jacobs Lounge Visual Arts Space of the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre. www.mnjcc.org

For 9-year-old actor, work is 'really just fun'

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

At nine years old, Carly Tamer is already a veteran actor, currently touring North America with the cast of Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas! The Musical.

Carly, who hails from Long Island, N.Y., plays Cindy Lou Who and gets to sing the solo number Santa for a Day.

"It's not even like work. It is really just fun," Carly says. She is enjoying making new friends in the cast and says what she loves about The Grinch is performing and the reaction of the audiences.

"When the show starts, it is like you are opening up a Dr. Seuss book. It is amazing. The costumes are crazy, fun and colourful… You feel like you are in a cartoon," she says.

"On my wig I have a big heart at the top, I have a huge bow on my butt and I have over-sized shoes that are pink. The costume is light, and you get used to wearing the shoes."

Carly Tamer plays Cindy Lou Who in Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas! The Musical.

Carly began acting when she was six years old. "I started three years ago because I love to sing, act and dance," she says. "I got a manager, an agent, and I went to lots of auditions, and finally I got my first show. It was Team Umizoomi, that is actually on Nickelodeon now."

While on tour with The Grinch, Carly, whose favourite school subjects are math and writing, has taken a leave from her regular school in Commack, near her Long Island home in East Northport. She's also missing her Hebrew classes at Temple Beth David, also in Commack, where she's currently studying toward her bat mitzvah.

"We have a tutor on tour with us, we do school four days a week for usually four hours each day, she says. "There are three other kids, because it is double-casted. There is one other girl [Brooke Boyd] in the show that plays Cindy Lou Who and two that play Annie Who.

"We're on tour for two months and we've already done a month, then I go back to my regular school. It is not really hard to go back, but sometimes I get ahead of work and sometimes I get a little behind, but I just spoke to my school friend and we are pretty much on target."

Carly plans to make a career out of acting and will continue to audition for new parts once she gets home. Her past credits include performing on Sesame Street, which she found fun. She especially enjoyed talking to the Muppets and thought it was cool to meet the puppeteers who are hidden from the public.

Carly says she loves acting, whether it is on stage or on television or in movies. She's also completed a few indie films, including a yet-to-be released movie starring Richard Chamberlain called We Are the Hartmans.

"The last show I did was Fiddler on the Roof – it was at a professional theatre on Long Island. I played Bielka, the youngest daughter. It was fun. It starred Eddie Mecca from Laverne and Shirley. From doing the show I learned a little bit about how my great-grandparents lived and about Jewish tradition," says Carly.

She likes to go on field trips with her school, she likes to jump rope, colour, create stories and write. She lives with her mom, her father, Albert, and her two hockey-playing brothers, Dillon, 17, and Daniel, 14, who are looking forward to seeing their sister perform during the Toronto leg of the show's tour, right after they visit the Hockey Hall of Fame.

The Grinch boasts a cast of 25, including Icelandic film and stage actor Stefán Karl – best known for playing Robbie Rotten on Nickelodeon's LazyTown – who stars as the Christmas-hating Grinch.

Max the Dog narrates the tale of the miserable Grinch, whose heart is "two sizes too small," and his attempt to wreak havoc on the tiny town of Whoville by trying to steal Christmas.

Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas! The Musical is at the Sony Centre for the Performing Arts from Dec. 17 until Jan. 2, 2011. For more information, visit www.sonycentre.ca. Tickets are available at ticketmaster.ca.

MIAMI BEACH SENIOR VACATIONS
January 10-March 20, 2011
Best Western Hotel 41st Street & Collins Ave.
2 Blocks East of the Old Saxony Hotel
FROM $1350 U.S.
PER PERSON, PER WEEK
DBLE. OCC
(Single Supplement Available)
Your Hostess: LINDA SWERDLOFF
Under OK Glatt Kosher Supervision
Choice of room type:
Standard, Ocean View or Ocean Front
R/T Air & Ground Transportation Available Upon Request
- All Rooms Handicap Accessible
- 3 Fabulous Glatt Kosher Meals
- Weekly BBQ
- Exercise Classes & Workout Room
- Medical Staff on Premises
- Resident Rabbi & Shul on Premises
- Hair Dresser, Manicure & Pedicure on Premises
- Door to Door Service Available
- Arts & Crafts Classes, Day Trips
- On The Boardwalk
- Heated Pool & Game Room
- Cocktail Parties
- Tea Room
- Entertainment
Call for more information:
Linda 754-246-8101 Ken 516-383-9588 Michael 786-312-0353

New CD reflects singer/songwriter's outlook on life

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

"Always look on the bright side of life." That famous line from a Monty Python song describes Toronto singer songwriter Tamara Miller perfectly.

The songs on both her CDs, her debut 60 Seconds and her new one, Changing Lanes, tend to be uplifting. Miller says her songs come from deep inside her and reflect her positive outlook.

"I always believe where I'm going on my journey and I try to show that encouragement to others. I write about my instincts and on what comes naturally. I have lots of songs of encouragement and on going after what you want."

Changing Lanes, released in October, contains seven original guitar and piano pop-oriented songs with such refreshingly upbeat titles as Somethings Gotta Go Right and Everyday's A Better Tomorrow.

Miller, 31, started playing the piano when she was six, and all the songs on her 2008 debut were written on the piano. This time around, she decided to write three songs on the guitar, which gives her a more textured sound.

"I found I wrote very differently on guitar versus the piano," the York University graduate says. "On the piano, I felt I was going in the same direction. With guitar, I find the style's a little bit different and I come out with different melodies than if I was to write the same song on piano. I find I have greater freedom on guitar."

No matter how they were written, her songs are melodic and radio friendly. "I am really excited about Changing Lanes. I worked with producer David Martin (singer of the Juno Award-winning band Hemingway Corner), and it was a great experience to see how my music's evolved."

The songs on Changing Lanes sound more mature than the ones on 60 Seconds and deal mostly with love, life and relationships. "Musically, I think I've evolved a bit. I've moved beyond the boundaries of my first CD," she said. "I think I dug a little deeper in the lyrics and the music."

This is clearly evident on songs like the title track and on A New Direction. Her songs have a soft rock, Sarah McLachlan-like feel, with slow, building melodies and catchy choruses, and often evoke Tori Amos or Chantal Kreviazuk.

Miller said she learned a lot in the two years since 60 Seconds, making things much easier this time around. "The first album was a stepping stone and opened new opportunities for me."

Among the opportunities she's actively pursuing these days are television and movie placements. The title track from her first album caught the attention of producers and was featured on the television show Degrassi The Next Generation. She has since signed with an agency in Los Angeles to help her in this endeavour.

"They're promoting my music to different shows and seeing where my songs could fit," she said. "It's the direction that I want to go."

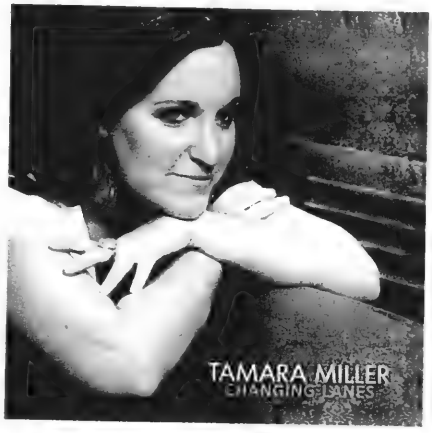
Miller has been spending a fair bit of time in the United States. In addition to signing with the L.A. firm, she also performed at the Temecula Valley International Film and Music Festival in California, an organization that nurtures and showcases independent film and music talent.

"It was so amazing in L.A., being where everything is happening and meeting so many different artists from around the world. It's been very inspiring."

Two songs from her first album were just released on an American compilation CD Show Me Love, produced by the website roses-lacure.com to raise funds to fight cancer. The album showcases Grammy Award winners and emerging talent. "It's really exciting. It's a nice thing to be a part of, with the proceeds going to fight cancer."

This year, Miller won top spot twice in a monthly online voting competition, makeastar.com, in the best female solo artist category.

You can sample several of her songs on her myspace page (myspace/tamaramiller.com). Miller's CDs can be purchased from Amazon or digitally from iTunes.



Tamara Miller's CD Changing Lanes

UNIVERSITY FIREWOOD
Since 1987
DRY SEASONED HARDWOOD
DELIVERED & STACKED
416-920-3838 order online
www.universityfirewood.ca

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

FLORIDA furnished APARTMENTS from Churchill

NORTH MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
INTRACOASTAL YACHT CLUB
16940 North Bay Rd. Sunny Isles Beach, FL
• Gorgeous intracoastal Waterways views from each apartment balcony
• Waterfront boardwalk, marina and pier
• 5,000 sq. ft health center with spa services
• Children's playground and playroom
Mention CJN for a Special Discount!
• LARGE APARTMENTS WITH BALCONIES
• FULL KITCHENS AND APPLIANCES
• KOSHER DISHES AVAILABLE FOR MONTHLY STAYS
• WASHER & DRYER IN APARTMENT
• OUTDOOR POOLS AND WHIRLPOOLS
Included:
• Manual Keys
• Parking
• Linens and Towels
• Housekeeping
CENTRAL MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
CROWN MIAMI BEACH
6041 Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, FL
• Newly renovated oceanfront property
• Beautiful views from each apartment balcony
• Fitness center with cardio equipment
• Near many shuls and kosher restaurants
877-424-7848

TEATRON Toronto Jewish Theatre presents...
Canadian Première of the fiercely romantic drama
Hard Love
by Motti Lerner
Directed by Ari Weisberg
January 5 - 16, 2011
Hannah and Zvi are reunited after divorcing twenty years earlier. Raised in Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim, the couple ended their marriage when Zvi turned his back on Judaism and Hannah did not. Now the teenage children from their second marriages have become romantically involved, forcing Hannah and Zvi back into each other's lives.
PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

Intimate portrayal of Richler

Continued from page 36

Much is made of the influence on the young Richler of his maternal grandfather, the revered chassidic Rabbi Yudel Rosenberg, who was an expert on the mythical Golem, a supernatural protector of disempowered Jews. Richler grew up when antisemitism was still commonplace.

Globe and Mail literary editor Martin Levin posits that, eventually, Canadian Jews came to embrace Richler as "a cultural icon," realizing that his often unflattering portrayals of Jews ultimately allowed them to be more comfortable with their identity.

Canadian nationalists also forgave him long ago, but no such reconciliation has taken place with francophone Quebecers, the target of his last and fiercest crusade.

In an interview, Pelletier doubted that will ever change much. Older people have made up their minds, and young Quebecers aren't very familiar with Richler. Pelletier isn't aware of any French school that includes his books in its curriculum.

She had difficulty even finding a narrator for the French version of the documentary. Well-known actor Guy Nadon initially hesitated before accepting the job, she said.

Pelletier, who works in both French and English, describes herself as "not a typical Québécois" in that she has read Richler's novels and "knew him a bit."

"I was relieved that some of the English [like Mosher, Gopnik and former Globe and Mail columnist Rick Salutin] say they think Richler didn't get it right [about Quebec]. I was afraid I'd have all the English saying how courageous he was, and all the French how terrible."

The graphic novel is a logical innovation

By BILL GLADSTONE
Special to The CJN

In 1859, British literary critic David Masson noted that something astounding was happening to English literature. Two novels were being published in London each week, Masson observed, making it impossible for readers to keep up with the entirety of modern fiction. Henceforth, each person would have to hack his own path through the tangled jungle of literature, he noted. No two people would have the same experience.

Today, the pace of literary production has vastly increased, and we seem to have far less time and inclination for the sort of books that the Victorians called "triple deckers" – Vanity Fair, Anna Karenina, David Copperfield and the like. Back then, reading was the primary form of entertainment. Today, we have movies, television, the Internet, iPods and many other distractions.

As a reader I admit I cut corners occasionally, but always with care: reading cannot be done in a hurry. "I took a speedreading course and read War and Peace in 20 minutes," Woody Allen once quipped. "It involves Russia."

Given the attention span of the modern reader, the graphic novel seems a logical innovation. Since a picture is worth 1,000 words, the format delivers narrative information in a much more concentrated form.

The term became popular after it appeared on the cover of Will Eisner's book A Contract with God in 1978, and gained more respectability after Art Spiegelman's 1986 book Maus won the Pulitzer Prize. A debate still rages, however, whether the term is just a fancy way of saying "comic book" but with a more expensive price tag.

By coincidence, three books in the "graphic-novel" style reached my desk in November. Upon further inspection, only one is a true graphic novel: the others are a glorified travelogue and a visual memoir. No matter: I'm pleased to review all three in this space.

Although I disagree ideologically with it, I must commend Sarah Glidden's book, How to Understand Israel in 60 Days or Less (Vertigo), as being sensitively written, elegantly drawn, and charming despite its author's primary impetus to determine the extent of Israel's guilt in the face of international condemnation.

Glidden is, after all, only 30 years old, and this is her first published work. She makes her first journey to Israel under the auspices of the Birthright program. She records her travels through Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, the Golan Heights, Galilee, Masada and other historic locales in a progression of pleasing, photography-influenced watercolours (presented in full colour). In so many ways, she captures the flavour and visual look of Israel.

Glidden, alas, carries a great many harsh criticisms of the Jewish nation in her baggage. She regards much of what she hears on the Birthright trip as "propaganda," but becomes increasingly disconcerted to find alternate opinions, and justifications for Israel, that make sense. Despite herself, she finds that she increasingly identifies with sympathy to Israel's existential conundrum. The trip forces her to challenge her beliefs and her own identity as a Jew.

• • •

Two Cents Plain: My Brooklyn Boyhood (Bloomsbury), by Martin Lemelman, is a black-and-white graphic memoir by a child of Holocaust survivors who operate a candy store in Brooklyn. Lemelman is sensitive, poignant, nostalgic, funny, bitterly ironic and caustic as he recounts his childhood in a series of cleverly-drawn vignettes.

The comic-book format does not clash with the serious and complex subject matter – a fact that has already been well established through such master works as Maus and Toronto artist Bernice Eisenstein's 2007 graphic novel I Was a Child of Holocaust Survivors.

Lemelman conveys the sights, sounds, smells and impressions of his Brooklyn boyhood and his family history in a manner that seems just as vivid and immediate as anything by Marcel Proust.

• • •

For readers of the weekly Forward newspaper, Ben Katchor's cartoons are addictive. He presents an offbeat fantasy world that is based on the known world but that serves to demonstrate how bizarre the real world actually is. The author of two former graphic novels, Katchor has just produced The Cardboard Valise (Pantheon Press). His first new book in more than a decade, it is scheduled to be published in February. The Cardboard Valise seems more fantastical than his previous work. It involves an exotically far-flung place called Outer Canthus, which remains just as New York-centric as all other places he has drawn. Full of images of urban decay, his work remains as quirky, funny and surreal as a Roz Chast drawing in The New Yorker. The book is coming from the Pantheon Press in February 2011.

• • •

Those in search of a more objective, traditionally written and presented history of New York may enjoy Richard Goldstein's Helluva Town: The Story of New York City During World War II (Free Press). The cover shows a massive wartime rally in Times Square centred around a giant replica of the Statue of Liberty. The book is a compelling social history of the era and the city's contribution to the national war effort.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
42 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
44 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
65 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
70 ACCOMMODATION EXCHANGE
75 HOUSESITTERS
80 ANOTHER ACCOMMODATION
85 APARTMENT FOR RENT
87 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
88 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
90 APARTMENT SUBLET
92 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
94 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
96 APARTMENT MANAGEMENT
100 COTTAGE FOR SALE
105 COTTAGE FOR RENT
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
115 COTTAGE WANTED
120 TIMESHARE FOR SALE
125 TIMESHARE FOR RENT
130 FARM PROPERTIES
135 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY FOR SALE
140 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY FOR RENT
145 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
150 COMMERCIAL PROPERTIES WANTED
155 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL.
160 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
165 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
170 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
175 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
180 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
185 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
190 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
195 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
198 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
200 OUT OF TOWN PROPERTIES
205 OUT OF TOWN PROPERTIES
210 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
215 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
220 VACATION PROPERTIES EACH SHARE
225 SPACE FOR LEASE
230 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
235 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
240 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
245 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
250 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
255 LAND LOTS FOR SALE
260 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
270 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
275 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
280 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
285 BUSINESSES FOR SALE
290 BUSINESS WANTED
295 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
300 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
305 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
310 VOLUNTEERS
315 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
320 DAY CARE WANTED
325 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
330 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
335 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
340 HEALTHCARE WANTED
345 SENIORS
350 BUSINESS PERSONALS
355 PEOPLE SEARCH
360 PERSONALS
365 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
370 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
375 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
380 ANNOUNCEMENTS
390 LOST & FOUND
395 PETS
400 ARTICLES FOR SALE
405 ARTICLES WANTED
410 BOATS
415 CARS
420 CONTENTS SALE
425 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
525 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

DAVID EICHORN

REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

ADDED VALUE BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER THE SALE

At David Eichorn Realty we constantly strive to earn your trust and your business by attending to all your needs throughout the listing and sale process. Listing with us gives you access to a variety of essential value-added services under the same roof for less than you'd pay elsewhere:

RELOCATION • PACKING
MOVING • CLEANUP • DISPOSAL

Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Representative (416) 787-1712

BATHURST / LAWRENCE — NEW LISTING

Spacious renovated & decorated 2 bdrm bungalow in prime central location close to TTC, shops, schools. Eat-in kitchen, sep entry to fin bsmt.$629,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / LAWRENCE — NEW PRICE

Spacious 3 + 3 bdrm bung in prime location. Sep entry to in-law suite, new laminate flrs, family-size eat-in kit. Steps to TTC, Spadina subway, schools, shops. $529,000. Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS RENOVATION OPPORTUNITY

Attn Builders! Classic 3 bdrm, 2 storey on deep 41 X 130 ft lot in desirable location close to newly renovated homes. Prime central location close to TTC, shops, schools. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $629,999 — ACT NOW! Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

* * *

3000 BATHURST CONDO

Renovated & decorated thruout. 2 + 1 bdrms, 2 baths, approx 1,500 sq ft, W exposure, generous entertaining area, gleaming parquet flrs, brand new appls. Shows a 10+ Avail immed. $399,900 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

FOR 100% OF ASKING PRICE

BATHURST / LAWRENCE

Spacious 3 bdrm, 3 bath sidesplit on 60 ft. lot situated on child-friendly street. Large principal rooms, family room, generous rec room ideal for entertaining. Fam-size krt, w/o to deck. Call Daniel Weisberg, Sales Rep. (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDOS

FOR SALE: Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes thruout. 2 pkg, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

FOR RENT Bright, sunny 2 bdrm, 2 baths, open concept, w/o to open balcony. Shows well. ONLY $1,650 / MONTH — ACT NOW! Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:

Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

PLEASE NOTE! On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.

The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard American Express, Cheque or Cash

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

A 2 bdr. co-op apt. Person selling is also a stylist offering FREE haircuts. Call: 416-782-8451.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Allen-Lawrence - 3 bed., 2 bth.on 2nd flr. of a 7-plex, equipped, balcony, carport prkng., coin laundry in bldg., $1300/mo.+ utils.

PREMIUM ADDRESS IN FOREST HILL

355 St. Clair Ave. W./Tower Hill West

Luxuriously renovated 1 and 2 bedroom suites with 2 full bathrooms. Stainless Steel appliances, balconies with spectacular views and concierge service. Walking distance to Forest Hill Village Shops, St. Clair subway station and Loblaws. Utilities included.

Call us today to book your personal tour!
416.961-0024
www.caprent.com

BATHURST-SHEPPARD

ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.

Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths. Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting, 6 Apts. per flr.

canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 416-631-0388

125 TIME SHARE FOR RENT

ATTRACTIVE TIMESHARE for rent in PALM BEACH
Available for 1 wk & up to 4 wks during the month of Feb. 2011. 1 bdr 1 bth sleeps 4 comfortably. The Palm Beach Resort & Beach Club is located on the Intracoastal Waterway is a 5 min walk to the Atlantic Ocean & has a heated pool, poolside area & bicycles. The unit is bright space recently renov. with a beautiful balc overlooking the water. $1200 p/wk negot on place depending on how many wks you rent. Website: www.palmbeachresortonline.com

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Boca West CC. Wonderful 4 bed., 3 bth. apt., 24'x24' porch w/fantastic view, garage, beaut. furn'd. 4 golf courses/39 tennis crts./6 restaurants. Avail. seas. rental $4000 USD/mo. lease or for purchase. By owner. Pls. call 561-852-3583 or 413-348-2605.

190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE

WATERFRONT
Lake Simcoe – Kempenfelt Bay
BUILDING LOTS FOR SALE
Strathallan Wood Place $139,000. MLS 1008409
Strathallan Wood Place $579,000. MLS 1008442
Strathallan Wood Place $699,000. MLS 1002075
Big Bay Point 4 Acres $1,150,000 MLS 1001702
Call for details: Warren Landry, Broker 1-866-871-1151
Sutton Group - Incentive Realty Inc., Brokerage
WWW.SIMCOEWATERFRONTHOMES.COM

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

F/T ASST CUSTOMER SERVICE MANAGER at upbeat, online company downtown. Excellent English and read/write Hebrew. Paid Jewish Holidays. Resume & cover letter to careers@ketubah.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino. Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Reliable, hard working and experienced caregivers available. Please call 416-546-5380.

Honest, reliable housekeeper/ caregiver available to work. Please call 416-492-6929.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Exper. Israeli lady looking for job to take care of elderly or disabled. Refs. 416-509-1333.

255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED

Family of 2 girls & baby on the way seeks p/t nanny in the aft.& evgs. Duties incl child care,light housework & light cooking. Bath/Steeles. David 416-663-5000

Wanted: live-in caregiver for baby, begins immediately. In Hamilton. Housekeeping duties as well. Pays $10.25/hr. for 48 hrs./wk. Contact Maya at 1-905-523-4556.

Hungarian speaking Jewish woman req'd to cook for an elderly gentleman, 2-3 days/wk. Bath/Lawr. area. Call 416-979-2678.

257 HEALTH CARE AVAILABLE

Exper. caregiver seeks job. Exp. in Jewish community. Refs. avail.Call Fareeda at 647-764-1811.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

BUY FORECLOSURE IN FLORIDA NOW!!!
3 BED, 2 BATH $50,000
IN MIAMI
Many more in all prices ranges throughout South Florida
JERRY KLEIN
FORECLOSURE SPECIALIST FROM CANADA
KELLER WILLIAMS. REALTY
CALL: (954) 804-9444
jerryklein797@gmail.com

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

VCR in a closet? Videos collecting dust. Movies and slides still in shoeboxes? We're Specialists in DVD transfers and "Preserving Memories". Fred: 416-229-6000; frednelson@madisonvideo.tv

472 RETIREMENT HOME

Ahavath Achim Retirement Home. The home with a Neshama. Planned activities, 24 hr. supervision. For information contact Joseph Sahar, office 416-398-5486 or 905-660-4831.

498 TRAVEL & TOURISM

Free 30 day SnowbirdCare membership worth $45 for participating in our 5 minute online snowbird survey. SnowbirdCare members get complete information on the best doctors and hospitals in Florida. To take the survey call 905-709-2756.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bathurst Upholstery. Reupholstering sofas, chairs. Low prices 416-781-1995, 905-886-3148.

Delray Beach-Boca-Boynton Kings Point-Glen Eagles - Vizcaya Polo-Boca West - Hunters Run-Westchester Marty@funsunproperties.com Realty Associates 561-909-7424.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Pembroke Pines/Hollybrook. Seasonal or annual rental. 2 bed., 2 bth., decorator - furn'd., just painted, upgraded kitchen, lake/golf view. Golf, tennis, pool & CH. Call 631-860-1515.

Ft. Lauderdale, Hollybrook, 2 bed., 2 bth., totally brand new reno., 3 - 4 mos. Jan. - Apr. 647-280-7011.

Pompano Bch., Palm-Aire, C.C., 2 bdr., 2 bth., grdn. apt., main flr., fully furn., wshr./dryer. Avail. seas./annual. 416-518-5620.

Gated, Boca Raton (Ainsley), beau. corner 2 br. 2 bth kosher kit. near syn. 917-282-5063.

Miami Beach. Oceanfront view. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. 3 months $1475 monthly 4 months $1375 monthly. 1-918-361-3222.

Boca, C.V., 1.5 bth, main flr, beautifully furn, walk to pool. Dec. - Mar. flex. 416-915-8509.

Boca Raton, C.V., 1 bdr., 1.2 bth., exc. cond, kosher kit, lake view, Avail. immed. 416-633-3268.

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

Warm up in sunny W. Palm Beach, beau. 2 bed 2 full baths. New kit. new furn, balc, pool, Prkg, gated community 301-907-0842

To place a classified ad please call 416-391-1836

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.
ELIE KOFFMAN
Real estate broker / Realtor®
MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717
FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4508
O: 305.408.8401
LONDONO
ECR

SOUTH FLORIDA REAL ESTATE
Fort Lauderdale/Pompano to Boca Raton Starting at $50,000
3 Mo Rentals from $1600
Call Wieder Realty, Inc.
954-978-8300
or 1-888-979-9788
www.Palm-Aire.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

155 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

HABITAT REAL ESTATE – ISRAEL
Habitat Real Estate is situated in Zichron Yaakov. Our expertise is in luxury homes and apartments and commercial properties.
Habitat was established by Annabelle Almagor from Israel and Howard Tennenhouse from Canada. Ms. Almagor is an experienced realtor and former assistant to Presidents Ezer Weizman and Shimon Peres. Mr. Tennenhouse is a Canadian lawyer who invests in the acquisition and development of real estate in Israel.
We provide personalized service to meet your needs as a home buyer or investor.
For further information contact us at:
Israel: Tel: (972) 4-6397376 or (972) 52-8883962 Fax: (972) 4-6397372 habratabsrael@gmail.com
Canada: (204) 988 4930 or (204) 355-7771 htenn@mts.net

185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTY

Benalmadena, Spain. Centrally located near beach and Puerto Marina. Excellent condition. Two bedrooms, big balcony, ocean view. Sleeps 6, A/C. Fully equipped, pool. 514-341-0727.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Personal support lady - 14 yrs. exper. for elderly at home + cleaning. Days/nights. Refs. 416-240-1513.

GLATT

Take-out & Catering
Shiva Meals
Peanut Free Simchas COR
Shabbat Dinners
905 - 597 - 7571

387 DECORATING

DRAPERY, BLINDS & SHUTTERS Excellent service & quality, reasonable prices. 647-272-7282.

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
WINTER IN ISRAEL
FROM $676 PER PERSON

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

ESPN's Shulman highlights participants at hoops classic

By BEN FISHER
Special to The CJN

The winners of the Jewish National Fund's (JNF) first annual Hoops Classic included teams known as "South Beach Talent," "Sub Please" and "The Basket Cases" – not that it really mattered.

While those teams may have earned themselves handsome trophies as well as bragging rights heading into next year, the day was all about a group of hoops lovers getting involved in the community while having some fun in support of Israel.

"The turnout we've received is phenomenal," says Ari Ditkovsky, a director and committee member for the event. "It's great to see so many people from the community raising money and contributing to a deserving cause."

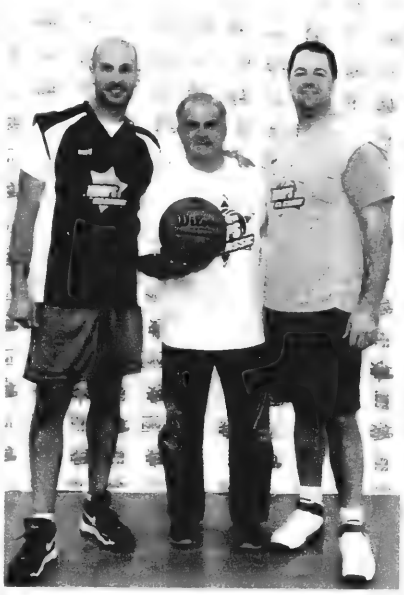
The event, billed as "100 per cent Israel," saw approximately 200 men and women selected to one of 19 teams in three separate categories take part in a five-on-five tournament. All competitors entered the tournament having raised funds for the JNF, with proceeds going to the building of a playground and recreational area for children in Moshav Rehov, a disadvantaged region in northern Israel.

Perhaps the best known of the 200 participants to take to the court for the Nov. 28 event at Hoopdome in Downsview Park was ESPN play-by-play man and Thornhill native Dan Shulman.

An actuarial science major at the University of Western Ontario, Shulman found his love for sports broadcasting through the university radio station and later caught his break at what is now the Fan 590. After stints with the Blue Jays and at TSN, he made the jump to ESPN, where he has since risen to prominence as a play-by-play voice for NCAA basketball, NBA basketball and Major League Baseball.

Even as a high-profile sports personality, Shulman was eager to take part in the Classic.

"When my neighbour, Josh Cooper [JNF Toronto's executive director and one of the event organizers], asked me to play, I jumped at the chance," says Sports Illustrated's play-by-play voice of the decade for the 2000s. "I visited Israel with my family last year and am anxious to do my part in helping support it."



Getting ready for a tournament tip-off are, from left, broadcaster Dan Shulman, JNF Toronto president Nathan Disenhouse and JNF Toronto executive-director Josh Cooper.

Shulman's trip to Israel – his first visit since 1980 and his first with his wife and three sons – came in celebration of his son Alex's bar mitzvah.

Family is why Shulman continues to live in Thornhill despite having spent much of the last 15 years travelling throughout the United States and abroad as part of his broadcasting duties with ESPN.

"[Thornhill] is home," Shulman says. "My wife and I are happy here, my kids grew up here and there's no reason to uproot now."

The 43-year old's ties to the community run deep. Ask what Judaism means to him and he'll likely tell you that it's "deeply embedded" within him, and that he was named after a relative who died in the Holocaust.

It's why he was undoubtedly proud to be a member of the Chai Fives, a team in the 40+ category that didn't do much on court (they finished with a 1-2 record), but collectively raised $14,376 for Moshav Rehov to win a dinner personally catered by noted chef Rose Reisman. The team's contributions went a long way helping the event reach its total of more than $65,000 raised, well over the target goal of $50,000.

This is particularly encouraging for Ditkovsky and the event's organizers, who are already looking ahead to the future.

"We plan on making this the first of many to come," says Ditkovsky. "I'm blown away by the support everyone's showed and hopefully it'll only get bigger and better moving forward."

JNF Hoops Classic committee members get into the spirit. Seen here, from left, Danielle Rutenberg, Alex Hennick and Linoy Hazan.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (416) 391-0949
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Doc key: W11FXCJN

Int'l team knits tuques for IDF soldiers

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Shulamit Besser was on vacation in Florida when she noticed someone by the pool knitting what she thought were kippot. After speaking to the woman, she found out she was actually making hats for soldiers in the Israel Defence Forces.

From that came Besser's involvement in the Hats for Israeli Soldiers project, an initiative started by Channah Koppel in Israel.

Hats for Israeli Soldiers consists of women from all over the world knitting black wool tuques for soldiers serving in the IDF. To date, more than 12,000 tuques have been knitted and delivered to the soldiers.

Of the more than 12,000, Besser and her team of knitters – she has about 10 so far, she said – have knitted 113 hats.

"I would say I've done two-thirds of it, and the other people have done one-third of it. But we're not having a competition. I don't care how many they do as long as they do it," she said.

Hats for Israeli Soldiers started three years ago when Koppel's eldest son was serving a five-month winter term in Hermon, in northwest Israel, as a paratrooper. The first shipment of 10 hats went to the soldiers in her son's unit when he mentioned they were cold.

"Soon, other soldiers saw the hats and wanted to have them, too," Koppel told The CJN in September.

Besser, who was born in Israel but now lives in Toronto, saw the project as an opportunity to thank the soldiers.

"I got really excited because I'm an Israeli – Israeli born – myself. I don't live in Israel so I thought, well, this is something I can do. I love knitting.

"Every time I see somebody, I talk to them and recruit them. As long as we can do it, as long as people want to do this, I certainly want to continue with it – because I think it's very worthwhile. While I don't live [in Israel], I do it for them [the soldiers]. I feel like I'm doing something," she added.

Besser's first shipment of hats, which numbered 60, was sent out in the summer. More recently, another batch arrived in Israel on Oct. 31. They do their best to send the hats with people travelling to Israel in order to avoid duty charges.

The wool to make the hats comes from a company in New York that sells the material to the knitters at cost. Besser's contact in Chicago, who also knits the hats, set up the arrangement with the company.

The hats must be made from machine-washable plain black wool in order to comply with army regulations.

Once Koppel receives the hats, which come from places as far away as Australia and New Zealand, she attaches a Hebrew label to each one. Loosely translated into English, it says, "Knit for you with love and warmth."

"It has grown into this incredible network of kind and giving people," Koppel said, "and it really started from nothing. It just happened."

"Whatever [people] do it's a good effort," Besser added.

For more information on the Hats for Israeli Soldiers project, visit http://hatsforisraelisoldiers.blogspot.com. To join Besser's circle of knitters, e-mail roslyn@atlanticbb.net.

HOLIDAY ORIENTAL CHEESE SPREAD

Very yummy. Serve with a variety of crackers.

½ c soy sauce
¼ c icing sugar
3 tbsp. finely chopped green onion
½ tsp. finely chopped garlic
1 ½ tsp minced crystallized ginger
1 tsp. dried crushed chilies
1 8oz. block cream cheese
3 tbsp. white or black sesame seeds, toasted

Combine first 6 ingredients in shallow bowl. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Pour into resealable plastic bag. Makes 3/4 c marinade. Add cream cheese. Seal bag. Turn to coat. Marinate in refrigerator for 3 days, turning occasionally. Remove cream cheese. Press sesame seeds into cheese block until completely coated. Place on serving plate. Serves 8 to 10.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Egerton)
416.767.7655 • caplans.ca

A Family Business for over 60 Years

REMEMBERING OUR YESTERDAYS

By BILL GLADSTONE

TORONTO ZIONISTS, 1910

This wonderful historic photo of Toronto's leading Zionists of a century ago comes from the Ottawa Jewish Archives. The three at right on the porch are Ida Siegel, Dr. Louis J. Breslin and Moses Gelber. Among the others are Dr. John Shayne, the brothers Maurice and Isidore Goldstick, and possibly Dr. Samuel Levine. If you recognize anyone else, please e-mail me at billgladstone@sympatico.ca. This is my last photo in this space, so thanks to the many readers who shared their photos, stories and enthusiasm with me. Feel free to write at any time.

Christian envy?

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

Christian envy. Does it exist?

When I was a child growing up in Kitchener, Ont., this time of year was particularly hard. While our family celebrated Chanukah with zeal and excitement, for some reason, it wasn't enough.

I wanted presents, and the big trees and the lights. Or did I?

URBAN WRITER

I spoke to my friend Bela Middleman, who grew up in a traditional Jewish home in Oak Park, Mich., to gauge my feelings and memories and determine if there are other Jews who felt the same envy.

"I couldn't understand why the Christian culture seemed so much more important to society than the Jewish one," the 20-year-old said. "Everything turned into Christmas. The stores, radio, TV – even the way people dressed and raised money for charity."

When I pressed her on why all of this remains so powerful in her memory, she replied quite honestly. "I guess it was the only time in my childhood when I felt I was a minority," she said. "It made me feel foreign, and displaced."

I understand Bela's feelings. Really, Christmas time wasn't dramatically different to me than Chanukah. There was just more of it. They're similarly festive holidays, children get presents on both, and, overall, the two can be fun and meaningful.

But what I really remember – what really bothered me – was when my classmates at Shepherd Public School sang Silent Night while I sat quietly on my own. I also recall Miss Darling giving me math equations to do while the other kids glued sparkles, sequins and pipe-cleaners on construction paper to create Christmas decorations.

I stood out, and I didn't like it.

I was different. I was the Jew, and I felt everyone's little eyes upon me, even when they weren't. (I'd felt that same feeling in kindergarten when I wore a kippah to school and was chased by bigger kids yelling anti-semitic epithets at me. That changed, however, when I told my father at the end of the year that I would no longer wear my kippah to school. I was too fearful.)

I wonder if any readers feel the same way.

Living in Toronto, Canada, in 2010 is not at all similar to living in an early 1900s shtetl in Poland. We're not frightened by sleigh bells ringing or carolers singing O Tannenbaum. We're not scared of midnight mass and its profound rituals. The empty streets, cul de sacs and avenues on Christmas Eve don't make us anxious.

Christmas is, however, a reminder of the dominant Christian culture we live in. I do recall clearly Ian Dunbar and his five siblings opening their presents and the Christian envy I had, particularly when he received an awesome bumper-pool game.

But what was most difficult was that I wasn't part of it all – the prevailing festivity – because I was the Jewish kid.

Like my friend Bela said, it was that time of year when Christians were Christians and Jews were Jews.

"Christmas makes me feel that the community I come from doesn't have a voice in popular culture," Bela concluded.

So what does a Jew do on Christmas to feel less "foreign"?

If you're a doctor, you'll likely take an extra shift so your Christian colleagues can celebrate the holiday with their loved ones.

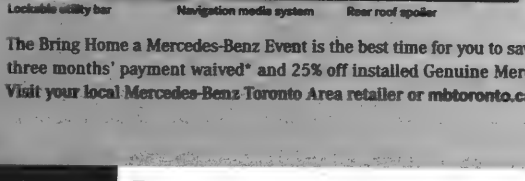
Others will eat Chinese food, take in a movie and joke to the Jew standing in line next to them, "Maybe after the flick we can pop open a bottle of shmaltz herring."

Christian envy? Does it exist?

To comment, go to http://avrum.net.

Enjoy 3 months' payments waived*. Offer ends soon!

BRING HOME A
MERCEDES-BENZ EVENT



In addition, receive 25% off installed Genuine Accessories.
Lockable utility bar
Navigation media system
Rear roof spoiler

The Bring Home a Mercedes-Benz Event is the best time for you to save. You'll receive your first three months' payment waived* and 25% off installed Genuine Mercedes-Benz accessories. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group
Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

© 2010 Mercedes-Benz Canada Inc.* Lease and finance offers based on a new 2011 C 250 / E 350 BlueTEC available only through Mercedes-Benz Financial. Services on approved credit for a limited time. Lease example based on $358/$738 (excluding taxes, per month for 48/36 months. Down payment or equivalent trade of $6,700/$8,600 plus first month's payment and security deposit of $400/$600 and applicable taxes due at lease inception. First, second and third month payment waivers are capped up to a total of $1,250/$2,500 including tax. For lease and finance programs. Payment waivers are only applicable on new 2011 B/C/E-wagon/sedan only ML/GL/E models. Not applicable to AMG models. MSRP starting at $35,950/$62,500. A P.R. of 3.9%/5.9% applies. Total obligation of $21,954/$33,422. Finance example based on 60 month term at an A.P.R. of 1.9%/3.9% and an MSRP of $35,900/$62,500. Monthly Payment is $666/$1,033 excluding taxes, with down payment $6,015/$8,715. Cost of borrowing is $1,585/$5,749 for a total obligation of $38,560/$68,724. 18,000 km/year allowance. $0.20/km for excess kilometres applies. Freight/PDI $1,995. Dealer Admin fee of $295 air conditioning levy of $100. EHF tires, filters and batteries, stewardship fee of $29.75/$23.86 and provincial fee of $5 are not included in the final purchase price. License, insurance, registration, taxes and PPSA are extra. Payment examples do not include vehicle accessories. The 25% off accessories incentive is based on manufacturer suggested retail price including installation charges on select vehicles. Applicable sales taxes are extra. Some accessory applications may require additional parts and charges. Discount applies only to select Genuine Mercedes-Benz Vehicle Accessories, excluding all-winter wheel packages, Mercedes-Benz Collection products, tires, and regular maintenance parts. Accessory selection at time of purchase is subject to availability. The accessory incentive only applies to new vehicle models listed above, and cannot be used for other model purchases. Offer may change without notice and cannot be combined with any other offers. Some vehicles are shown with optional equipment available at extra cost. See your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer for details. Offers end December 31st, 2010 and are subject to vehicle availability. C-Class accessories shown. Available accessories vary by model.

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

40 Pages | Thursday, December 23, 2010 | 16 Tevet, 5771 | $1.25

MIRVISH 2010-2011 SEASON
MIRVISH.COM

This Week

National

MP wants gov't to fund Holocaust monument. Page 3

Federation seeks cash to start building new JCC. Page 6

Toronto doctor volunteers in Haiti. Page 14

Arts & Travel

Wildlife thrives in the Galapagos Islands. Page 30

Books & Authors

Writer conveys his unexplainable love for Russia. Page 34

On cjnews.com

With academic freedom comes responsibility.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 16
Yiddish Corner 16
Heebonics 20
Business 23
Family Moments 23
What's New 24
On Campus 26
Obituaries & Notices 26
Israel & the Jewish World 27
Classified 35

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Let Gilad go home

Orna Shimoni, second from left, one of the founders of the movement that urged Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon a decade ago, joins Gilad Shalit's parents, Aviva and Noam, in Jerusalem. Shimoni holds a life-size paper cut-out doll of Gilad outside the office of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. Shalit has been held captive in Gaza by Hamas since June 2006. [Flash90 photo]

CIC exec named to lead new agency

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

A plan to restructure the landscape of Jewish advocacy and consolidate all of its parts into one unified entity is not on hold, despite recent reports to the contrary, community officials say.

In fact, the initiative is "absolutely on schedule," and a new CEO has been found to lead the yet-to-be-named organization, according to Steven Cummings, chair of the umbrella group Canadian Council for Jewish and Israel Advocacy's (CIJA) and head of the reorganization committee working on the changes.

Shimon Fogel

Media reports earlier this month said that at a Dec. 12 meeting in Montreal, United Israel Appeal Federations Canada (UIAFC) – officially CIJA's governing body – voted unanimously to put CIJA's restructuring plan on the back burner. The stories also said UIAFC wants the issue to be studied further and is asking for a final report on outstanding issues to be prepared by June.

But the reports were "totally inaccurate," Cummings said.

"We are completing the process [on the] issues of branding, membership, creating bylaws, etc... and we hope to be able to present these to the CIJA and UIAFC boards toward the end of March," he said. "I think that will be the time where the [restructuring] will get full approval. We hope to be hitting the ground running well before the summer."

Cummings said that at CIJA's Dec. 8 board meeting, a CEO was picked to head up the new centralized entity. That person is Shimon Fogel, current CEO of the Canada-Israel Committee (CIC).

Continued on page 21

Jewish community aids boycotted shoe store

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL – Some needy men in Montreal will be considerably better shod this season thanks to the generosity of opponents of an anti-Israel boycott of a St. Denis Street shoe store.

Sharon Freedman bought more than $3,000 worth of merchandise at Boutique Le Marcheur that she will donate to a local charity, possibly the Welcome Hall Mission or the Salvation Army.

The money came from her own pocket and from members of the Jewish community. Freedman is part of an informal network of supporters of the store's owner, Yves Archambault, who since early October has been defying pressure to stop selling Israeli-made merchandise.

Every second Saturday afternoon, and lately each week, members of PAJU (Palestinian and Jewish Unity) have been picketing outside the store, quietly holding banners and Palestinian flags and handing out flyers denouncing "Israeli apartheid." Le Marcheur stocks a line of Israeli shoes called Beauti-Feel, which represents a small part of its inventory of high-end footwear.

The protesters have been ticketed by police on a couple of occasions for minor infractions, but no criminal charges have been laid.

Freedman, a social worker, has been going to the store each time a demonstration takes place, along with other Jewish Montrealers. Many of them have also bought merchandise as a means of countering the boycott campaign, or have attempted to explain Israel's side.

"People have the right of freedom of speech, but trying to economically hurt a small businessman is wrong.

Continued on page 37

Shmot
Candlelighting: 4:27
Havdalah: 5:33
Greater Toronto Area

Don't miss an issue. Call 1-866-849-0864

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(H)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 018
PO BOX 972 STATION F 850
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Jewish News
eek.
news.com

The next issue of The CJN will be January 6, 2011 – Happy New Year!

The News in Brief

Canada

More Trains Ordered

MONTREAL — Montreal-based Bombardier Inc. will be making more passenger trains for Israel. The company announced it has received another order from Israel Railways for 72 double-decker railcars valued at $154 million. In October, Bombardier made public its deal with Israel Railways to manufacture an initial 78 railcars with an option for more, a contract worth $185 million.

The vehicles will be made at Bombardier Transportation's plant in Gorlitz, Germany, and in Israel. Further orders may follow under the deal.

World

Rabbi Sacks To Retire

LONDON — British Chief Rabbi Lord Jonathan Sacks will retire in two years. United Synagogue president Simon Hochauser said Dec. 13 that Rabbi Sacks will step down in September 2013 after 22 years, the Jewish Chronicle reported. Hochauser said focus groups will help select a successor. Rabbi Sacks, who replaced Lord Immanuel Jakobovits, was knighted in 2005 and entered the House of Lords in 2009.

Libel Thrown Out

BUDAPEST — A court in Budapest threw out a libel case against Nazi-hunter Efraim Zuroff because the plaintiff, 97, didn't show up for the final court date. The court dismissed the case Dec.16, but Sandor Kepiro is expected to appeal. He filed suit after Zuroff, head of the Israeli office of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, submitted documents to the Hungarian courts in 2006 about Kepiro's alleged role in the murders of 1,246 civilians in Novi Sad. Kepiro said Zuroff had proclaimed him guilty before a trial. Zuroff expects to know next month whether war crimes charges will be filed against Kepiro.

Iranian Islamists Threaten Esther's Tomb

TEHRAN — A group of Islamists have threatened to destroy the tomb of Queen Esther in western Iran if Israel damages the Al-Aqsa mosque.

The Islamists, members of the student Islamist militia at Bu-Ali-Sina university of Hamedan, were identified by the Iranian Mehr news agency, according to the French news agency AFP. They demonstrated Dec. 12 at the tomb.

"Muslims beware that they have started the destruction of Al-Aqsa mosque while their second sacred site in Iran, the Esther and Mordecai tomb, is at peace and no Muslims make a sound," the protesters said in a statement.

Several construction and archeological projects on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem have led Muslims to charge Israel is purposely putting the Al-Aqsa mosque in danger.

Up to 25,000 Jews live in Iran. Pilgrims regularly visit the Esther shrine.

Esther is the heroine of the Purim story in which she convinces her husband, King Achashverosh, to allow Jews to defend themselves and live in the Persian Empire.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments

Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS

SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite | DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite

Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!

Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years

We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment

3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- Current Listing of Funerals
- Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- Kaddish Texts
- Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

STARS MEN'S SHOPS

TODAY & BOXING DAY ONLY

CALVIN KLEIN SUITS $250

- ALL SHIRTS & TIES
- ALL SPORTSWEAR
- ALL OUTERWEAR & TOPCOATS

50% OFF

Prices effective December 24, 26, 27 only!

Cambridge Centre | Upper Canada Mall | Bramalea City Centre | Mapleview Centre | St. Laurent Shopping Mall | Limeridge Mall | Stone Road Mall | Woodbine Centre | Fairview Mall | Square One | Scarborough Town Centre | Cataraqui Town Centre | Vaughan Mills | Markville Mall | Devonshire Mall | Fairview Park | Conestoga Mall | Georgian Mall | Pen Centre | 2181 Steeles Ave. West, Toronto

www.starsmenshops.com

The Canadian Jewish news

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: 416-932-5095 Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 416-932-2488
E-mail: cjncontact@gmail.com
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol. XL, No. 50 (1,979)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Shen Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

B. Gladstone, Rabbi E. Goldstein, A. Gropper, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosensweig, Rabbi C. Steinmetz, G. Troy, N. Shenhav, L. Speisman, R. Turkienicz, F. Zomparelli
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr, Steven Cummings, Michael Goldbloom, Igor Korenzvit, Julia Koschitzky, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe
Directors

George A. Cohon, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Honourary Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.

CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

FRIENDS OF
SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER
FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
416-864-9735
www.fswc.ca
DIRECT ACTION NOW

National

Coast to Coast

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how
to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

MP wants gov't to pay for Holocaust museum

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

No sooner had Bill C-442, An Act to Establish A National Holocaust Monument, passed in the House of Commons last week than controversy erupted over how the monument would be funded and when it would actually be built.

Joe Volpe

The private member's bill, sponsored by Conservative MP Tim Uppal and based on previous Liberal bills – C-547 and C-238 in 2008 and 2009, respectively – calls for the National Capital Commission (NCC) to set aside a tract of land for the structure.

But according to Liberal MP Joe Volpe, the bill doesn't oblige the government to pay for it.

Instead, if granted royal assent, the bill, which is now being reviewed by the Senate, instructs the minister responsible for the NCC – Chuck Strahl, minister of transport, infrastructure and communities – to strike an advisory council from the Jewish community within one year.

According to the bill's current language, the council and the NCC would then "oversee the planning and design of the monument; choose a suitable area of public land in the National Capital Region for the monument to be located; and hold public consultations and take into account the recommendations of the public."

Additionally, it's the council's responsibility to raise funds to cover the total cost of the monument, and once the money is in place, the NCC can take up to three years to actually erect it.

It's this potential four-year delay, as well as what he considers the miserliness of the government on this issue, that has Volpe "extremely frustrated."

He believes the whole project could have been finished already, without the need to enact legislation, and should be completely funded by the government, as it has been done for many other national monuments.

In May, Volpe wrote to then-minister of transport, infrastructure and communities John Baird urging him to instruct the NCC to put up a national Holocaust memorial.

"The NCC already possesses the authority to establish a monument without Parliamentary approvals [and] currently is responsible for 16 monuments, including the Hungarian Monument, the Canadian Tribute to Human Rights, and the Monument to Canadian Aid Workers. Construction is currently underway for a National Naval Monument. Additionally, the NCC is in the planning phase for the creation of a National Monument to the Victims of Communism. None of these monuments required legislation to move forward," nor were they privately funded, Volpe wrote.

A spokesperson for Strahl refuted Volpe's claim, saying that "other monuments in the National Capital Region, for example the Hong Kong Memorial Wall, have been realized" with funding from private organizations and individuals.

"The government would consider providing additional funding, if necessary, to realize the establishment of a national Holocaust monument," the spokesperson added.

Still, Volpe maintains that because the bill has all-party support, all Strahl needs to do is direct the NCC to "go ahead and do this [monument] as well… because it's the will of the House. To meander this bill through the legislative process is an insult to everybody who has an attachment to the principles of commemorating the Holocaust."

Since the government already has the money, administrative ability and the land to establish the monument "why go to a particular community and say 'You go ahead and raise funds'? It cheapens the whole concept," Volpe said.

Continued on page 18

BOXING WEEK BONUS EVENT
BONUS Set of winter tires* with all new and used vehicles
New & used year-end DEALS!
Hurry, offers end January 3rd 2011

SISLEY HONDA
family driven

Greg Ashkenazy
Used Vehicle Sales
gashkenazy@sisley.ca
800-211-0931 ext.356

Seymour Ezer
New Vehicle Sales
sezer@sisley.ca
866-384-7916 ext.333
88 Steeles Ave. W,
www.SISLEY.ca
866-490-6721
STEELES
YONGE
N
*Includes set of four winter tires at no extra charge with the purchase, finance or lease of a new or used vehicle. Rims, installation, balancing and storage, if required, are extra.

CALLING ALL BRIDES & GROOMS

The CJN
wants you to share your story with our readers
in our upcoming Bridal Supplement.

Tell us how you got engaged,
talk about your wedding plans, or share your feelings
on your wedding day.

Deadline for submission is Wed. Jan. 19

Send about 400 words plus a picture to:
cblackman@thecjn.ca

The Benjamin Foundation

Through the generations
...a sacred trust

HONOURING LIVES LIVED

"Our wonderful life-affirming tradition turns loss into constructive remembrance that helps heal the world."

Shelley Norris, Executive Director, The Benjamin Foundation

The Benjamin Foundation allows families to entrust memorial donations for temporary management until they are ready to select a charity that meaningfully honours the deceased. This takes the pressure of making a long-term decision off grieving families and also makes it easy for mourners to contribute.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto
416-663-9060
www.benjaminfoundation.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Greater Toronto Area

Tender, honest, filial love

Considerable time elapsed after the Shoah before its survivors, in the main, could speak about their experiences even to their children, let alone publicly.

Those who were able did find ways to separate memory from nightmare and talk or write openly, if painfully, to the world about what they had witnessed or, worse, experienced. Though, even they, in doing so, would never be able to lift the heavy, leaden stones from their heart.

From the editor's desk...

Today, more than 6-1/2 decades after the war, a considerable number of survivor memoirs have been published. Indeed there are even public foundations, such as the Azrieli Foundation, that encourage and assist survivors to write their personal stories.

Children of the survivors, too, have written about their parents' experiences. Many, if not most, of these next-generational works have focused on the emotional disability and the resulting familial dysfunction that the war wrought. Often, the narrator tries to explain but always also escape from – and not help carry – the burdens borne by his or her parents.

An Italian Renaissance: Choosing Life in Canada (Urim Publications), by Robert Eli Rubinstein, is also a book by a child of survivors about his parents' experiences. But it is unlike most "second-generation" works.

It is not a memoir of survivorship; it is not a chronicle of horror and rescue; nor is it a self-obsessed exculpation of personality disorder.

An Italian Renaissance is a thoughtful, purposive reflection about the experiences of the author's parents before, during and after the Shoah, a near-philosophical exploration of history, memory, facts, truth, character, human strength and human frailty.

Rubinstein writes tenderly, yet always honestly, about his parents. He reconstructs, as best he can in the circumstances, pieces of a broken narrative into an unbroken story without embellishment. He reconciles truth with memory without concealment.

"I believe in honesty even when it hurts," the author told The CJN at his north Toronto office. Quiet and reserved, soft-spoken and precise, Rubinstein has a commandingly authoritative presence. "Things are not always what they seem. I accepted my mother's stories in childhood quite uncritically. Not everything I was told, I subsequently found out, was accurate.

"Truth can be a complex matter. Sometimes it may not necessarily be factually accurate but true nevertheless to the individual or serve a higher purpose. Survival sometimes requires us to take certain liberties with the truth and what matters was the result, namely, to become successful, good human beings."

Understanding how his parents became successful, good human beings, despite their experiences in the Shoah is the touching core of the book.

With forthright observations conveyed through straightforward, elegant writing, Rubinstein pays moving tribute to his parents. This is clear from the dedication page of the book.

"There are parents for whom /endowing life to their children /is a profound declaration of faith /and an act of courage.

"And there are children for whom /receiving life from their parents, / through the most unlikely happenstance, /inspires unbounded love and devotion.

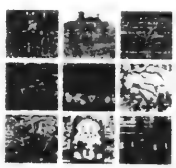
"Such are my parents. /And such is this child."

The book takes its title from the fact that Rubinstein's parents spent the immediate postwar period as refugees from Hungary in a displaced persons camp in Grugliasco, northern Italy, near Turin (Torino). The author was born in Torino during his parents internment in Grugliasco.

"Italy represented the spiritual rehabilitation of my family," Rubinstein writes. In a profoundly symbolic and actual sense, Italy was where his parents were reborn. It was where their souls began to heal in preparation for the next phase of their lives, which was to be in Canada.

"For me, Italy was the key to all the blessings that subsequently befell my family," Rubinstein writes of an earlier stage in his life. True to his loyalty to honesty, the book depicts Rubinstein's determined testing of that key, seeing which far-past chambers of his family's painful story it really unlocked.

"The book was a long time in the making. Everything was thought out very long," Rubinstein emphasized.



ROBERT ELI RUBINSTEIN

"As children of the 20th century, my parents have lived through an astonishing range of transformative events," Rubinstein writes. "The changes my parents witnessed and the challenges they overcame along the way boggle the mind. But... never did they lose their moral compass, even in the darkest days when it appeared that the bulk of humankind had done so. The coexistence of such extraordinary adaptability and dedication to principle within a single individual is rare to find. It is a special privilege to be the child of two such individuals and to have had the opportunity to learn from their personal examples."

This is a rare work of filial homage that contains within its pages example and inspiration for us all.

– MBD

SeeJN

THIS IS HOW YOU MAKE A SNOWBALL

Young children in a Druze village in the Golan Heights play in the snow. Inclement weather throughout Israel brought a significant snowfall in the north of the country last week. [Israel Sun photo]

GTA community's the best, says Sharansky

Former MK discusses Diaspora, Israel relationship

By YOSEF TASTASSA
Special to The CJN

"The Jewish community in the GTA is one of the most important Jewish communities in the Diaspora, " Jewish Agency chairman Natan Sharansky told The CJN last week in an exclusive interview.

Sharansky was in Toronto on Dec. 13 to address a special meeting of the Canada Israel Chamber of Commerce (CICC).

He spoke to The CJN about the relationship between Diaspora Jewry and Israel, and about his special connection to Toronto's Jewish community.

"Aliyah is one of our goals but not the only one," Sharansky said, adding that the State of Israel needs strong and flourishing Jewish communities around the world.

"We understand that in today's world the borders are open and people are free to shift their living places for many reasons. The Jewish Agency has strong interests among Jews who live outside Israel. We want to keep in touch with those people, strengthen their Jewish identity, and make them see Israel as their home," Sharansky said.

Natan Sharansky [Yosef Tastassa photo]

"It is important that these people will keep their tradition and stick to their roots for the long-term existence of the Jewish people in Israel and around the world."

By the same token, however, he said there is a reciprocal aspect to the relationship. "I also believe that the Jewish communities around the world need Israel. Israel is important for identity and heritage. It is the home of every Jew around the world."

Sharansky said the Jewish community in Toronto is unique because of its three distinct populations: English-speaking, Hebrew-speaking and Russian-speaking.

He praised the work of the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto and the shlichim (representatives of the Jewish Agency) who "have a crucial and important role in keeping in touch with these three populations that have unique patterns."

Sharansky was and still is a hero for many Jews around the world.

Born in Ukraine in 1948, he completed a degree in applied mathematics at the Moscow Institute of Physics and Technology. He became a worldwide symbol of the Refuseniks' struggle in the 1970s.

Sharansky was arrested in 1977 after the authorities refused to grant him an exit visa. He was accused of treason and espionage, and he was convicted of the charges in 1978. He spent nine years of his life in the Soviet gulag.

"Feb. 18, 1986, was the day I moved from hell to paradise," Sharansky said, referring to the day of his release from the gulag.

"After the international struggle for my release came to an end, I was transferred from the Soviet Union to the divided city of Berlin, and in the same night I was in Jerusalem with my wife and fulfilled a dream.

"The Jewish community of [Toronto] was a great activist in the struggle for my release from prison," he added.

Later, in Israel, he became a politician and established the Yisrael b'Aliyah party.

The party won seven seats in the Knesset in the 1996 elections, and he was appointed minister of Industry, Trade and Labor in the first Netanyahu government. He held the position from 1996 to 1999.

Sharansky said "there is a lot of symbolism in being a guest of the CICC, as I signed the first Israeli-Canadian agreement 13 years ago."

The CICC event was organized by Meir Klein, CICC executive vice-president and federation's director of research. Also in attendance were Amir Gissin, consul general of Israel for Toronto and Western Canada; CICC chairman Leslie Dan; CICC vice-chairman David Rubin; CICC president Oded Orgil and CICC national executive vice-president J.M. Shore.

Family

We believe that family is everything. That's why they're always welcome at Delmanor Northtown; and not just in your suite. Show them off in the internet lounge, teach them to putt on the putting green, or play piano or billiards in the lounge. There's even gardening in the potting room! The list is almost endless.

When you make Delmanor Northtown your home, there's no more household chores and lots of time for family so your family can enjoy Shabbat dinner in our gracious dining room. Of course, your suite has a kitchenette so you can still say "Ess a bisel eppis, tatelleh".

Discover this grand Tridel inspired retirement rental lifestyle with exceptional service. Come for a personal tour and lunch, or call to inquire about a free trial stay.

Act now to enjoy full hotel style service, including meals and limited time move in bonuses:
1 Bedroom rental suites from $ 3695
2 Bedroom rental suites from $ 4495

DELMANOR
Northtown

5351 Yonge, south of Finch • (416) 225-9146 • www.delmanor.com

A MEMBER OF THE TRIDEL GROUP OF COMPANIES

Warm Wishes for the Holiday Season

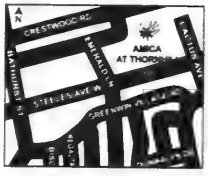
Thursday, December 30th, 2010
2:00 pm to 4:00 pm

Amica at Thornhill warmly invites you to celebrate the Holidays and bring in the New Year in our luxurious community. Enjoy an afternoon of festive entertainment, the bubbly and warm hors d'oeuvres. Tours to follow.

Please RSVP as space is limited by calling 905.886.3400

Ask about our Winter Vacation Stays and Respite Stays starting at $89.00 per night.

Amica at Thornhill
A Wellness & Vitality™ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West
Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400

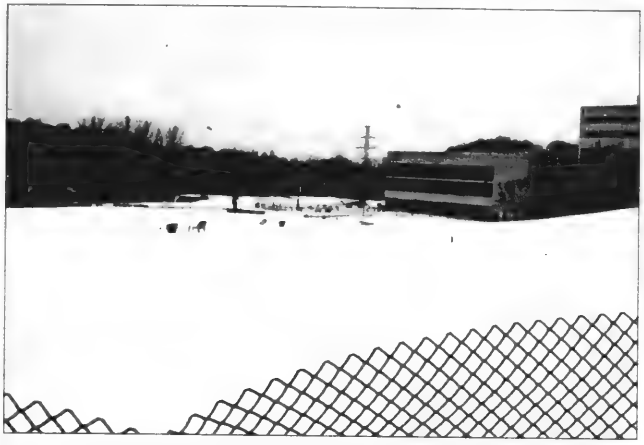


- Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
- All Inclusive • Full Service Fine Dining
- Wellness & Vitality™ Programs
- Amica VITALIS™ Assisted Living Suites & Services

www.amica.ca

AMICA at Thornhill

Greater Toronto Area



The Gales Family Pavilion sits north of the site of the former BJCC, which was demolished earlier this year. A new JCC is slated to be finished by 2014. [Frances Kraft photo]

Federation seeks $40M to start building JCC

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto says it needs to raise approximately $40 million before it can "responsibly break ground" on the building that will replace the Bathurst Jewish Community Centre (BJCC).

The BJCC, which was demolished earlier this year, closed in September 2009, and the new building is still expected to be finished by 2014, according to Howard English, the federation's vice-president of corporate communications.

The BJCC was located on what is now called the Sherman Campus, which also includes the Lipa Green Centre and the Donald Gales Family Pavilion.

The Gales Pavilion, which opened in October 2009, houses fitness facilities and classes as part of the Prosserman Jewish Community Centre (the entity that will include the building replacing the BJCC). The new JCC has 620 paid fitness members, an increase of more than 100 in a year, English said. The membership of 650 that was reported in The CJN last February included "promotional memberships," he clarified.

Before the BJCC closed, it had more than 1,200 fitness members.

The cost of completing Phase 2 of the Sherman Campus – which will also include a new Koffler Centre of the Arts and Leah Posluns Theatre, and the Sarah & Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre – will be approximately $110 million, for a total anticipated cost of $150 million for both phases, English said.

"We need about $40 million more before we feel we can responsibly break ground… but we're confident of doing that," English wrote in an initial e-mail interview.

He added that more than 90 per cent of the funds for the project "are coming primarily from donors, with assistance from a $15-million provincial grant for our GTA campus projects. We are being financially prudent by waiting to start Sherman Phase 2 until more money is raised, because we don't want to over-extend ourselves and we want to proceed without delay once construction begins."

Phase 1 of the project cost $40 million, including the $10 million Gales Pavilion, renovations to the Lipa Green Centre, and reconstruction of the parking lot, English said in a follow-up phone interview.

In a 2007 e-mail that was forwarded to The CJN by former BJCC member Gordon Akum, Ted Sokolsky, president and CEO of UJA Federation, wrote that the BJCC would only be dismantled "once the funding of phase 2 is confirmed." Sokolsky's e-mail was a reply to Akum, addressing concerns about the redevelopment plans.

Last week, English said he couldn't speak for Sokolsky, who was not reachable, but he said that Sokolsky may "not necessarily" have been referring to all the funding.

"We have enough money to begin construction," English said. "We're proceeding prudently by waiting, as Ted indicated, until there is more funding in place before we proceed. That's not to say there isn't funding in place to begin construction. The full funding is not in place, but that is not a cause for concern… We're confident of being able to raise the money, and fundraising is progressing.

"We have enough money to start, but we don't want to start until the bulk of the $40 million is in."

In the interim, he said, if construction doesn't begin by summer, the grounds on which the dismantled BJCC stands will be used as parkland for the community.

English stressed that the Prosserman JCC has become "a vibrant hub of Jewish life" with state-of-the-art equipment.

"We want to look ahead," he said, "and when we look ahead, the future looks really good."

Greater Toronto Area

Keeping warm in winter

OUT OF THE COLD: Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School Grade 3 students, with teacher Michelle Bernstein, display the hats and gloves they bought for the Out of the Cold program. The children collected the money for the items through their class tzedakah fund, to which they contribute weekly.

CLOTHING DRIVE: Robbins Hebrew Academy's middle school student council collects warm winter clothing to distribute within the community. Pictured with this year's collection of warm woolies are, standing from left, Holli Greenwald, Tyra Morton, Adam Neumark, Amanda Smoskowitz, Riley Nolk, Dekkel Bachar, Jonathan Karr, Mikki Robbins, Sam Neumark and Jordan Sugar, and, seated from left, Aaron Birbrager, Jordan Shapiro, Micaela Lewis and Courtney Marks.

BOOKS TO GO: Senior kindergartner Liat Jaitovitch with parent volunteer Karen Rosenstein have fun at the Bookmobile, at Associated Hebrew Schools' Posluns branch on Neptune Drive. The Bookmobile program, staffed by parent volunteers, lets students take home books twice a week to read with their parents.

Unleash your inner artist!

UJA Passover Tribute Card Contest

EXTREME MAKEOVER

TELL US WHAT PASSOVER MEANS TO YOU

Use any medium you want to express yourself and create a meaningful card that will be sent to thousands of people for Passover through United Jewish Appeal (UJA).

WHAT TO CREATE:

Your creation must be original artwork in a format that you can scan for submission purposes. Winners will receive the honour of having their creation displayed on the cover of UJA's 2011 Passover tribute cards and their artwork will also be displayed in the Lipa Green Centre or Koffler Centre of the Arts.

DESIGN SPECIFICATIONS:

Card size

5.5" wide x 8.5" tall (14 cm x 21.5 cm).
Vertical/portrait orientation only.

Entries should be submitted in a high-resolution digital scan (jpg format only) and e-mailed, along with the official contest entry form, to smarco@ujafed.org. Adult contest is open to those 14 years and over and children's contest is for those 6-13 years old.

Submission deadline:

Friday, January 21, 2011 at 5 p.m.

For official entry form and contest rules, please call Sonya Marco at 416.635.2883 ext.5302

All contest submissions become the property of UJA.

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto — United Jewish Appeal of Greater Toronto — koffler centre of the arts

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

The shame of it all

The first decade of the new (third) millennium draws to a close next week with a familiar, bleak tableau setting the bilateral scene, depicting yet again an unsettled horizon between Palestinians and Israelis. A treaty of peace between the two peoples will be no closer at hand next week than it was 10 years ago, or 17 years ago, or ever.

And that is such a sad waste of freedom, life, possibility and prosperity.

Ten years ago, then-U.S. president Bill Clinton tried to coax an agreement from then-Palestinian Authority (PA) president Yasser Arafat. But the president's efforts foundered on Arafat's hard-core unwillingness to commit to a non-violent end to the conflict. Seven years earlier, Clinton and so many hopeful, wishful thinkers dared to dream that the public Oslo accords signing ceremony on a crisp, cool September morning on the lawn of the White House beamed around the world for hundreds of millions of people to see and witness was a true harbinger of peace between the two contending nations.

But as we know, alas, the dreamers were forced to take shelter from the Palestinian rejectionists' unremitting campaign of violence and terrorism that was directed at the Jewish state. The dreamers were forced to hold tightly onto that dream and protect it for a future day.

Despite Israel's unilateral withdrawal from the Gaza Strip in the middle of this decade and the subsequent negotiating generosity of a different Israeli prime minister, Ehud Olmert, the Palestinians have consistently refused to declare finally and for all time an end to the conflict. Nor does it seem they will be willing to do so any time soon.

They have squandered the goodwill of yet another American president, Barack Obama, who, since his inauguration two years ago, has inclined his policies toward the Palestinians more than his predecessors did.

They still cannot bring themselves to negotiate the hard, biting, difficult issues with the Israelis across the table. To be sure, the current Israeli government is philosophically and politically committed to striking a harder bargain with the PA than its predecessor was. But that is the price the Palestinians are paying for the cumulative effect of their long-drawn aversion to peaceful coexistence alongside a Jewish state. Equally to the point, it is also the irritating concession they must make to the nuisance that Israel is a democracy.

Last week, former president Clinton's wife, Hillary, the current U.S. secretary of state, told the two sides that true peace can only be achieved through negotiations. This week, she sent two senior officials to the region who are trying yet again to seed the still-barren soil for bilateral or even indirect talks.

The second decade of the new millennium begins with expectations of Palestinian-Israel peace not much higher than the furrows in the soil into which the Americans are casting their flimsy seeds of peace. Perhaps this is a good thing, for it has been decidedly bad that so many opportunities for an agreement over the past many decades have been lost. The shame and suffering of it all for both peoples.

25 years ago in The CJN

Israeli prime minister Shimon Peres said Ivory Coast would resume diplomatic relations with Israel that were severed during the Yom Kippur War. The statement came after a four-hour meeting in Geneva with Ivory Coast president Felix Houphouet Boigny. Israel had been working to rebuild ties with black African nations that severed them in 1973 under Arab pressure.

Dry Bones FACEBOOKED
LONELY ANTISOCIAL KIDS USED TO AMUSE THEMSELVES
BY TALKING WITH IMAGINARY FRIENDS
WHILE SITTING ALONE IN THEIR ROOMS.
TODAY IT'S CALLED "SOCIAL NETWORKING"!
©'10 Kirkland
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Beznicar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Rosson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Canadian MDA's role in fighting fire

Magen David Adom (MDA), Israel's sole pre-hospital emergency, rescue and blood services organization, was immediately on the scene of the recent Mount Carmel forest fire. More than 80 ambulances, over 250 paramedics, two multi-casualty vehicles and a med-evac helicopter were there. MDA set up relief tents to relocate the homeless, arranged for make-shift medical clinics to treat the wounded and transported hundreds to local hospitals.

When we read about the organizations in Canada that are trying to rehabilitate the devastated areas, it pains us to see that not one word was mentioned about the role that Canadian MDA has played in providing essential medical care, emergency ambulance services and support throughout the critical days ("Fire in Carmel forest kills 42," Dec. 9). There is no mention of the hundreds of thousands of dollars spent on treating the wounded, nor is there mention of the need to replenish the badly depleted medical supplies and emergency equipment.

Let us remember that Magen David Adom in Israel is always there, ready to jump in, often at great risk, to comfort, treat, relocate and be compassionate to our fellow human beings, regardless of race, colour, creed or religion.

Arnold Rosner,
National Executive Director
Canadian Magen David Adom

* * *

The CJC and police services

I read with interest the story "Congress wary of CIJA restructuring plan" (Nov. 25). Police organizations across Ontario value the partnerships they have developed within the Jewish community. I have worked closely with the Canadian Jewish Congress (CJC) to build partnerships between the CJC and police services and law enforcement organizations through our province. The CJC's CEO, Bernie Farber, is a longtime associate member of the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police (OACP). That association led to a first-time educational trip to Israel for many Ontario police leaders in 2005.

The ability of CJC through Farber's work with OACP to access other police services across the province and country has led to a greater understanding of the safety needs of the Jewish community in Ontario. Farber has a unique appreciation of the role of police leaders and community safety issues of importance to the Jewish community and has lectured on hate-crime issues for a number of Ontario police services.

The police community and the OACP in particular appreciate the importance of CJC and its relationship with police services across the province and the country. We look forward to continuing the important partnerships that help us ensure the safety and well-being of Ontario's Jewish community – and all the communities we serve across this great country.

Joe Couto
Director of Government Relations and Communications, Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police

* * *

The Peto thesis

So the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education (OISE) granted Jennifer Peto a master's degree for her factually inaccurate and baseless diatribe. Now what do we do ("U of T's standards questioned in approving thesis," Dec. 16)? Do we beat our chests and raise our fists and demand that OISE revoke her degree? That is, understandably, our natural instinct. But this reaction has unintended consequences. First, by creating a media circus around this issue, we have given Peto a forum and a loudspeaker to spew her nonsense. Second, we allowed people such as Peto to change the conversation from one about the legitimacy of her views to one about academic freedom. This is precisely the same mistake that was made around the Pride Parade and QuAIA (Queers Against Israeli Apartheid). By beating our chests and raising our fists, we gave this fringe group a microphone and allowed it to seize the moral high ground by changing the conversation to one about freedom of speech and censorship.

I am not suggesting that we remain silent in the face of hatred, but rather that a more calculated and well-thought-out response should be crafted to respond to similar situations in the future. Sometimes it is better to leave fringes on the fringes.

Daniel S. Engel
Toronto

* * *

Oldest Orthodox shul in Canada

In the article "Shomrai Shabbos celebrates 120 years" (Nov. 11), it was stated that Shomrai Shabbos Chevrah Mishnayos is "the oldest Orthodox synagogue in Toronto and likely Canada." The latter distinction is actually held by the Spanish Portuguese Synagogue of Montreal, which was founded in 1768 and is still a very active congregation.

Ezra Franken
Toronto

For more letters, see cjnews.com.

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1643

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Take gas chambers remark in context, Kissinger pleads

By RON KAMPEAS
JTA

It should have been ancient, if unsavoury, news: a cavalier reference to gassing Jews, an aside in a conversation nearly 40 years old.

But the aside was pronounced by Henry Kissinger, a German-born Jew who fled Nazi horrors as a child and who has been honoured by multiple Jewish organizations as one of Israel's saviours during its darkest days, when he was secretary of state to former U.S. president Richard Nixon.

"If they put Jews into gas chambers in the Soviet Union, it is not an American concern," Kissinger is heard saying on the latest batch of Nixon-era Oval Office tapes released by the Nixon Library.

Following its publication Dec. 11 – buried deep in a New York Times story that focused more on Nixon's well-known bigotries – a shock shuddered through the Jewish community and led to calls to shun Kissinger, and then to calls to forgive him.

In an e-mail to JTA, Kissinger would brook no request for an apology and did not even directly address his gas chambers remark. Instead he appeared to insist on context: his frustration at the time with the insistence of the Jewish community and U.S. senators such as Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) and Henry "Scoop" Jackson (D-Wash.) on attaching human rights riders to dealings with the Soviets.

"The quotations ascribed to me in the transcript of the conversation with president Nixon must be viewed in the context of the time," Kissinger wrote to JTA.

He and Nixon pursued the issue of Soviet Jewish emigration as a humanitarian matter separate from foreign policy issues in order to avoid questions of sovereignty and because normal diplomatic channels were closed, Kissinger wrote.

"By this method and the persistent private representation at the highest level, we managed to raise emigration from 700 per year to close to 40,000 in 1972," Kissinger wrote. "We disagreed with the Jackson Amendment, which made Jewish emigration a foreign policy issue. We feared that the amendment would reduce emigration, which is exactly what happened. Jewish emigration never reached the level of 40,000 again until the Soviet Union collapsed. The conversation between Nixon and me must be seen in the context of that dispute and of our distinction between a foreign policy and a humanitarian approach."

Henry Kissinger

In fact, the historical consensus is that while it was true that what became known as the Jackson-Vanik Amendment – named for Jackson and Rep. Charlie Vanik (D-Ohio) – at first inhibited emigration, it formed the basis for the late-20th century politics of making human rights a sine qua non of statecraft. That resulted not only in the mass emigration of Soviet Jews 15 years later, but also in contemporary efforts to end internal massacres in countries such as Sudan.

Kissinger, however, was dedicated to realpolitik – the art of securing the grand deal, even at the expense of the moral and ethical considerations of the moment – and his disdain for human rights activists knew few bounds.

Gal Beckerman, a historian of the Soviet Jewry movement, told Tablet last week that this even led Kissinger to suppress a letter that might have helped salvage a deal with the Soviets to release Jews under the Jackson-Vanik stipulations.

Similar considerations led Kissinger to press Nixon during the 1973 Yom Kippur War to delay delivering arms to Israel by a few weeks. Their conversations at the time show Kissinger arguing that Anwar Sadat, Egypt's president, needed an unadulterated victory to make peace concessions. Nixon argued – correctly, as it turned out – that Sadat was already able to claim a victory, and that it was more important to stanch an ally's casualties in a war that would claim 3,000 Israeli lives.

In a 2009 review of the period in the Jewish Press, top Nixon aides Alexander Haig, the chief of staff; Leonard Garment, the White House counsel; and Vernon Walters, the deputy CIA chief, all recall the same dynamic: the time for hanging Israel out to dry had ended.

"Both Kissinger and Nixon wanted to do [the airlift]," the Press quoted Walters as saying. "But Nixon gave it the greater sense of urgency. He said, 'You get the stuff to Israel. Now. Now.'"

Abraham Foxman, the national director of the Anti-Defamation League, issued a statement saying that Kissinger's comments show a "disturbing and even callous insensitivity toward the fate of Soviet Jews" and are a reminder that "even great individuals are flawed." But, it noted, "Dr. Kissinger's contributions to the safety and security of the U.S. and Israel have solidly established his legacy as a champion of democracy and as a committed advocate for preserving the well-being of the Jewish state of Israel."

Foxman elaborated in an interview with JTA.

"He worked in an atmosphere that was intimidatingly antisemitic toward Jews," the ADL leader said of Kissinger. "We need to understand the intimidation under which it occurred."

Kissinger, Beckerman wrote in the Forward in 2007, "was guided by the sense that the world needs a strong America – led by versatile statesmen – that will stand as a bulwark against the disorder and disequilibrium that he experienced as a child."

How did Kissinger's Jewish identity play out in the White House? It was a complex matter and not always consistent.

In September 1972, when Kissinger was still the national security adviser, he and his arch-rival, secretary of state William Rogers, had a bitter exchange at a cabinet meeting over whether the government should lower flags to half mast for the 11 Israeli athletes murdered at the Munich Olympics. Nixon took Kissinger's advice and lowered the flags.

FDR had his own Kissinger

By RAFAEL MEDOFF
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

Henry Kissinger wasn't the first Jewish adviser to an American president who urged his boss to refrain from rescuing Jews.

Two prominent Jews gave then-president Franklin D. Roosevelt similar advice when Soviet Jews were being shipped off to gas chambers during the Holocaust.

More than 1.5 million Jews living in German-occupied portions of the Soviet Union, such as Ukraine, Lithuania and Latvia, were murdered by the Nazis. Many of them were lined up in front of huge pits and shot. Many others were shipped to German death camps in Poland.

But when Jewish organizations urged president Roosevelt to rescue Jews from the Nazis, Roosevelt's Jewish advisers gave him Kissinger-style advice.

One of Roosevelt's top advisers and speechwriters was Samuel Rosenman, a leading member of the American Jewish Committee. Rosenman, a deeply assimilated Jew, was uncomfortable calling attention to Jewish concerns.

After the 1938 Kristallnacht pogroms, he warned Roosevelt that admitting German Jewish refugees to America would "create a Jewish problem in the U.S." In 1943, when 400 rabbis marched to the White House to plead for a rescue effort, Rosenman counselled Roosevelt to snub "the medieval horde." Rosenman also tried to undermine the 1943 campaign by rescue advocates and Treasury Department officials for creation of a government agency to save Jewish refugees. The agency, called the War Refugee Board, was eventually established despite his opposition.

In 1944, the leaders of the board asked Roosevelt to issue a statement threatening to prosecute anyone involved in persecuting Jews and pledging to provide havens for Jewish refugees. Rosenman watered down the declaration for fear that giving the Jews attention "would intensify antisemitism in the United States." He deleted three of the six references to Jews, removed the offer to shelter refugees in America, and added three opening paragraphs about the Nazis' mistreatment of "Poles, Czechs, Norwegians, Dutch, Danes, French, Greeks, Russians, Chinese, Filipinos – and many others."

Another prominent Jewish defender of Roosevelt's policy toward European Jewry was congressman Sol Bloom, a Democrat and chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. The Roosevelt administration chose him as a U.S. delegate to its sham refugee conference in Evian, France, in 1938, and to its equally farcical refugee conference in Bermuda five years later. Afterward, Bloom declared, "I as a Jew am perfectly satisfied with the results" – prompting one Jewish periodical to charge that Bloom had been "used as a stooge to impede Jewish protests against the nothing-doers of the Bermuda conference."

Bloom worked closely with the administration to block congressional resolutions supporting rescue and Jewish statehood. He even backed the State Department's proposal to ban all public discussion of the Palestine issue for the duration of World War II.

Jewish leaders were furious over Bloom's actions. A document I recently discovered in the Central Zionist Archives in Jerusalem quotes Synagogue Council of America president Israel Goldstein as saying that "no Jew should ever occupy the position of chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee."

The problem was not that a Jew who reached such a position of power might turn against his people. The problem was that in those years, and even in more recent times, the only kind of Jew who could rise to such a powerful post in the first place was one who was willing to cast aside Jewish concerns.

The only kind of Jew whom Roosevelt – or Nixon – would take into his inner circle was one who would tell him what he wanted to hear when it came to Jewish issues. Indeed, one State Department official privately referred to Sol Bloom as "easy to handle" – a way of saying he could be trusted never to make trouble on Jewish matters.

A few years ago, my Wyman Institute colleagues interviewed former senator and presidential nominee George McGovern about his experiences as a pilot who flew over Auschwitz in 1944 to bomb German oil plants nearby. McGovern said that if his commanders had told the pilots about the death camp and offered them the option of undertaking a bombing raid strictly for humanitarian (rather than military) purposes, "whole crews would have volunteered." They understood, he said, that the war against the Nazis was not just a military struggle, but also a fight for principles and values such as basic human decency and concern for the persecuted.

Likewise in Kissinger's time, there was strong public support for U.S. intervention on behalf of Soviet Jewry. The truth is that the American public has often been much more humanitarian-minded than some of its presidents – and their nervous Jewish advisers – ever recognized.

Rafael Medoff is director of the David S. Wyman Institute for Holocaust Studies, in Washington, D.C.

Saying goodbye is hard

An old, politically incorrect joke asks, "What's the difference between a Jew and a WASP?". The answer is: "WASPs leave and never say goodbye. Jews say goodbye and never leave." This joke is true to life. When people get up from the table and announce that they're leaving a wedding, you can usually catch them in the hallway half an hour later chatting on their way out. Jews find it difficult to let go of something we cherish. To paraphrase the midrash, we find it "too difficult to say goodbye."

Rabbi Chaim Steinmetz in Montreal

Our difficulty with departing has helped the Jews survive. Because we can't say goodbye, we've held on to our traditions through generations of persecution. Because we never let go, we continued to dream of a return to Zion, even in the depths of exile. And when someone dear to us passes away, we insist on praying for them and preserving their memory. Love means never saying goodbye.

But there are times when we know we won't see each other for a while. In Hebrew, we say farewell with the word l'hitraot – "hope to see you soon," because we never say goodbye for good.

But when we must take leave, we make sure that the l'hitraot is meaningful and memorable. The Talmud tells us to say farewell with words of Torah, to ensure that the friendship is remembered not just for its laughs but also for its legacy. Jacob and Moses say farewell with a blessing, because a blessing is a way of saying I love you even when I can't be with you.

A proper l'hitraot continues the relationship despite the departure, and reminds both parties of the profound connection they will always share. Indeed, it's a Jewish custom to write ethical wills, in which a parent leaves behind their wisdom and blessings, and in doing so, leaves behind a piece of their soul. Jews simply can't say goodbye!

For the last 10 years, it's been my honor to share my thoughts with you on a regular basis. I have greatly appreciated your feedback (especially the disagreements). It has been a privilege to communicate with people I might not have otherwise been able to meet outside of this newspaper column.

Sadly, this is the last time I'll be writing this column in The Canadian Jewish News. It's now my turn to say l'hitraot. I hope you will continue to say hello by reading my blog or writing an e-mail, and I do hope you remember the words of Torah we shared.

God bless you, and l'hitraot!

How did it get to that point?

Once again, as I watch a Canadian campus get roiled – and a university shoot itself in the proverbial foot – I ask, "Where are the grown-ups?"

The British agitator George Galloway spoke at York University in mid-November. Rabbi Ahron Hoch circulated an e-mail urging community members to protest. In it, Rabbi Hoch characterized York's president, Mamdouh Shoukri, in ways I never would, saying "Mr. Shoukri has again showed his amazing tolerance for antisemitism and lack of vigilance regarding the feeling of safety for Jewish students on campus." A lawyer for York responded with a letter that I would never write, calling Rabbi Hoch's words "actionable" while warning Rabbi Hoch and his supporters to stay off campus because the university is "private property."

Gil Troy in Montreal

Predictably, the clash intensified. Rabbi Hoch circulated the exchange on the Internet, asking why York grants free speech to anti-Israel agitators such as Galloway (who also has said insensitive things about Darfur) but not to pro-Israel Jews. Meanwhile, the university felt harassed, not realizing how much the lawyer's letter exacerbated the latest mess.

As an outsider, I'm shocked that no one in the York community with ties to the rabbi and the president could talk both sides down, protecting the principle of civil free speech for all and the university's reputation. I urge York's president and his counsel to consult with key faculty insiders before pouring oil on future fires.

I understand the university counsel's first instinct to defend Shoukri against even the hint of an accusation that he's antisemitic or tolerates antisemitism. It is an ugly charge against a decent man with a tough job. The charge of "lack of vigilance" regarding the safety of Jewish students or any students is devastating enough. The antisemitism jab was inaccurate, even incendiary.

But the prospect of a university suing a rabbi – which is what actionable means – is a lose-lose. A clever lawyer could tar the university's reputation and cost York big bucks fighting it out regarding what constitutes "tolerance" for antisemitism. More importantly, universities should be bastions of free civil speech. Our recipe for bad speech should be more speech. Few academics can afford to defend themselves against libel suits. A university should never encourage resorting to courts of law rather than courts of public opinion, the sheer beauty of an effective rebuttal or truth itself.

The second half of the counsel's letter, which most people overlooked, was equally disturbing. The letter unfairly accused Rabbi Hoch of trying to disrupt with more radical action when he merely invited community members to a rally. Yes, the lawyer is correct, technically. Universities are private property. But universities want members of the public to spend money to hear speakers, attend plays and watch films on campus. They celebrate when tourists, potential students, and, of course, most important, potential donors, visit. No one wants universities to be bunkers with "Keep Out" signs.

A lawyer's job is to make sure a client remains true to core ideals and to talk the client out of foolish, emotional overreactions. Judging by this letter, it's a shame no one served that function for the university's lawyers this time.

Meanwhile, as leading Jews squabble with York's leaders and the university's core values get trampled in the crossfire, the true enemies of civility and scholarship flourish.

Let's face it. York has become a flashpoint. I hear about students who have second thoughts about enrolling and about employers who first ask job applicants what's happening on campus rather than what they're learning in class. I also hear of a thriving Jewish and intellectual life on campus nevertheless.

This incident was predictable and avoidable. People of stature committed to university values should learn from this experience: those values include students feeling safe, even if they're Jewish and pro-Israel; encouraging civility and mutual respect, not just for students but for university presidents, and keeping universities as open, welcoming spaces for the public.

There will be other incidents. Will there be grown-ups ready next time to stand up, mediate and avoid another PR disaster for York and the university community?

Spreading half the kingdom around

In 1983, newly arrived in Canada to serve as assistant rabbi at Toronto's Holy Blossom Temple, I was invited by a young film producer named Francine Zuckerman to the JCC in Ottawa. She was organizing a "controversial" event on the "controversial" topic of women and Judaism, at which Norma Joseph and I would speak. That event turned into a National Film Board film called Half The Kingdom, which has been shown widely on college campuses, as well as to countless organizations, conferences and study groups. Last month, we celebrated its 20th anniversary, and nearly 400 people gathered in Toronto to ask, "So, what's next for Jewish women?"

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein in Toronto

But first we need to look backward. In 1983, I was the only female rabbi in Canada. It was exhilarating and lonely those first few years. I was an exotic specimen and people would come to "see the lady rabbi." Not to study with me, or hear me, or learn with me, but just to see me. And don't ask about all the horrible dates I went on with guys who wanted to "date" the lady rabbi!

So much has changed in Toronto since then. I was elected the first woman president of the Toronto Board of Rabbis (TBR), something I thought I'd never see. We staged an all-female cantors concert, something I thought I'd never see. Two female Conservative Rabbis have joined us in Toronto, something I thought I'd never see.

Some of my female colleagues are now senior rabbis at major congregations, as well as an executive director of the TBR, a rabbinics teacher at the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto, all things I thought I'd never see. Many, if not the majority, of Conservative synagogues and even one Orthodox "partnership minyan" now have women coming up to the bimah and having aliyot, something I thought I'd never see.

My male colleagues don't talk anymore about the "rabbis and their wives" (well at least some of them don't), and neither a rabbi's gender nor her sexual orientation excludes her from a rabbinic position anymore. And, most importantly, I think, people don't say, "Gee, I never met a woman rabbi" that much anymore, unless they really have shut themselves up in a ghetto somewhere in a corner of Toronto where The CJN never reaches.

Today, we talk about wife and child abuse in the larger Jewish community. There's been a proliferation of Jewish women's study groups, women's yeshivas, women's writing and women's music. Baby namings, like the one I did in the film, are now normative. There's hardly a Jewish community of any denomination anywhere that doesn't mark in some public way both the birth and also the coming-of-age or bat mitzvah of girls.

So I honestly feel much more optimistic than I did 20 years ago. I feel personally less marginalized, less strange and less isolated for sure.

So what's next? It's time to globalize the cause. Outside our privileged corner of the West, there are so many places where women still don't have reproductive rights; can't find clean water; aren't getting educated, are being raped as war booty; are seen as sexual predators if they don't cover themselves from head to toe; are overworked and underpaid; are traded as commodity sex slaves; are locked in prisons or threatened with stoning for blasphemy and adultery; are prodded, encouraged and even expected to have more babies, whether they want to or can afford to; are being murdered by jealous husbands and lovers, and are still being taught that they're less than men in the sight of God and their fellow human beings.

If there was one thing I could pray for in the next 10 years, it would be that we western Jewish women – who, I believe, have gotten close to at least half the kingdom – make it our priority to accept no less anywhere else in the world for any of our sisters.

The Kirshner File

The passing parade ....

They died recently, leaving footprints in time...

Arthur Penn, 88 directed the iconic film, Bonnie and Clyde, as well as The Miracle Worker and Little Big Man. Isadore (Irvin) Kershner, 87, was the director of the second Star Wars movie, The Empire Strikes Back, a James Bond picture, Never Say Never, RoboCop 2, A Fine Madness and Raid on Entebbe. Elliott Kastner, 80, produced the films The Long Goodbye, Harper, Where Eagles Dare and The Missouri Breaks. David Wolper, 82, produced the TV series Roots and such documentaries as The Hellstrom Chronicles and The Making of the President 1960. Marshall Flaum, 85, was the producer of Let My People Go: The Story of Israel.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Joseph Stein, 98, a Broadway book writer, wrote the play Fiddler on the Roof and co-wrote Ah, Wilderness! Jerry Bock, 81, composed the score for Fiddler on the Roof and She Loves Me. Stanley Landau Colbert, 82, was a film and TV producer – Flipper and Greatest Show on Earth – and he and his wife owned an influential literary agency in Canada. Murray Chercover, 80, was president of Canada's CTV network and a creator of Canada AM.

Arthur Penn

Jill Clayburgh, 66, was a Hollywood and Broadway actress who appeared in An Unmarried Woman, Starting Over, Design for Living and The Rothchilds. Ingrid Pitt, 73, celebrated as the first lady of British horror cinema, starred in The Vampire Lovers, Countess Dracula and The House That Dripped Blood.

Tony Curtis (Bernard Schwartz), 85, appeared in Some Like It Hot, Sweet Smell of Success, The Defiant Ones and Houdini. Tom Bosley, 83, played Howard Cunningham on Happy Days. Harold Gould, 86, a character actor, was on The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Rhoda, The Golden Girls and Perry Mason. Maury Alan Chaykin, 61, acted in films (The Adjuster and My Cousin Vinny) and TV (Less Than Kind and Entourage).

John Stuart Katz, 72, was chair of York University's film department and a programmer for the Toronto Jewish Film Festival and Toronto's international film festival. Irving Ravetch, 89, co-wrote the screenplay for Hud, Norma Rae, The Long Hot Summer and The Sound and the Fury.

Bernie West (Bernard Wessler), 92, a TV scriptwriter, co-wrote Three's Company, All in the Family and The Jeffersons. David Dortort, 93, wrote and produced Bonanza, TV's first full-hour western in colour. Gerald Lesser, 84, a psychologist, played a key role in shaping the children's TV show, Sesame Street. Coleman Jacoby, 95, wrote jokes for Bob Hope and patter for The Gary Moore Show; Jackie Gleason and Your Show of Shows. George David Weiss, 89, wrote songs like Can't Help Falling in Love, The Lion Sleeps Tonight and What a Wonderful World.

Belva Plain, 95, wrote bestsellers – Evergreen, Crescent City, Promises and Blessings. Harry Mulisch, 83, wrote novels in Dutch ranging from The Assault to The Discovery of Heaven. Eva Ibbotson (Eva Wiesner), 85, wrote children's books (The Great Ghost Rescue and Journey to the River Sea). Edwin Newman, 91, was a TV broadcaster who anchored the Today show, appeared on Meet the Press, moderated two presidential debates and wrote A Civil Tongue and Strictly Speaking: Will America Be The Death of English? Sol Steinmetz, 80, was a lexicographer, editor of the Random House Webster's Dictionary and author of Semantic Antics: How and Why Words Change Meaning. Daniel Schorr, 93, a broadcast and print journalist, was CNN's first employee. Thomas Guinzburg, 84, was the first managing editor of The Paris Review and president of Viking Press. Harvey Pekar, 70, was the author of the autobiographical comic book American Splendor. Robert Katz, 77, wrote books on the Holocaust and World War II, including Black Sabbath and Death in Rome.

Theodore Chaikin Sorensen, 82, was John F. Kennedy's ghostwriter (Profiles in Courage) and presidential speechwriter ("Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country.")

Eddie Fisher, 82, recorded 32 hit songs, from Thinking of You and Oh, My Pa-pa to Lady of Spain and Count Your Blessings. Mitch Miller, 99, was the conductor on the TV show Sing Along With Mitch and a Columbia Records executive who worked with Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett and Bob Dylan. Rudolf Barshai, 86, was the conductor of the Moscow Chamber Orchestra, the Israel Chamber Orchestra and the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra.

Buddy Morrow (Muni Zudekoff), 91, a trombonist and bandleader, played with Harry James, Buddy Rich and Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey. Nat Raider, 80, was Montreal's pre-eminent society bandleader and musical director of the Montreal Forum. Otto Joachim, 99, principal viola player in the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, was a founder of the Montreal String Quartet.

Tony Judt, 62, wrote on European history (Postwar and A Study on the Origins of the Modern French Left, 1871-1914) and penned polemical essays on U.S. foreign policy and Israel. Moshe Lewin, 88, a historian, wrote Russian Peasants and Soviet Power and The Making of the Soviet System.

Georges Charpak, 86, born in Poland and based in Paris, won the Nobel Prize in physics in 1992. Jacob Bigeleisen, 91, worked on the development of the atomic bomb in the wartime Manhattan Project. Frederick Jelinek, 77, helped make it possible for computers to decipher and translate human speech.

Belva Plain

Richard Bing, 101, was a cardiologist whose research gave medical science a better understanding of heart disease and blood flow.

Louis Henkin, 92, a Columbia University legal scholar, established the field of human rights law and wrote The Rights of Man Today and How Nations Behave. Daniel Soberman, 80, was a founder of Queen's University law school and co-author of a standard textbook, The Law and Business Administration in Canada. Walter Isard, 91, an economist, founded the field of regional science. Eli Comay, 90, an urban planner, headed the Metro Toronto Planning Board from 1962 to 1966.

Larry Evans, 78, was five-time United States chess champion and author of, among other works, The 10 Most Common Chess Mistakes. Bruce Cohen, 65, an ordained rabbi, founded Interns for Peace, which brings together Israeli Jews and Arabs. Dorothy Stowe (Rabinowitz), 89, a social worker, was a founder of the non-governmental environmental group, Greenpeace. Philip Hoffman, 80, was a pioneer in Hawaii's 1950s surfing boom. Wilfred Posluns, 78, established the Dylex fashion empire in Canada.

Benjamin Kaplan, 99, a U.S. army officer in World War II, helped craft the case against Nazi war criminals at the Nuremberg trials. Martin Dannenberg, 94, an American intelligence officer, unearthed the original documents of the 1936 Nuremberg Laws, which stripped German Jews of their citizenship.

Richard Holbrooke, 69, was U.S. President Barack Obama's special envoy to Afghanistan and Pakistan, the architect of the Dayton accords that ended the war in Bosnia and the former American ambassador to the United Nations and Germany. Robert Lipshutz, 88, was White House adviser to U.S. president Jimmy Carter and a founder of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. Abraham Lincoln Gordon, 96, was U.S. ambassador to Brazil and president of Johns Hopkins University. William Taylor, 78, a lawyer and lobbyist, was instrumental in the passage of the Civil Rights Act, the Voting Rights Act and the Fair Housing Act in the United States. Georgi Arbatov, 87, founded and directed the Institute for U.S.A. and Canada Studies in Moscow during the Soviet Communist era.

Israel Dostrovsky, 92, was the first general manager of the Israel Atomic Energy Commission. Israel Tal, 86, an Israeli general, was the father of the Merkava, Israel's main battle tank.

In Romspen We Trust

As Trustees of a religious organization it is our responsibility to balance our budget, and in particular to invest our funds wisely. After a long history of personal experience by one of our Trustees, Gloria Sullivan, we followed her recommendation and chose to invest with Romspen. It has proven to be a wise choice. Interest from the fund, consistently paid on the 15th of each month, has made a significant difference in keeping our congregation secure and buoyant. We have trusted in Romspen's management team for 10 years and continue to have complete faith in them.

From left to right: Bill Myhill, Gloria Sullivan, Betty Krunys, John Blewett, Trustees of Willowdale United Church

Introductory Seminar Wednesday, January 12 at 6:00 p.m.
Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres at 5:30 RSVP as seating is limited.

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Na'amat director retires at age 82

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Lorraine Levine

Lorraine Levene, 82, may have retired as executive director of Na'amat Canada, Toronto, in October, but she doesn't feel like she ever "worked" there.

The wife, mother of four, grandmother of five and great-grandmother of three, said that throughout the 33 years she spent at Na'amat, she felt as if it was her family and the cause was near to her heart.

Levene, whose mother lived until 103 and her father until 96, said that growing up, "my parents, who were Labour Zionists, taught me to feed others before feeding myself, so coming to Na'amat was a natural fit. I was managing a store when I was recommended to be executive director, and it was just like coming home. [The organization embodies] everything I ever believed in."

Her proudest accomplishment, she said, is Na'amat Canada Toronto's technological high school in Hadera, Israel, completed in 1989, whose purpose is to give troubled teens a second chance at acquiring an education.

In 1980, she said, she was on a mission to Israel, and stopped in at the high school. "Then, there were only portables, and there were few bathrooms and little heat. I told them I would do my best to raise money and build a proper school."

It took almost 10 years, she said, but she helped raise more than $1-1/2 million. "At the dedication in the early '90s, they honoured me by giving the amphitheatre my name. It was a total surprise. I can't tell you what it meant to me. It is still my pet project."

Instead of a retirement dinner, she said, Na'amat is "surprising" her with a tribute book in her honour, and all funds raised will go to the school.

She was moved, she said, when Camp Gesher, part of Habonim Dror – the youth branch of Na'amat Canada – named the recreation hall after her. "What made me especially proud, was that the kids wanted to do it."

Also important to her, she said, was "bringing Israel to the Toronto community."

The organization now runs the annual Israel Day Festival at Mel Lastman Square, along with the Canadian Zionist Federation. "It is amazing how many non-Jews attended the festival, who knew nothing about Israel except what they read in the paper. They didn't know the positive side."

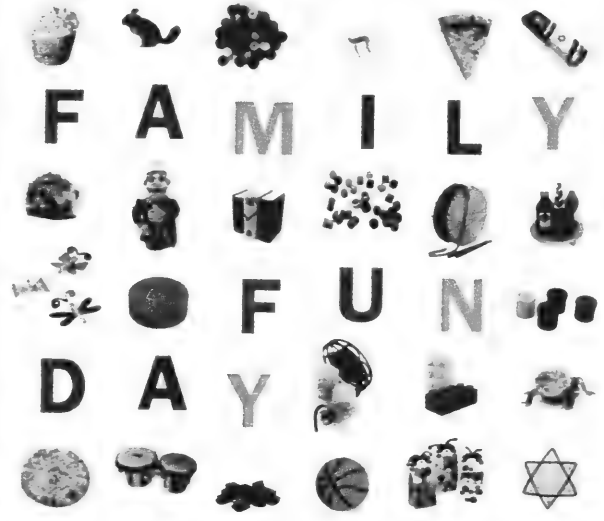
It is all these things combined, she said, that made her job special. "Most of all, it was the people. Not just the members, but the donors, whether they gave a lot of money or a small amount.

"I always made sure to add a personal note to every receipt. I wanted them to know they were appreciated."

She said that several years ago, a non-Jewish Ethiopian man saw an article in his local Ontario newspaper that Na'amat was helping Ethiopian Jews in Israel. "He began sending us annual donations, and every year I called him to thank him. This year he told me he had retired and couldn't send as much as before."

She misses the challenges of her job, she said, but she has completely stepped back "because I don't want to hold back the organization. I want them to find their way without me."

BETH TZEDEC CONGREGATION
presents



Back by popular demand! Saturday, December 25 from 4 to 8 PM

Family Fun Day!

Looking for something to do? Join us at Beth Tzedec for loads of family fun!

Shabbat Crafts • Havdalah Drum Circle • Lego Building • Sportball • Cookie Decorating • Critter World Animal Show • Beading • Puppet Show • Movies • Ceramics • And more!

Admission: $10 per person. Following Havdalah, dinner will be available for purchase: $5 per person. Must pre-register by December 20 or pay at the door after Shabbat (from 5:45PM). To pre-register call 416 781-3511 or email jturecki@beth-tzedec.org.

BETH TZEDEC CONGREGATION
1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario 416.781.3511 info@beth-tzedec.org

FIGHTING FIRE: Grade 8 students at Leo Baeck Day School's Thornhill campus have been selling bottles of water to raise funds to help Israel rebuild after the recent fire in Carmel. So far, they've raised more than $500 to be donated to the Jewish National Fund. Pictured, from left, are Sarah Wise, Sierra Goldfinger and Amanda Atkin. At the same time, students at Leo Baeck's south campus raised $1,400 for the Jewish National Fund to help Israel rebuild.

A "BORN-AGAIN" CHRISTIAN BORN AGAIN AS A JEW!

WHY A MINISTER CHOSE JUDAISM

A lecture with YEHUDAH TEBBITT

Ten years ago, Yehudah Tebbitt was an Evangelical Christian minister. He began seeking the original roots of his faith and soon was questioning many key doctrines of Christianity. This led him to a deep involvement in the "Messianic Jewish" movement. His search ultimately led him all the way back to the Jewish faith!

Sun., Dec. 26, 8 PM
SHAAREI TEFILLAH
3600 Bathurst St.
Admission: FREE
Donations Welcome
For information:
416-789-0020
www.jewsforjudaism.org

Longtime educator 'gives back' by teaching adults

Eighteen years after retiring as director of education for United Synagogue Day School (USDS), Aaron Nussbaum is marking his "chai" year teaching adults on a volunteer basis at two Toronto synagogues.

A native of Antwerp, Belgium, Nussbaum will celebrate his 80th birthday next month. He and his family spent the war years in unoccupied southern France, immigrating to New York just before his 13th birthday.

By Frances Kraft

A Wednesday morning Talmud class that he teaches at Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue arose out of a conversation with the late Rabbi Joseph Kelman, then spiritual leader of the congregation, when the two men saw each other at a wedding. Nussbaum also teaches a Thursday morning Bible class at Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue.

"It's a way of giving back to the community," he said.

Nussbaum has called Toronto home for the past 49 years, ever since he was hired as founding principal of USDS, now known as Robbins Hebrew Academy. Prior to that, he taught and was a principal in Jewish schools for 10 years.

An alumnus of the Conservative movement's Jewish Theological Seminary (JTS), he completed two masters' degrees before earning a doctorate in Hebrew literature in 1973. JTS awarded him an honorary doctorate in pedagogy in 1987.

As a student, Nussbaum, who was raised in an Orthodox home, was a member of Bnei Akiva (then called Hashomer Hadati), an Orthodox youth movement. As a teenager in New York, he attended Yeshiva University High School.

Currently a member of three Orthodox synagogues, Nussbaum likes to call himself a "traditional" Jew. He clarifies, demonstrating precision and a low-key manner that are familiar to his long-term students. "The term 'orthodoxy' means 'correct thinking,' he said. "I would put emphasis on 'correct doing.'"

He said that JTS appealed to him for its "open and critical approach to Jewish text... and yet the seminary was a place of Jewish observance."

At first, it seemed he was headed in a different direction, studying structural technology for two years at a community college in New York. He said he "fell into" education when he was teaching students in Hashomer Hadati.

Although Nussbaum spent most of his educational career as an administrator, over the years he has taught various aspects of Jewish studies at Toronto's Midrasha L'Morim, York University and the University of Toronto.

"Teaching adults is great," he said. "You allow yourself a lot of leeway to say things you wouldn't say to kids."

Some of the subject matter he addresses in his current classes may not be appropriate for children, but Nussbaum – a father of three, grandfather of eight and great-grandfather of two, who has been married 59 years – believes in being "as honest as possible with kids, always."

Jewish education has improved over the years, he said, citing the increased use of modern pedagogic methods and better professional training.

"I just met two Jewish kids, and they like [their Jewish day] school, and that's great," he said.

Nussbaum enjoys the classes he teaches, too. "It's really exciting, and it makes me go back to the sources."

A LESSON FROM THE TEACHER

"We use our intellectual powers to investigate the Torah in all aspects (Torat Emet), and simultaneously the ultimate facet of Torah is Torat Chayim, which means you follow the laws and customs as they should be followed. It unifies us, it's pleasant and it has social value."

Aaron Nussbaum at a recent class
[Frances Kraft photo]

deblins linens
The Linen Superstore
CLOSED BOXING DAY
MON DEC 27 – FRI DEC 31
TAKE AN ADDITIONAL
20% off
THE LOWEST PRICE – EVEN CLEARANCE!
REAL SAVINGS vs "UP TO"
Many boxing week sales will promise you dramatic savings of "UP TO" 75% off or more, but that rarely translates into significant savings on their full range of stock. At Deblins, for these five days, we'll give you an ADDITIONAL twenty percent off the lowest price on ALL our famous name-brand quality merchandise – while it lasts.
39 Orfus Road off Dufferin, S. of Yorkdale
7979 Weston Road Just N. of Highway 7
Mississauga Home & Design Centre 2575 Dundas West
No exchanges or refunds during the sale

Toronto ER doctor volunteers in Haiti

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Karen Held's journey to Haiti began at a UJA meeting in Toronto.

Held is an emergency room physician at Markham Stouffville Hospital and a member of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's group for young health-care professionals.

In the spring of 2009, the founder of the Israel Forum for International Humanitarian Aid (IsraAID), Shachar Zahavi, gave a presentation to the group on the organization's disaster relief efforts in Haiti. IsraAID is an umbrella organization made up of Jewish and Israeli search and rescue, medical and relief groups that provide aid worldwide to people in need.

Dr. Karen Held works at IsraAID's primary health care clinic in Léogâne, Haiti.

Held was immediately interested and a few months later added her name to a list of doctors who wanted to work on the Haiti project. From Nov. 18 to Dec. 2, she worked at IsraAID's primary care clinic in the town of Léogâne, which was the epicentre of the January 2010 earthquake.

The primary health-care clinic is operated by the Israeli NGO Tevel b'Tzedek, one of many organizations under the IsraAID umbrella. It has been running for just a few months.

"[The clinic is] staffed by Israeli [and] Canadian physicians, as well as a local physician and a local pharmacist," Held said. "The idea is to have the foreign doctors... train the local staff so they can eventually take over when IsraAID pulls out."

As part of the Haiti project, Held added, IsraAID runs a mobile clinic once a week in a village in the mountains and teaches public health education.

"We would go to churches and community centres and talk about cholera prevention and cholera treatment and explain to the public what cholera's all about," she said.

"We were doing teaching sessions [for the local staff] on various medical topics. Because of the whole cholera issue, we were involved in local logistics planning with the WHO [World Health Organization] and the UN, and what role different NGOs should play if cholera gets bad in Léogâne. Because right now it's not, and it wasn't when I was there.

"At least when I was there, they were seeing 30 new cases a day, which for Haiti was not a lot. The majority of the cholera is up north."

Held said she would like to go back to Haiti, but hasn't made any plans yet.

"It was a really interesting experience. It gave me a lot to think about. I think there's some things that are really productive and useful... but there's a lot of things about Third World medicine and medicine in a place with a lack of resources that are frustrating. You can't necessarily always provide the care you think you should provide or you want to provide. That limitation... is challenging.

"It's a really devastating place. There's still tons of people living in tents and displaced... I don't think there was any running water in the town I was in, which is a pretty big town. Nobody had electricity unless they had generators. From a health perspective, those things are really important – particularly access to fresh water.

"I don't think [Haiti's] been able to [get a break] for a couple hundred years," Held added. "It's just total disaster."

The primary health-care clinic is fully funded by the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, which is also the largest single funder of IsraAID's humanitarian missions in the world. For more information on IsraAID, visit www.israaid.org.il.

on cjnews.com

The CJN's French-language reporter in Montreal, Elias Levy, writes about:

• In an interview from Paris, Franco-Israeli novelist Chochana Boukhobza talks about her latest novel, Le Troisième Jour, and the role played by Jerusalem where the story takes place.

• In an interview when she was here for the 2010 Conference on Combating Antisemitism in Ottawa, Aviva Raz Shechter, head of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs department on combating antisemitism, talks about the need to also fight anti-Israel activity.

Also on the web:

• Federal government's anti-smuggling bill a "PR initiative," Liberal MP Irwin Cotler says.

From left are Westmount Collegiate Institute teacher Neil Orlowsky and students Brandon Schwartz, Ashley Cooper, Alyssa Ross, Adam Desai, Jake Newton, Harley Kizner and Corey Tuschak with supplies from dental kits that they sent to Haiti.

Students send dental kits to Haitian orphanage

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

When a Grade 12 world issues class was told to "make a difference in the world," one group of students decided to send aid to an orphanage in Haiti.

Alyssa Ross, Ashley Cooper, Brandon Schwartz, Corey Tuschak, Harley Kizner, Jake Newton, Adam Desai and April Mandaliti, all students at Westmount Collegiate Institute in Thornhill, Ont., recently sent 187 dental kits to Haiti's HIS Home for Children.

"As a group we decided that we wanted to help an orphanage in Haiti, as they have been through a lot," Ross said. "We knew that Port-Au-Prince has been greatly affected so we wanted to find an orphanage in that area. We started looking online to find different orphanages and [HIS Home] stood out. We felt that these young children could really use our help."

The students raised money by holding a bake sale at their school, with cupcakes donated by The Cupcake Shoppe.

"We raised $228, which was way more than we expected to raise," Ross said. "We only needed $110 to send the kits to Haiti, so we decided to give the rest of the money to the Daily Bread Food Bank."

Each dental kit contains two tubes of toothpaste, a toothbrush and a case of dental floss, donated by Colgate and Crest. Each kit also has a Canadian flag and sticker, donated by Thornhill MP Peter Kent.

The HIS Home currently houses 125 orphans, but Ross and her group sent 187 kits because "we felt that we should give some extras," Ross said.

UPS Canada sent the kits from Toronto to Florida free of charge, and the group used money raised from their bake sale to forward them on to Haiti.

The group chose to do something for Haiti to keep attention on the plight of the people there, Ross said.

"We felt that once the media stopped educating the community about what is going on in Haiti, people stopped caring [as much]."

For more information on the HIS Home for Children, visit www.hishomeforchildren.com.

Martin Prosserman presented with prestigious leadership award

JCCA honours philanthropist for landmark naming of Prosserman JCC

By Barbra Green

As the holiday of Chanukah came to a close, the family and friends of one of Jewish Toronto's preeminent philanthropists gathered to celebrate a different kind of miracle.

At an intimate dinner reception on December 9th, Martin Prosserman, the lead donor of the Prosserman JCC, was honoured by the Jewish Community Centre Association (JCCA) with the first-ever Keter Torah Award – The Crown of a Good Name.

"Marty Prosserman represents a miracle to the Jews of Toronto, to the Jews of Canada, to the Jews of North America and to Jews around the world," said Gary Lipman, the executive vice president and COO of the JCCA. "From a simple nickel bar of soap…he has brought forth light through his generous gift to build the Prosserman JCC."

Lipman, who travelled from New York to present the award, referenced Prosserman's five-cent inspiration for the $12 million JCC gift. Growing up poor in Montreal, Prosserman would frequent the Young Men's Hebrew Association (YMHA), where for a nickel, he could get a bar of soap, a clean towel and a hot shower. He realized, even then, that this was made possible thanks to the generosity of those who built and subsidized the facility.

Gary Lipman, executive vice president and COO of the JCCA (right) presents the Keter Torah Award to Martin Prosserman.

"We would not be sitting here tonight if it wasn't for the Y," said Prosserman, who learned how to swim, dance and even box at the YMHA. It is also where, at the age of 15, he met his late wife, Ellen.

The Keter Torah Award was created in order to recognize individuals like Prosserman who, through major gifts, have had JCC's named after them.

"You join a very distinct and special group of JCC philanthropists," said Lipman, whose organization represents over 2 million people and 275 JCCs and YMHAs across North America.

Prosserman's gift, the largest ever given to a JCC in Canada, was, and remains, an integral contribution to UJA Federation's $400 million Tomorrow Capital Campaign. The bold and unprecedented endeavour is re-envisioning and building three centres of Jewish life across the Greater Toronto Area: the Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Jewish Community Campus in Vaughan, Sherman Campus in midtown Toronto, and the Miles Nadal JCC and Wolfond Centre for Jewish Campus Life downtown.

"We are in the midst of a tremendous rebirth and revitalization," said Ted Sokolsky, President and CEO, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto. "The Prosserman JCC will be the centre, the anchor of it all. Marty and your family, you shared a dream we all had. Thank you for your faith. Thank you for your belief."

In addition to his own heartfelt remarks, Sokolsky had the privilege of presenting Prosserman with a congratulatory letter from the Rt. Hon. Stephen Harper, the Prime Minister of Canada.

"The Prosserman JCC at Sherman Campus will stand as an enduring legacy and will help young Jewish Canadians realize their full potential for generations to come," wrote Harper. "On behalf of the Government of Canada, I commend you for your generosity and great sense of community."

While grateful for the accolades, Prosserman, true to form, reminded those present that the words of praise were unnecessary.

"I know what I did. I don't need anyone to pat me on the back," he said. "It's for them [my family] to follow through. I want my sons, my grandchildren, to realize and carry forward about giving."

It appears that wish is already coming to fruition.

His son Ron sits on the board of the Prosserman JCC and has been actively involved in various charitable organizations including the Mount Sinai Hospital Foundation, the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation and Jewish Family and Child. Another son, Brian, gives of his time, teaching computers to seniors at the JCC that bears the family name. And grandson Michael is the founder and executive director of Urban Non-Violent Initiatives Through Youth (UNITY), a not-for-profit showing young people how positive forms of artistic self-expression can lead to better life choices.

"I feel fortunate that we're in the position that we can give back, whether it be money, time…any type of giving is good giving, and this is a wonderful gift that carries Bubby Ellen's legacy," said Ron in one of the evening's many emotional moments.

And with each child and grandchild who spoke, the picture of a man who values tzedakah, community, family and leadership came more clearly into focus. The man who founded Moore's The Suit People has raised a family committed to "carrying it forward," and is building a JCC that will improve and transform lives, much like Montreal's YMHA did for him so many years before.

דער יידיש ווינקל

דזשערי קעין

וען אַ פּינטעלע יידיש לעבן איז נעוואָרן אָפּגעמעקט פֿון דער קאַנאַדער מאַפּע: די באַראָן הירש קאָלאָניע

(1892-1942)

א פֿראַגמענט פֿון די זכרונות פֿון יצחק בוידראַנער

אכאָל, וען מען האָט אַרײַנגעקוקט אין אַ מאַפּע פֿון דער פֿראָווינץ סאַסקאַטשעוואַן, האָט מען נעקענט נעפֿינען דאָס שטעטעלע הירש. היינט עקסיסטירט עס נישט. הירש איז נעוואָרן אַ יידישע פֿאַרמער קאָלאָניע נעגרינדעט אין 1892 מיט דער הילף פֿון דער יידישער קאָלאָניזאַציע געזעלשאַפֿט אירפֿון נאָמען פֿון באַראָן הירש. ער האָט געגרינדעט די קאָלאָניע כדי צו פֿאַרשיכטערן די לאָגע פֿון יידישע אימיגראַנטן פֿון אירופּע וואָס דענען נעקומען באַזעצן זיך אירפֿון לאַנד אַרום הירש.

די קאָלאָניע האָט באַלד אויפֿגענעטלט אַ ביט־עולם (נאָך אייזדער סאַסקאַטשעוואַן איז אָפֿיציעל נעוואָרן אַ פּראָווינץ אין 1905. אַ ביסל שפּעטער איז אויפֿגעבויט נעוואָרן אַ שיינע שיל אוּן די קאָלאָניע האָט אויסגענאָלטן פֿיר רבנים. דער ערשטער איז נעוואָרן רב בערזער פֿון ענגלאַנד.

אימיגראַנטן דענען נעקומען ביז דעם יאָר 1928. אָבער מיט אַכט יאָר שפּעטער, נאָך עטלעכע יאָרן פֿון טרוקנעניס אוּן שלעכטן וועטער, וען די לאַנע האָט זיך פֿאַרוויגערט, האָבן אַ צאָל פֿון די פֿאַרמערס אַנגעהויבן צו פֿאַרלאָזן די קאָלאָניע אוּן אָנדערש זיך נידערט שטעט. אין 1937 דענען פֿאַרבליבן בלויז 17 פֿאַמיליעס אוּן אין 1942 איז דאָס שטעטל פֿאַרמאַכט נעוואָרן אוּן הירש איז אָפּגעמעקט נעוואָרן פֿון דער מאַפּע.

מיינע עלטערן דענען נעקומען קיין הירש אין יאָר 1922. זיי זענען דעמאָלט איינגעשטאַנען בײַ מײַן מאַמעס פּעטער, מיכאל שאָפּ. מײַנע עלטערן האָבען נעלעבט אין הירש ביז 1941, וווּ איך בין אויפֿגעוואַקסן אוּן דערצויגן נעוואָרן. דער פּעטער מיכאל שאָפּ איז נעפֿטרט פֿון די ערשטע־ער איז נעקומען, פֿאַר 1900 צו זיין פֿאַרם, צוויי קילאָמעטער פֿון שטעטל הירש. ער איז נעוואָרן דער לעצטער קובֿר צו חתּן אויף דעם הייליקן אָרט אין 1970, אין עלטער פֿון 94 יאָר. איך נעדענק אים וויּ אַ פֿרײַען, סטילען מענטש מיט אַ סאָציאַליסטישן אויסקוק אירפֿון לעבן.

מיינע נעאַנקן ניינען אָפּט צוריק צו מיכאל שאָפּ אוּן זיין כּלה, האָס האָבן פֿאָרלאָזט זייער הויז אוּן משפּחה אוּן נעקומען לעבן אין אַ ניי לאַנד. זיין בודדער, מײַן יידיש, האָט אים קיין כּאָל נישט מוחל נעוואָרן, וואָס ער האָט פֿאַרלאָזט רוסלאַנד.

אין יאָר 1980, צום 75סט יובל פֿון סאַסקאַטשעוואַן, איז פֿאַרנעקומען אַ צוזאַמענקום אירפֿון בית־עולם אין הירש, לזכרן אוּן לכבוד דער קאָלאָניע. מען האָט באַערט דאָס הייליקע אָרט, וווּ עס ליגן אין זייער אויבערע רו איבער הונדערט יידן. מען האָט אויפֿגעשטעלט אַ "פּלאַק", אוּן אָנדענק טאָוול פֿאַר דער יידישער קאָלאָניע. עס איז אויף דעם אויפֿגעשריבן, צוויישן אָנדערן, אין ענגליש: הירש 1892-1942. אין אָנדענק פֿון באַראָן הירש יידישע אַגרעקולטורעלע קאָלאָניע... די קאָלאָניסטן דענען נעטריבן נעוואָרן פֿון זייער גרוים חילן צו אָנטלויפֿן פֿון דיסקרימינאַציע אוּן זיין פֿרײַ צו פֿראָקטיזירן זייער רעליגיע."

עס איז נעוואָרן פֿאַרזאַמלט אַן עולם פֿון אַרום 120 פֿון נאָנץ קאַנאַדע אוּן אַמעריקע – מענטשן, וואָס די קאָלאָניע האָט נעהאַט אַ השפּעה אויף זייער לעבן. עס דענען אויך נעוואָרן מיטגלידער פֿון פֿאַרלאָמענט אָפּצוזינגען כבוד. דאָס הייליקע אָרט וועט פֿאַרבלייבן וויּ אַ היסטאָרישע פּלאַץ.

פֿון רעדאַקציע: אויב איר האָט נעדאַנקען וועגן אונדזער וויקלי לאָזט וויסן, דורך פּאָסט אָדער בליץ- פּאָסט:
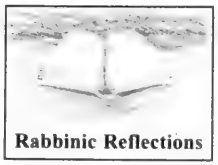
info@thecjn.ca

Jewish Life

Enslavement–and freedom–little by little



Rabbinic Reflections

By RABBI MARTIN BERMAN

At the beginning of the Book of Exodus, the Israelites are a free and prosperous people. Indeed, they're doing so well that their numbers expand, and the Egyptians begin to fear them.

So Pharaoh advises: "Let us deal shrewdly with them, so that they may not increase;" "So they set taskmasters over them to oppress them with forced labour, and they built garrison cities for Pharaoh: Pithom and Raamses."

The Midrash Rabbah notes that the word translated by the JPS Tanach as "over them" would be alayhem, but instead the word in the Torah is alav, meaning "over him."

The midrash says that they brought a brick mould and hung it on the neck of Pharaoh, so that if any Israelite would say, "I am too delicate for such work," they would respond, "Are you more delicate than Pharaoh?"

So the Israelites joined in.

Little by little, Pharaoh wasn't working beside them. Little by little, the oppression grew, until they found themselves completely enslaved.

In life, things often happen little by little.

We ignore a leak for a little bit and it becomes a big leak. We ignore a problem and leave it to fester and grow. What was a little problem becomes a big one.

In truth, the way to overcome many problems in life is also little by little. It's hard to make big changes, but if you take them one step at a time, you can accomplish your goals.

Any dietician will tell you that the best way to lose weight is in a slow but steady manner. Quick weight loss usually leads to quick weight gain. Sudden big changes in life often lead to great dislocations and problems.

We must always be aware that even little steps can lead to big outcomes, be it for good or bad.

Rabbi Martin Berman is spiritual leader at Shaar Shalom Synagogue in Thornhill, Ont.

A wood cutting by Gustave Doré of Moses and Aaron before Pharaoh.

It's never just a name

As we begin reading the Book of Exodus, it's important to note that the book is not actually named Exodus. The English name for the book reflects what it considers to be the main event of the book: the Exodus from Egypt. In a Jewish world, the main event of the book isn't the Exodus, but rather the Revelation at Sinai. Clearly we're using the wrong name.

In actuality, the name of this book in Hebrew is Shmot, which means Names. So rather than beginning to read Exodus, we're actually beginning to read Names. Just changing the name of the book back to its original title creates a new perspective when we approach it. We're no longer looking for an exodus as the defining event, we're now searching for names.

Midrashic Moments

By Rachael Turkienicz

To truly understand the importance of this change, we must explore some of the significance that Judaism places on names.

From the very beginning, no creation was complete until it was named. The meaning of light changes when we call it day, and, likewise, darkness transforms when we call it night.

According to the midrash, God paraded all the animals before the first human being, who named them. Only after they're named is their creative stage complete.

Likewise, one of the stages of achieving independent life in Judaism is the naming stage. We are very careful about the names we choose for our children. The name will speak to the soul of the child and both will converse with the Almighty to form identity and personhood. We choose the names of righteous people in the family or inspirational people from our history.

There are times when a person may be facing a serious challenge in life or health. At such times, some people will add a name or even change a name in the belief that if we add a name, we add a voice to the conversation of destiny. If we change a name, perhaps we can change the destiny entirely. Clearly, we don't take this lightly.

So why would an entire book of the Torah be titled Names, especially when it seems that either the Exodus or the Revelation at Sinai would serve as key focal moments?

But the books of the Torah don't stand in isolation. They speak to each other.

The first book of the Torah is Genesis, and it spoke to us about creations – the creations of the universe, people, families, nations and covenant. The second book, Names, is now speaking to us about identity, both internally and externally. We watch the Israelites enter Egypt with a list of names, a firm identity. We watch how quickly the names disappear as slavery takes their place. We celebrate Sinai as the moment of self-identification, standing next to God.

The midrash in which the first human being names all the animals has a wonderful conclusion. After all the animals have been named, God asks the human what will he call himself, and he answers, "Adam, for I was taken from the earth." And in an astounding moment of meeting, God asks Adam, "What will My Name be?" Adam answers, "You are my Creator, You are my Lord."

We have named our Creator and we continue to name our children, our creations. I think nothing could be more fitting than to call a book of the Torah "Names."

Rachael Turkienicz is director of Rachaelscentre.org.

Jewish Life

Ashdod of the Philistines

Today Ashdod is known as a port along Israel's Mediterranean coast that sometimes makes the news because of its proximity to the Palestinian enclave in Gaza from which it occasionally gets shelled. Yet Ashdod is also one of the major archeological sites along the coast of Israel.

Ashdod was first mentioned in the Ugaritic texts from coastal Syria dating to the latter part of the Bronze Age circa 1400-1200 BCE. It was a major site in antiquity and is mostly remembered as being one of the cities of the Philistine pentapolis. That is the five Philistine cities, which also include Gaza, Gath, Ekron and Ashkelon.

Past Forward
By Alex Gropper

The Philistines are a fascinating people. One of the most tantalizing things about them is their close cultural connections to the Mycenaeans. It is the Mycenaeans who are generally associated with the Greek host that besieged and sacked Troy. The siege and destruction of Troy is an event whose historicity is still hotly debated. But if it did happen, most scholars would place it at the end of the Bronze Age, which is dated around 1200 BCE. This is also the time when the Philistines make their appearance along the coast of Israel.

For archeologists, a major indicator of cultural affinity is pottery. At Ashdod, the earliest Philistine pottery that we have dates to the supposed period of the Trojan War. Furthermore, it is identical to the last phases of Mycenaean pottery. It is an intriguing example of the close connection between the Philistines and the Mycenaean Greeks.

It's ironic that the two cultures that are so crucial to western civilization, namely the Greek and our own, should have had such a close connection so early in their history. What is even more intriguing is the implication of how these two cultures could have influenced one another.

In the Bible, the person who is most closely connected to the Philistines is Samson, whose heroic exploits were carried out at their expense. It has been pointed out that there are parallels between Samson's deeds and that of Greek mythological heroes, especially Hercules.

Unlike most of the other Judges, Samson is not an adjudicator but a larger-than-life figure who is a man of action, a prankster who loves riddles, and a heroic figure who spends his time fighting the Philistines. He also gets romantically involved with their women. This fatal flaw costs him his life when he demolishes the temple to their god Dagon, by pulling it down on himself and the Philistine host gathered inside.

Israeli excavations at Ashdod were undertaken by Moshe Dothan, who along with his wife, Trude, are considered to be among the world's greatest authorities on the Philistines.

I once interviewed Trude Dothan for a show I did for the CBC, and she told me about the ground plan of a Philistine temple in Israel that she and Moshe had discovered that was identical to one found in Cyprus. The Cypriot temple was in turn identical to one found on the Greek mainland. This was an amazing piece of information that further stimulated my interest in the Philistines.

More recently, new evidence has been found about Philistine origins by scholars such as Prof. Timothy Harrison, an archeologist at the University of Toronto's Near East and Middle Eastern civilizations department, as well as professors Baruch Halpern and Ann Killebrew of Penn State University's ancient Mediterranean civilizations department. This evidence places the homeland of the Philistines in Cilicia, an area in what is now the southeastern coast of Turkey. Such new evidence has helped to rekindle an interest in the Philistines and their habitation in Israel, especially at sites such as Ashdod.

ISRAEL 2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES

The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!

Call us for Recent References

Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included

All-inclusive deluxe hotels

• More days of sightseeing

• More meals

• A true family itinerary

www.israelfamilytours.com or call Kathy ext. 345

MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 – Mar. 20

PASSOVER 2011
April 16 – April 30

SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 – Jul. 10
July 3 – Jul. 17
July 17 – Jul. 31
July 24 – Aug. 7
July 31 – Aug. 14
Aug. 14 – Aug. 28

WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FLIGHT INCL. 5 NIGHTS IN 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1515 +TAX

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

Israel in snow

By Mark Mietkiewicz

Just a week after the country's most harrowing forest fire, much of Israel was blanketed with snow. Although the country gets a sprinkling of snow most winters, real storms are still a fascination for its residents.

The best place to start your tour is at YouTube for videos [http://bit.ly/isnow1] and Flickr for photos. [http://bit.ly/isnow2] You'll find hundreds of entries, including a video demonstrating the universal reflex for people experiencing their first snowfall: trying to catch as many flakes on your tongue as possible. [http://bit.ly/isnow3]

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

The Golan's Mount Hermon, home of Israel's ski slope, is the only place that you might find snow throughout the winter. When it opened in 1969, mules were used to get up the hills. There are ski lifts now. Ski Hermon's website has a couple of ski-cams, shots of the slopes and a snow-depth report. [http://bit.ly/isnow4]

Actually, Israel does have a second ski hill, sort of. Ski Gilboa, situated on the historic mountain where King Saul met his demise as recounted in the Book of Samuel, boasts a year round ski hill – although this one is decked out with an artificial ski surface. [http://bit.ly/isnow5]

Brian Blum doesn't have a lot of experience driving in any kind of snow – and it showed when he tried to tough his way through an Israel storm a few years ago. The main Tel Aviv to Jerusalem road had been closed, but he thought he knew better. So he took the "alternate route." Join Blum on his harrowing trek. [http://bit.ly/isnow6]

Jerusalemite (and former Chicagoan) Joyce Schur says when snow hits, her city comes to a standstill. "People just want to stand around staring at it… [the] reason being because no one knows what to do with it! … There's also no such thing as ice scrapers or calcium chloride. The city's municipal workers rush to the Super-Sol and grab big blue boxes of kosher salt for de-icing streets like Herzl (I am not exaggerating)." [http://bit.ly/isnow7]

Can we ever expect to see a white Tel Aviv? Don't hold your breath, says Ha'aretz. "Only an external cold wave could overcome the relatively warm winds from the sea – something that occurs once every 30 or 40 years. The elders of Tel Aviv remember (or perhaps not) the great snow of February 1950, which piled up to half a metre." [http://bit.ly/isnow8] Here are photos from that remarkable storm, including a snowman by the sea. [http://bit.ly/isnow9] The Hebrew Wikipedia article on Climate in Israel on the country's other big snowfalls. [http://bit.ly/isnow14]

Although this month's was a large storm, snow is nothing new to the Holy Land. Thousands of years ago, the prophets were also moved by its beauty. It was King David who said to God in Psalm 51:9: "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." [http://bit.ly/isnow10]

Rabbi Boruch Leff has written two seemingly contradictory articles, The Mystical White Snow [http://bit.ly/isnow11] and Snow: The Dark Side. [http://bit.ly/isnow12] He points out that while snow has been described "as being an illuminating force that is tantamount to spiritual light," Kabbalah has also compared snow to a barrier to holiness. How can snow be both good and bad? Read the articles to understand how the rabbi bridges the dichotomy that is snow.

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Of rabbis, rent and absurd Chomskyisms

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

Under the title, "A disturbing desecration of Jewish values" (Jerusalem Post, Dec. 12), Rabbi David Rosen, the Jerusalem-based director of interreligious affairs for the American Jewish Committee, wrote a scathing rebuke to the effort of a number of rabbis in Israel to prohibit Jews from renting or selling property to non-Jews. This effort, initiated by Rabbi Shmuel Eliahu of Safed in the form of a statement to be signed by other religious figures, was the subject of several prominent stories last week in the Canadian media. It was also the focus of an excellent editorial in last week's CJN.

"It is some small comfort that the majority of rabbis approached by Eliahu refused to support his initiative, that the chief rabbis have disassociated themselves from it, and that many notable rabbinic figures have publicly condemned it," Rosen wrote. But he went on to raise concern that "this deplorable letter" reflects the "degree to which fear and paranoia prevail in segments of our society."

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was quick to condemn the "no rent" rabbis' ruling, as were other senior political figures. Benny Begin, a Likud cabinet minister prominent for his very conservative political views, is less well known for his principled defence of the protection of Israel's minorities under the rule of law. He has been in the forefront of those arguing that not only is Israel's Jewish character compatible with its liberal democratic commitments (as enshrined in its Declaration of Independence) but that the latter in particular must be protected.

"We must respond, publicly, to indicate to the public, to the Arab sector, that we do not agree with the letter," Begin urged.

* * *

It's interesting that many on the far left who would correctly denounce the actions of the "no rent" rabbis are also among those who lead the campaign against recognizing Israel as the homeland of the Jewish people.

In their view, while it's racist to refuse to rent or sell property to Arabs, it's not racist to refuse to recognize Jewish "ownership" to a part of their ancestral homeland. This despite the fact that such "ownership" was recommended by the UN itself in 1947.

Ironically, leftist radicals misapprehend their own intolerance toward Jewish claims as "progressive." They fail to acknowledge that one cannot denounce the former as a form of bigotry without also condemning the latter in the same way. But this is precisely what many on the radical left – and radical right – do all the time, with impunity.

* * *

Noam Chomsky is praised in some circles for having been designated the world's No. 1 public intellectual. That title has never inhibited him from saying outrageous things. In fact, it's probably part of his wide appeal.

Noam Chomsky

Still, it's one thing to be provocative, and another to be blatantly and factually wrong, even to the point of uttering sheer nonsense.

But that's precisely what Chomsky did when, on TVO's Dec. 6 The Agenda with Steve Paikin, he insisted that Hamas' refusal to recognize Israel's legitimacy is no different from Mexico's refusal to recognize America's.

Yes, that's what he said. According to Chomsky, while Mexico recognizes the United States as a fact, it doesn't recognize the legitimacy, for instance, of U.S. sovereignty over former Mexican territory such as Texas.

Paikin immediately jumped in to note that Mexicans aren't crossing the border to blow themselves up in U.S. cities to air their grievances. That observation seemed lost on Chomsky, as did the obvious fact that Mexico has not declared its intent to destroy the United States and replace it with a Mexican state, even in part.

More to the point, Mexico's relations with the United States are not based on its temporary acceptance of the "fact" of America's existence, but upon genuine co-existence and mutual recognition.

Chomsky's remarks are breathtakingly absurd, and the absurdities of his analogy with Hamas keep mounting the more one thinks about it.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

SUBSCRIBE TO The Canadian Jewish news

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

CENTRE Honda
www.centrehonda.com • sales@centrehonda.com
YOUR DOWNTOWN HONDA DEALER!
GET WHAT YOU WANT, WHAT YOU REALLY REALLY WANT
BOXING WEEK SPECIALS!
NO PAYMENTS 90 DAYS
$500 CASH BONUS on Civic, Accord & CR-V PURCHASE FINANCING 0.9%
THE NEW 2011 CIVIC | THE NEW 2011 ACCORD | PRESENTING THE 2011 CR-V
SPECIAL EDITIONS
Enriched style and utility for families on the move.
$248 @ 4.9% | $328 @ 4.9% | $328 @ 2.9%
ENDS JAN. 3RD!
Get your kids to colour and win great prizes.
SERVING DOWNTOWN FOR OVER 35 YEARS
354 RICHMOND ST. (East of Sherbourne)
416-364-1116
• SALES • LEASING • SERVICE • PARTS • BODYSHOP

CJC 'took best possible action'

Continued from page 3

He added he was also "very upset" by the fact that a key Jewish community group such as Canadian Jewish Congress would salute and help the government in its "inadequate" support of the monument.

Congress CEO Bernie Farber told The CJN that his group supports Bill C-442, adding that Volpe's funding concerns are overblown and that passing the legislation is the fastest way to get the project done.

He said Volpe sent Congress letters on this issue throughout the bill's progress through the legislative review process.

"We can have differences of opinion. But Congress was representing the will of Holocaust survivors and the understanding that this [monument] has already been years in the making," Farber said.

"Having to wait to see if a government would or would not fund it, I believe, and many survivors believe, that they would not live to see the day it would be erected. So we took what we believed was the best possible action" in supporting the bill.

In a statement, Thornhill MP Peter Kent, minister of state of foreign affairs (Americas), who urged Uppal to bring the bill forward, said that the "project is far too important to get bogged down in partisan bickering… it was always the intention to fund the project with donations from Canadians of all religions and origins."

Hank Rosenbaum, past-president of the Canadian Yad Vashem Society and a Holocaust survivor, echoed Congress' position, saying survivors have "waited many years" for a monument and fundraising should come from the Jewish community.

"The economic times are horrible. We don't want to burden the government of Canada… We don't want to load up taxpayers with another expense that the community could fund," Rosenbaum said.

However, Volpe noted that Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism Minister Jason Kenney announced last week that Ottawa is funding two memorial projects by Vancouver's Khalsa Diwan Society.

The society will get $82,500 to work with the Vancouver Parks Board to find a location and design a monument to commemorate the Komagata Maru incident of 1914. That ship, with 376 Indian passengers, was refused entry at the Vancouver port and returned to India, where many passengers died in clashes with British soldiers.

Bernie Farber

Kenney said the society will also get $104,000 in public funding to develop the first phase of a museum about the incident.

Rosenbaum responded that there could be any number of reasons why the government chose to fund the Komagata Maru project and that it had no bearing on the Holocaust monument memorial.

Earlier this year, the government gave Congress $500,000 to fund a Daniel Libeskind-designed sculpture memorializing Canada's 1939 refusal of entry to the M.S. St. Louis. That funding came from Citizenship and Immigration Canada's Community Historical Recognition Program (CHRP).

Arab-Jewish dialogue group hopes to branch out

BY MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — It began as a friendship between longtime Winnipeg Jewish community leader Harold Buchwald and Egyptian-born Winnipeg businessman Ab Freig.

"Harold and I were both on the board of the Arthur V. Mauro Centre for Peace and Justice," Freig recalled. "We were talking one day and decided that it might be a good idea to establish a group where Jews and Arabs could get together and begin a dialogue with each other."

Now, after more than three years of quiet dialogue between Jewish and Arab community leaders in Winnipeg, the Arab Jewish Dialogue – one of the last initiatives of the late Harold Buchwald, who died in April 2008 at age 80 – has matured to the point where the group members are ready to go public and entertain invitations to expand their dialogue between Canadian Jews and Arabs to other Canadian communities.

The newly declared Winnipeg chapter held its first public function – by invitation only – on Dec. 14 at Winnipeg's historic Fort Garry Hotel. About 50 to 60 attendees were treated to an overview of the history of European antisemitism by Catherine Chatterley, a postdoctoral fellow in the University of Manitoba's department of history and the director of the Canadian Institute for the Study of Antisemitism.

Ab Freig, left, and Howard Morry, co-chairs of the Arab Jewish Dialogue [Myron Love photo]

Although not Jewish herself, Chatterley said she was drawn to a study of antisemitism in part because her learning about the Holocaust occurred in a vacuum, and she was driven to study its origins.

In her presentation, she described in words, and in slides illustrating Christian art and sculpture, the evolution of the Christian demonization of "the Jew" through the centuries and, later, the racialization of Jews by 19th-century nationalists.

Among the highlights of her presentation:

- Jewish moneylenders in Christian Europe were only active in the 12th century. After that, Italians took over the role because it was too dangerous an occupation for Jews to be engaged in.
- While there are semitic languages, there's no such thing as a semitic race or semitic peoples.
- Goebbels, not Hitler, ordered Kristallnacht, much to Hitler's disapproval, because pogroms were for the lowly Slavs, he felt, not Germans.
- The Internet has been the major driving force in a new, worldwide and virulent outgrowth of antisemitism.
- European-style antisemitism is a relatively new phenomenon in the Arab and Muslim world, dating back less than 25 years.
- antisemitism is rebounding in Europe as the impact of the Holocaust wears off.

Chatterley is scheduled to be the first in a series of speakers that the Arab Jewish Dialogue plans to present. "It's important to foster dialogue to create understanding between peoples," Freig said. "If you get to know each other, it's much less likely that you will hate the other."

Mel Lazareck, president of the Jewish National Fund's prairie region (and recently appointed special representative from Manitoba to Israel), who is also a member of the Arab Jewish Dialogue, said the Jewish and Arab members of the group have gotten to know each other and their families very well and have taken several trips together – most recently a visit to Egypt.

"We're hoping that our example will inspire other Canadian Jews and Arabs to get to know each other," said Howard Morry, a past president of the Jewish Federation of Winnipeg and co-chair of the Arab Jewish Dialogue with Freig.

Morry said there has been interest in the Arab Jewish Dialogue from Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. "We hope to go national some time next year," he added.

Wiesel to act as honorary chair of antisemitism institute

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Nobel Peace Prize laureate Elie Wiesel earlier this month agreed to become honorary chair of the Canadian Institute of the Study of Antisemitism [CISA], established here this summer by historian Catherine Chatterley.

"Prof. Wiesel is such a powerful symbol for so many of us – both Jews and non-Jews," Chatterly said in expressing her pleasure. "He is a uniquely respected symbol of Jewish continuity and survival after the Shoah, a remnant of that incredibly diverse and creative world that was Jewish Europe, but also symbolic of our deep universal humanity, our connection to one another and our hopeful resilience as a species."

CISA is committed to building a coalition of individuals from a variety of political, ethnic and religious backgrounds who want to educate the public about the history and nature of antisemitism in its classic and contemporary forms, Chatterley said.

"Unfortunately, our post-Holocaust focus on racism and human rights has not produced an equivalent knowledge or concern about antisemitism. We must work to change this reality. Antisemitism must be given equal weight and concern and must be placed on the international human rights agenda." she added.

Elie Wiesel

With these goals in mind, she said, she is even more pleased that Wiesel has accepted her request. "I am very grateful that he has chosen to stand as the symbolic head of CISA. I'm thankful to be able to consult with him as CISA charts its course for the future," Chatterley said.

Chatterley, who was born and raised in Winnipeg, completed a BA in European history at the University of Manitoba and teaches a course on antisemitism and the Holocaust there. She trained as a cultural and intellectual historian at the University of Chicago in the fields of modern Jewish history, modern German and central European history. She spent two years in Montreal in a master's program at Concordia University under the guidance of Prof. Frederick Krantz, who is also the founding director of the Canadian Institute for Jewish Research, and she was a member of the Montreal Institute for Genocide Studies.

"Holocaust denial, obfuscation, other forms of minimization and outright erasure are growing worldwide," Chatterly said. "CISA is dedicated to resisting these processes intellectually and to protecting and preserving the scholarly study of the Holocaust as a catastrophic and transformative event in western history."

CISA is an independent academic charitable organization. For more information, visit http://www.can-isa.com.

The officers and members of Canadian Friends of Yeshiva University are saddened by the passing of Henry Waks ז"ל

Beloved husband of the late Sylvia Waks, loving father and father-in-law of Fred and Linda Waks, Jay and Debbie Waks, devoted grandfather and great-grandfather.

As University Guardians, the Waks family established a scholarship for Toronto's needy students at Yeshiva University. May these students emulate the noble life of Henry Waks, embody the Jewish values exemplified by his children, and be a source of blessing for our community.

May the entire family be comforted among the mourners of Zion and Jerusalem.

Yeshiva University

Richard M. Joel President of Yeshiva University
Dr. Herbert C. Dobrinsky Vice-President for University Affairs
Mo Lidsky National Director

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

History grad's dreams come true at the Israel Museum

Tenenbaum in Jerusalem's Old City

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Since she started her internship at the Israel Museum in Jerusalem, Dori Tenenbaum's life has come full circle.

In 2008, she went on a six-week archeological dig in Khirbet Qeiyafa, which is located on the hills that border the Elah Valley. Tenenbaum was part of the team that discovered a Hebrew ostracon, a piece of pottery with Hebrew script on it.

While at the museum one day, more than two years later, she found that same ostracon on display.

"In my wildest dreams I could not have predicted I would be part of a discovery of an inscription that would be hailed as the world's oldest Hebrew inscription, let alone seeing it on display at the museum I am working at," she said.

Since October, Tenenbaum has been interning at the museum, a longtime dream of hers.

"For a long time I have known that I wanted to work at the Israel Museum," she said. "I was hooked after my first visit. Summer 2008 I [wanted to work there], but the museum was closed for renovations.

"I have always been fascinated by history. I look around me and see the stories of peoples long ago, whether it be from shoes left behind, pottery, or an inscription.

"When it came time to thinking of a career, the thought in the back of my mind was always 'how do I find a way to end up at the museum?' I see museums, like universities, as the venue to interpret history."

After graduating from York University, where she majored in history, Tenenbaum learned about a program called Career Israel. Career Israel places Jews from around the world in internships in Israel, which is how she got the internship at the Israel Museum.

Her main job at the museum is helping it become digital.

"For the average person, when they hear this, they yawn. It sounds boring, but I love it. It is the nitty-gritty details that make a museum function," Tenenbaum said.

"I have learned so much in the process, not just about museums, but also about the pieces I have worked on. It is not just about entering information into the computer. It is about internalizing the information that I am inputting. It is about seeing how each piece fits into the big picture, understanding that each artifact or artwork fits into a theme when placed in the gallery.

"The experience has been incredible," she added. "The internship has been a dream come true... I truly look forward to going to work each morning."

Tenenbaum, a Torontonian by birth, found the experience so incredible, in fact, that she recently decided to make her six-month stay in Israel permanent.

"Aliyah is something I have always thought about, but never was really sure it would happen," she said.

"When I decided to come on [Career Israel], I wanted to use it as a pilot trip for seeing what life is like really living in Israel... There really is nowhere else in the world for me to be. Israel is one of the best places in the world to be in my field. Since Israel has been inhabited by so many cultures, you really get everything here. Spiritually, I feel at home here."

In addition to archeology and history, travelling is something Tenenbaum has always had a passion for. In the summer of 2007, she spent three weeks studying modern and contemporary Italian culture in Rome, and once her internship at Israel Museum is complete, she plans to spend three weeks in Europe. Her fascination with history is very much connected to her love of travelling.

"I studied the history of Greece, Rome, Egypt, Mesopotamia and Israel. I always enjoy when Jewish history comes up in the historical sources."

With all her travel experiences, Israel is the place Tenenbaum feels most connected to. "[It] is my home," she said.

"Judaism is extremely important to me. I grew up in a modern Orthodox home that stressed Judaism and Zionism. Being a Jew is my identity, it defines who I am. I am a Jew first and a citizen of the world second."

When asked about her favourite moment in Israel so far, she finds it hard to choose just one.

"There have been so many amazing adventures and experiences that I cannot choose. With my program, we went on this amazing three-day trip to the Golan and the Galilee.

"I toured around the Old City of Jerusalem and attended cultural events around the city. I met amazing new people— Israelis, North Americans and new olim. I could go on and on about my experiences and the amazing people I have met along the way."

For a full account of Tenenbaum's Israeli adventures, visit www.adventuresofdoritheexplori.blogspot.com.

Omission

The article "On-set tutor's first student was Lindsay Lohan" (Dec. 16) should have included the information that Andrea Eisen's pen name is Andrea Dana.

Fogel to head restructured advocacy agency

Continued from page 1

He's scheduled to assume his new post on Jan. 1, Cummings said.

The details of the national restructuring plan exist in a brief called the "Newco Document," which the CIJA reorganization committee had distributed to all its affiliated agencies, including Canadian Jewish Congress (CJC), CIC, the University Outreach Committee (UOC), the Quebec-Israel Committee (QIC) and UIAFC.

Steven Cummings

The document remains unavailable to the public due to "a number of issues that continue to be tweaked. But it has had very broad distribution within the federated communities," Cummings said.

In November, officials at Congress voiced fears it would be dissolved under the reorganization and that its 90-year history and resonance within the community would be lost.

Cummings said that one of the natural steps in the creation of a new community advocacy entity would be the dissolution of "a number of boards as they exist today," followed by their rebirth as various "regional councils" that would be formed as part of the new advocacy structure.

That dissolution process is well underway, he said.

"Part of the reorganization is to create one advocacy organization. CIC, CJC, UOC and QIC will be folded into one new organization. This is happening over the next few months," Cummings confirmed.

Mark Freiman, Congress president and a member of the restructuring committee, said CIJA's consolidation process is now moving into the area of "making some difficult decisions," although he said he's encouraged that many issues that are important to his organization "remain on the table, and there is a stated openness to further discussion on issues, including the future of the [CJC] name and tradition. I'm especially encouraged by the insistence of the committee on issues of transparency."

The branding of the new entity is still up in the air, Cummings said, though he confirmed that the "Congress" moniker is still being considered.

"There are a lot of people that support the name CJC. It's a name that has a great history," Cummings said, adding that CIJA will be "looking at a number of firms" to help it finalize the naming decision.

Cummings said he expects much more news about the restructuring project to come out over the coming months.

"Our constituency is the Jewish community... but we're not quite ready to make this a public process."

Fogel told The CJN that he's "excited" about his new job.

"For some time, I've felt that the direction that [CIJA] is going in is the most appropriate and most effective way for us to move forward as the next stage in the evolution of Jewish and pro-Israel advocacy here in Canada."

He said that CIJA had always intended to use the first few months of 2011 to "provide real specificity of each dimension" of the new entity to the CIJA and UIAFC boards for final endorsement at UIAFC's June meeting.

Fogel said the restructuring committee is now expanding and heading into "Phase 2," in which it will widen its consultation with stakeholders with the aim of "capturing different representation" from more diverse voices in the Jewish community.

It will be Fogel's job to "staff" the new committee for Phase 2, he said, adding that it will go through a "very difficult" process in implementing the Newco plan.

Asked if this meant layoffs at the various agencies being folded into the new entity, Fogel said staff cuts are part of it.

"Each agency has its own culture, approach, set of agenda items... all of which are important, and the challenge is to merge not just the advocacy agendas they had carriage of, but also achieve something greater than the sum of its parts," he said.

Fogel added: "Economics wasn't the driving force of the reorganization process. But there is an expectation that now that [CIJA] is undertaking it, they will be able to achieve a degree of efficiencies."

The savings would go to preserving and expanding "tachliss" (essential) programs rather than to "overhead," he said.

With regard to how the restructuring will affect staff at the various institutions, Fogel said that for some, it would mean "a reaffirmation of their positions, but it may mean a different set of files that they have to deal with that they didn't have to before. For others, it may mean identifying their generic talents and redeploying them to areas where they can be just as effective, but which address a hole in the range of services and expertise that we want. And for some, it may be an opportunity to leave the system in a constructive and dignified way, either because they feel it's time for a change or other opportunities present themselves.

"But what informs the entire [restructuring] process, and I've heard this repeatedly from all leadership, is the recognition that everybody who's professionally involved in the system right now merits full consideration reflecting their commitments to the things that were most important to the community."

ABRAHAM'S TENT: As part of their Bible studies, Grade 2 students at Bialik Hebrew Day School enjoyed a recent visit to Ohel Avraham (Abraham's Tent) in Bialik's Israel Interactive Centre. The centre's director, Nurith Sela, right, transformed the room into a tent to teach students about life in Israel at the time of Abraham.

Audit says agency board driven by ideology

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

A long-awaited forensic audit has shed further light on the infighting that has convulsed Rights and Democracy, a federal government human rights agency that was plunged into turmoil after its newly appointed chair sharply questioned funding to Middle Eastern organizations critical of Israel.

Last week, a leaked report issued by the firm of Deloitte & Touche recommended that Rights and Democracy's new board of directors should "review, define and establish [its] strategic orientations and communicate them to management personnel."

And rather than discovering examples of wrongdoing at the agency, the auditors found that bookkeeping deficiencies were being resolved.

Critics say that Rights and Democracy – which receives $11 million in annual funding from the government – has been transformed into an ideologically driven body since pro-Israel board members, such as new chair Aurel Braun, came on board in 2009.

In its report, Deloitte & Touche said, "Our review indicates that the strategic orientation of Rights and Democracy appears to have changed during the years 2005 to 2010, especially with the arrival of new members of the board of directors."

Deloitte & Touche added, "These changes seem to be the source of several conflicts between certain members of the board of directors and certain management personnel."

The Montreal-based agency – which was created by then-prime minister Brian Mulroney's Progressive Conservative government in 1988 to encourage democracy and monitor human rights around the world – was thrown into chaos after Braun claimed that three organizations should have been denied funding.

Braun, a University of Toronto political science professor appointed to his position by Prime Minister Stephen Harper's Conservative government, objected that grants of $10,000 each had been sent to Al-Haq and Al Mezan, two Palestinian groups, and B'Tselem, an Israeli human rights organization.

Braun's position reportedly offended some board members and touched off philosophical clashes, though he strenuously maintained that the main issues really turned on accountability and transparency.

In his defence, Braun said the former president of Rights and Democracy, Remy Beauregard, who died after a contentious board meeting last January, had decided to "repudiate" the grants to Al-Haq, Al Mezan and B'Tselem.

Braun and Gerard Latulippe, the agency's current president, were due to discuss the audit at a parliamentary hearing last week, but it was postponed until the new year after the House of Commons broke for the holidays.

Mordecai Richler Boulevard?

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — A Montreal-area city councillor Marvin Rotrand deposited a petition signed by 2,475 people in favour of naming a street or other public place in honour of the late Mordecai Richler at Montreal City Hall last week.

Rotrand, however, no longer thinks it's realistic to expect that the writer will be commemorated on the 10th anniversary of his death this coming July with the renaming of a street.

Marvin Rotrand

Rotrand, who launched the idea with Côte des Neiges-Notre-Dame-de-Grâce borough mayor Michael Applebaum in November, quickly surpassed his goal of collecting 2,000 signatures, including more than 1,000 online, the great majority of them apparently from Quebec.

The petition is now in the hands of Montreal's place names commission.

But it has become clear to them that renaming any street after anyone is likely to arouse opposition, and, in the case of Richler it has reawakened a vitriolic response from some francophone Quebecers.

"Many thought that naming a street was not appropriate or would be divisive," said Rotrand, who is majority house leader.

The proposal was immediately denounced by the head of the nationalist St. Jean-Baptiste Society head Mario Beaulieu who called Richler an "anti-Quebec racist" who "hated and denigrated French Quebecers."

That theme was picked up with a Facebook page entitled "Non à une rue Mordecai-Richler! Non au racisme anti-québécois!" to which 625 people have signed on. According to its creators, Richler "constantly denigrated Bill 101 and measures aimed at making French the common language in Quebec by associating them with Nazism and exclusion." Any commemoration of him would be "an insult to our culture and our identity."

The site has attracted comments that may be considered hateful themselves.

"There have been some extreme comments, but I don't think they represent the mainstream," Rotrand said. "The people who signed [his] petition come from all linguistic and cultural backgrounds." Some may not agree with his opinions on Quebec politics, but Rotrand said they recognize Richler's literary genius and the responsibility of his birthplace to have some permanent commemoration.

Rotrand said the most popular alternative and the one that he favours is the naming of a library, and the public Mile End Library, which is located near the district in which Richler grew up and made famous, seems to be a likely choice. There is a precedent: in the 1980s, Lachine named its public library for one of its most famous sons, Nobel Prize-winning author Saul Bellow.

Another suggestion that has come up frequently, which Rotrand also finds attractive, is the city's sponsorship of a literary prize in Richler's name.

SINGLES EVENTS
DEADLINE: Wednesday 4 p.m.
8 days preceding issue date

Shaar Shalom Singles
(in conjunction with the Intersynagogue Singles (45+) invite you to
"LET'S DANCE AGAIN"
To the fabulous D.J.
DAVE JONES
Great music, dancing, & a casual
Mix and mingle evening
Sun., January 9 - 7:30 pm
Shaar Shalom Synagogue
2 Simonston Boulevard
(1 light north of Steeles on Don Mills)
Admission: $8.00
includes coffee & cake
For information, please call
David (416-224-9494)

Bone marrow drives held at campuses across Canada

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

The first country-wide "Get Swabbed" challenge was held at university campuses across Canada last month.

The challenge was launched in 2009 after Dustin Shulman, philanthropic chair for McMaster University's Alpha Epsilon Pi chapter, heard about Jonathan Grossman, a Thornhill, Ont., man who was searching for a bone marrow match.

Grossman did receive a bone marrow transplant, but died from chemotherapy-related complications on Aug. 30, 2009.

Only after a bone marrow drive was held for Grossman at Adath Israel Congregation in April 2009 did OneMatch, the bone marrow and stem cell registry run by Canadian Blood Services, start supporting drives. They previously found donors only through their online system.

Jason Grossman, Jonathan's son, credited the change in OneMatch's system to his father.

"It's a testament to who my dad was," he said. "If something in the system is wrong, you have to go and change it.

"He's been such an important influence on me. It's fantastic to see his legacy is carrying on."

Jason and his sister, Jessica Grossman, organized a drive at the University of Western Ontario in London. It was the first time a bone marrow drive was held there, Jason said. By the end of the drive, 618 people had been swabbed.

"For the one day that we did it in the space that we had, [it's] pretty amazing," Jessica said, stressing the importance of joining the registry at a young age.

"As you hit a certain age [50], you're unable to donate," she said. "Finding a match is very difficult… The more people who donate when they're younger, the better the chances for someone to find a match.

"It's actually been proven that the younger a person donates marrow, the better the chance of the transplant being successful."

Across Canada, 15 universities took part in the Get Swabbed challenge, including the University of Guelph; University of Toronto, Mississauga, St. George and Scarborough campuses; McMaster University; Wilfrid Laurier University; Waterloo University; University of Alberta; Algoma University; University of Windsor; Queen's University; Carleton University; University of Western Ontario; Memorial University and University of Ottawa.

Adam Moscoe, vice-president of Hillel Ottawa, said this was the first time Ottawa's Jewish student community organized bone marrow drives at University of Ottawa and Carleton.

Students get swabbed at the McMaster University bone marrow drive.

From left are Jessica Grossman with her mother, Julie, and her brother, Jason, at the University of Western Ontario's bone marrow drive.

The drives, which were organized partially by Hillel Ottawa and AEPi, added 475 people to the registry – 260 from Carleton and 215 from Ottawa.

"It is essential that young people of all ethnicities join the database," Moscoe said. "If someone 'matches' with someone, they are that patient's last hope of survival. Only 30 per cent of patients find a match within their family.

"I am thrilled that to see the Jewish community come together, working with Canadian Blood Services for such a great cause."

The Ahmadiyya Muslim Students Association; Faith Acts Ottawa; University of Ottawa Health Services; and numerous fraternities and sororities also helped to plan the drives, Moscoe said.

At McMaster, Shulman and AEPi again helped organize a drive. This year, they broke the record for the most people swabbed in a 24-hour period. In total, 1,144 people were swabbed, and 1,129 of those were done within the 24 hours.

"When the solution is something as simple as getting cheek swabbed, I think it's important we all do something relatively simple that could save people's lives," Shulman said.

"One of the most amazing things about this drive is it's one of the few events run on a campus that everybody can support and take part in, regardless of background or age."

Indeed, the McMaster drive saw support from many student groups, including the McMaster Health, Aging and Society Students Association; the Student Health Education Centre at McMaster; the McMaster Medicine and Health Society; McMaster Jewish Students Association; McMaster Students for Health Innovation; Golden Key Society, McMaster chapter, and the McMaster Cancer Society.

As a result of the 15 university drives, 5,709 swabs were collected.

For more information on OneMatch or to be added to the bone marrow registry visit www.onematch.ca.

Business

Buddies develop 'fresh' home accessories

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

It's a question many shoppers face time and time again, what to give the person who has just about everything?

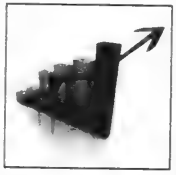
How about a "pet chateau – a really cool line of foldable, portable dog and cat houses," perfect for the office or cottage.

Or "tissue bath mats" that feel so soft and comfortable it's like walking on tissue paper.

Or foldable ottomans that double as a bench with a built-in tray.

Not your everyday sort of purchases, but it's amazing what you end up needing when the product is an everyday home accessory that fills a specific niche.

Adam Schachter and Jon Levy have created a business that caters to an underserved market segment. Their company, Fresh Home Elements (FHE), specializes in lines of home accessories that are "fresh, cool, contemporary, fun."



As well as affordable, notes Levy, who handles the back office part of the business – finance and logistics.

Schachter is more of the face of the company who deals with retailers and buyers. They work with a factory in China to make sure the finished products are up to their standards of quality and value.

FHE's product lines includes portable shopping and storage baskets, a portable bench with a wood tabletop, a folding chair and a line of picture frames.

"I design a lot of it myself," said Schachter. "I have a design director who works closely with me."

He generates many of the ideas, but he's also receptive to suggestions from people who have a keen eye on the market.

"I have such a strong enough relationship with retailers that they say, 'Adam, there's a hole in the market for this,' and I develop it."

The pet chateau is one product that came out of that creative process.

Schachter's contacts come from many years spent in the housewares business, and they have proven receptive when he makes the pitch to carry the firm's funky line of products. FHE merchandise can be found in Costco, as well as Costco's U.S. and Mexican branches, in Home Outfitters, Zellers, The Bay, Black's Photography, BINZ, T.J. Maxx in the United States and TK Maxx in Europe.

"We're thrilled with the rapid growth our brand has seen," said Schachter. "The success that has been generated here in Canada has leveraged us into the United States and beyond."

Although they won't be specific, Schachter and Levy say revenue after only one year in business is in the seven-figure range. They expect that number to double in 2011 as they expand into new international markets, including Japan and the United Kingdom. They're already taking orders for next year's back-to-school season for a storage system that's perfect for university students living in dormitories.

Needless to say, running a new business is a major undertaking. Schachter estimates he puts in 80 hours a week and "I'm on my BlackBerry 24/7."

Levy came to FHE with 10 years experience operating his own business, a DVD and entertainment firm that exported digital media. Schachter's route to entrepreneurship was more circuitous.

He studied radio and television arts at Ryerson University before moving to California to work on a tabloid TV show.

Eventually though, "I kind of realized that my priorities changed. I always thought I'd be in a boy band and be a rock star in L.A."

Instead, he got a job offer in Red Deer, Alta. At that point, he re-evaluated his career path and decided on a change with more stability.

Eight years ago, he returned to Toronto, put down roots and worked in the housewares industry. A little more than one year ago, he and Levy – they'd been friends since they were 10 – formed FHE.

"I've always been a sales guy at heart," said Schachter, the company president.

Levy, the managing partner, is more comfortable behind the scenes. "I deal more with the business financials and logistics," he said "I'm not flashy. Adam meets buyers, does sales and… is the face of the company."

Starting the business proved challenging. They sunk their own money and that of private investors (about 10 per cent of the total) into the company, since banks don't like to lend to firms without a track record. Before starting, "We had all our ducks in a row," said Levy.

So far, they're satisfied with the progress the business has made. They're making money and planning expansion.

"If you have good products at a good price that are original and different, you can get them into stores," Levy said.

"The key to us is to come up with original designs that people see as good value," he added.

Adam Schachter, left, and Jon Levy

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Mazel tov Sylvia & Irving Ungerman on your 65th anniversary. Wishing you good health and happiness. Love, your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mazel tov Moey & Libby Greenberg on your 70th anniversary. With love from your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Sahri & Bernard Baum and Ofra & Benny Perelstein are delighted to announce the recent marriage of their children Rebecca Woods Baum and Doron Pearl.

Happy 10th birthday Noah Wolgelerenter! Love, Mom, Dad, Nathan, Bubi, Zaidi, Grandma and Grampa.

Mazel tov on the recent wedding of Tali Medoff & Aaron Simon.

Jordan & Brooke Halpert are thrilled to announce the arrival of Jillian Zoe Oct. 26. Proud grandparents are Lily & Bob and Barbara & Avrom.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Mazel Tov on your Special Anniversary"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Our regular columnist, Leila Speisman, is away on medical leave.

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
call 416-636-3575
or email alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure
Your travel insurance specialists

There is no paper Dec. 30. Deadline for Jan. 6 is Dec. 23. Deadline for Jan. 13 is Jan. 3. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Friday, Dec. 24

EREV SHABBAT

Erev Shabbat service at Temple Har Zion. 8 p.m. Rabbi Cory Weiss will discuss "The Jewish View of the Messiah." 905-889-2252.

Saturday, Dec. 25

FAMILY FUN DAY

Join Beth Tzedec for an afternoon of family fun with sports, havdalah crafts, ceramics, havdalah drum circle, cookie decorating and more. 4-8 p.m. $10 each, advance registration only. Dinner $5 extra. 416-781-3511.

SHABBAT SERVICE

Join Shaar Shalom Synagogue for a winter Shabbat service in the social hall, with a special kiddush following service. 8:45 a.m. All welcome. 905-889-4975.

Sunday, Dec. 26

FAMILY FUN NIGHT

Bingo, karaoke and games with Pride of Israel. Pizza and salad dinner. $10 for adult members, $12 for adult guests. $6 for ages 12-17, $4 for ages 6-12. Children 5 and under free. Purchase tickets in advance: 416-226-0111, ext. 10.

Other News

FOOD WRITER SPEAKS

"New Year, New You." Hear from food consultant, food writer and columnist Norene Gilletz. Beth Tzedec. Jan. 3, 1:30 p.m.

FILM SCREENING

Tuesdays with Larry, Beth Tikvah's film series. With commentary by Larry Ankiewicz, programming co-ordinator for the Toronto Jewish Film Festival. Jan. 4, A Serious Man. 2 p.m. $5 at the door.

CHORAL CONCERT

Celebrate Shabbat Shirah in a casual café setting and enjoy performances by Renanim Youth Singers and The Varsity Jews. Jan. 15, 7:30 p.m. at Beth Tikvah. $18, $20 at the door, children under 16 free. 416-221-3433 for tickets.

SHABBAT SERVICE

Join Solel Congregation of Mississauga for its upcoming invite-your-neighbour Shabbat service. Jan. 14, 8 p.m. Open to the community. 905-820-5915 for information and directions.

BILLY ELLIOT

Beth Sholom is going to Billy Elliot. Jan. 30, 2011. $130 and $150. 416-783-6103 ext. 228.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

Bernard Betel Centre needs volunteers for Meals on Wheels, to help seniors with basic computer skills, Healthy @ Home program and visiting seniors, in person or over the phone. 416-225-2112 ext. 127, karens@betelcentre.org.

BAYCREST VOLUNTEERS

Baycrest needs volunteers to assist their clients. Every Friday from 3-4 p.m. Baycrest has Kabalat Shabbat services. Volunteers are needed to escort clients to the program and help the women light the candles. 416-785-2500, ext. 2572.

MISHPACHAH MINYAN

Families with young children are invited to attend services in the Cayne Family Chapel at Shaar Shalom Synagogue. 10:15 a.m. Jan. 8. Service ends to coincide with the main service so the participants can join the other members of the congregation for kiddush.

Continued on page 25

Intergenerational dinner opens dialogue for young adults

Holocaust survivor Agnes Tomasov, seen with her granddaughter Danielle Samuel, reads from her memoirs at this year's Dinner of Miracles. [Dana Bronsteter photo]

BY STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

Professionals in their 20s and 30s recently had an opportunity to once again dialogue informally with Holocaust survivors.

At the sixth annual Dinner of Miracles on Dec. 6, held this year at Toronto's Petah Tikva Anshe Castilla Congregation, one or two Holocaust survivors sat at a table with six to eight young adults. The survivors told their story to their small group, who were free to ask questions.

"The young adults [engage] in conversation with the survivors, which is the whole point of the event," said Shawna Samuel, organizer and co-chair with Sherri Rotstein of the evening for the sixth year in a row.

As in past years, the dinner sold out within about a week.

"I think it's a very important event," Rotstein said. "We can tell by the number of returnees each year who come back and listen to the survivors."

For some participants, the experience isn't just for one night. "Many of the young adults maintain contact with the survivors once the event is over," Rotstein said. "I think that speaks to the importance of getting young adults to be able to connect with Holocaust survivors."

Many return to the event year after year, and some become moderators who facilitate the discussion at their table. They continue to be amazed by the stories they are told.

"Every time I hear what I think could be the most unbelievable story from a survivor, I'll come back the next year and hear one that blows my mind again," said Regan Tessis, who has been a moderator at all six dinners.

The idea for the dinner came from Samuel and Rotstein six years ago.

"Both of us have grandparents who are survivors, and fortunately and unfortunately, we grew up hearing the stories," Samuel said. "But we had a lot of friends who didn't have that opportunity."

Typically, she added, the only forum for the stories was in a lecture-type format at schools and community centres, and they found a lot of people weren't interested in doing that.

"So instead, we thought of an idea that would be more intimate and non-intimidating for young adults or the Holocaust survivors," Samuel said. "They can share a holiday meal, have heimishe food and share their life's story."

Tessis said that it's "a great format because you get to know [the survivors]. You feel that the stories are more catered to your questions. There's a very personal feel to it, and it allows for that collective dialogue with the survivors."

The organizers are aware that as time passes, the event will be harder to organize.

"From six years ago to now, we've lost a number of survivors who participated in the event," Samuel said. "They passed away, and that's the reality of life. We have to keep on listening to these stories and documenting them, eventually passing them on to the next generation."

Holocaust survivor Agnes Tomasov, the keynote speaker this year, read from her memoirs, which were recently published by the Azrieli Foundation. She and her family escaped the Nazis by joining the Slovakian partisans in the mountains.

The evening began with a moving recording of Hatikvah, made by Jewish survivors just a few days after they were liberated from Bergen-Belsen.

Rotstein and Samuel plan to continue to run the event every year.

Continued from page 24

45+ SINGLES DANCE

Shaar Shalom Synagogue Singles presents Let's Dance Again. Jan 9, 7:30 p.m. with DJ Dave Jones. David, 416-224-9494

YIDDISH FOR BEGINNERS

Join Temple Har Zion for Yiddish for Beginners. The series of 6 classes begins Jan. 6. First class is free, remaining dates will be announced at the first class. $15 for temple members, $25 for guests. 7:30-8:30 p.m. 905-889-2252

MEKOROT WEEKLY STUDY

Join a discussion and text study with Rabbi Mordechai Torczyner of Yeshiva University Toronto Kollel as Mekorot begins the weekly study of the Book of Yonah. Tuesdays beginning Jan. 4, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Shaarei Shomayim. 416-877-2050

ADULT EDUCATION COURSE

Solel Congregation of Mississauga is holding a five-week "Doing Jewish" course starting Jan. 2011. For people who want to learn more about Judaism or for Jews who would like a refresher course on such subjects as the Jewish calendar, life cycles, kashrut and the Jewish home, High Holidays, etc. Each week a different topic will be discussed. Call 905-820-5915 to register and for directions.

SHABBAT POTLUCK

Or Hadash Synagogue is having an Oneg Shabbat with a dairy potluck dinner. Jan. 7, 6:30 p.m. 451 Botsford St., Newmarket. E-mail info@orhadash.org to confirm attendance and what you will bring to eat, or for more information.

DIABETES MEETING

Jewish Diabetes Chapter Meeting. "Diabetes and the Importance of Skin care," with Dr. Frank Rosenberg, dermatologist. Shaarei Shomayim, Brotherhood Hall. Jan. 11, 8 p.m. $1. 416-363-0177 ext. 7403.

HAFTORAH LESSONS

Have you ever wanted to learn to chant a Haftorah? Cantor Ben Silverberg at Shaar Shalom Synagogue will hold classes in the new year. Call him at 905-889-4975, ext. 27 or e-mail cantor@shaarshalom.ca to get on the list.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211, ext. 155.

Computers: Beyond the Basics. Four Tuesdays, 1-3 p.m. Six students.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Sheila, 416-665-3333.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Jan. 19, 10 a.m. Line dancing Thursdays, starts Jan. 6, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Art classes start Jan 18, 10 a.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen. 416-630-6487.

LZA Senior's Cultural Club. Tuesdays 10 a.m. Discussion group at Borochov Cultural Centre, 272 Codsell Ave. 416-630-9444

Temple Sinai Social Club. Enjoy an evening of camaraderie with the Temple Sinai Social Club (65+) Observe Shabbat with music and prayers. Buffet chicken dinner will be served (vegetarian available on request). Jan. 7. Dinner at 6:30 p.m. Kabalat Shabbat service at 8 p.m. Members $16, guests $20. Registration required by 12 p.m. on Jan. 5. 416-487-3281 or education@templesinai.net.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Lecture: "Great Italian Composers – Giuseppe Verdi, Part 3." Dec. 28, 10-11:30 a.m. Members $3, guests $6.

Lecture: "The French Revolution and Its Meaning, Part 1." With Barry Fluxgold. Jan. 4, 10-11:30 a.m. Members $3, guests $6.

Wellness lecture: "Get Around Safely This Winter." Toronto Public Health's falls prevention program, Part 1, Jan. 6, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. www.prossermanjcc.com, 416-638-1881.

Buy tickets for Stage West, Mississauga – Joseph and the Amazing Dreamcoat Jan 26, Casino Rama Feb 15, Billy Elliot at Canon Theatre March 2 and Tuesdays with Morrie May 11.

Registration for courses starting January now open, with more Ryerson Chang programs for 50+.

Register now for winter family programs: Shabbat Party, Drama Tots, Preschool Dance, Lego Brand Brick Club, Baby and Me Sign and more. Visit the website for a full list.

There are no Creativity Club, Jokers Club or PRO meetings in December.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel services Sundays, 8 a.m. and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Kosher breakfast after services. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

2011 Toronto Jewish Film Society subscriptions are selling out. Eight great films at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. 2011 paid-up members can buy 7:30 p.m. memberships for their kids (18+) for $60 if they've never been TJFS members. Joelle, ext. 139, or joellem@mnjcc.org to register.

Registration open for all winter programs. Aquafit, Zumba, Baby and Me, etc. Register at ext. 0.

Winter session of Shabbat Club for three- to six-year-olds with Sarah Brodbar-Nemzer. Games, songs, candles, crafts and more. Fridays, 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. starting Jan. 21. Register at ext. 0.

Hebrew courses Jan. 18 and 19. Eight-week courses emphasize Modern Hebrew reading, writing, and conversation skills. Ext. 154, sharonis@mnjcc.org.

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 22

What's New

NEW BIALIK CAMPUS

Bialik Hebrew Day School has announced the opening of registration for its new northern branch, slated to open on the Lebovic Campus in Vaughan in September 2013. Standing from left are philanthropists and Bialik supporters Irving Himel, Mel Himel, Pamela Himel and Joe Dwek. They look on as siblings Joanna Shore and Jonathan Spinner register their children for Bialik South in 2013 and Bialik North in 2014, respectively.

PEACE DOVES: Robbins Hebrew Academy students Jason Garbe, left, and David Ciss show off their kirigami doves, part of a tikkun olam project in which students folded 1,000 doves to show their hope for world peace. As part of the project, the students also read Isaac Bashevis Singer's story Why Noah Chose the Dove.

MAKING MUSIC: Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School Grade 4 student Tali Pukier, foreground, explains her self-made musical instrument – the rattle tattler – to Grade 1 students Adina Macklin, left, and Maya Sommer, right. Grade 4 students created a string, wind or percussion instrument and explained to their schoolmates, from kindergarten to Grade 8, how their instrument produces sound.

What's New is now online. You can find it at cjnews.com

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Frimette Lyons	Nov 27/10	117 Scenic Millway
Jo Lavitch	Nov 28/10	1679 Bathurst St
Bernie Frankel	Nov 27/10	1 Northwestern Av
Eleanor Chava Segalowitz	Nov 26/10	32 Barkwood Cres
Sybil Kunin	Nov 28/10	175 Cumberland St
Sarah Connor	Nov 28/10	3252 Dundas St W
Louis Savlov	Nov 29/10	645 Castlefield Ave
Rose Schacht	Nov 29/10	6200 Bathurst St
Vladimir Dorfman	Nov 29/10	601 Clark Ave W
Mina Miller	Nov 29/10	546 Steeles Ave W
Eddie Silverman	Nov 29/10	35 Canyon Ave
Alan Walton	Dec 1/10	20 Oxton Ave
Marc Huber	Nov 29/10	329 Betty Ann Dr
Ethel Shepherd	Dec 1/10	3560 Bathurst St.
Zvi Moses	Dec 2/10	1 Clark Avenue W
Sol Dennis	Dec 2/10	85 Skymark Dr
Helen Paciornik	Dec 2/10	55 Ameer Ave
Lily Cartman	Dec 5/10	59 Wolfe Street
Henry "Hak" Koretsky	Dec 7/10	21 Mayfair Ave
Henry Waks	Dec 7/10	61 Yorkville Ave
Dr. Arthur Rubinoff	Dec 7/10	54 Admiral Road
Patricia Cohen	Dec 6/10	506 County Road
Sam Levinson	Dec 9/10	7071 Bayview Ave
Eva Heti	Dec 7/10	1 Northwestern Av
Rosalie Glassbourg	Dec 8/10	1140 Bloor St W
Celia Finer	Dec 9/10	9800 Yonge St
Violet Ujazd	Dec 11/10	1201 Steeles Ave W
Helen Krakauer	Dec 9/10	355 St.Clair Ave W
Abraham Isaac Shniffer	Dec 11/10	120 Regina Ave
Allen Wassermuhl	Dec 6/10	517 Kingston Rd

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Ostrirov, Nyusya	Dec. 6/10	Private
Bendahan, Mercedes	Dec. 1/10	5935 Bathurst St
Fine, Jack	Dec. 1/10	115 Antibes Dr
Trakhtenberg, Bella	Dec. 2/10	170 Red Maple Rd
Orgad, Gavriel	Dec. 2/10	Private
Obazanek, Toby	Dec. 3/10	3560 Bathurst St
Fletcher, Isabel	Dec. 4/10	155 Antibes Dr
Chwaiewsky, Sam	Dec. 5/10	22 Norfinch Ave
Greenbaum, Samuel	Dec. 5/10	100 Antibes Dr
Lapsker, Arie	Dec. 5/10	7300 Yonge St
Rosenblum, Esther	Dec. 7/10	170 Red Maple Rd
Katz, Ada	Dec. 8/10	Private
Rykiss, Belle	Dec. 10/10	550 Cummer Ave
Blane, Vera	Dec. 10/10	3560 Bathurst St
Mukamal, Naima	Dec. 11/10	553 Lawrence Ave.
Ber, Zysha	Dec. 10/10	Private
Eckler, Morey	Dec. 10/10	Private
Wloski, Jozef	Dec 12/10	81 Townsgate Dr
Mazin, Semyon	Dec. 12/10	6091 Bathurst St
Ostrirov, Nyusya	Dec. 6/10

HEDREW BASIC

Anne David	Nov 29/10	718 Sheppard Ave W
Sidney Lovas	Nov 29/10	28 Crow's Nest
Lazar Hason	Dec 2/10	493 Brunswick Ave
Golda Kopanski	Dec 3/10	3560 Bathurst St
Pauline Grabel	Dec 5/10	7460 Bathurst St

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH
• HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE
• DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

On Campus

Rabbi, York U officials meet in wake of lawsuit threat

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Following a meeting with York University president Mamdouh Shoukri earlier this month, Rabbi Ahron Hoch was conciliatory but unrepentant as he reaffirmed the need to take action against antisemitism on university campuses.

Mamdouh Shoukri

York threatened Rabbi Hoch with a lawsuit after he sent an e-mail to members of the Dan Family Village Shul encouraging them to take action against former British MP George Galloway's lecture at the university on Nov. 16, as part of Galloway's "Free Afghanistan, Free Palestine, Free Speech" tour.

The rabbi's e-mail stated that by allowing Galloway, a Hamas supporter, to speak at York, Shoukri "again showed his amazing tolerance for antisemitism and lack of vigilance regarding the feeling of safety for Jewish students on campus."

York spokesperson Alex Bilyk said at the time that the e-mail "suggested Dr. Shoukri was antisemitic and not concerned about the safety of Jewish students on campus. That's untrue." In a letter to the rabbi, York's lawyer said the statement harmed the reputations of both Shoukri and the university, and demanded an immediate retraction and apology.

The recent meeting – which was also attended by York provost Patrick Monahan and University of Toronto law professor and former Canadian Jewish Congress president Ed Morgan – was meant to lower tensions.

It was described as "friendly" by Rabbi Hoch.

"We were greeted very warmly and not as adversaries in any way. We engaged in a productive dialogue, both during and after the meeting," he said in a mass e-mail sent to community members Dec. 10.

"The university changed course and they reached out to me to meet, which I was happy about. I'd rather be a constructive critic in a pleasant situation as opposed to a situation where there's real hostility," Rabbi Hoch told The CJN.

While he would not specifically talk about what went on in the meeting – both parties agreed to keep the discussion private – Rabbi Hoch stressed that it's necessary for the community to work together to curb antisemitism on all campuses.

"It must be highlighted that the recent events at York are not unique to York," he said in his latest e-mail. "They are happening on campuses all across the country. That these problems occur at York is particularly painful, because it is in our backyard and because of all the support that York provides to the advancement of Jewish education."

While action against antisemitism can and should be taken by community members, he told The CJN, university administrations need to take action as well.

"When you have sympathy to genocide, when you have student federations being led by Hamas sympathizers, there's an obligation on university administrators and leaders to speak out no matter how complex or controversial that might be.

"Under the guise of free speech and academic expression you have a continued normalization of the antisemitic ideal that Israel has no right to exist. That is a very dangerous phenomenon," he added.

"Right now, universities around North America are not doing anything about it. They don't want to touch it because it's complex.

"The war against Israel is also a war against the West. It's not just a Jewish issue here. It's a Canadian issue."

Bilyk told The CJN last week that York won't be pursuing a lawsuit against Rabbi Hoch.

Anything goes on campus? The answer is no

By WAYNE L. FIRESTONE
JTA

In recent weeks, Jewish student activists have confronted mock Israeli checkpoints, opposed a student group that wanted to raise funds to defy the Gaza blockade and fought to keep an Israeli hummus brand on campus. In some instances, efforts to delegitimize Israel have even included a sprinkling of American Jews and Israelis.

Opinion

Even if such incidents are exceptional, should we really accept that "anything goes" on campus? The answer is no.

Hillel's Schusterman International Center issued guidelines this week to ensure that local Hillels know which organizations, groups and speakers are considered valid partners in promoting civil and informed discourse on Israel.

Our guidelines state that "Hillel welcomes, partners with and aids the efforts of organizations, groups and speakers from diverse perspectives in support of Israel as a Jewish and democratic state."

We firmly state, however, that "Hillel will not partner with, house or host organizations, groups or speakers that as a matter of policy or practice:

- Deny the right of Israel to exist as a Jewish and democratic state with secure and recognized borders;
- Delegitimize, demonize or apply a double standard to Israel;
- Support boycott of, divestment from, or sanctions against the State of Israel;
- Exhibit a pattern of disruptive behaviour toward campus events or guest speakers, or foster an atmosphere of incivility."

These guidelines already are being utilized locally here in Washington. The Tufts Hillel referenced them to say no to a partnership with its local chapter of Students for Justice in Palestine based on the national organization's support of boycotts, divestment and sanctions.

Does this mean that debate or discussion among students might be stifled? Of course not.

Among the key tenets of the document is the principle that "Hillel welcomes a diversity of student perspectives on Israel and strives to create an inclusive, pluralistic community where students can discuss matters of interest and/or concern about Israel and the Jewish people in a civil manner."

At the same time, we reject efforts that may divide the Jewish community on campus over the potentially rich debate and discussion that occurs about Israel. We seek to engage and educate students not only to prepare them to advocate for Israel, but also to enrich their Jewish identities with an understanding of the centrality of Israel to their own lives and to Jewish civilization.

I am confident that Hillel can play a critical role in helping this generation of students not only develop a strong sense of Jewish identity, but also a personal connection and commitment to the State of Israel.

Wayne Firestone is the president and CEO of Hillel: The Foundation for Jewish Campus Life in Washington, D.C.

Social Networking
@
for the :-) generation

International

Israel & the Jewish World

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
- Columnists
- Features
- Breaking News
- Past Issues
- eCJN
- Heebonics
- Contests

and much more!

Hariri tribunal findings 'null and void': Khamanei

By AVI ISSACHAROFF
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Iranian Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei said Monday any findings by an international tribunal into the 2005 assassination of former Lebanese prime minister Rafiq Hariri would be invalid.

"This tribunal is a rubber-stamp one whose verdict is null and void whatever it is," state television quoted Khamenei as saying during a meeting with the emir of Qatar.

Iran is a supporter of Hezbollah, the Lebanese Shiite group that says the tribunal is a tool of Israel aimed at discrediting it by blaming its members for Hariri's murder.

Hezbollah and western diplomats say they expect members of the group to be indicted. Lebanese politicians fear a crisis, and possible relapse into sectarian violence if that happens.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri, Rafiq's son, visited Iran in November seeking its help to prevent political tensions.

Khamenei, the most powerful figure in the Islamic Republic, said: "I hope parties with influence involved in Lebanon will act on the basis of intelligence and wisdom so that this [tribunal outcome] does not become problematic."

Hezbollah, which is part of Lebanon's unity government, has repeatedly denied any involvement in the killing, and Hezbollah's leader, Hassan Nasrallah, has said he will not allow the arrest of any of its members.

A trial could not start before next September, the Special Tribunal for Lebanon has said.

Tensions remain high in Lebanon, with the report of the international tribunal investigating the murder of the former Lebanese prime minister soon to be released and Hezbollah's threats becoming more vocal.

The report is expected to implicate key Hezbollah figures in the assassination.

Over the weekend, senior officials in the radical Shiite organization threatened that if a compromise is not reached between the followers of the current prime minister and their own followers, Lebanon will "enter a new era."

Rafiq Hariri

The head of the Hezbollah faction in the Lebanese parliament, Muhammad Ra'ad, said that his party had given a last chance to efforts by Syria and Saudi Arabia to reach a compromise that would restore calm in Lebanon, but he warned that "time was short."

Ra'ad said that in a few days, those who collaborated against the "resistance," as Hezbollah likes to call itself, will have to make good use of their time.

Otherwise, they warned, Lebanon will enter a new era and Hezbollah will close accounts with all those who opposed the "resistance."

The Lebanese government was due to convene on Wednesday, following weeks when it did not meet because of tensions surrounding the international tribunal's report.

The meeting will be headed by Lebanese President Michel Suleiman, who is trying to draft a compromise agreement.

Hezbollah is demanding that the government end its financial backing of the international tribunal as a precondition for staying in the government.

But Hariri has refused, and the issue will be discussed on Wednesday.

Also on the meeting agenda is the case of Defence Minister Elias Murr.

Documents released on WikiLeaks suggest that Murr provided the U.S. government information about Hezbollah sites that Israel should bomb.

According to the two-year-old documents, he demanded that the Israelis avoid hitting Christian sites.

Murr apparently also instructed the Lebanese army to refrain from joining the fighting and to make do with civil defence operations. This information was relayed to U.S. diplomats during a lunch meeting.

Murr's plan was for the army to stay out of the fighting and, following a Hezbollah defeat at the hands of Israel, to take over the areas controlled by the Shiite group.

At the time of the meeting, in 2008, Suleiman was chief of staff of the army, and he was ordered by Murr not to interfere if Israel attacked.

With files from Reuters

Court sentences 16 in murder of Ilan Halimi

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUALEM — A French appeals court on Dec. 17 upheld the convictions of 16 people for their roles in the 2006 kidnapping, torture and murder of Parisian Jew Ilan Halimi, handing down sentences of up to 18 years in prison.

The appeals court in Creteil near Paris heard appeals of defendants already convicted by a lower court into the slaying of Halimi, who was lured by a young woman and then abducted and killed.

The ringleader, Youssouf Fofana, was not on trial in the proceedings that began Oct. 25. He chose not to appeal his conviction and life sentence.

Two of his close associates, Jean-Christophe Soumbou and Samir Ait Abdel Malek, were sentenced to 18 years behind bars in the verdict Dec. 17. A state prosecutor had sought 20 years for each. Malek had previously been sentenced to 15 years. Soumbous' penalty was unchanged.

Ilan Halimi

The appeals proceedings took place behind closed doors because two of the defendants were minors at the time. Minors aren't publicly identified when tried in court under French law.

A nine-year sentence was upheld against the young woman who had taken part in luring Halimi into the gang's clutches. She was one of the two minors when the crimes occurred.

Six people who took part in kidnapping Halimi received sentences of 12 to 15 years. Seven others received sentences ranging from eight months to 11 years in prison, which was given to one woman who recruited others to act as bait for kidnappings. An apartment building guard who made available the room where Halimi was held got 10 years.

One of the 17 defendants on trial was acquitted.

Halimi, 23, was held captive for more than three weeks. He was found naked, handcuffed and covered with burn marks near railroad tracks south of Paris on Feb. 13, 2006. He died on the way to the hospital.

The case revived worries in France about antisemitism, which is considered the main motive of those involved in the killing. It has led to deep anxiety in France's Jewish community, the largest in western Europe.

Twenty-four people, including eight women, were convicted in the original trial last year on a variety of charges, including kidnapping by an organized group and failing to assist a person in danger.

Fofana, a French citizen of Ivory Coast descent, was accused of five other kidnapping attempts. When he was convicted by the lower court, he brashly flashed a thumbs-up sign.

Disturbances that he had caused while a witness in the appeal led to a temporary suspension of the proceedings.

Britain withholding MIA info from Israeli parents

JTA

LONDON — The British government is refusing to release documents that could shed light on the fate of three missing Israeli soldiers, the Jewish Chronicle reported.

Miriam Baumel, the mother of one of the Israeli soldiers who has been missing in action since 1982, has been requesting the release of the documents for the last two years, according to the British newspaper.

"We are conscious that the release of sensitive information would cause harm to our relationship with Syria," the British Foreign Office has said in response to the requests, according to the newspaper.

Israeli soldiers Zachary Baumel, Yehuda Katz and Zvi Feldman have been officially listed as missing in action since a battle with Syrian and Palestinian forces near the Lebanese village of Sultan Yaqub at the end of the First Lebanon War.

Syrian forces are believed to have captured the soldiers and paraded them through the streets of Damascus. Britain's ambassador to Syria, Ivor Lucas, filed a report to London on the day of the battle and is believed to have witnessed the soldiers' capture, according to the Chronicle.

Miriam Baumel, through her British lawyers, is attempting to obtain a copy of the report. A Freedom of Information Act appeal has been filed, though no date has been set for the hearing.

"I am calling on the British government to act in a humanitarian manner and let the families know by releasing this document, for us to go further in finding our children," she told the Chronicle. "If you have children, if one of your children would be lost, how would you feel?"

After Carmel fire, a hands-off approach to forest land

By MARCY OSTER
JTA

JERUSALEM — Omri Boneh has been in a daze since the massive fire in Israel's Carmel forest.

The director of the northern region of Keren Kayemeth LeIsrael-Jewish National Fund, Boneh saw decades of the agency's work destroyed in the four-day inferno, which reduced swaths of the verdant forest in northern Israel to a black, dead landscape.

Boneh had personally planted thousands of the trees over a 25-year career as a forester on Mount Carmel.

But Boneh, whose name means "build" in Hebrew, doesn't want to dwell on the past – he's already thinking about the future.

The first step for rehabilitating the forest, Boneh says, is waiting, allowing nature to take its course. It's called natural regeneration.

"Planting, which is probably the most important action in forestry, will be just in case natural regeneration is not adequate," said Boneh, who has dealt with the aftermath of five other significant fires on Mount Carmel.

The most recent blaze, which broke out Dec. 2, was at least six times as large the next worst fire. Some 12,000 acres of land were burned and five million trees consumed. Forty-three people were killed, and 250 homes were destroyed or severely damaged.

Late last week, four days after the fire was extinguished, Israeli Environmental Minister Gilad Erdan convened the first government committee on the rehabilitation of plant and animal life for the Carmel forest region.

The committee agreed that natural regeneration was the best course of action and that no planting would take place in the Carmel in the coming year. The committee also suggested that buffer zones with sparse vegetation should be created between communities and roads to prevent the spread of fires to populated areas, as well as in large forest areas to prevent the spread within the forests.

Approximately $46 million would be needed for rehabilitation, the committee estimated. That includes rehabilitating plant and animal life and preventing soil erosion, and infrastructure repairs of trails, roads, camping grounds and observation points.

Compensation to the victims of the fire and their families would add to the estimate.

Not everything in the path of the fire was burned indiscriminately. In some places, the fire skipped a hill, valley or field, and in others, homes were spared. Boneh said he found that some of the groves he planted at the beginning of his career were only partially damaged. He called the surviving trees "a good start for the next generation."

Ido Izhaki, head of the University of Haifa's Carmel Research Center, has been researching the Carmel region since a major fire there in 1989. He agrees it would be a mistake to plant new trees on a large scale in the wake of the fire.

"The forest needs to be left alone to recover, with only minimal human intervention," Izhaki said.

Most of the trees burned were Allepo pines. Seeds from the massive trees, which have adapted themselves to forest fires, were released from the trees' pine cones by the heat of the fire and were spread far and wide by its coals and winds. These seeds will begin sprouting in a few weeks, according to Boneh.

At some point, he said, foresters could become involved in "selective thinning" to limit the new forest's density and help young trees grow, as well as some planting to ensure biodiversity – creating a mixed forest by reintroducing broadleaf trees such as oaks, carobs and other species natural to the area. Some of those trees also will begin to regenerate naturally soon, with sprouts emerging from the stumps of the destroyed trees.

Fires also contribute positively to a forest's growth, Izhaki said.

Following a massive fire in the Carmel fountains in 1989, he said that "we observed the development of flora and fauna in the region and saw that some 15 to 20 years after the fire, the forest reached a climax in terms of its fauna and vegetation diversity. This indicates that after about this amount of time following a fire, the forest will be home to more species of wildlife and vegetation than there were before the fire."

Fires, however, are only beneficial to biological diversity if they are infrequent. Today, due to human factors, the frequency of fires is too high, and thus the forest's recovery is likely to take longer, Izhaki said.

Friends group takes mission to India

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Magen David Synagogue in Mumbai, India. [Richard Diamond photos]

Students outside Sir Jacob Sassoon High School in Mumbai.

It was a smallish group by mission standards – only 10 participants in all – but organizers of a recent trip to India are hoping it will pay big dividends.

India is the next big frontier for Israeli commercial and diplomatic relations, said Richard Diamond, co-chair of a mission to India sponsored by Canadian Friends of Tel Aviv University (CFTAU). In a strategic sense, Israel's economic and political future rests on developing good relations with countries such as India, whose economy is growing at an impressive clip and whose stature in international relations is bound to grow. On the domestic scene, he stated, Jews should attempt to foster better relations with the local Indo-Canadian community.

Diamond, senior vice-president of Canderel Stoneridge Equity Group Inc., a real estate development company, said Tel Aviv University has an ongoing relationship with Indian academic institutions and sponsors academic gatherings regularly. But that's just one part of a burgeoning relationship that in recent years has seen Israel and India grow closer economically, politically and militarily, he said.

"India and Israel share many values. They're multicultural, secular, democratic, capitalistic with growing economies, highly oriented to education and both have conflicts with their neighbours," he said.

The defence relationship between the two countries "is huge," while India has become Israel's number 2 trading partner, behind only the European Union. It has eclipsed the United States, which has fallen to third place.

India is particularly interested in Israeli innovations in high tech. "They love to hear about Israel water management, solar power, and about a country that takes great economic strides without large economic resources," Diamond said. "Israel has talent, people, innovation. Those are its natural resources."

During the recent CFTAU mission, participants acted as ambassadors for the university and for Israel as well. They met with Indian business leaders, including a banker, a journalist, government representatives, Israeli diplomats and members of the Indian Jewish community. Diamond was impressed by a meeting with Bharat Wakhlu, resident director of Tata Services, "who was extremely knowledgeable about Israel." (The Tata Group is a leading Indian multinational conglomerate.)

Vanessa Valkin, executive director of CFTAU, said the mission also met with the Indian Friends of Tel Aviv University, which was created by Indian Jewish community leader Aaron Solomon. There are only about 5,000 Jews remaining in India, and in a country of 1.2 billion, Jews historically faced no discrimination.

The 2008 attack on the Chabad Lubavitch centre in Mumbai – carried out by Islamic terrorists linked to Pakistan – came as a shock, she said.

The group stayed at the same Taj Mahal Palace hotel in Mumbai that terrorists assaulted in 2008. Security at the hotel is run by Israelis, she said, and Israelis are also beginning to put their money into local real estate investments.

The mission visited the Lubavitch centre as well as a historic synagogue just outside Mumbai that was once the centre of Jewish life. Today, it serves only seven families.

In Delhi, the group attended Shabbat services, and they learned the small community is seeing many of its young people enter mixed marriages.

In late fall, TAU joined with the Confederation of Indian Industries to sponsor a conference of Indian and Israeli CEOs, "to foster business relationships," while over the last two years, the university hosted a couple of Indians studying in the Sofaer International MBA program. TAU feels it is sowing the seeds for future relationships that will benefit both countries, Valkin said.

Diamond believes the Canadian Jewish community should develop its relationship with the local Indo-Canadian community. "I feel it's natural for Canadian Jews to have good ties with the Indian community," and visiting their homeland is part of that process, he said.

Diamond, who's on the board of the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy (CIJA) and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto as well as chair of National Jewish Campus Life, has been to Israel several times with senior business and political figures. He believes bringing Indo-Canadians to Israel is a natural next step.

"This is part of a strategic move to change the Canadian Jewish perception of where their interests are. We have to think more about China and India and less about western Europe," he said.

Israel & the Jewish World

Israel Briefs

Bill passes hurdle

A bill that would validate conversions to Judaism through Israel's military rabbinate passed a preliminary reading in the Knesset. The measure, sponsored by David Rotem of the Yisrael Beiteinu Party, passed by a vote of 75 to 18. It was opposed by the haredi Shas Party. Yisrael Beiteinu and Shas are part of the majority government coalition. The bill, which still must pass two more readings in the Knesset, would allow the conversions to be approved by the state without the signature of the Chief Rabbinate. It would protect Israeli soldiers who have converted through military conversion courts from having their conversions overturned. The measure would force all state agencies – including rabbinic courts, the chief rabbis of cities and other Orthodox marriage registrars – to accept the converts as Jews. About 4,500 soldiers, the majority of them women, have converted to Judaism while in the Israeli military. Sephardi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Amar has formed a committee to study religious ways that would allow him to approve the conversions.

Bon Jovi to play Israel

Bon Jovi will perform in Israel in the coming year, the band's lead singer Jon Bon Jovi told Larry King on his talk show. Bon Jovi said the rock band would include Israel on its list of stops during its "The Circle" world tour in 2011. The group, which was at the height of its popularity in the 1980s, also will visit Greece for the first time. Several high-profile musical artists have cancelled shows in Israel in the past year, bowing to political pressure from pro-Palestinian groups. Rod Stewart appeared at Ramat Gan Stadium in June. The rock band Deep Purple will return to Israel in May for two concerts, Ynet reported.

EU waits on statehood

The European Union won't recognize Palestinian statehood until an "appropriate" time, its Foreign Affairs Council said in a statement. The 27 EU foreign ministers issued the statement in response to a letter from Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat to EU foreign policy head Catherine Ashton asking the body to join countries that have already recognized a unilaterally declared Palestinian state. Argentina and Brazil announced their support last week of a unilateral declaration of a Palestinian state. "The EU commends the work of the Palestinian Authority in building the institutions of the future State of Palestine and reiterates its full support for their endeavors in this regard and the [Palestine Prime Minister Salam] Fayyad plan," read the EU Foreign Affairs Council's statement. "[The council] reiterates its readiness, when appropriate, to recognize a Palestinian state," it added, saying that "urgent progress is needed towards a two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict." The statement said the ministers were disappointed that Israel didn't extend its settlement freeze and reiterated that their "views on settlements, including in east Jerusalem, are clear: they are illegal under international law and an obstacle to peace."

Carmel firefighter dies

The death of a firefighter who tried to save passengers on a burning bus raised the toll from the Carmel forest fire to 44. Danny Hayat, 35, died Saturday at the Rambam Medical Center in Haifa. He was burned over at least two-thirds of his body and had undergone two skin transplants since the fire two weeks ago. He was in an induced coma. Hayat, a father of two whose wife is pregnant, was one of three firefighters who tried to pull prison guards from a bus that was engulfed in flames while rushing to evacuate a prison in the path of the historic blaze earlier this month. Thirty-eight of the passengers on board were burned to death. The other victims of the fire, which is being called Israel's worst civilian disaster, were three police officers – including Haifa Police Chief Ahuva Tomer – two firefighters and a 16-year-old volunteer. On Sunday, the Israeli cabinet decided to award financial rights to the families of those who were killed trying to rescue the prison service bus during the Carmel fire similar to those given to the families of fallen soldiers. According to the decision, the families of Hayat and fellow firefighter Uri Semandayev, Fire Service volunteer Elad Riven and bus driver David Navon will be recognized as bereaved families according to the 1950 Families of Fallen Soldiers Law.

GOLDEN GLOBE AWARD NOMINATION
BEST ACTOR - Paul Giamatti
MUSICAL OR COMEDY

LEONE D'ORO GOLDEN LION AWARD VENICE 2010 INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL
GALA PRESENTATION TORONTO 2010 INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL
WINNER AUDIENCE AWARD SAN SEBASTIAN 2010 INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL CENTERPIECE GALA AFI 2010 FILM FESTIVAL

★★★★
"ONE OF THE YEAR'S MOST SATISFYING FILMS."
NY DAILY NEWS

"A TRIUMPH... YOU'RE IN FOR A COUPLE OF HOURS IN GREAT COMPANY."
Los Angeles Times

"Giamatti brings massive conviction to the glorious train wreck that is Barney. Rosamund Pike is a revelation as the good wife Miriam, the love of his life. And Hoffman deftly steals every scene he's in... A TRIO OF OSCAR-WORTHY PERFORMANCES."
MACLEAN'S

"A tour de force performance by Giamatti in A FILM OF GREAT ROMANTIC, DRAMATIC AND COMEDIC SWEEP."
THE HUFFINGTON POST

"The only experience more pleasurable than watching Paul Giamatti inhabit the deeply flawed soul of Barney Panofsky is watching him in a VIRTUOSO DUET WITH DUSTIN HOFFMAN."
Entertainment Weekly

Paul Giamatti
Barney's Version
Rosamund Pike Minnie Driver Rachelle Lefevre Scott Speedman and Dustin Hoffman
BASED ON THE NOVEL BY MORDECAI RICHLER
SUBJECT TO CLASSIFICATION
Serendipity Point Films
Opens in Toronto and Montreal December 24
Everywhere January 14

Adventure travel in the Galapagos Islands

By MELODY WREN
Special to The CJN

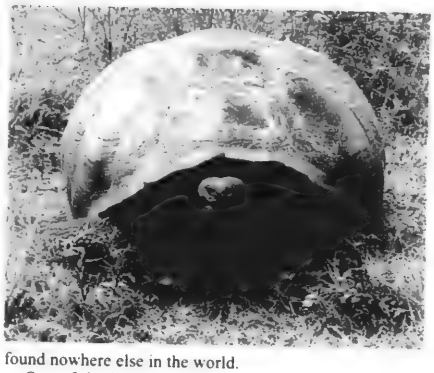
The best way to see the breathtaking Galapagos Islands is to travel by ship, and the smaller, the better.

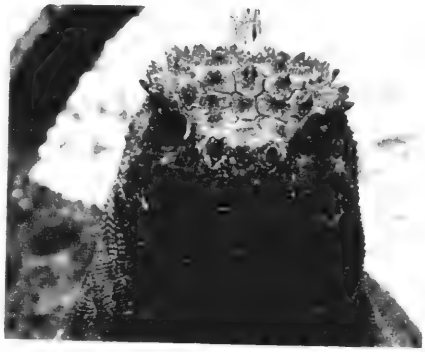
In the highly regulated Galapagos National Park, smaller vessels are given access to more islands. Recently, I travelled through them on the Ecoventura line's 65-foot, 20-passenger motor yacht Eric.

After a short flight from Guayaquil, Ecuador, to San Cristobal Island to join the Eric, our itinerary for the seven-night journey took us first to Genovesa in the north, then east to Fernandina, a relatively young island at half a million years old. We then worked westward through successively older islands back to San Cristobal, crossing the equator four times.

The Galapagos Islands sit right atop the equator: an archipelago of volcanic peaks spread across 130,000 square kilometres from stark Fernandina to relatively fertile Santa Cruz and San Cristobal. They are separated from the mainland of South America by 965 kilometres of very deep water, and lie at the confluence of marine currents from the Antarctic, equatorial Pacific and South American coast.

The hot- and cold-water temperatures give rise to a wild diversity of habitats and creatures adapted to them. This extraordinary ecosystem is home to more than 3,000 varieties of plants and animals, approximately 20 per cent found nowhere else in the world.





Animals in the Galapagos Islands tend to ignore humans — unless you get too close. Pictured, clockwise from top left, a giant land tortoise, the stern gaze of the marine iguana, a nazca boobie and her eggs, and finally, a sea lion relaxes with her cub. [Melody Wren photos]

One of the highlights of our trip was that the animals ignore human visitors unless you get too close. Any month is good to visit, but October is particularly special because of all the newborns and hatchlings we saw. We snorkelled with penguins and white-tipped sharks and sea lions, and came face to face with giant tortoises. We stepped into a veritable maternity ward with dozens of sea lions nursing their newborns.

Ambling along the shoreline of Santiago, we came across fur sea lions, a species that was once on the verge of extinction. A glut of marine iguanas lounging lazily in the sun blended into the landscape so well so you had to step carefully to avoid stepping on them or their droppings. Hundreds of dolphins swam alongside our ship one evening, and another day, as we crossed the Bolivar Channel, we spotted seven Bryde's whales just off the bow. We hiked along ancient lava tunnels and felt like explorers going back to the beginning of time.

Every day we travelled to one or two islands by Zodiac, tossed by the high rolling waves, causing us all to screech and our driver, Luis, to giggle like a schoolboy at our reactions.

Each island features different types of birds. We crossed the equator toward Genovesa, a volcanic caldera that is home to many bird species: red-footed boobies with their scarlet webbed feet, Nazca boobies, Galapagos mocking birds with their piercing eyes, four species of Darwin finches, and the elusive short-eared owl as it hunted over an open lava field. On Fernandina, we walked on a coral sand beach where swallow-tailed and lava gulls gather near tide pools. As we entered a forest of cactus and mangroves where great frigate birds were nesting, the males inflated their striking red throat pouches to attract females as they flew overhead.

On stark Espanola Island we saw many pairs of blue-footed boobies perform their ritual mating dance, lifting their bright cerulean feet, offering gifts of twigs to each other. Espanola is also the only nesting place of the wave albatross, a gallant bird, majestic in the air but awkward ashore.

Snorkelling was a focal point of the trip – even for the water shy – who soon were enraptured by the colourful inhabitants of the crystal-clear water: angel fish, parrot fish, yellow tailed grails, surgeon fish, sea urchins, white-tipped reef sharks, sting rays and chocolate-chip starfish (yes, that is their name). We had our picture taken with tiny Galapagos penguins as we snorkelled around Tagus Cove, on the western side of Isabela Island. On the cliffs of Isabela we were surprised to see graffiti, some of it dating back to the 1800s.

Once we returned to mainland Ecuador, the noise and bustle seemed to have multiplied in our absence, in jarring contrast to the calm and largely unspoiled beauty of the Islands.

Wren's trip was sponsored by Ecoventura, a company that has a fleet of three small ships and is Ecuador's first carbon-neutral company. The Eric is one of the first boats in its fleet to have wind turbines, and solar panels. www.ecoventura.com.

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

Lorraine Kimsa Theatre for Young People
"This is a show that the whole family can enjoy!" Star
A YEAR WITH FROG — AND — TOAD
ONSTAGE NOW - TO DEC. 30 ONLY!
11am & 2pm | for ages 3 & up
This delightful Tony Award-nominated Broadway musical celebrates friendship and the attributes that make each of us different and special.
CALL OR CLICK : 416.862.2222 | LKTYP.CA
165 FRONT STREET EAST, TORONTO
EDUCATION PARTNERS
BMO Financial Group
SEASON DESIGN
GOVERNMENT & FOUNDATION PARTNERS
Canadian Heritage
METCALF FOUNDATION
The Ontario Arts Council and the Ontario Trillium Foundation are agencies of the Government of Ontario.

2011 MEMBERSHIPS STILL AVAILABLE FROM TORONTO JEWISH FILM SOCIETY

Attention Film Lovers: Subscription tickets for 2011 are still available from the Toronto Jewish Film Society. Eight film events have been scheduled on selected Sundays at the Al Green Theatre, Miles Nadal JCC, from January to December. To become a member, please contact Joelle Malka, 416-924-6211, ext. 139, or e-mail joellem@mnjcc.org

• • •

TV Show Explores Sex and Religion: Members of Toronto's First Narayever Congregation are featured in an upcoming episode of Vision-TV's series, Sex + Religion. In an episode titled Same Sex Attraction, the show explores how one's sexual orientation might affect one's relationship with God. In the show, Mitchell and Orrin, the first gay members of First Narayever to get married after the congregation voted to allow gay marriage, discuss their experiences. Airs Dec. 27 at 11 p.m. The final episode, Sexual Fantasy, airs the same evening at 11:30 p.m.

• • •

Names in the News: A YouTube video titled Magen Boys Entertainment Presents Hip Hop Chanukah that has been circulating over the Internet shows Rabbi Mendel Kaplan of Chabad Flamingo in Thornhill and an energetic troupe of yeshiva boys in black hats, and Magen Boys hip-hop artists and break dancers celebrating the miracle of Chanukah with messianic joy at Yonge and Dundas streets.

Their extraordinary performance opens with a staged confrontation between the rabbi and some street performers who pretend to object to the "religious crap" he seems to be laying on the public as he discusses the holiday. The interaction quickly evolves into a spirited hip hop rap about Chanukah, followed by the lighting of a large menorah, and some high-octane dancing. Meanwhile, a steadily increasing circle of smiling observers gathers, many using cameras to record the lively piece of street theatre.

"Our goal has been to inspire the performance of mitzvot," Rabbi Kaplan told The CJN. "If you can be the cause of a single mitzvah, that has enormous meaning and importance." More specifically, the American-born rabbi, who moved to the GTA in 1998, added that he hoped the video would inspire people to light Chanukah candles. The YouTube video has had more than 100,000 hits, he said.

Watch it here: http://bit.ly/hp7s5j

• • •

• Mel Gibson Shenanigans: The New York Post reported last week that actress Winona Ryder heard Mel Gibson make antisemitic remarks long before his taped racist rants were broadcast around the world.

In the January issue of GQ, Ryder says she was at a Hollywood party 15 years ago and heard Gibson call Jews "oven dodgers," a term she said she had never heard before. Ryder said that at the time no one believed her.

• • •

Theatre Notes

• Acting Up Stage Company and Studio 180 Theatre present Parade, the musical by Jason Robert Brown and Alfred Uhry, and directed by Joel Greenberg, about the infamous Leo Frank case. $32 to $40. Berkeley Street Theatre Upstairs, Dec. 30 to Jan. 22, 2011. 416-368-3110, www.paradethemusical.com

• Birdland Theatre and Talk Is Free Theatre present Assassins, the dark killer musical by Stephen Sondheim. The Theatre Centre, 100-1087 Queen St. W. Jan. 6 to 23, 2011. 416-504-7529, www.artsboxoffice.ca.

• The Next Stage Theatre Festival, which features eight presentations by local and international artists, runs Jan. 5 to 16, 2011, at the Factory Theatre, Toronto.

• • •

Passages: John Katz, the Philadelphia-based film maven, had many Toronto connections. He was an instructor in the film studies department at York University for many years until he took early retirement 12 years ago. He was also a programmer and consultant for the Toronto International Film Festival in its early days and for the Toronto Jewish Film Festival from 1993 to 1996. Former students from York whom he influenced include Niv Fichman and Larry Weinstein, who went on to found Rhombus Media, a top Canadian production house; and Bill Gladstone, writer of this column, who studied film at York in the 1970s. Katz, who died Nov. 26 in Philadelphia at age 72, leaves his wife Joan Saltzman of Philadelphia, and his son Jesse and grandson Max Katz of Toronto.

Former jazz singer releases CD based on biblical story

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

A Thornhill mother who is a supply teacher, former jazz singer and ba'alat tshuvah (a Jewish woman who has become observant), has drawn on those aspects of her life in a recent creative endeavour. Liora Oppenheimer (who used to sing as Lowa Kay) recently released a CD called Hannah & Peninah: A musical interpretation, consisting of 16 original songs based on the Book of Samuel.

The music is part of a script that Oppenheimer wrote after her fourth child was born, she said in an interview at her home office. Inspiration came to her in a dream, initially. "At 3 a.m., I woke up and had to write the lyrics down."

It occurred to her that she had much in common with the biblical Peninah, and with Hannah, who yearned for a child, and she decided to take a closer look at the text.

Oppenheimer found herself intrigued by the multi-layered story, and by the character of Peninah – the other wife of Elkanah, Hannah's husband and mother of his children before Hannah conceived.

Issues addressed in the story, including lashon hara and bullying, demonstrated in Peninah's treatment of Hannah, are relevant today, Oppenheimer said.

As well, she added, she hopes the CD and the play, which she still plans to mount, will inspire people to take classes and learn more about the text and the issues that arise in it.

Continued on page 32

FLORIDA
furnished APARTMENTS from Churchill
NORTH MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
INTRACOASTAL YACHT CLUB
16900 North Bay Rd, Sunny Isles Beach, FL
• Gorgeous Intracoastal Waterways views from each apartment balcony
• Waterfront boardwalk, marina and pier
• 5,000 sq. ft health center with spa services
• Children's playground and playroom
Mention CJN for a Special Discount!
• LARGE APARTMENTS WITH BALCONIES
• FULL KITCHENS AND APPLIANCES
• KOSHER DISHES AVAILABLE FOR MONTHLY STAYS
• WASHER & DRYER IN APARTMENT
• OUTDOOR POOLS AND WHIRLPOOLS
Included:
• Manual Keys
• Parking
• Linens and Towels
• Housekeeping
CENTRAL MIAMI BEACH
Churchill Suites
CROWN MIAMI BEACH
4041 Collins Avenue, Miami Beach, FL
• Newly renovated oceanfront property
• Beautiful views from each apartment balcony
• Fitness center with cardio equipment
• Near many shuls and kosher restaurants
877-424-7848

Toronto Jewish Theatre presents:
Canadian Premiere of the fiercely romantic drama
Hard Love
by
Motti Lerner
Directed by Ari Weisberg
January 5 - 16, 2011
Hannah and Zvi are reunited after divorcing twenty years earlier. Raised in Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim, the couple ended their marriage when Zvi turned his back on Judaism and Hannah did not. Now the teenage children from their second marriages have become romantically involved, forcing Hannah and Zvi back into each other's lives.
PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

Cadence boasts slick vocal acrobatics, instrumental imitation

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Unlike many a cappella groups who just sing lyrics, the four members of vocal group Cadence also use their voices to imitate instruments. Amazingly, they can imitate horns, percussion, bass and other instruments, which allows them to sound like a full band.

The internationally acclaimed group spans the eras with a strong focus on swing music and the jazz era. "We are going for that vintage-era look with black fedoras and suits and matching ties, kind of like a Rat Pack, cool kind of look," says Cadence singer Carl Berger.

In October, Cadence released its third CD, Speak Easy, to rave reviews. Speak Easy is an equal mix of traditional jazz standards including songs such as On the Street Where You Live, Ain't That a Kick in the Head and Just a Gigolo, revamped pop tunes such as Black Cars and all-new, instant-vintage originals.

Speak Easy boasts of slick vocal acrobatics, instrumental imitation and infectious energy. Speak Easy's arrangements, by members of the group, include nine cover songs and three originals penned by Berger and singer Aaron Jensen, Good Love, High and Drysville and The Tramps.

"Good music is good music whatever instrument you play it on, so a song has to sound good on a piano or a guitar with the voice before it can be really successful as an a cappella song," Berger says.

Cadence has shared the stage with musical greats such as Bobby McFerrin, Quincy Jones and Gordon Lightfoot. They want their audiences leaving their upbeat and humorous show both entertained and happy. Berger says the music has a serious edge to it, but at the same time, Cadence thrives off a connection with their audiences and that includes having the crowd joining them for parts of songs.

Cadence goes for the vintage-era look. Carl Berger is pictured at right.

A highlight for Cadence this year was to be part of the much-anticipated Kevin Spacey film Casino Jack. Cadence sings the original score to the movie's soundtrack, along with Toronto jazz singer Emilie-Claire Barlow. In fact, it was Barlow who introduced Cadence to the film's composer, Canadian Jonathan Goldsmith.

The group is coming off a celebrated European tour, and in 2011, Cadence's appearances will include performances in New Orleans, Boston and Vancouver, and a Jazz.FM91, live-to-air concert on Jan. 20 from their hometown of Toronto.

Balancing touring and family life is a big challenge, Berger says. Berger and his wife, Heidi, a logistician for a consulting company, have a two-year-old son, Marley.

"We are lucky that our significant others are very supportive of what we do. My wife particularly is kind of our number 1 fan and really wants me to keep pursuing what I am doing, but it is a huge challenge.

"We try to keep our trips short when possible, but the added responsibility of having a kid at home puts a little stress on the relationship, but it always works out in the end. Sometimes they join me on the road," Berger says

Along with Berger and Jensen, the other members of the group are Kurt Sampson and Ross Lynde.

Although Berger is the only Jewish member of Cadence, the group has been booked at bar mitzvahs and Jewish weddings and other events, and because the group is not using any instruments, "we can perform in a synagogue on Shabbat and we do that once in a while. So, we have learned a few Hebrew songs."

Cadence is in the midst of recording a holiday album to be released in 2011, and Berger hopes that it will include a Chanukah song or two.

You can sample and download some of the group's songs on their website at www.cadence-unplugged.com.

Oppenheimer looks to make Torah more immediate

Continued from page 31

A native of Israel who immigrated at age five, Oppenheimer (née Kigel) was raised secular. It wasn't until her late 20s, when she spent time in Israel on an Aish Hatorah Jerusalem fellowship, that she began to explore Judaism.

A French major at the University of Toronto, Oppenheimer also spent a year in Aix en Provence. As well, she pursued jazz singing and other creative outlets, taking a script-writing course and writing a play for the Fringe Festival. She had also taken voice courses at the Royal Conservatory as a teenager.

In 1996, when she was in her late 20s, she won first prize in the Ontario Pop competition's singer-songwriter category, an immediate springboard for a budding career as part of the French Canadian jazz scene.

Now, Oppenheimer's dream is to mount her play as a full musical. She has been reworking it as an opera instead of the original score, which has elements of pop, jazz and opera.

The show is approximately 90 minutes long and features five leads and half a dozen secondary roles. Originally, it was supposed to have an all-female cast playing for women audiences, so Oppenheimer sang all the male characters' parts on the CD.

She produced the CD herself, hiring arranger Fishel Pustilnik and Pinball Recordings studio.

Oppenheimer sees work like hers as filling a gap. "I think there's room for Jewish entertainment on a higher level spiritually, and there's so much heritage in the Torah that's not being exposed."

As well, she said, portraying Bible stories dramatically, makes them "more immediate and more lasting," she said.

KING SOLOMON'S TABLE
COR
OPEN
For Your Dining Pleasure
SATURDAY DEC 25
& SATURDAY JAN 1
6:30 PM – MIDNIGHT
Buffet & à la carte
Please make reservations
Take-out also available
3705 CHESSWOOD AT SHEPPARD 416.630.1666

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE
L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS
A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home

No Snow Zone
Snow removal is a costly and energy-consuming process. At L'chaim, however, snow melts "on contact" with the warm hearts of our residents and staff.
L'chaim occupies a unique middle ground between retirement and nursing homes. It's a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs and caring staff allow them to do just that. Discover everything L'chaim has to offer. — Judy Cohen, Founder 416.398.7898 L'chaim 718 Sheppard W.
www.lchaimretirement.ca Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

Boxing Day Sales

BOXING WEEK

Where are you going to find a store that puts everything on sale?

Luxurious cloth coats and jackets in a huge variety of colour and style. sizes 0-24.

Lightweight, warm down coats and jackets made in Canada and designer brands

Microfibre coats and jackets with removable hoods and liners in lots of colours.

The best outerwear selection in Canada for men and women is now on Sale!

LORNE'S

101 Spadina Ave., (at Adelaide), Toronto

Sun. Dec. 26 – Fri. Dec. 31 from 9 a.m. – 7 p.m.

416–596–1058

L'ATELIER

4000 STEELES AVE W 6 WOODBRIDGE TEL 905-850-7406

You are cordially invited To our annual

BOXING DAY Sale Event

Everything

MUST GO

Bring in this invitation with you and Receive from 50 to 75% off On Fall-Winter Collection

4000 Steeles Ave. West, Unit #6 Woodbridge, Ont. L4L 4V9

Tel: 905-850-7406 • Fax: 905-850-1204 • maisonlatelier@rogers.com

FREE Leaf Bag with order

Protect Your Table

Made-To-Measure Table Pads

Prevents scratches, burns & spills

Free in-home service • Factory Direct Pricing

DOVER PAD QUALITY SINCE 1950

Now available in Calgary

Montreal: (514) 420-6030

Canada: (800) 354-4445

www.doverpad.ca

Select model pads are exempt from this special given their already low, low pricing!*

20%* Off! Boxing Weeks EXTRAVAGANZA On Sale from Jan. 5 - Jan. 15th

It's warm in Siberia, really

I finished reading Ian Frazier's long and funny Travels in Siberia on a snowy night, which proved to be Montreal's first real return to winter. Much of Frazier's travels take place during a late-summer ramble he made with two supremely strange but likable Russian guides. Upon returning to his New Jersey home and Manhattan circle of writer friends, he was met with repeated disappointment when he told them that his Siberia hadn't been cold at all, but swampy, mosquito-ridden, a gigantic expanse of forests, riverways, rutted roads and rail lines.

By Norman Ravvin
Special to The CJN

Frazier will be familiar to readers of The New Yorker, where he routinely publishes essays and humour pieces. In 1989, three issues of the magazine were devoted to his loving and sharp-eyed view of the history and contemporary state of the American Great Plains.

Work on Travels in Siberia (Farrar, Straus and Giroux) began in 1993, just after the fall of the Soviet Union. He became "infected with a love of Russia," which led him to return repeatedly to the huge area of the country east of St. Petersburg, which touches the Arctic Circle, shares its long southern border with China and Mongolia, and whose Pacific coast stretches from the Sea of Japan to within a few miles of the Alaskan coast.

Travel books often traffic in clichés, but Frazier relies on none of them. His book is not aimed at helping intrepid readers approximate his Siberian route. And he does not make the effort to convince his readers that understanding Siberia will aid them in comprehending post-Cold War economics, political trends or climate issues. Frazier is astute on these fronts, but he addresses them indirectly. The guiding and constant goal of his book is to convey his own unexplainable love for Russia, and to explore the strangest, the richest, the most foreign aspects of Russian culture and daily life.

Frazier and his two guides travelled over much of Siberia in a Renault van that contributed its own narrative of spectacular and farcical breakdowns, followed by spit and glue repairs on the roadside.

But deep into Siberia, roadways give way to train travel; Frazier and his companions pack themselves and the Renault into a boxcar (a vagon in Russian) for a bizarre overnight ride with a pair of other eastbound vehicles and their passengers. A rented truck and drivers take them farther, across ice roads on Lake Baikal and up the frozen Lena River.

The cities of Siberia, many built on spec on the taiga during Soviet times, are an odd agglomeration of old Russia, with revered wooden chapels, disregarded monumental statues of Lenin and weird modern creations, like the Mega-Ikea Mall at Novosibirsk. Its parking lot is empty, but locals trudge from bus stops to shop the "hallways as wide as airplane runways." The mall's background Muzak is "bizarre, unthreatening American country songs, in a style that might be called shopping country."

On his winter travels Frazier is often put up in the homes of Russians, who convey a mix of love and distress over the challenges of northeastern Russian lives. On his initial summer trip, his lead guide is forever on the lookout for acceptable places to camp out. These settings, often trash strewn, evoke the margins of Russian cities, where the detritus of contemporary life is the disheartening, almost farcical borderland before one enters the countryside.

One has to dip into Travels in Siberia to appreciate how Frazier handles this aspect of Russian life without rancour, self-righteousness or western superiority. He meets it head on, usually with humour.

Near the end of his travels in Siberia, Frazier puts his finger on one of the key characteristics of his experiences. Hardly ever, while in Russia, does he feel "normal." Sitting with a scientist friend on the major campus at Novosibirsk, he is surprised to find that he "felt normal. I had never felt just that normal in Russia before... I had been to Siberia five times, to western Russia five or six more. Never in all those travels had I felt merely normal."

These concluding thoughts are the closest Frazier comes to explaining his Russia love. More often he operates wonderfully and straightforwardly as a recorder of the sights and scenes that motivate that love.

Norman Ravvin is chair of the Concordia Institute for Canadian Jewish Studies.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ALL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION SWAP EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
123 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
125 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
126 AB ZONA PROPERTIES
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
131 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT OF TOWN PROPERTIES
185 "OUT OF COUNTRY" PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES EXCH. SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
233 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
482 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-787-1712
www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

ADDED VALUE BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER THE SALE

At David Eichorn Realty we constantly strive to earn your trust and your business by attending to all your needs throughout the listing and sale process. Listing with us gives you access to a variety of essential value-added services under the same roof for less than you'd pay elsewhere:

RELOCATION • PACKING • MOVING CLEANUP • JUNK REMOVAL

Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Representative (416) 787-1712

BATHURST / LAWRENCE — NEW PRICE
Spacious renovated & decorated 2 bdrm bungalow in prime central location close to TTC, shops, schools. Eat-in kitchen, sep entry to fin bsmt.$595,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / LAWRENCE — NEW PRICE
Spacious 3 + 3 bdrm bung in prime location. Sep entry to in-law suite, new laminate flrs, family-size eat-in kit. Steps to TTC, Spadina subway, schools, shops. $529,000. Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS RENOVATION OPPORTUNITY
Attn Builders! Classic 3 bdrm, 2 storey on deep 41 X 130 ft lot in desirable location close to newly renovated homes. Prime central location close to TTC, shops, schools. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $629,999 — ACT NOW! Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

* * *

3000 BATHURST CONDO
Renovated & decorated thruout. 2 + 1 bdrms, 2 baths, approx 1,500 sq ft, W exposure, generous entertaining area, gleaming parquet flrs, brand new appls. Shows a 10+ Avail immed. $399,900 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

SOLD FOR 100% OF ASKING PRICE
BATHURST / LAWRENCE
Deceptively large! 5 + 1 bdrm home on 50 x 140 ft lot. Large rear addition, spacious dining room, eat-in kit. Multi-purpose main floor den could serve as guest room, office or hobby room. Mostly hardwood floors. Call Daniel Weisberg, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDOS
FOR SALE: Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes thruout. 2 pkg, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Broker (416) 787-1712.

FOR RENT Bright, sunny 2 bdrm, 2 baths, open concept, w/o to open balcony. Shows well. ONLY $1,650 / MONTH — ACT NOW! Call Ben Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash.

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated

Forest Hill
REAL ESTATE INC. - BROKERAGE
416-488-2875 Forest Hill Village | 416-785-1500 Central | 416-226-1987 Bayview

CENTRAL PROPERTIES

ARMOUR HEIGHTS-AMAZING CURB APPEAL-MOVE RIGHT IN
Beautifully renovated 3bdrms-2 St on magnificent 40x140.75' professionally landscaped fenced lot. Quality finishes! $759,000 Patti Pollock* 416-226-1987

CONDOMINIUM PROPERTIES

NEW FOREST HILL 2 BDRM CONDO BATHURST/ST. CLAIR $610,000
Fabulous s/e view upgrade, eat-in kit, balcony, hrdwd combined liv/ din, 2 bath, 1134 sq.ft., concierge, steps to subway. Manlyn Merrick* 416-488-2875

PERFECT FOR YOUR PARENT 2 NEPTUNE DR LIFELEASE
$179,900 2bdrm condo for 65+Yr. Parking & locker, concierge. A Wonderful Lifestyle for the young at heart. Heddy Blaug 416-226-1987

FABULOUS LIFE LEASE BLDG SUNFILLED UNIT! $167,900
1 bdrm, 1 bath. Faces courtyard. Benefit from Baycrest activities. Steps to all. Lynne Elkind* 416-488-2875

RENTAL PROPERTIES

SPECTACULAR EXECUTIVE RENTAL ON SECLUDED CUL DE-SAC $8,500.00
Entertainers dream home! Huge 140' lot, dbl garage, spa like master ens bath, Shows 10++ Russell Pearsall* 416-488-2875

Broker * Sales Representative
www.foresthill.com

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

RE/MAX Rodica Iliescu
Sales representative
Remax All Stars Realty Inc., Brokerage
Office 905-477-0011 Direct 647-204-4663
Email: rodica@rodicas.com 5071 Hwy. 7 E., Unionville
Each office individually owned & Operated
For a FREE market evaluation, go to www.realestatesalestoronto.ca

88 Promenade Circle
Thornhill neighbourhood, demand location for schools, walking distance Promenade Mall. NEW condo, beautiful 8th flr. large apartment,1,093 sq. ft. 2+1 bdr., 2 bath. $454,000.

Thornhill, Liberty Project
New spac. condo. apt., great schools & neighbourhood, trans. & shops. Promenade Mall. Your destination to home! Approx. 1,300 sq. ft., 2 + 1 bdrms. $486,000.

Bath./Rutherford, Lebovic Campus Neighbourhood
New detach. home, never lived in, beautiful & large. 3 sunny bdrms. on the 2nd flr., main flr. has lovely liv. & din. rm. with a very upgr. kit., with w/o to deck & backyard. Approx. 2,000 sq. ft. $630,000.

FOR RENT

North Park Condominiums
Short-term, fully furn., beautiful, spac., mod. Penthouse, 3 bdrms. Jan. occup., 1,700 sq. ft., $3,500./mo.
*Not intended to solicit properties listed and buyers and/or sellers under contract.

ESSIE SHER
Thornhill Woods $569,900
Lovely home on quiet Crescent. 4 bdrms w/3 full upper level washrooms ...hard to find at this price!!! Main flr laundry. Huge kit. fin bsmnt. Private maintenance free garden. A gem!
Call Essie 416-464-5261
Re/Max Realtron Rlty. Inc.
416-782-8882

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Allen-Lawrence - 3 bed., 2 bth. on 2nd flr. of a 7-plex, equipped, balcony, carport prkng., coin laundry in bldg., $1300/mo.+ utils. 416-783-0179, 905-886-5515, evg.

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar.
Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting.
6 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 • 416-631-0388 Suite

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373
BATHURST/SHEPPARD
3 bdrms, 2 bths, fam size kit, liv & din comb, fin bsmt, dble drve, gar, large lot, many extras!
416-633-7373

15 HOUSES FOR RENT

3 br. bungalow in North York avail. immed. $1700/mo all incl. Call after 3 p.m. 416-250-0767.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

A 2 bdr. co-op apt. Person selling is also a stylist offering FREE haircuts. Call: 416-782-8451.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

Delray Beach - Boca - Boynton Kings Point - Glen Eagles - Vizcaya Polo - Boca West - Hunters Run-Westchester Marty@funsunproperties.com Realty Associates 561-909-7424.

MIAMI BEACH - MIMOSA CONDO For Sale by Owner, great Ocean View $235K on Low Floor 305-895-3000.

MIAMI BEACH CARRIAGE CLUB Large 2/2, Ocean View, Low Floor David - Kotler Rlty 305-895-3000.

WILLIAMS ISLAND CONDO Magnificent 3 Beds. & 3 Baths. 3,000 square feet Marble Floors $699K Furnished 305-895-3000.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

PREMIUM ADDRESS IN FOREST HILL
355 St. Clair Ave. W./Tower Hill West
Luxuriously renovated 1 and 2 bedroom suites with 2 full bathrooms. Stainless Steel appliances, balconies with spectacular views and concierge service. Walking distance to Forest Hill Village Shops, St. Clair subway station and Loblaws. Utilities included.
Call us today to book your personal tour!
416.961-0024
www.caprent.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

WPB, gated comm., 3/2.5, decor. furn. apt., 2650 sf, 11th flr., 8' ceiling, overlooking golf. crse., water views, palm bch. Hurricane proof windows & shutters, 24 hr doorman, pool, 50+, wraparound balc., assign cov pkg. By owner. $299K 561-686-0561, after 12/28: 561-218-4884.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Pembroke Pines/Hollybrook. Seasonal or annual rental. 2 bed., 2 bth., decorator - furn'd., just painted, upgraded kitchen, lake/golf view. Golf, tennis, pool & CH. Call 631-860-1515.

Pompano Bch., Palm-Aire, C.C., 2 bdr., 2 bth., grdn. apt., main flr., fully furn., wshr./dryer. Avail. seas./annual. 416-518-5620

Gated, Boca Raton (Ainsley), beau. corner 2 br. 2 bth kosher kit. near syn. 917-282-5063.

Miami Beach. Oceanfront view. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. 3 months $1475 monthly 4 months $1375 monthly. 1-918-361-3222.

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

DELRAY BEACH, stylish 3 bdr. home in beautif. gated comm. 2 1/2 bths., priv. pool, golf/tennis. Avail. Feb. & Mar. $2500./mo. USD. Call 416-489-5433.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON X-Large Studio Furnished Oceanfront, Pool, Spa, Beach $1,800/Month 305-895-3000.

Aventura, 3 bdr., 3 bth., newly furn., beautif. view, avail. Jan. 16 - Apr. (min. 3 mos.) 786-320-6724.

205 LAND/LOTS FOR SALE

Muskoka, waterfront lot, 377 ft. frontage, 3+ acres, west facing, Morrison Lake. 905-882-0824.

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

F/T ASST CUSTOMER SERVICE MANAGER
at upbeat, online company downtown. Excellent English and read/write Hebrew. Paid Jewish Holidays. Resume & cover letter to: careers@ketubah.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

"Experienced transcriptionist seeks opportunity to assist you with expert medical or legal document preparation. Please contact: legalworks@live.ca"

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Active widow, early 50's, Shomer Shabbat, has many interests, wld. like to meet a Modern Orthodox gentleman, 52-60.(No Kohan). Wld. accept somebody with minor disability & kids. 1-248-568-2163.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?
Address your mail to:
The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd. Suite 205 North York, Ont. M3B 3K4
Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.
CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

NANNY TAX FRUSTRATION? www.nannytax.ca 905-326-3222
Canada's provider of nanny payroll tax services
- All paperwork, T4, ROE included
- Personalized payroll tax updates throughout the year

SHURE consulting services

GOLDEN CARE
Live in/out caregivers. Cleaning ladies, drivers. Best service, Lowest Prices!
Honey Hecker
416-665-8674
www.goldencare.ca

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.459[illegible]
O: 305.[illegible]401

LONDONO REALTY GROUP INC

ECR

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

Miami Beach - New spacious, lux., furn'd. studio, 1 bed. & 2 bed apts. w/balcs. avail. at oceanfront Crown, 40th & Collins. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, valet pkng. incl. 877-424-7848, stay@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

Sunny Isles - Lux. spacious, furn'd. 1 bed., 2 bed. & 3 bed. apts. w/ balcs. & intracoastal views. 2 bl. from beach. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, marina. Call 877-424-7848, iyc@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Reliable, hard working and experienced caregivers available. Please call 416-546-5380.

257 HEALTH CARE AVAILABLE

Exper. caregiver seeks job. Exp. in Jewish community. Refs. avail. Call Fareeda at 647-764-1811.

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
- BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
- SIMCHAS
- SHIVA MEALS
- SHABBOS DINNERS

844 Sheppard Ave. W. (at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

387 DECORATING

DRAPERY, BLINDS & SHUTTERS Excellent service & quality, reasonable prices. 647-272-7282.

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating, Cooling service, repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res./Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

443 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com
A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt., office, bus. 416-747-7082

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT 416-459-1383

460 PLUMBING

PLUMBER ON CALL!
Drain, Plumbing, Heating, A/C
Call TOM the Plumber
647-654-8099

498 TRAVEL & TOURISM

Free 30 day SnowbirdCare membership worth $45 for participating in our 5 minute online snowbird survey. SnowbirdCare members get complete information on the best doctors and hospitals in Florida. To take the survey call 905-709-2756.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE
Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing.
416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

"I love my eCJN!"

download yours @ www.cjnews.com

The Canadian Jewish news

Coast to Coast

We buy quality goods, says store owner

Continued from page 1

If he loses money, his five employees may lose their jobs," she said. "It's harassment and borders on incitement to hatred.

"Israel is not perfect and I disagree with a lot of things, but they should not hurt a small business."

The protesters have included Amir Khadir, the sole member of the National Assembly for Québec solidaire, which has officially endorsed the so-called boycott, divestment and sanctions campaign against Israel.

Freedman thinks boycott proponents should be aware that the cellphones and computers they use probably contain Israeli-made components, and even the locking system of the Bixis, Montreal's popular bicycle-sharing program, comes from Israel.

PAJU says its aim is to make St. Denis Street, the heart of a trendy district of shops and restaurants, an "Israeli apartheid free zone," and Le Marcheur is the first target.

Freedman said she finds this "racist and quite frightening. It reminds me of Hitler's judenrein [edict]."

Archambault has also received encouragement from Norman King, who has been a member of the Montreal Dialogue Group, composed of Jews and Arabs, and is sympathetic to the Palestinian cause.

He wrote an open letter to Archambault, a copy of which Dida Berku, a lawyer and Côte St. Luc councillor, sent to The CJN. Berku and her husband, businessman Jacob Kincler, are among those who have been going to Le Marcheur during the demonstrations.

King said PAJU "does not in any way represent the concerns of the Jews of Montreal, with the exception of a few individuals."

He pointed out that Amnesty International, an organization with which he has been involved, is against the use of boycott as a means of protest against a country's human rights record.

The Quebec-Israel Committee has advised community members not to go to the store during the protests, but Berku believes that's the best time to show solidarity with Archambault.

While she agrees confrontation with the protesters should be avoided, Berku said it can be an opportunity to engage in a "civil discourse." There has been some heckling and heated verbal exchanges, and at least one incident of physical contact that police broke up.

Sharon Freedman, right, takes delivery of her purchases from Ginette Auger, wife of store owner Yves Archambault, at Boutique Le Marcheur.

"Mr. Archambault is happy when we are there when they [the protesters] are there," she said. "The fact is that he has been holding out, and we have to support him, especially when the protesters are there. Customers and passersby are just hearing one side of the story. We can educate them."

PAJU president Bruce Katz called the tickets for handing out flyers and standing with banners, rather than keeping moving, "intimidation tactics" on the part of the police. The group, he stressed, won't back down. In fact, it has put out a call for all other groups in Quebec that support a boycott of Israel to join in the protests.

If Archambault removes the Israeli shoes from his shelves, Katz said PAJU will encourage everyone to shop at Le Marcheur.

"No one – no one is going to dictate to me what to sell," Archambault told The CJN. He insisted that will not change. "We have a free society in Quebec, and there is a free trade agreement between Canada and Israel."

Archambault, who has owned the store since 1979, said he has no allegiances in the Middle East conflict, and stocking shoes from Israel has nothing to do with politics. "We buy goods on two criteria only: their quality and comfort."

He noted that he also sells shoes from China, but the protesters have no quarrel with that.

The demonstrations have affected his business in the sense that he has had to take time to deal with police and consult a lawyer.

"Thanks to the encouragement of the Jewish community, we have been able to keep sales at a reasonable level."

Anti-smuggling bill a 'PR initiative,' Cotler says

By DAVID LAZARUS
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — The Canadian government's proposed anti-smuggling bill, C-49, is so blatantly unconstitutional that it could only have been tabled as a "PR initiative" to satisfy public sentiment, says Liberal MP Irwin Cotler.

Irwin Cotler

While the Liberals are prepared to co-operate with the government on an anti-smuggling bill that's consistent with the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, it won't support legislation that "singles out" asylum seekers and refugee claimants.

Even the National Post, the "Conservatives' own newspaper," pointed this out in an editorial, the human rights advocate said in a Dec. 3 media briefing with journalists.

Cotler lambasted Justice Minister and Attorney General Rob Nicholson for appearing to be a partisan supporter of legislation that would not pass a charter test.

"The attorney general is an independent legal officer, and it is the justice minister's responsibility to make sure that legislation is charter-proof," Cotler said.

"When I sat in cabinet [as justice minister], I was there to give independent legal advice. In Nicholson's case, "that [duty] was not discharged," Cotler said.

On other issues, Cotler gave an update on the recent Conference to Combat anti-Semitism, noting that in the follow-up to the early November meeting, the Inter-parliamentary Coalition to Combat Antisemitism (ICCA) is working on increasing the number of governments signing on to the Ottawa Protocol. These include Argentina, Australia, and Spain, and the United States, which are indicating a "favourable" disposition to doing so, Cotler said.

The ICCA also wants Canada and other protocol countries to appoint "special envoys" to monitor and combat antisemitism, such as already exist in the United Kingdom, France, Spain and the United States.

Cotler also was highly supportive of the fact that the protocol arrived at a definition of antisemitism that could be "uniformly" applied by the international community.

In that context, Cotler adamantly rejected a recent Globe and Mail blog post by former Canadian ambassador Norman Spector. He insinuated that Cotler has been disingenuous by citing the protocol's declaration that "criticism of Israel is not antisemitic and saying so is wrong."

In the context of Israel's plans to construct more housing in east Jerusalem, Spector in his blog wanted to ask Cotler, first, whether it was "antisemitic" to criticize those plans, and second, to know Cotler's own position on them.

Cotler said his answer to Spector's first question was obviously no, but "Mr. Spector knew the answer to that without having to ask." As for the second – Cotler's position on the construction – Cotler said that construction in east Jerusalem "has to be conducted in accordance with the law.

"There are private builders in Jerusalem, and cases before [Israel's] Supreme Court. I [would] support the findings of fact and collusions of law of that court, which I consider one of the best in the world.

"If they find [the construction] legal, I stand by that. If they find it not to be legal, I will go by that as well."

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
WINTER IN ISRAEL
FROM $676* +tax

Sports & Leisure

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

Second straight Grey Cup 'a blast' for Als coach

By DAVID LAZARUS
Staff Reporter

Marc Trestman seems to be getting used to it.

Speaking over the phone a little more than two weeks after his Montreal Alouettes captured a second-straight Grey Cup with a victory, once again, over the Saskatchewan Roughriders, 21-18, the 55-year-old head coach sounded downright blasé about having turned his team into something already being likened to a dynasty.

Under Trestman's leadership, the Als have racked up the winningest record in the franchise's history.

The Als' second Jewish head coach after Marv Levy (who also led the team to two Grey Cups, in 1974 and 1977), Trestman was his laconic self, modest to a fault and not given to complex analysis.

"It was a great game, and a well-played game by both teams," Trestman told The CJN. "We did the things offensively we needed to do; we moved the football at the end, controlled the game, controlled the clock.

"I thought it was a great team win."

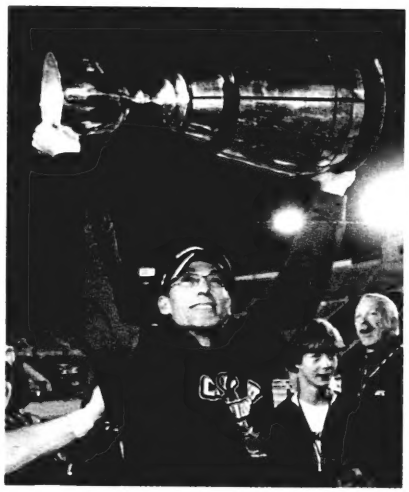
Trestman said it "didn't matter" to him who took the most valuable player title. (The contenders were slotback Jamel Richardson – who actually won it – for his eight catches and 109 yards, and star quarterback Antony Calvillo, who completed 29 of 42 passes for 336 yards.)

Way more important was the win.

"Defensively, I think, we played terrific football," Trestman said. "We contained a great offence and eliminated the big play, so it was a great team win."

But did the winning coach feel any pressure going in?

"I don't feel any pressure," Trestman replied. "There's plenty of that to go around. I mean, everybody's working hard, trying to pull everything the same way. I love to coach football and I enjoy the day-to-day challenges that it brings, but I don't feel there's any pressure."



Marc Trestman holds the Grey Cup following victory over the Saskatchewan Roughriders in 2009.

Is it fun, though?

"Oh, it's a blast!"

But Trestman, who spent 17 years coaching college-level football and in the National Football League before arriving in Montreal, offered only a terse "no comment" when asked about rampant rumours that the Miami Hurricanes – the first team he ever coached for in 1981 – was trying to lure him back.

Last week the Hurricanes announced they had signed Temple University coach Al Golden to turn around their football program.

According to the Alouettes' website, Trestman's contract has been extended until the end of the 2012 season.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage,
The Canadian Jewish News
is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and mail to PO Box 1324 Stn K Toronto, ON M4P 3J4 or fax to 416-932-2488
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Doc key: W11FXCJN

Israeli swim team competes in Dubai

By RAMI HIPSH
Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

DUBAI — After a month of uncertainty, Israel's national swim team arrived last week in Dubai ahead of the World Short Course Championships.

The Israeli delegation cleared many hurdles to get to Dubai. Officials of the emirate refused to issue the Israelis visas until the last minute, and they only allowed them in without stamping their passports and making them undergo stringent security checks.

"It seems they feared we would bring in something special, but everything went quietly," said Noam Zvi, chair of the Israeli Swimming Federation (ISF).

Alex Giladi, Israel's representative on the International Olympic Committee, arrived to wield his influence to make sure the Israeli flag would fly in the complex's hall and that there would be no hitches with registration.

In 2009, the United Arab Emirates refused to grant a visa to Israeli tennis star Shahar Peer, preventing her from competing in the Dubai Championships. The move prompted Women's Tennis Association (WTA) president Larry Scott to fine the Dubai tournament $300,000 (US) and demand that in future, Dubai would permit Israelis to take part in WTA events there. In 2010, Peer competed in the tournament, although she was placed in a virtual security cocoon.

Last week, four Israelis took to the pool on the first day of the competition, Guy Barnea and Jonathan Koplev in the 100-metre backstroke, their strong card, Gal Nevo in the 200-metre freestyle and Alon Mandel in the 100-metre butterfly.

Amit Ivry withdrew from other heats to focus on the butterfly, which is her best discipline, where she hoped to reach the final.

Leonid Kaufman, the national coach, concurred: "We have goals – that all the swimmers set personal bests and that they advance at least to the next stage. The second goal depends on the ability of the other swimmers in the championship. We expect Ivry and Nevo to reach the finals. They're capable of it," he said.

Some 800 athletes from 137 countries gathered at the $100-million (US) Hamdan Bin Mohammed Bin Rashid Al Maktoum Sports Complex, which can accommodate 15,000 spectators.

"Dubai and the Gulf States want to prove they can do the biggest things," said Kaufman. "They built the tallest tower and the biggest Disney World and now a swimming complex that competes with all others. I was in China, and this is no less than the Olympic complex."

Becky's life is in my hands

NEW TO CANADA
By NINA SHENHAV

It's a typical evening in our household. The kids are watching TV, I'm in bed, and Meir is standing in the middle of the room, his arms raised, lecturing me passionately.

Meir: "She has a job, and she helps her husband with cleaning and cooking. Can you imagine?"

Honestly, I can't. He's talks about his friend's imaginary wife, I'm guessing.

I yawn. It's boring. The phone rings, and I pick up happily. A man's voice comes from the other side.

Man: (hesitantly) "Uh… Nina Shenhav? I'm your biggest fan."

Me: "Welcome to the club!" (What can I say, I'm a star – by nature, if not so much by reality.)

Man: "Yeah, well. I read your column religiously, and I need to ask something from you. I need you to write something for my daughter."

Me: (cutting him short): "I'm sorry, sir, I'm not gonna hear of any requests, like please write a bat mitzvah speech for my daughter Rebecca, or something as such."

Man: "It's nothing like that! It's about my daughter Rebecca's bat mitzvah. I need a speech."

Me: "How much are you paying, 'cause those days – when I put my heart, soul and energies in, and in return get only an invitation to the party – those days are over!"

Man: "We're serving dairy desserts."

Me: "When do you need it done?"

Man: "Last week, but I'll settle for tomorrow."

Me: "How many words do you need?"

Man: "No more then 2,000. You have to write about me and my wife – what great parents we are, how much Becky adores us, and how important we are to her."

Me: "And what about Becky herself? Tell me about her."

Man: "Well… she loves us tremendously, adores us, worships us."

Me: "OK, what does she love doing?"

Man: "Uh…uh…"

Me: "Kay…What is she good at?"

Man: "Don't know."

Me: "What are her hobbies?"

Man: "Not sure."

Me: "Who are her best friends aside from you?"

Man: "Beats me."

Me: "What do you know about Becky?"

Man: "Who?"

Me: "Becky!"

Man: "Oh, she's 12 tomorrow. She's having a bat mitzvah. Aren't you listening?"

I hung up. Truth is, I'm not really in the mood for the task, yet looking at the alternative (and I'm looking at it – Meir's still with his raised hands, still going on about wonder woman, who folds socks while baking and cleans ovens while playing the trumpet), I might as well.

The night, and the day after, are exhausting. I enter Becky's Facebook page, and interview her many relatives, neighbours, friends, enemies and then, finally, Becky's life is in my hands. Neatly printed.

I head to the bat mitzvah, and hand the speech to the proud father. "Oh, the speech?" he says. "We decided to pass. Instead we're going with a unique cabaret gig, acted by my wife and me."

Well, at least I got me some dairy desserts…

NEW YEAR'S EVE APPETIZER - MOZZARELLA SKEWERS

1 container baby mozzarella balls (bocconcini)
1 package fresh basil
25-30 cherry tomatoes, small to medium size

DRESSING:
1 Tbs. balsamic vinegar
1 Tbs. olive oil
1/4 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper

Wash and dry tomatoes and basil. If basil leaves are large, cut in half. Using small skewers about 4 1/2" long, slide on a tomato, piece of basil folded in half and ball of mozzarella. Repeat on new skewers until all the pieces have been used. Combine ingredients for dressing and brush or sprinkle over skewers just before serving. Dressing can also be served on the side for dipping.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot directly across from the store

A Family Business for over 60 Years

Joints need to move

FITNESS CORNER
By FELYCE ZOMPARELLI

A recent study done at the University of California found that light exercise may protect against osteoarthritis of the knee and hip in high-risk populations.

Osteoarthritis is the most common form of arthritis, and although no cure exists at this time, there are many ways to relieve pain and remain active.

There are many causes of osteoarthritis, including age, injury, joint stress, obesity, heredity and muscle weakness. One of the easiest ways to reduce joint pain and inflammation is to lose weight. Losing as little as 10 pounds can take enough pressure off the joints to significantly decrease joint pain. Low-intensity exercises such as bicycling, swimming, dancing, water aerobics, light weight training and low-impact aerobics are not only good ways to lose weight but they have also been found to be the most effective ways to strengthen and stabilize the joints with the least amount of long-term damage.

Movement of affected joints prevents stiffness and reduces pain by increasing circulation, which reduces inflammation. The worst thing someone with osteoarthritis can do is not move. Sedentary lifestyle can lead to joint stiffness and increased swelling of the affected area, promoting immobility.

Workouts should include a full-body warm-up. Stretching before a workout can cause muscles to tighten prematurely, resulting in joint stiffness. An effective warm-up should include full-body moves to loosen joints, ligaments, tendons and muscles before exercising. Thirty minutes daily or 60 minutes three times a week of joint-friendly exercises is all it takes to strengthen the surrounding muscles, which will reduce stress and relieve stiffness of the joints. Make sure to include core and lower-back strengthening exercises during your workout. Core strength has been shown to reduce stress on the joints. Incorporating full range of motion exercises every morning and evening will improve flexibility and reduce joint stiffness. Stretching after every workout is important for flexibility and joint mobility.

Want to learn more. E-mail me at felycesfitness@rogers.com.

They are Jewish children

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

URBAN WRITER

How would you describe your appreciation of and respect for what orphanages do? What do you think when a friend fosters a child? My guess is you feel a deep respect for their initiative and are in awe of them. Somewhere, someplace you might feel compelled to do the same.

What do you consider when you read this quote from Maimonides: "A person is obligated to be careful in dealing with orphans and widows since their spirits are low – even if they are wealthy"? And the Torah states: "Every widow and orphan you shall not afflict" (Exodus 22:21)?

Now think deeply about you as a kid, or what your child is like when he/she is scared. It moves you almost like no other image, eh? It's not surprising. A scared and unsettled child touches the most sensitive place in our heart. Sometimes it reminds us of our own childhood loneliness.

Take all of these feelings and thoughts and act on them. You have the opportunity to help a child. Jewish Family & Child (JF&CS) – a government-mandated children's aid society, and an outstanding one at that – has in its jurisdiction 93 Jewish children waiting to be fostered.

In a recent statement, JF&CS said: "There are currently 93 Jewish children in the care of JF&CS. Unfortunately, that number only continues to increase. We welcome Jewish foster parents of all levels of religious observance across the GTA. Remuneration: minimum $1,000 per month; training will be provided. Contact the JF&CS intake department at 416-638-7800."

While these children's are not orphans they cannot stay with their families. Being parentless must be brutal. May I suggest you call JF&CS. I know families who have fostered a child, and one that fostered more than 60 Jewish children, and they advise people to foster a child.

Sometimes their experience was magical. Sometime it didn't work out. But they did it. They opened their hearts and homes. Give it a try. (JF&CS can hook you up with a foster family to get more information and learn what fostering a child is like.)

A Jewish child is alone here in Toronto. Show them love. Hug them. Make them feel safe. Foster a Jewish child. Your children will grow. You will feel like an important part of our world. Think about what you'll do for that child.

Once again, remember what you think about when you read about or hear of individuals doing incredible things for children? Do not discount the "you" within this formula. The only difference between those who foster and those who don't is initiative, not will. I have heard from individuals who truly want to assist children, but are not sure how to, or afraid that they might screw up.

Do something different. Open your heart and home, or at least call JF&CS and get information. Share it with your family, your loved ones and give it a go. If fostering a child works, it will make a world of difference to everyone. If it doesn't – well, you can try again later!

Yasher koach. Let's foster all 93. Let's make the Toronto Jewish community an example to other communities through the statement, "We leave no children behind." Please.

Let me know if you have fostered a child or are thinking about it. I'll encourage you. E-mail me at avrum@veahavta.org or drop by my blog at http://avrum.net. You have the resources, both materially and soulfully. Share your love. Do it. 416-638-7800.

They are Jewish children.

BOXING WEEK MADNESS!

DECEMBER 26TH TO 28TH

Octane FITNESS

OCTANE Q37s ELLIPTICAL

- Target "problem areas" with exclusive ArmBlaster, GluteKicker and X-mode coss-training programs
- Ergonomically-designed handlebars deliver most natural upper-body motion
- Unique Cross-Circuit program incorporates strength training to maximize workout efficiency

Only 96 units available nationwide

SAVE $1311 OFF MSRP

OUR PRICE $1788

SAVE $250

BREMSHEY PACER FRONT DRIVE ELLIPTICAL

NOW ONLY $698

SAVE $250

BREMSHEY PACER REAR DRIVE ELLIPTICAL

NOW ONLY $718

SAVE $1000 OFF MSRP

VB2 VIBRATION PLATE

OUR PRICE $988

SAVE $400

INSPIRE M1 HOME GYM

NOW ONLY $1088*

SAVE $500

TORQUE F3 HOME GYM

NOW ONLY $1488

SAVE $1000

PRECOR 3.23 FT FUNCTIONAL TRAINER

NOW ONLY $1988

UP TO 50% OFF

ALL SOFT GOODS

See store or web for specific details. Limited quantities.

*Price does not include shroud.

Join our Community

Follow us on Twitter and Facebook to get the inside scoop on exclusive promos and fitness news. facebook.com/fitnessdepot twitter: @fitnessdepot

Guaranteed Lowest Prices in North America.

11 locations in Ontario.
Visit fitnessdepot.ca for nearest location.

CANADIAN OWNED AND OPERATED

fitness DEPOT
your EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES®

PLEASE
REWIND